[i] In every action or plea reall or mixt againſt two, where a protection doth lie, a protection caſt for the one doth put the plea without day for all. So it is in debt, detinue and account. But in treſpaſſe, or any action in nature of treſpaſſe, which is in law ſeverall, where every one may answer without the other, there a protection caſt for the one ſhall ſerve for him onely, unleſs they joyne in pleading; or if they plead ſeverall pleas, and one venire facias is awarded againſt all, there a protection caſt for one, ſhall put the plea without day for all; and therefore in former times the plaintife uſed to ſue out ſeverall venire facias in thoſe caſes for feare of a protection, &c.

[k] As to the three fold time, firſt, a protection proſeſtura regularly muſt not be purchaſed hanging the plea. But this faileth, when he goeth in the king's ſervice in a voyage royall; and that is two fold, either touching warre, and that onely is when the king himſelfe or his lieutenant, that is prorex goeth; or when any goeth in the king's amballaſſage, pro negotio regni, or for the marriage of the king's daughter, or the like, this alſo is called a voyage royall. But a protection moratura may be purchaſed and caſt, pendente placiſito.

[l] Regularly a protection cannot be caſt, but when the party hath a day in court, and when if he made default, it ſhould ſave his default. Therefore when execution is to bee granted againſt body, lands, or goods, no protection can be caſt; becauſe the defendant hath no day in court. If a protection be caſt at the niſi prius for one, if before the day in banke it bee repealed by innoteſcimus, yet becauſe it was once well caſt, it ſhall ſave his default; but if the protection be diſallowed, either for variance, or that it lay not in the action, or the like, there it ſhall turne to a default.

If a man hath a protection, and notwithstanding plead a plea, yet at another day of continuance, after that a protection may be caſt; ſo at a day after an exigent; but after appearance he cannot caſt a protection in that terme, untill a new continuance be taken.

[n] Thirdly, no protection, either proſeſtura or moratura, ſhall indure longer than a yeare and a day next after the teſte or date of it. And ſo it is of an effoigne de ſervice le roy. If a protection beare teſte 7. die Januarii, and have allowance pro uno anno, the re-ſummons, re-attachment, or re-garniſhment, may be ſued 8. Januarii the next yeare; and yet that is the laſt day of the yeare.

And where Britton, treating of an effoigne beyond the Græcian ſea, in a pilgrimage, &c. ſaith thus, [o] aſcun gent nequident ſe purchaſent nos letters de protection patents durable a un an, ou a 2 ou a 3 ans, & jalameyns ſont attorneys generals, auſi per nos letters patents: & ceux ſont bien & ſagement, car nul grand ſeignior, ne chevalier de noſtre realme, ne doit prendre che-myn ſauns noſtre conge, car iſſint poct le realme remainer diſgarvy de fort gente.

Three things are hereupon to be obſerved, firſt, that this was a protection of grace, whereof more ſhall be ſaid hereafter. Secondly, that it was for ſafetie of the great men of the realme, and that they ſhould make generall atornies, ſo as no actions, or ſuits ſhould be thereby ſtaied. Thirdly (by the way) that great men could not paſſe out of the realme without the king's licence. [p] A protection granted to one, &c. untill he returned from Scotland, was diſallowed for the incertaintie of the time.

[q] To the fourth, the protection, as well moratura as proſeſtura, muſt bee regularly to ſome place out of the realme of England, and that muſt be to ſome certaine place, as ſuper ſalva cuſtodia Calicie, &c. and not to Carlile or Wales, which are within the realme, or to the like. But it may be to Ireland or Scotland; becauſe they are diſtinct kingdomes; or to Calice, Aquitaine, or the like. But a protection, quia moratur ſuper altum mare, will not ſerve, not onely becauſe (as ſome thinke) that mare non moratur, but for the incertaintie of the place, and for that a great part of the ſea is within the realme of England.

[r] To the fifth. In ſome actions, protections ſhall not be allowed by the common law; and in ſome actions they are ouſted by act of parliament. Actions at the common law, as all actions that touche the crowne, as appeales of felony, and appeales of mayhem. [s] So where not of legitimacy, but merely to which husband the iſſue belonged. One of the two only remaining caſes conſiderably extends the time beyond the forty weeks, for, in Alſop and Stacey the firſt of them, the iſſue was found legitimate, notwithstanding the lapſe of forty weeks and ten days and the lewd character of the wife: and even as to Thecar's caſe, which is the other of them, the iſſue having been born two hundred and eighty-two days, there was an exceſs of the forty weeks, though but a triſling one. The precedents, therefore, ſo far from corroborating lord Coke's limitation of the ultimum tempus pariendi, do, upon the whole, rather tend to ſhew, that it hath been the practice in our courts to conſider forty weeks merely as the more uſual time, and conſequently not to decline exerciſing a diſcretion of allowing a longer ſpace, where the opinion of phyſicians or the circumſtances of the caſe have ſo required.—In the courſe of our enquiries into the ſubject of this note, we were curious to know the general ſentiments of that eminent anatomist, Dr. Hunter, on three intereſting queſtions. Theſe were, what is the uſual period for a woman's going with child, what is the earlieſt time for a child's being born alive, and what the lateſt. The answer, which he obligingly returned through a friend, we have liberty to publiſh; and it was expreſſed in the words following. 1. The uſual period is nine calendar months; but there is very commonly a difference of one two or three weeks. 2. A child may be born alive at any time technical ſenſe, in which our lawyers uſe the word, and Chancery exerciſes a juriſdiction over truſts; for, in this latter, truſts are invariably applied to property, eſpecially real eſtates, and not to the perſon. However we muſt not be underſtood by theſe remarks where the king is sole partie, no protection is to bee allowed; in like manner in a decies tantum, where the king and the subject are plaintives; but, in late acts of parliament, protections in personal actions are expressly ousted. A protection may be cast against the queene the consort of the king.

[r] In a writ of dower unde nihil habet, no protection is allowable; because the demandant hath nothing to live upon. Otherwise it is in a writ of right of dower. Likewise in a quare impedit, or assise of darreine presentment, a protection lieth not, for the eminent danger of the laps. Neither lieth a protection in an assise of novel disseisin; because it is festinum remedium, to restore the disseisee to his freehold, whereof he is wrongfully and without judgement disseised. [u] In a quare non admittit, a protection is not allowable; because it is grounded upon the quare impedit; and the like in a certificate upon an assise for the like reason; and sic de similibus. A protection, quia profecturus, is not allowable (as hath beene said) in any action commenced before the date of the protection, unlesse it bee in a voyage royall. [w] An infant is vouched, and at the pluries venire facias, a protection was cast for the infant; and disallowed, because his age must be adjudged by the inspection of the court.

[x] By act of parliament no protection shall be allowed in an attainr; (but at the common law a protection for one of the petite jury hath put the plea without day for all); nor in an action against a gaoler for an escape; nor for victuals taken or bought upon the voyage or service; nor in pleas of trespassse, or other contract, made or perpetrated after the date of the same protection.

[y] In a writ of error brought by an infant upon a fine levied, the plaintive sued a scire facias against the conusee, for whom a protection was cast, and the court examined the age of the plaintive, and by inspection adjudged him within age, and recorded the same, and then allowed the protection; and this can bee no mischief to the plaintive, whereupon it followeth, that, albeit the plaintive dyeth afterwards before the fine be reversed, yet, after his age adjudged and recorded, his heire shall in that case reverse the fine for the nonage of his ancestor. [a] And so it was resolved in the case of Kekewiche (1) in a writ of error brought by him by the opinion of the whole court of the king's bench. Otherwise it is, if the plaintive dyeth before his age inspected.

[b] Note in judicall writs, which are in nature of actions, where the partie hath day to appeare and plead, there a protection doth lie; as in writs of scire facias upon recoveries, fines, judgements, &c. Albeit by the statute of W. 2. essoignes and other delayes bee ousted in writs of scire facias, yet a protection doth lie in the same. So it is in a quid juris clamat, and the like. But in writs of execution, as habere facias seisinam, elegit, execution upon a statute, capias ad satisfaciendum, feri facias, and the like, there no protection can bee cast for the defendant; because he hath no day in court, and the protection extendeth onely ad placita & querelas, and must be allowed by the court, which cannot bee but upon a day of appearance.

[c] In a writ of disceit brought against him, that obtained and cast a protection upon an untrue surmise in delay of the plaintive, that protection is allowable. In an action brought upon the statute of labourers a protection doth lie, & sic de similibus.

[d] To the sixth, no writ of protection can be allowed, unlesse it be under the great seale, and it is directed generally.

[e] To the seventh, the courts of justice, where the protection is cast, are to allow, or disallow of the same, bee they courts of record, or not of record, and not the sherife, or any other officer or minister.

[f] To the eighth, the protection may be cast, either by any stranger, or by the partie himselfe. An infant, feme covert, a monke, or any other, may cast a protection for the tenant or defendant. And this difference there is when a stranger casteth it, and when the tenant or defendant casteth it himselfe; [g] for the defendant or tenant casting it, he must shew cause wherefore he ought to take advantage of the protection; but an estranger neede not shew any cause, but that the tenant or defendant is here by protection.

[h] As to the ninth, a protection may be avoyded three manner of wayes. First, upon the casting of it before it be allowed. Secondly, by repeale thereof after it be allowed. (2) By disallowing of it many wayes, as for that it lieth not in that action, or that he hath no day to cast it, or for materiall variance betweene the protection and the record, or that it is not under the great seale, or the like. [i] Thirdly, after it be allowed, by innotefcimus; as if any tarry in the country without going to the service for which he was retained, over a convenient time after that he had any protection, or repaire from the same service, upon information thereof to the lord chancellor, he shall repeale the protection in that case by an innotefcimus. But a protection shall not be avoyded by an averment of the partie in that case; because the record of the protection must be avoyded by matter of as high nature.

There

(1) S. C. Mo. 844.—(2) The sense requires thirdly here; and that, where thirdly is, it should be fourthly. But the print in the former editions is, as we have given it.

time from three months; but we see none born with powers of coming to manhood, or of being reared, before seven calendar months, or near that time. At six months it cannot be. 3. I have known a woman bear a living child, in a perfectly natural way, fourteen days later than nine calendar months, and believe two women to have been delivered of a child alive, in a natural way, above ten calendar months from the hour of conception.

remarks to controvert the present legality of the jurisdiction thus exercised in Chancery over infants: our intent being simply to shew, that such jurisdiction is not, as far as yet appears, of ancient date; and that, though it is now unquestionable, yet at first it seems to have been an usurpation, for which the best excuse was, that the case was not otherwise sufficiently provided for. Our conjecture, as to the late commencement of this branch of jurisdiction in Chancery, is strengthened by some precedents, which have been obligingly communicated to us by a respectable gentleman in the Register's office. According to these, the first instance to be found of a guardian appointed by the chancellor, on petition without bill, was in 1696, in the case of

Y y y

Hampden.

[r] 39. H. 6. 39. 43. E. 3. 6 & 32. 27. H. 6. 1. F. N. B. 28. 17. E. 3. 23. 4. Co. 35. Broom's case. Bract. lib. 5. 10. 139. 140.

(2. Ro. Abr. 325. 326.) [u] 13. E. 3. tit. Protection 52. 12. E. 3. ibid. 69. 31. E. 1. ibid. 112.

[w] 19. E. 2. Protect. 111. 32. E. 3. ibid. 54.

[x] 23. H. 8. c. 3. 34. E. 1. Protection 38. 7. H. 4. c. 4. 1. R. 2. cap. 8.

[y] 21. E. 3. 24. 31. E. 3. Protect. 97. 5. E. 4. 50. 35. H. 6. 43. 46. 8. E. 4. 8. 17. E. 3. 22. 13. E. 3. Protect. 71. (Post. 380. b. Mo. 78. 189. Cro. Jam. 230.)

[a] Pasch. 12. Ja. Regis in the King's Bench.

[b] 13. E. 3. Protect. 72. Fleta l. 2. c. 12. 40. E. 3. 18. 48. E. 3. 18. 19. 37. H. 6. 32. 21. E. 4. 19. 15. H. 7. 8. 47. E. 3. 5. 17. E. 3. 68. 14. E. 3. Protect. 64. W. 2. cap. 45.

[c] 20. E. 3. Protect. 83.

[d] 35. H. 6. 2. Artic. super Cart. 6. 46. E. 3. Petition 19. [e] 2. Co. 17. Lane's case. 8. Co. 68. Trallop's case. 20. H. 6. 25. 2. E. 4. 4. 38. H. 6. 23. [f] 43. E. 3. Protect. 96.

[f] 21. E. 4. 18.

[g] 38. H. 6. 23.

[h] 44. E. 3. 12. 47. E. 3. 6.

[i] 13. R. 2. c. 16. 11. H. 4. 70. 7. H. 6. 22. 22. H. 6. 50. 30. H. 6. 3. 19. H. 6. 35. 21. E. 4. 20. 1. H. 6. 6. 42. E. 3. 9. 44. E. 3. 2. 39. E. 3. 4. 5. 20. E. 3. Protect. 80. 34. E. 3. ibid. 119.

[k] 44. E. 3. 4. 12. 47. E. 3. 6.
34. E. 3. 1. protect. 119. 28. H.
6. 3. 34. H. 6. 22. 50. H. 6. 3.
32. H. 6. 4.

[k] There is a clause in the protection to this effect, presentibus minime valituris, si contingat ipsum, &c. à custodia castri prædicti recedere. Or si contingat iter illud non arripere, vel infra illum terminum à partibus transmarinis redire. Whereupon there be two conclusions to be observed.

First, that though the protection be allowed by the court for a yeare, yet if it be repealed by an innoteſimus, that the re-sommons or re-attachment shall be granted upon the repeale within the yeare; for the protection that was allowed had the said clause in it. And of that opinion be our latter bookes; and the repeale by innoteſimus should serve for little purpose, if the law should not be taken so.

Secondly, that albeit he, that had the protection either moraturæ or proſecturæ, returne into England, and haply be arrested and in prison, yet, if he came over to provide munition, habiliments of warre, victuals or other necessaries, it is no breach of the said conditionall clause, nor against the act of 13. Richard 2. cap. 16. for that in judgement of law coming for such things as are of necessity for the maintenance of the warre, moraturæ, according to the intention of the protection and statute aforesaid. And thus much of the two first protections, cum clausula volumus, proſecturæ and moraturæ.

[l] Registrum 281. b. F. N. B.
28. b. 33. H. 8. ca. 29. in the Preamble 41. E. 3. tit. Execution 38. 18. E. 3. ibid. 56. 27.
E. 3. 88. b. 4. E. 4. 16. 3. Eliz.
Dier. 197. Rot. Pat. 27. E. 3. part. 1 m. 2.

[m] 25. E. 3. cap. 19.
(Cio. Cha. 389. 390. Hob. 115.)

[l] As to the third protection cum clausula volumus, the king by his prerogative regularly is to be preferred in payment of his duty or debt by his debtor before any subject, although the king's debt or duty be the latter; and the reason hereof is, for that thesaurus regis est fundamentum belli, & firmamentum pacis. (1) And thereupon the law gave the king remedy by writ of protection to protect his debtor, that he should not be sued or attached untill hee paid the king's debt. But hereof grew some inconvenience, for to delay other men of their suits, the king's debts were the more slowly paid. And for remedie thereof [m] it is enacted by the statute of 25. E. 3. that the other creditors may have their actions against the king's debtor, and proceed to judgement, but not to execution, unlesse he will take upon him to pay the king's debt, and then he shall have execution against the king's debtor for both the two debts.

[n] 41. E. 3. 15. 17. E. 3. 73.
29. E. 3. 13. 4. E. 4. 16.

This kind of protection hath (as it appeareth) no certaine time limited in it. But in some cases the subject shall be satisfied before the king; [n] for regularly whensoever the king is intitled to any fine or duty by the suit of the party, the party shall be first satisfied, as in a decies tantum. And so if in an action of debt, the defendant denie his deed, and it is found against him, he shall pay a fine to the king, but the plaintife shall be first satisfied, and so in all other like cases. And so it is in bills preferred by subjects in the Star-chamber, there costs and damages (if any be) shall be answered before the king's fine, as it is daily in experience.

The fourth protection, cum clausula volumus is, when a man sent into the king's service beyond sea is imprisoned there, so as neither protection proſecturæ or moraturæ will serve him; and this hath no certaine time limited in it, [o] whereof you shall read at large in the Register, and F. N. B.

[o] Regist. sæpe. F. N. B. 28. c.

[p] Vide 7. Co. 8. 9. Calvin's case.

[p] Now are we at length come to protections cum clausula volumus, all which, saving one, are of grace, and, as hath beene said, are implied under the generall protection; for as Fitzherbert saith, every loyall subject is in the king's protection. Of these protections of grace, you shall not read much in our yeare bookes; because they stayed no actions or suites. [q] Of the divers formes of these you shall read at large in the Register, and F. N. B. which were too long and needlesse to be here recited.

[q] Register 280. &c. F. N. B.
29. A. B. C. D. E. F. G. H.
Register 280. Statut. de 14. E.
3. F. N. B. 30. A.

The protection cum clausula volumus, that is of right, is, that every spirituall person may sue a protection for him and his goods, and for the fermors of their lands and their goods, that they shall not be taken by the king's purveyor, nor their carriage or chattels taken by other ministers of the king, which writ doth recite the statute of 14. E. 3.

Of these protections I cannot say any thing of mine owne experience, for albeit queene Elizabeth maintained many warres, yet shee granted few or no protections; and her reason was, that he was no fit subject to be employed in her service, that was subject to other mens actions, lest she might be thought to delay justice (2).

Section 200.

ENTRE LE 5. est un home THE fifth is, where a & profes- que est enter et pro- man entred and pro- se en religion. fesse en religion. Si tiel fessed in religion. If suiſt

(1) See ante 30. b. — (2) Since lord Coke's time protections have fallen wholly into disuse; lord Cutts, a famous officer in the reign of William the third, being the last person indulged with one, of whom our Reports take notice. 3. Blackst. Comm. 8th. ed. 289. & 3. Lev. 332. However it is still usual in acts of parliament to guard against the use of protections in suits, to which persons acting under the authority of the legislature are parties.

Hampden. But since that time, the court of Chancery hath exercised the power of appointing guardians, without its being once called into question. Therefore in the case of lady Teynham against Mr. Lennard, which was heard on an appeal to the lords in 1724, the counsel for the respondent very properly stated it as a thing fixed, that the lord chancellor was intrusted with that part of the crown's prerogative, which concerned the guardianship of infants. 1. Brown. Cas. in Parl. 544. Under the same idea too, the last marriage-act refers to the chancellor for the appointment of a guardian to consent to marriage, where the infant is without aguardian and the mother is not living. 26. G. 2. c. 33. s. 11.

The third kind of guardian, not hitherto mentioned, is guardian by appointment of the ecclesiastical court. The right of appointing guardians for the personal estate, and, if there is no other guardian by tenure or otherwise, for the person also, is, we understand, claimed by the ecclesiastical court. Swinburne takes notice of such a guardian; but confines his observations, on the appointment and his extent of power, to the custom within the province of York. Swinb. on Testam. 12.

*fuit un action, le tenant ou defendant, poit mon-strer, que tiel est enter en religion en tiel lieu en l'ordre de Saint Benet, & la est moigne professe, ou en l'ordre des friers preachers, ou minors, & la est frere professe, & issint des auters orders de religion, &c. & de-maundera judgement sil serra respondue. Et la cause est; pur ceo que quant un home entra en religion, & est professe, il est mort en ley, & son fils, ou auter cousin, maintenant luy inherit-era, auxy bien sicome il fuit mort en fait. Et quant il entra en religion, il poit faire son testament, & ses executors; les queux executors averont un action de det due a luy devant lentre en religion, ou auter action que executors poient aver, sicome il fuit mort en fait. Et sil ne fait ses executors
quant il entra en religion, donques l'ordinarie poit committer l'administration de ses biens a auters homes, sicome il fuit mort en fait.*

Il est mort en ley. Civiliter mortuus, or mortuus seculo. [d] There is a death in [d] Bracton, fo. 301. 426. Britdeede, and there is a civil death or a death in law, mors civilis and mors naturalis, as here it ton fo. 226. 250. 251. Fleta lib.
appeareth; and therefore to oust all scruples. Leases for life are ever made during the natu- 6. ca. 41.
ral life, &c. (1) If the father enter into religion, then shall his sonne and heire have an assise of Mordancester, and the writ shall say, [e] Si W. pater, &c. die quo obiit habitum religionis [e] F. N. B. 196. 5. E. 4. 3. assumpsit, in quo habitu professus fuit ut dicitur.

such a one sue an action, the tenant or defendant may shew, that such a one is entred into religion in such a place, into the order of Saint Benet, and is there a monke professed, or in the order of friars minors or preachers, and is there a brother professed, and so of other orders of religion, &c. and aske judgement if he shall be answered. And the cause is this; that when a man entreth into religion, and is professed, he is dead in the law, and his sonne, or next cousin, incontinent shall inherit him, as well as though he were dead indeed. And when he entreth into religion, he may make his testament and his executors, and they may have an action of debt due to him before his entry into religion, or any other action that executors may have, as if he were dead indeed. And if that he make no executors when he entreth into religion, then the ordinary may commit the administration of his goods to other, as if he were dead indeed.

[a] It is to be observed, that a man doth enter into religion at his first comming, and liveth under obedience; but hee is not professed, till a yeare be past, or some time of probation.
And he is said to be professed, when he hath taken the habit of religion, and vowed three things, obedience, wilfull poverty, and perpetual chastity. And therefore our authour saith here, enter & pro-fesse.

En l'ordre, des freres preach- ers, ou [b] minors. It appear-eth in our bookes,

that of friars there were foure orders,
viz. minors, augus-tins, preachers, and carmelites; and the franciscani, capuchini, and observan-tes, are included under the title of minors; and they were called observants, because they bee not conventuall or joyned together in a brotherhood, but live separately, and bound themselves to observe more strictly the rights of their order. [c] Cum [c] Bracton, fo. 421. b.
quis semel se religioni contulerit, renunciat omnibus quæ seculi sunt, habita distinctione, utrum habitum probationis suscepit, vel habitum professionis.

Auxibien

(1) See Acc. 2. Co. 48. b. Blackst. Comm. 8. ed. v. 1. p. 132. v. 2. 121. But by lord Coke's observing here, that natural is added to oust all scruples, it seems as if he did not conceive it to be absolutely necessary.

1st ed. 99. b. In a case, first before the King's Bench in lord Hale's time, he admitted the right of the ecclesiastical court to appoint a curator of the personal estate; and after his death the court inclined to the same opinion. 2. Lev. 162. T.
Jo. 50. In another case soon after, the court of King's Bench allowed the right as to the infant's portion, but denied it over the person. 3. Keb. 384. In the next case on the subject, the question as to the right was largely debated on a plea in prohibition. This alledged, that by the common law used and approved in England, if any person by his will devises any goods to his children, the ordinary, before whom the will is proved, hath used to commit the custody of the sons and their portions till fourteen, and of the daughters and their portions till twelve, except where they are in the custody of any other by reason of any tenure or by the father's appointment; and if any person detained such infants or their portions, the ordinary hath also used to compel the delivery of them by ecclesiastical censures. 2. Lev. 217. But on a demurrer this plea was over-ruled and the prohibition ordered to stand; the latter being founded on the libel in the suit in the ecclesiastical court, which had stated the right in a more extensive way; for the libel was, that by the ecclesiastical law, every person having the tutition of any infant under age, by the will of the father or per judicem competentem, ought to have the custody of the infant and suit in the ecclesiastical court for the detainer. After this case we find nothing on the subject for a long time. But, in a case of the late king's reign, Lee justice casually takes notice of the ecclesiastical court's appointment without objection, saying, that the course of the spiritual court is, that if the infant is under seven years, they chuse a curator, but if he is seven he chuses.
Fitzgib.

Auxibien come il fuit mort en fait. But yet to three purposes, profession, that is, the civil death, hath not the effect of a naturall death.

First, this civil death shall never derogate from his owne grant, nor be any mean to avoid it. And therefore if tenant in taile maketh a feoffment in fee, and entereth into religion, his issue shall have no formedon during his life; because that should be in derogation of his own grant, and be a meane to avoyd the same.

(F. N. B. 213 A.)

[f] 32. E. 1. Dower 176. 31. E. 3. Collusion 29. 31. E. 3. Entre coge. 52. 21. E. 4. 14. (Ante 33. b.)

[f] Secondly, it shall never give her availe, without whose consent he could not have entered into religion, and therefore his wife after his civil death shall not be indowed, untill his naturall death. But if the wife, after her husband hath entered into religion, alien the land which is her owne right, and after her husband is deraigned, the husband may enter and avoid the alienation.

Thirdly, it shall not worke any wrong or prejudice to a stranger that hath a former right; and therefore if the disseisor entereth into religion, and is professed, so as the land descends to his heire, yet this descent shall not tolle the entrie of the disseisee.

[g] 5. E. 4. 3. 2. [h] 18. H. 6. 33. per Fortesc.

[g] A woman cannot be professed a nunne during the life of her husband. But some do hold a diversitie, [h] that, ante carnalem copulam, the husband or wife may enter into religion without any consent, but post carnalem copulam neither of them can without consent of other.

[i] 21. E. 3. Collusion 29. [k] 34. E. 3. Garranty 71. Vid. the chapter of Warranty, sect.

[i] But if a man holdeth lands by knight's service, and is professed in religion, his heire within age, he shall be in ward. [k] If I be disseised, and my brother releaseth with warranty, and is professed in religion, and the warrantie descendeth upon me, this warrantie shall binde me; because I am his heire, and such inheritance as my brother had shall descend upon me.

[l] 21. R. 2. Judgm. 263. (Post. 181. b.)

[l] And if one joyntenant be professed in religion, the land shall survive to the other. If a man or a woman be professed in religion in Normandie, or in anie other foraine part, such a profession shall not disable them to bring any action in England; because it wanteth triall, but they must be professed in some house of religion within this realme, for that may be tried by the certificate of the ordinarie, so as of foraine professions the common law taketh no knowledge (1). [m] And yet in some case one that is professed in religion within the realme shall have an action; as if he be made an executor, or if he be an administrator, he shall maintaine an action, not in his owne right, but in right of the dead.

[m] 10. E. 3. 511. 14. E. 3. Executors 87. 5. H. 7. 25. 21. H. 6. 30. 3. H. 6. 24.

[n] 44. E. 3. 9. Nonability 3. 14. H. 8. 16.

[n] If a monke be made a bishop, or a parson, or a vicar, he shall have an action concerning his bishoprick, parsonage, or vicarage, & sic de similibus.

[o] 2. H. 4. 7. 8. H. 5. 6. 7. E. 4. 30. 44. E. 3. 4. 20. E. 3. Vill. 10. & Nonability 9. 49. E. 3. 4.

[o] And if a monke be farmer of the king, yeelding a rent, he shall have an action concerning that farme. And albeit Littleton speaketh generally of one that is professed in religion, yet must it not be understood of the soveraigne or head of the religious house, as of the abbot, prior, and the like; [*] for albeit they be professed in religion, yet by the policie of the law, they are persons able to purchase, and to implead, and to be impleaded, to sue, and to be sued for any thing that concernes the house of religion; for otherwise the house might be prejudiced, and other men also of their lawful actions. And this is the ancient law of England, as it appeareth in these words, [p] des biens des gens de religion appent l'action al chiefe en son noyme pur luy & son convent. But what if a monke, &c. were beaten, wounded, or imprisoned, &c. doth the law give no remedie therefore? Yes, verily; [q] for in that case the abbot and the monke shall joyne in an action against the wrong doer; and if the writ be, ad damnum ipsius prioris, the writ is good; and if it be ad damnum ipsorum, it is good also. Also if a monke be by conspiracie falsely and maliciously indicted of felony and roberie, and afterwards is lawfully acquitted, his soveraigne and he shall joyne in a writ of conspiracy and the like. And where Littleton speaketh of a man that is professed in religion, the same law is of a nunne, sanctimonialis, mutatis mutandis.

[*] Bract. fo. 415. 416. 429. Mir. c. 2. sect. 14. 14. H. 4. 37. b. 5. H. 7. 26. Vid. sect. 256. 14. E. 4. 36.

[p] Mir. ubi supra.

[q] 22. Aff. 87. 21. E. 3. 41. 22. E. 3. 2. 37. H. 6. 8. 32. H. 6. 36. Bract. l. 5. f. 416. 420. 13. E. 3. Bre. 261. 22. Ed. 3. 2. 38. H. 6. 7. b. 24. E. 3. 34. b. 45. 7. R. 2. Nonability 3. 9.

[r] 4. H. 3. Bre. 766.

[r] A wife is disabled to sue without her husband, as much as a monke is without his soveraigne; and yet we read in books, that in some cases a wife hath had abilitie to sue and be sued without her husband: [s] for the wife of Sir Robert Belknap, one of the justices of the court of common pleas, who was exiled or banished beyond sea, did sue a writ in her owne name, without her husband, he being alive; whereof one said, ecce modo mirum, quod femina fert breve regis non nominando virum conjunctum robore legis.

[s] 2. H. 4. f. 7. a. (1. Bull. 140. Mo. 7. 666. 351. 1. Ro. Rep. 400.)

[t] 10. E. 3. 53.

[t] King Edward the third brought a quare impedit against the lady of Maltravers; and she pleaded, that she was covert of baron; whereunto it was replied for the king, that her husband the lord Maltravers was put in exile for a certaine cause, and she was ruled to answer.

[u] 1. H. 4. r. b.

[u] King Henrie the fourth brought a writ of ward against Sibel B. who pleaded, that shee was covert baron, &c. whereunto it was reped for the king, that her husband for a crime, that he had committed against the king and the peeres, was relegate or exiled into Gascoigne, there to remaine untill he obtained the king's grace: and Gascoigne chiefe justice, ex assensu sociorum, awarded that she should answer.

Sir Tho. Egerton, lord chancellor, in his argument which he published apart by himselfe in Cal.

(1) See ante 3. b. n. 7. to which add the arguments in the case of Thornby and Fleetwood 1 Stra. 347. Com. 207. 10. Mod. 113. 356. 406.

Fitzgib. 164. However, in a loose note of a still later case, lord Chancellor Hardwicke is made to say, that only guardians ad litem can be appointed by the ecclesiastical court. 14. Vin. Abr. 176. pl. 7. in a note. In another case, the report of which is more to be relied upon, the same respectable judge reprobated it, as a presumption in the ecclesiastical court to appoint a guardian of the person and estate, and declared their appointment of any, except when a suit was depending, to be an interference with his power as chancellor; and so displeased was he in the instance before him, as to conclude with recommending to the attorney-general, to consider, whether a quo warranto would not lie against the ecclesiastical court. 3. Atk. 631. Under a like apprehension of the subject, the present chief justice of the King's Bench, in Miss Catley's case, spoke of the appointment by the ecclesiastical courts as confined to guardians in litem, and therefore as perfectly insignificant. 4. Burr. v. 3. p. 1436. These authorities being brought before the reader, we shall leave him to his own judgment, with this further information only, that, in the warm debates in parliament about the last marriage act, this species of guardianship is said to have been incidentally discussed.

The fourth kind of guardian, not yet enumerated, is the guardian ad litem. But of this special guardian it may suffice for the present purpose to observe, that the power of appointing such is incident to all courts; and that the king may, as it is said, by letters patent appoint a guardian to prosecute or defend for an infant in suits generally, though such appointments have been long out of use. F. N. B. 27. L. See further as to guardian ad litem Post. 135. b.

In the preceding notes about guardianship, we have purposely confined ourselves to the subject exclusive of the royal family. Their case is too delicate to warrant our touching on the subject without better materials, than we are at present possessed of. Therefore Calvin's case de post natis demanded what former president there was for the warrant of the lady Belknap's case in 2. H. 4. 7. (1) which occasioned me to search, and upon search I Pl. in Parliam. 19. E. 1. found, that the like judgment had bin given before at the parliament holden in Craft. Epip. an. 19. Edw. 1. where the case was, that Thomas of Weyland being abjured the realme for felony in the yeare before, Margerie de Mose his wife, and Richard sonne of the said Thomas, exhibited their petition of right into the parliament, for the manor of Sobbir, wherein her husband had but an estate for life joyntly with her, and the inheritance in Richard the son by fine. The earle of Gloucester, lord of the fee, (who, claiming the land by escheat, had taken the possession thereof) alleged, quod non fuit juri consonum, quod aliqua femina intraret in aliquas terras vivente marito suo, eo quod prefatus Thomas abjuravit regnum, & adhuc vivit; & asserit idem comes nunquam hujusmodi casum accidisse, & inde petit post multas allegationes, quod possit predictum manerium tenere ut eschaetam suam. Super quo per ipsum dominum regem preceptum fuit, quod tam iustici sui de utroque banco, quam ceteri de regno suo, tam milites quam servientes in legibus & consuetudinibus Angliæ experti, mandarentur, quod essent coram rege & ejus consilio, &c. ad certiorandum ipsum regem, qualiter & quomodo in casu isto fuerit procedendum, & qualiter temporibus præteritis & antecessorum suorum in casibus consimilibus fieri consuevit, & interim scrutantur recorda de consimilibus, ubi recitantur duo vel tres consimiles casus. Et quia, licet prius non videbatur aliquibus juri consonum fuisse, quod uxor in vita viri secundum sanctam ecclesiam, qualitercunque deliquisset quoad forum regium, non posset nec deberet à viro suo separari, & sic quicquid foret in possessione uxoris converteretur in potestatem viri sui, & hoc manifeste immineret contra consuetudinem regni; & etiam quia quidam dubitabant, quod de possessionibus & bonis uxoris vir possit aliquantulum sustentari: tamen coram consilio domini regis, vocatis thesaurar' & baronibus & iusticiariis de utroque banco, concordatum est, quod predicta Margeria rebabeat talem seisinam, &c. secundum purportum finis predicti. &c. (2) Patet etiam consimile exemplum tempore Henrici patris regis. I have cited this solemne resolution the more

Note the ancient triall of difficult matters in law.

The great authority of judicial records and precedents.

A solemne resolution of the law in this point.

at large; because there be many excellent things to be observed in it: so as by that which hath beene said, it plainly appeareth, that this opinion, concerning the hability of the wife of a man abjured or banished, was not first hatched by the judges in Henry the fourth's time. And here is to be observed, that an abjuration, that is, a deportation for ever into a forreine land, like to profession, (whereof our author speaketh here) is a civil death; and that is the reason that the wife may bring an action, or may be impleaded during the naturall life of her husband. And so it is, if by act of parliament the husband bee attainted of treason or felony, and saving his life, is banished for ever, as Belknap, &c. was, this is a civil death, and the wife may sue as a feme sole. And hereby you may understand your bookes, which treat of this matter. But if the husband, by act of parliament, have judgement to be exiled but for a time, which some call a relegation, that is no civil death (3).

And in 8. E. 2. an abjuration is called a divorce betwene the husband and wife. Sed opus est interprete; for by law no subject can be exiled or banished his country, whereby he shall perdere patriam, but by authority of parliament, or in case of abjuration, and that must be upon an ordinary proceeding of law, as it was in this case of Weyland.

Another example we have in our bookes to this effect. If the husband had aliened the land of his wife, and after had committed felony and beene abjured the realme, the wife shall have a cui in vita in his life time, agreeable with the said resolution in parliament: for that the abjuration was a civil death (4).

See in the Register, a woman was banished out of the towne of Calice for adultery, by the law or custome of that place, and there appeareth carta pardonationis pro muliere bannita. Sed nos non habemus talem consuetudinem.

[a] But by the common law, the wife of the king of England is an exempt person from the king, and is capable of lands or tenements of the gift of the king, as no other feme covert is, and may sue and be sued without the king; for the wisdom of the common law would not have the king (whose continuall care and study is for the publike, & circa ardua regni) to be troubled and disquieted for such private and petty causes: so as the wife of the king of England is of ability and capacity to grant and to take, to sue and be sued as a feme sole by the common law.

[b] And such a queene hath many prerogatives, as, she shall find no pledges, for such is her dignity, as she shall not be amerced.

The queene, nor the king's sonne, are restrained by the statute of 1. H. 4. cap. 6. concerning grants by the king.

[c] In a quare impedit brought by her, some say, that plenarty is no plea, no more than in the case of the king.

[d] If any bailife of the queene's bring an action concerning the hundred, he shall say, in contemptum domini regis & reginæ.

(3. Inst. 217.)

8. E. 2. Coron. 425.

So resolved in parliament upon the making of the statute of 35. E. 1. ca. 1. exilium Hugonis de Spencer patris & filii tempore E. 2.

31. E. 1. Cui in vita 31.

(Ante 3. a.)

Regist. fol. 312. b.

[a] Vide in my preface to the first booke. This was law before the Conquest. 10. E. 3. 26. b. 30. E. 3. 5. 18. E. 3. 1. 22. E. 3. 21. 49. E. 3. 4. 49. Aff. 8. 11. H. 4. 67. 14. Ed. 3. Voucher 110. 20. E. 3. Nona. 9. 31. E. 3. Quar. imp. 146. 3. H. 7. 14. 19. H. 6. 2. 28. H. 6. 13. 7. H. 7. 7. 2. 26. H. 6. Aid le roy 24. Flet. li. 2. ca. 63. in Fine. Pl. Com. 231. Stanf. Præf. 10. b. (Ante 3. a.)

[b] 18. E. 3. 2. 33. E. 3. Brief 916. F. N. B. 101. a.

[c] 18. E. 3. 32. 24. E. 3. 35.

75.

[d] 32. E. 3. Bre. 346. 9. E. 3.

The 33.

(1) See Ellefm. Argum. in the case of the post nati 56.—(2) The whole record of Weyland's case is amongst the Collection of Parliamentary Records lately published; and by this it appears, that lord Coke is not very accurate in the words of his extract. 1. Parl. Rec. 66. Amongst other deviations from the record, one is, that he mentions two or three like cases to have been recited, whereas in the record the only one taken notice of is that of Matilda the wife of Robert Cissor, in the reign of Henry the third.—(3) But though it is not a civil death, yet for the time the effect is the same to the wife; and therefore it is equally necessary, that she should have a right to sue alone. For the authorities on this subject, see 4. Vin. 152. 1. Com. Dig. 18.—(4) Vid. Mich. 9. & 10. E. 1. Rot. 46. A wife shall have a writ of deceit against her husband, who levies a fine in her name.—Vid. Rot. Parl. 3. & 4. E. 4. n. 41. Special act to enable the duchess of Exeter to act as a single woman during the life of her husband, who was attainted of treason. Hal. MSS.—See the act in Ro. Parl. v. 5. p. 548.

Therefore we can only refer to the arguments, in the case on the king's right in respect to the education and marriage of his grand-children, which was referred to the judges in the reign of George the first. See Fortesc. Rep. 401. & Post. 133. b. note 1.

The queene shall pay no tolle.

[c] F. N. B. 235. A.

[f] F. N. B. 1. F.

[g] 14. E. 3. Voucher 110. 21. k. 3. 53. 22. E. 3. 3. b. 17. E. 3. 65. 10. E. 3. 17. 5. E. 3. 4. 25. E. 3. Aide del roy 66. 10. E. 3. 18. 26. H. 6. Aide le roy 24. [h] 21. E. 3. 17. 34. E. 3. Pro- teet. 122. 11. H. 4. 67. b. [i] 30. E. 3. 5. [k] L'etat. de 25. E. 3. de Pro- ditionibus. [l] Rot. Parliam. 8. H. 6. nu. 7.

[m] 4. E. 4. 25. 6. E. 4. 4. 45. E. 3. 10. a. 18. E. 4. 19. 22. H. 6. 5. 5. H. 7. 25. b.

[n] Pl. Com. 280. 281. Greif- brooke's case.

[c] If the tenant of the queene alien a certaine part of his tenancie to one, and another part to another, the queene may distraine in any one part for the whole, as the king may doe; but other lords shall distraine but for the rate; and therefore where the queene so dis- trained, there lyeth a writ de onerando pro rata portione. [f] The writ of right shall not be directed to the queene no more than to the king, but to her bailife. Otherwise it is, when any other is lord.

[g] In case of aide prier of the queene, it is domina regina inconsulta, and the cause of the aide prier shall not be counterpleaded no more than in the king's case. And see where the aide shall be granted of the king and queene, and where of the queene onely, and she of the king. [h] But a protection shall be allowed against the queene, but not against the king. Neither shall the queene be sued by petition, but by a precipe. [i] The queene is not bound by the statute of Marlebridge for driving a distresse into another county.

[k] If any doe compasse the death of the queene, and declare it by any over fact, the very intent is treason, as in the case of the king.

[l] No man may marry the queene dowager without the king's licence. (1) But let us now returne to Littleton.

Il poet faire son testament & ses executors, &c. [m] If A be bound to the abbot of D. A is professed a monke in the same abby, and after is made abbot thereof, he shall have an action of debt against his owne executors.

Donques l'ordinaire poet commiter administration, &c. sicome il fuit mort en fait. [n] Note the statute of 31. E. 3. ca. 11. that giveth actions to the administrators, speaketh of a man that dies intestate, which by the authority of Littleton extendeth as well to a civill death as to a naturall.

Section 201.

EXcommenge, ex-communicatus, excommunicatio. [a] Sicut quis poterit habere lepram in corpore, ita & in anima. Excommunicato interdicatur omnis actus legitimus, ita quod agere non potest, nec aliquem convenire, licet ipse aliis possit conveniri.

Excommunicatio est nihil aliud quam censura, à canone vel iudice ecclesiastico prolata & inflicta, privans legitimam communionem sacramentorum, & quandoque hominum. • It is divided into the greater and the lesser. Minor est, per quam quis à sacramentorum participatione conscientia vel sententia arceatur. Major est, quæ, non solum à sacramentorum, verum etiam fidelium communionem excludit, & ab omni actu legitimo separatur & dividit. But either of them both disableth the party. [b] Cum excommunicato, autem, nec orare nec loqui, nec palam, nec absconditè, nec vesci licet, exceptis quibusdam personis. But every excom-

LE vi. est, lou un home est excommenge per la ley de saint esglise, & il fust un action real ou personal, le tenant ou defendand poit pleder, que celuy, que fust, est excommenge, & de ceo covient monstrier lettre de l'evesque south son seale, tesmoignant l'excommengement, & demaundera judgement, sil serra respon- due, &c. Mes en cest cas, si le demandant ou plaintife ceo ne poit dedire, le breve n'abatera my, mes le judgement serra, que le tenant ou defendand alera quite sans

THE 6. is, where a man is excommu- nicated by the law of holy church, and he sueth an action reall or personall, the tenant or defendand may pleade, that he, that sueth, is excommunicated, and of this it behoves him to shew the bishop's letters under his seale, witnessing the excommunication, and aske judgment, if he shall be answered, &c. But in this case, if the demandant or plaintife cannot deny it, the writ shall not abate, but the judgment shall be, that the tenant or defendand shall go quite without jour,

(1) We have searched in vain for the parliamentary roll of 8. Hen. 6. cited in the margin, as an authority for this position. It is neither amongst the printed Statutes at Large, nor amongst the Rolls of Parliament lately published. Yet it is taken notice of as a statute in the Abridgment of Parliamentary Records. Cott. Rec. 589. In another of lord Coke's works, he cites it as of the 8. Hen. 6. See 2. Inst. 18. But we cannot find any such statute in print. It is not meant by this to doubt the existence of such a statute. We only apprise the reader of the inaccuracy in the reference to it. For the doctrine of marriages of the royal family, we refer the curious reader to the opinion of the judges in the reign of George the first, when they were consulted on the prerogative claimed by the king over his grand children; and to the debates, whilst the act of the present reign for regulating the future marriages of the royal family was under the consideration of parliament. See Fortesc. Rep. 401. 12. Geo. 3. c. 11. Ann. Reg. for 1772. and the two protests of the dissentient lords in Journ. Dom. Proc. 3. March 1772.

[a] Bracton, lib. 5. fo. 415. 426. 427. Fleta lib. 6. c. 44. Britton, ca. 49. fol. 125.

(F. N. B. 62. Doctr. Plac. 8.)

• F. N. B. 64. F.

[b] Bracton 426. b. acc.

jour, pur ceo que quant le demandant ou plaintife ad purchase les letters de absolution, & ceux sont monstres a le court, il poit aver un resummons, ou reattachement, sur son original, solongue la nature de son briefe. Mes en les auters v cases le briefe abatera, &c. si le matter monstre ne poit estre dedit.

day, for this, that when the demandant or plaintife hath purchased his letters of absolution, and shewed them to the court, he may have a resummons or a reattachment, upon his original, after the nature of his writ, &c. But in the other cases the writ shall abate, &c. if the matter shewed may not be gainsaid.

munication disableth not the party. [c] If Bailifes and commons, or any other corporation aggregate of many, bring an action, excommungement in the bailifes shall not disable them; for that they sue and answer by attorney. Otherwise it is of a sole corporation. But if executors or administrators be excommunicated, they may be disabled; because they, which converse with a person excommunicate, are excommunicate also. [d] If a bishop be defendant, an excommunication by the same bishop against the plaintife shall not disable him, and it shall be intended for the same cause, if another be not shewed.

[c] 30. E. 3. 15. 42. E. 3. 13. 21. H. 6. 30. 21. E. 4. 49.

[d] See Artic. Clerica. 7. 5. E. 3. 8. 8. E. 3. 70. 9. H. 7. 21. 10. H. 7. 8. & 9. 18. E. 3. 58. 28. E. 3. 97. 16. E. 3. Excom. 5. 20. E. 3. ibid. 9. 3. H. 4. 3.

Lettre del evesque de south son seale. [e] None can certifie excommungement, but only the bishop, unless the bishop be beyond sea or in remotis; or one that hath ordinary jurisdiction, and is immediate officer to the king's courts, as the archdeacon of Richmond, or the dean and chapter in time of vacation. [f] But in ancient time every official or commissary might testify excommungement in the king's court; and, for the mischief, that ensued thereupon, it was ordained by parliament, that none should testify excommungement but the bishop only.

[e] Bracton lib. 5. fo. 426. b. 12. E. 4. 15. 20. H. 6. 17. 20. E. 3. Excommungement 20. 33. E. 3. ibid. 29. 44. E. 3. ibid. 23. 11. H. 4. 14. F. N. B. 64. 65. 239. 7. E. 4. 14. 8. H. 6. 3. Registr. 67. (8. Co. 68. 1. Ro. Abr. 883.)

[g] If a bishop certifie, that another bishop hath certified him, that the partie, which is his diocesan, is excommunicated, this certificat upon another's report is not sufficient. [h] If the bishop of Rome, or any other having foraigne authority, doth excommunicate any subject of this realm, and certifieth so much under his seale of lead, this shall not disable the party; for the common law disallows all acts done in disability of any subject of this realm by any foraine power out of the realme, as things not authentique, whereof the judges should give allowance. [i] If the bishop certifieth the excommunication under seale, albeit he dyeth, yet the certificate shall serve. [k] Si quis innodatus fuerit per excommunicationes diversas pro diversis delictis, & profert literas absolutionis de una sententia, non erit absolutus, quousque de omnibus aliis absolvatur.

[f] 11. H. 4. 62. in Debt. [g] 33. E. 3. Excom. 29. F. N. B. 65. (Dy. 371. b. 4. Inft. 327.) [h] 16. E. 3. Excom. 4. 31. E. 3. ibid. 4. & 6. 30. Aff. 19. F. N. B. 64. 4. H. 7. 15. 12. E. 4. 15. 14. H. 4. 14. [i] 14. E. 3. Excom. 8. 8. E. 2. ibid. 26. [k] Hil. 14. E. 3. Coram rege, London, in Thesaur. (Ante 97. a. Post. 344.)

Evesque. Episcopus, a bishop is regularly the king's immediate officer to the king's court of justice in causes ecclesiasticall, and all the bishopricks in England are of the king's foundation, and the king is patron of them all; [l] and at the first they were donative, and so it appeares by our bookes, and by acts of parliament, and by history, and that was per traditionem annuli & pastoralis baculi. i. e. the crozier (1). And king Henry the first, being persuaded by the bishop of Rome to make them elective by their chapter or convent, refused it (2). [m] But king John by his charter, acknowledging the custome and right of the crowne in former times, yet granted de communi consensu baronum, that they should bee eligible, which after was confirmed by divers acts of parliament. And afterward the manner and order, as well of election of archbishops and bishops, as of the confirmation of the election and consecration, is [n] enacted and expressed in the statute of 25. H. 8. But by the statutes of 31. H. 8. and 1. E. 6. (3) they were made donative by the king's letters patents, both which statutes are repealed (4), and the statute of 25. H. 8. doth yet remaine in full force and effect (5).

[l] 17. E. 3. fo. 40. 25. E. 3. cap. de Provis. 25. H. 8. ca. 10. 3. Co. 73. le Case de Deane & Chapter de Norwich. Mat. Par. pag. 62. Vid. scilicet. 133. 134. [m] Rot. Patent. 15. January 17. Regis Johannis. Mar. Par. pag. 253. 35. E. 1. Lestat. de Carlisle. 25. E. 3. Lestat. de Provis. 13. R. 2. ca. 2. [n] 25. H. 8. ca. 20.

And where Littleton saith, that the bishop under his seale must testify, &c. it is to be knowne, [o] that none but the king's courts of record, as the court of common pleas, the king's bench, justices of gaole delivery, and the like, can write to the bishop to certifie bastardy, mulierty, loyalty of matrimony, and the like ecclesiasticall matter: for it is a rule in law, that none but the king can write to the bishop to certifie; and therefore no inferiour court, as London, Norwich, Yorke, or any other incorporation, can write to the bishop, but [p] in those cases the plea must be removed into the court of common pleas, and that court must write to the bishop, and then remand the record againe. And this was done in respect of the honor and reverence, which the law gave to the bishop, being an ecclesiasticall judge, [o] 2. E. 3. Corone, 160. 8. E. 3. 59. 24. E. 3. 33. 44. E. 3. 28. 8. R. 2. Consuans, 88. (2. Ro. Abr. 589.) [p] 41. E. 3. 42. E. 3. fo. 18. E. 3. 61. 14. H. 4. 25. 3. H. 4. 12. Registr. 7. a. F. N. B. 6. E.

(1) Mr. Washington, one of the writers against the dispensing power in the reign of James the second, insists, that in the Saxon times bishopricks were conferred in parliament; and that the king's investiture was subsequent to such election. For proof of this position, one of his chief authorities is the following passage in Ingulphus: A multis annis ante retroactis nulla erat electio praelatorum mere libera et canonica; sed omnes dignitates, tam episcoporum quam abbatum, regis curia pro sua complacencia conferrebat. Ingulph. Hist. fol. 309. b. Observat. on Eccles. Jurisd. 24. Another instance relied on is the election of Wulfstan bishop of Worcester, which Matthew Paris describes in the words following: Wulfstanus, electo ad archiepiscopatum Eboracensem Aldredo, unanimi consensu, tam cleri, quam totius plebis, rege insuper, ut quem vellet sibi eligerent presulem et animarum pastorem, annuente, in episcopum ejusdem loci eligitur. Matth. Par. Hist. 20. — (2) After some struggles, Henry gave up the point of investiture; but, according to Mr. Washington, elections of bishops continued as before till king John's time; and he says, there are precedents of many bishops elected in parliament in the reigns of Stephen and Henry the second. Observat. on Eccles. Jurisd. 33. & 2. Spelm. Concil. 42. & 119. — (3) 31. H. 8. c. 9. & 1. E. 6. c. 2. But the former statute only relates to the new bishopricks erected by Henry. See Rastall's 3. ed. of Stat. — (4) But notwithstanding the repeal of the 1. E. 6. the election of bishops is, as that statute emphatically expresses it, mere shadow, colour, and pretence; for by the 25. of Hen. 8. if they do not elect the person recommended by king's letter missive, which accompanies his congé d'élire, they incur the penalties of a præmunire. See f. 7. There is no such statute

[a] 8. E. 3. 59. 36. H. 6. 33. tit. Quar. Imp. Brooke 109. 35. H. 6. 30. 11. H. 6. 3. 24. E. 3. 33.
[b] 15. E. 3. Conusans 41. Juridict. 24. 40. E. 3. 2. vide lect. 134.
[c] Braet. lib. 3. 106.
[d] Fleta lib. 5. cap. 14. Britton fol. 248. b.

and a lord of parliament by reason of the baronie which every bishop hath. (1) And this was the reason [a] a quare impedit did lye of a church in Wales in the county next adjoyning; for that the lordship's marchers could not write to the bishop, [b] neither shall consufance be granted in a quare impedit, because the inferior court cannot write to the bishop. And here- with agreeth antiquitie. [c] Nullus alius præter regem potest episcopo dem. ndare inquisitionem faciendam. [d] And another speaking of loyaltie of marriage, nec alius quam rex super hoc de- mandaret episcopo, quod inde inquireret. Episcopus alterius mandatum, quam regis, non tenetur obtemperare. And therewith agreeth Britton also.

Le briefe n'abatera, &c. Abater is a French word, and signifieth destruere, or prostruere, to destroy or prostrate. And abatement de briefe is a prostration or overthrowing of the writ.

[e] Braet. lib. 5. fol. 425. 11. R. 2. Excom. 25. 13. E. 4. 8. 3. Aff. p. 12. Vide. lect. 691.

[*] Alera quite sauns jour, &c. That is, to goe quiet without any continuance to any certaine day; and therefore the defendant is not bound to any certaine attendance, untill the party purchaseth his letters of absolution, and the reattachment or reformons bee sued, the entry of which award is, ideo loquela prædicta remaneat sine die quousque, &c.

[f] 51. H. 3. cap. 1. & 2. Marlebr. ca. 12. 32. H. 8. ca. 21.

Four. Dies [e] in legall understanding is the day of appearance of the parties, or continuance of the plea. And you shall understand, that first in reall actions there are dies communes, common dayes, whereof you shall reade in divers ancient statutes.

[f] Artic. super Cart. ca. 15. 28. E. 1.
[g] 8. H. 6. 20. 30. H. 6. 35. 8. Eliz. Dier. 252.
(2. Inst. 567.)

[f] Also in all summons upon the originall there must be fiteene dayes after the summons before the appearance. [g] But if the originall be returned tarde, and summons alias goeth forth, there must be nine returnes betwene the teste and the returne. And so in other judiciall processe in reall actions, saving if consufans be demanded to be holden within his mannor, there processe shall be awarded from three weekes to three weekes.

[g] Mirror cap. 2. sect. 19. Braet. lib. 5. fol. 334. & lib. 4. fol. 255. Brit. fol. 279. b. Fleta. lib. 6. cap. 6. 12. E. 4. 15.

And before the statute of articuli super cartas, in all summons and attachments in plea of land there shall be contained the terme of fiteene dayes. [q] And it appeareth as well by the statute, as by the ancient authors of the law, who wrote before the statute, that this was the ancient common law: and the reason of these long dayes given in reall actions was the recovery being so dangerous, that the tenant might the better provide him both of answer and of proofes. [*] But by consent they may take other than common dayes.

[*] 11. H. 6. 23. 15. E. 3. Jour. 22. 21. E. 3. 29. 15. Aff.

And it is not amisse to note what the ancient law was in proceeding against a man for his life. And therefore heare what Britton saith, sur le presentment de cest felony (under which he includeth also treason) voilons nous (for he wrote in the king's name) que trestous ceux, que ent serr' endites, face le viscont bastiment prender, & fassent leur corps en prison garder, & que ilz sont menes devant nous, ou devant nos justices: & pur ceo que nulluy ne soit diszarnis de leur respous, voilons que ceux, que issint soient prise, qui ilz eunt temps de purveyer leur respous 15 jours au meyns filz le prient, & en dementiers soient fassent garder. [r] Vide Fortescue of this matter. And see the Mirror, that in some cases the party convicted had forty dayes, or at least thirty dayes to shew some matter to disturbe, (that is to arrest) judgement, which now I know is gone in desuetudinem, and great expedition is now made in pleas of the crowne concerning the life of man. Sed de morte hominis nulla est cunctatio longa.

[r] Fortescue in libro de Laudibus Legum Anglie. Mirror. ca. 4. sect. Sept. choles disturbent judgement mortels.

[s] 9. Co. 118. b. Zancher's case.
(2. Inst. 568.)

[s] And the use of the king's bench at this day is, that, if the offence be committed in another county than where the bench sits, and the inditement be removed by certiorari, there must be fiteene dayes betwene every processe and the returne thereof; but, if it be committed in the same county where the bench sit, they may proceed de die in diem; but so they will doe rarely. But let us returne againe to the common pleas.

[a] Artic. super Cart. ubi supra. F. N. B. 177. c. 11. Aff. 30. 12. Aff. 4. 22. Aff. 79. 3. H. 6. Aff. 2. 9. E. 4. 5. a. 27. E. 3. 1. 2. W. 1. cap. ult.
[*] F. N. B. 177. D. 7. Aff. 7. 14. Aff. 4. 24. E. 3. 31. 39. E. 3. 20. 9. E. 4. 18. 12. E. 4. 15. 8. H. 5. Error 87.
12. E. 4. 15.

Secondly, there is a day called dies specialis, [a] as in an assise in the king's bench or common pleas, the attachment need not be 15 dayes before the appearance. Otherwise it is before justices assigned. But generally, in assises, the judges may give a speciall day at their pleasure, and are not bound to the common dayes; [*] and these daies they may give as well out of terme as within. So upon an imparlance the court may give any speciall or particular day; but that must be in the terme time; and likewise in a seire facias, upon a fine or a recovery in a reall action, because it is a writ of execution; and so it is in a per quæ servitia and the like, and in all judiciall writs, in processe against an infant to judge of his age, or where the husband prayeth in ayd of his wife, or in a pone at the suit of the defendant, there need not be fiteene dayes. And after demurrer in law, the court may give what day they will. [b] And it is worthy the noting, that if in an assise the parties be adjourned to Westm. usque 15. Pasche, there they be not demandable till the fourth day; but if it be adjourned usque diem Lunæ, or diem Martis, there the parties are demandable on that day.

[b] 41. E. 3. Jour. 16. 8. E. 4. 4. 1. H. 6. 4. 27. Aff. 33.
[c] 3. E. 2. Avowrie. 188. 15. E. 3. Jour. 20. 22. E. 3. 20. 1. E. 3. 4. 9. Co. 49. Countee de Salop's case. 33. H. 6. 42.

Thirdly, [c] there is a day of grace, dies gratia, or a day of courtesie. The name doth shew of what kind it is; and regularly this day is granted by the court, at the prayer of the defendant statute now in force, in respect to deaneries, which we have observed in a former note; and yet the election to the old deaneries is in practice controuled by the king's letter missive, as much as the election to bishopricks. See ante 96. a. note 3. It is probable, therefore, that the letter missive is of considerably greater antiquity as to both than the statute of Hen. the eighth. Ibid.—(5) This was once doubted; for the 1. Ma. st. 2. c. 20. which repealed the 1. Edw. 6. was, by an oversight, as it seems, wholly abrogated by the 1. Jam. 1. c. 25. instead of being abrogated merely so far as relates to the marriage of priests. At length, however, the judges held, that the 1. E. 6. c. 2. was virtually repealed by the 1. & 2. Ph. & M. c. 8. and 1. Eliz. c. 1. See Tracts by Antiq. Soc. v. 3. p. 416. 12. Co. 7.—It is observable, that lord Coke, in this his account of the patronage of bishopricks, omits distinguishing those of the old foundation from those of the new. But this is material, the latter being still donative by letters patent, according to the statute of 31. H. 8. which authorized their erection. See 31. H. 8. c. 9. in Rastall's edition of the Statutes.—As to the Irish and Welsh bishopricks, about which lord Coke is silent, the former, by force of the Irish statute of 2. Eliz. c. 4. are made donative by the king's letters patent; but what the latter are, we cannot at present inform the reader, Mr. Brown Willis's Survey of the Cathedrals, which is the only book we are possessed of on the subject, not stating, how the Welsh bishops are created.

(1) Acc. ante 70. b. & 97. a.—We have already taken notice, that, according to lord Hale, the title, by which bishops sit in parliament, is, not having baronial possessions, but usage and custom; and that his notion had been ably controverted by bishop Warburton.

mandant or plaintife in whose delay it is, and never at the prayer of tenant or defendant. But it is worthy of observation, [d] that a day of grace is never granted, where the king is party by aide prayer of the tenant or defendant; nor where any lord of parliament or peere of the realme is tenant or defendant. [e] And sometime the day, that is quarto die post, is called dies gratiæ; for the very day of returne is the day in law, and to that day the judgement hath relation; but no default shall be recorded till the fourth day be past, unlesse it be in a writ of right, where the law alloweth no day, but only the day of returne. This day is sometime called dies amoris, and sometime a dies datus. But it were too long to enumerate all. This shall be sufficient to give the reader a taste to understand the residue concerning this matter.

[f] There is also a day of appearance in court by the writ, and by the roll. By writ, when the sherife returns the writ. By the roll, when he hath a day by the roll, and the sherife returne not the writ, there the defendant, to save himselfe from corporall paine, as by imprisonment, or to prevent the losse of issues, or to save his freehold or inheritance, may appeare by the day he hath by the roll.

[g] Note, it is said commonly, that the day of nisi prius, and the day in bank, is all one day. That is to be understood as to pleading, but not to other purposes.

There are dies juridici (which [b] Britton calleth temps covenables) and dies non juridici. Dies juridici (except it be in assises) are onely in the tearme. [i] And there be also in the tearme dies non juridici. As in all the foure termes the sabbath day is not dies juridicus; for that ought to be consecrated to divine service. (1) Also in Michaelmasse tearme the feasts of All Saints and of All Soules. (2) In Hillarie tearme, the Purification of the blessed Virgin Marie; and in Easter terme the feast of the Ascension are not dies juridici, but set apart by the ancient judges and fages of the law for divine service. For Trinity tearme, (which sometime had seven dayes of returne, and was as long as Michaelmasse tearme is now: but for avoiding of infection in that hot time of the yeare, and that men might not be letted to gather in harvest, three returnes (since Littleton wrote) viz. Crastino Sancti Johannis Baptiste, Oclabis Sancti Johannis Baptiste, and 15 Sancti Johannis Baptiste are by the statute of 32. H. 8. cut off and become dies non juridici. And in those dayes the feast of Saint John the Baptist was not dies juridicus. And the said statute called, Dies Communis in Banco, is in divers points (since Littleton wrote) altered, as by the said statute appeareth. And in ancient time respect and reverence was had by law to certaine times, as it appeareth [k] by the statute of W. 1. cap. 51. which hath a short but an excellent preamble: viz. Et pur ceo que grand charitie ferra de faire droit a tous en tout temps, ou messior serroit; purvieu est per assentement des prelates, que assises de novel discein, mortdauncester, Et darreine presentment, fuissent prises en le advent, en septuagesime, Et en quaresme, auxibien come (le bome) prent lenquestes, Et ceo pria le roy, as evesques.

[l] This statute is expounded in bookes, which I have onely added, to the end the studious reader might understand the bookes that darkly speake of this matter, and be ignorant of nothing that belongs to the understanding of any part of the law. Now advent is a moneth before the feast of the Nativity of our Saviour Christ, so called, de adventu Domini in carne. Septuagesima beginneth ever on the sabbath day, and is the third sabbath before Shrove Sunday, so called; because it is the 70th day before the feast of Easter. Sexagesima is the second sabbath before Shrove-Sunday, so named, because it is the 60th day before Easter; and so of Quinquagesima, and Quadragesima, [m] whereof you shall reade in acts of parliament, and ancient authors. (3) Now as there be dies juridici, so there be horæ convenientes, whereof the Mirror saith, [n] abuson, que len tient pleas per demenches (id est sabbathis) ou per auters jours defendus, ou devant le soliel levy, ou noelantre, ou en disboneff lieu.

[o] Furthermore, there are (as ancient authors term them) dies solaris & dies lunaris, secundum quod Deus divisit lumen a tenebris, ex quibus duobus diebus efficitur unus dies, qui dicitur artificialis ex die precedente & nocte subsequente, qui constat ex 24 horis.

But we at this day, retaining the same method, doe differ in words. For we say, dierum alii sunt naturales, alii artificiales; dies naturalis constat ex 24 horis, & continet diem solarem & noctem: and therefore in indictments of burglary, and the like, we say, in nocte ejusdem diei. Iste dies naturalis est spatium, in quo sol progreditur ab oriente in occidentem, & ab occidente iterum in orientem. Dies artificialis sive solaris incipit in ortu solis, & definit in occasu: and of this day the law of England takes hold in many cases. Now divers nations beginne the day at divers times. The Jewes, the Chaldeans, and Babylonians, beginne the day at the rising of the sunne; the Athenians at the fall; the Umbri in Italy beginne at midday; the Egyptians and Romanes from midnight; and so doth the law of England in many cases. Of all which you shall reade plentifull matter in our bookes, and in my Reports, which by this short instruction you shall the better understand.

[p] There is also annus minor and major. The lesser yeare consisteth of 365 dayes, and [p] Braet. lib. 5. fol. 359. Britton fol. 209. a. have fixe houres, whereby in every fourth yeare there is dies excrefcens, which makes that yeare to

(1) Writ of summons in a common recovery was made returnable in a month from the day of Easter, which happened to be Sunday; and the tenant in tail, who was vouchee, died the same day. The judgment was reversed; because it could not be given till the day after the vouchee's death, and then it came too late. Swan and Broome 4th. part Burr. v. 3. p. 1596. But though Sunday is not dies juridicus for giving judgment, or awarding judicial process, yet it is for some other purposes, as for exhibiting an information on the 5. & 6. E. 6. against ingrossing. W. Jo. 156.—(2) In consequence of the abbreviation of Michaelmas term, by the 24. Geo. 2. c. 48. these two days do not now fall within it.—(3) See further, as to dies non juridici, Spelman's Treatise on the Terms amongst his Posthuma, page 87.

Warburton. Ante 70. b. n. 2. However, on further investigating the subject, we incline to concur with lord Hale. But then it is with some little addition. In the Anglo-Saxon times the bishops certainly were admitted to sit in parliament; and as this was prior to their holding their estates by a baronial tenure, it could not then be on account of their baronies; nor will it be easy to suggest any other probable reason for their presence during that period, than an usage founded on the propriety of having the heads of the church to guard it from injury, and to assist the other members of the legislature in their deliberations on religion and other ecclesiastical concerns. At the Conquest, as all agree, the possessions of the bishops were converted into baronies; and for a long time after they were summoned to parliament as barons by tenure. But it is no less certain, that, for many centuries past, they have been called to sit, without any regard to their temporal possessions or the tenure by which they are holden; which is more especially true in the instance of the new sees erected by Henry the eighth, the bishops

[q] 17. Eliz. Dier. 345.
(2. Ro. Abr. 521.)

[r] 21. H. 3. stat. de anno bis-sextili.

[1] 6. Co. 62. Catesby's case.
(2. Ro. Abr. 521. Cro. Jam.
167.)

have in rei veritate 366 daies, and that is called annus major. [q] A quarter of a year containeth by legall computation 91 dayes, and half a yeare containeth 182 days; for the odde houres in legall computation are rejected; and by [r] the statute de anno bissextili, it is provided, quod computentur dies ille excrescens & dies proximè præcedens pro unico die, so as in computation that day excrescent is not accounted. A month, mensis, is regularly accounted in law 28 dayes, and not according to the solar month, nor according to the kalendar [1] unlesse it be for the account of the laps in a quare impedit. There is mensis solaris, and mensis lunaris. Solaris est 12 pars anni, viz. spatium 30 dierum, horarum 10 & minutorum 30 & lunaris est spatium 28 dierum.

[1] Braet. lib. 5. fo. 425. Britton ca. 74. 7. Co. 29. 30.
(Post. 363. a.)

Resummons ou re-attachment. These are writs, that the demandant or plain- tife, after he hath obtained his letters of absolution, may sue out to bring the tenant or de- fendant againe into court to have day, to make answer unto him. [1] And these writs doe lye in all cases, when the plea is discontinued or put without day, either in this case, or in case when the demandant or tenant hath his age, or for the non venue of the justices, or in case of a protection or essoine de service le roy, &c. Of these writs there be two sorts, viz. generall and speciall, whereof you may see presidents, and reade more at large in the case of discontinuance of processe in my Reports, and need not here to be inserted.

But in the case of outlawry the writ shall abate if he obtaine not his pardon. 44. E. 3. 27.

Sur son originall. This is intended of his originall writs, or of that, which is in- stead of an originall writ. But note, that in the other five cases the writ shall abate; and in the case of excommungement the writ shall not abate, but the plea to be put without day untill the plaintife purchase his letters of absolution, and sue out his resummons, or re-at- tachment.

[u] Braet. lib. 5. fol. 421.

In ancient times more persons seemed to be disabled, then these fixe recited by Littleton, As first he that was a leper, and by the writ de leproso amovendo was propter contagionem mor- bi prædicti (as the writ saith) & propter corporis deformitatem (as others say) to be removed from the society of men to some solitary place; and thereupon [u] it is said, datur etiam ex- ceptio tenenti, ex persona petentis peremptoria propter morbum petentis incurabilem & corporis de- formitatem, ut si petens leprosus fuerit, & tam deformis quod aspectus ejus sustineri non possit, & ita quod à communione gentium sit separatus, talis quidem placitare non potest, nec hereditatem pe- tere. [x] And herewith Britton agreeth. Treating of disabled men, as men outlawed, ab- jured the realme, attainted of felony, &c. he addeth, ne mesel, ouste de common gentis.

[x] Britton fol. 39. & 88.

[y] Fleta lib. 6. cap. 39. 22. E.
3. in dorf. clau. 20. Part. nu. 14.
F. N. B. 234. Register.

[y] And Fleta saith, competit etiam ei exceptio propter lepram manifestam, ut si petens lepro- sus fuerit, & tam deformis, quod à communione gentium merito debet separari; talis enim morbus petentem repellit ab agendo.

And if these ancient writers be understood of an appearance in person, I thinke their opi- nions are good law; for they ought not to sue nor defend in proper person, but by attorney; for they are separated à communione gentium propter contagionem morbi & deformitatem corporis.

[a] Camden in Leicestershire, verbo Burton.

Before the Conquest this disease was not knowne in England; for master Camden, writing of Burton Lazars, in Leicestershire, saith, [a] primis Normannorum temporibus collecto per Angliam sipe nosocomium hoc constructum ferunt, quo tempore lepra (quæ à nonnullis elephan- tiasis) gravissime vi contagionis per Angliam serpsit. And it is called morbus elephantiasis; be- cause the skinnies of lepers are like to elephants. [b] And the law of England, for the removing of the lepers from the society of men to some solitary place, is grounded upon God's law.

[b] Levit. cap. xiii. verse 44. 45.
46. Numer. cap. v. verse 1. 2. 4.
Regum c. 15.

[c] Braet. l. 5. 420. 421. Britton
fol. 39. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 37.

[c] Also there was a time, when ideots, madmen, and such as were deafe and dumb na- turally, were disabled to sue; because they wanted reason and understanding, (tales enim non multum distant à brutis). But at this day they all may sue; for the suit must be in their name, but it shall be followed by others. [d] And note, that, when an ideot doth sue or defend,

[d] 33. H. 6. 18. F. N. B. 27. G.

he shall not appeare by gardian or prochein amy, or attorney, but hee must bee ever in per- son; [e] but an infant, or a minor, shall sue by prochein amy, and defend by gardian. (1)

[e] 27. H. 8. 11. 40. E. 3. 16.
20. E. 4. 2. F. N. B. 27. H.
(2. Inst. 261.)

But now let us heare what Littleton will say unto us.

Sect. 202.

[a] Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18. Doct.
& Stud. fol. 141. 4. E. 4. 25.
per Danby. 27. Aff. pl. 49.

CHAPLEINE [a] seculer is he, that is infra sacros ordines; but he is not regular, (that is) liveth not under certaine rules,

ITEM si un villein est fait un chap- leine seculer, uncore son seignior poit luy

ALSO if a villeine be made a secular chaplaine, yet his lord may seise him (2) as seiser

(1) Acc. Fitzh. N. B. 27. H. At common law, infants could neither sue or defend, except by guardian; by whom was meant, not the guardian of the infant's person and estate, but either one admitted by the court for the particular suit on the infant's bishops of these never having had any estates by a baronial tenure, and consequently having no claim to be called to parliament otherwise than as prelates of the church, and by reason of the usage, which had so long before prevailed in respect to their order. If all this be so, then, though the bishops once sat in parliament for their baronies, yet lord Coke's position, which imports, that they still sit by the same title, is not strictly accurate; but we should rather adopt lord Hale's idea of their sitting by usage as more applicable to the present circumstances. Perhaps, indeed, lord Coke only meant to refer to the more ancient reason of their being summoned to parliament, and thence to infer, that in presumption of law they are still deemed to be called on the same account; in which case there is little more than a difference of words between him and lord Hale. As to bishop Warburton's hypothesis on this subject, we still think that he shews great ability; but at the same time we cannot help owning, that he appears to us to have too much indulged in speculation, more adverting to what struck him as the most rational and proper grounds of admitting the bishops into the house of lords, than to the fact of the real title. He represents the bishops to sit as barons by tenure, so far as regards the judicial capacity of the lords, and as prelates of the church, so far as the lords act in a legislative character. But the fact, on which he builds the first part of this distinction, fails him; because, for the reasons already stated, the bishops no longer have baronies by tenure, nor have had any for several centuries past. Besides, seifer come son villein, & seifer les biens, &c. Mes il semble, que si le villein entre en religion, & est professe, que le seignior ne peut luy prendre ne seiser, pur ceo que il est mort en ley; nient plus que si un frank home prent un niese a sa feme, le seignior ne peut prendre ne seiser la feme de le baron, mes son remedy est daver un action envers le baron, pur ceo que il prist sa niese a feme san son licence & volunt, &c. Et issint peut le seignior aver action envers le souverain del meason, qui prist & admittast son villein destre professe en mesme le meason sans licence & la volunt le seignior, & recoversa ses damages a la value de le villein. Car celuy, qui est professe moigne, serra un moigne, & come un moigne serra pris per terme de sa vie natural, sinon que il soit deraigne per la ley de saint esglise. Et il est tenu per son religion de garder son cloister, &c. Et si le seignior luy puisset prendre hors de sa meason, donques his villeine, and seise his goods, &c. But it seemeth, that if the villeine enter into religion, and is professed, that the lord may not take nor seise him, because he is dead in law; no more than if a free man taketh a neise to his wife, the lord cannot take nor seise the wife of the husband, but his remedy is to have an action against the husband, for that he took his neise to wife without his licence and will, &c. And so may the lord have an action against the sovereign of the house, which takes and admitteth his villeine to be professed in the same house, without the licence and leave of the lord, and he shall recover his damages to the value of the villeine. For he, which is professed a monke, shall be a monk, and as a monke shall be taken for terme of his natural life, unlesse he be deraigned by the law of holy church. And he is bound by his religion to keepe his cloyster, &c. And if the lord might take him out of his house, nor hath vowed those three things above specified.

[6] Enter en religion & est professe.

That is intended (as hath been said) when he is regular and profest under certain rules, as to become one of the four orders of friers (that is to say) freres minores, Augustines, Preachers, or Carmelites, or become a monke, cannon or nunne, &c. Qui ad vivendum regulariter se astringunt, frve sunt monachi, frve canonici regulares, frve sanctimonialis. For all these are regular and votaries, and are dead persons in law; but so are not the secular persons, as prebends, parsons, vicars, &c.

And therefore it is holden in our bookes, [c] that if a secular priest taketh a wife and hath issue and dyeth, the issue is lawfull and shall inherit as heire to his father, &c. for (as it was then holden) the marriage was not void, but voidable by divorce, and after the death of either partieno divorce can be had (1).

But if a man marieth a nunne, or a monke marieth, these marriages were holden void, and the issues bastards; because (as it was then holden) the marriage was utterly voyde; for that the nunne and the monke (as Littleton here saith) were dead persons in law. And that is the reason yeelded by Littleton, wherefore a villeine, being professed in religion, cannot be seised by the lord; because he is dead in law; and yet his blood or bondage is not thereby altered, but his person, in respect of his profession only privileged. [d] In decretalibus statutum est, quod nullus episcopus spurios, aut servos, donec a dominis suis fuerint manumissi, ad sacros ordines promoveri presumat. But notwithstanding his person is privileged till he be disgraced. And so it is holden in

[a] Britton cap. 31. fol. 79. Doctor & Student. fo. 141. (Doctr. Plac. 9. Ante 132. a.)

4. H. 4. cap. 14.

[c] 21. H. 7. 39. 19. H. 7. tit. Bastardy. 33. 5. E. 2. tit. Non-ability. 26. 47. E. 3. Casu ult. (12. Co. 9. 1. Ro. Abr. 340.)

[d] Glanvil. lib. 5. cap. 5. Britton fo. 79. & 82.

(1) See 2. Inst. 687.

our

infant's personal appearance, or appointed for suits in general by the king's letters patent. F. N. B. 27. H. & L. Sty. 369. Bro. Garden pl. 11. & 17. But this rule was found inconvenient, it sometimes happening, that an infant was secreted by those having the legal custody of him, and so prevented from applying to have a guardian ad litem appointed. Hence was seen the necessity of permitting any person to litigate for the infant's benefit, who should be disposed to risque the expence. On this principle the statute of Westminster the first enables any one to sue as prochein amy for an infant in an assise, where the infant himself

Besides, independently of this, the whole of the speculation seems to us unfounded in any sufficient authority, and consequently the mere offspring of modern refinement; our simple and unlettered ancestors, when they laid the foundations of the English parliament, not being likely to have acted under the influence of a policy so deep, as the nice distinction thus attributed to them necessarily supposes. At present we have only to add further on this curious and difficult subject, that, as we have touched it so slightly, our observations should be understood as intended to convey only a general idea. Should the reader have occasion to penetrate more deeply into the subject, he must consult the several pieces published in 1679 on the controverted question, whether the bishops can vote in the preliminary steps of a bill of attainder; particularly the tracts by bishop Stillingfleet and Mr. Hunt for the right, and those by lord Hollis against it. See 1. Burn. Hist. fol. ed. 460. 2. Stillingfleet's Eccles. Caf. 228. Hunt's Argument for the Right of the Bishops in Capital Cases 128. Hollis's Remains, 121.—See further Seld. Tit. Hon. ed. 1678. p. 697. Staundf. Pl. C. 153.

[e] Fleta lib. 2. cap. 44. Britton ubi supra.

our old bookes. [e] If a villeine be made a knight, for the honour of his degree his person is privileged, and the lord cannot seize him untill he be disgraced. Nullam vilem personam natione spurium, vel servilis conditionis, ad militie strenuitatis ordinem promoveri licebit; sed cum à dominis suis petantur ut nativi, ipsis primo degradatis, statim ad iudicium procedatur.

il ne viveroit come un mort person, ne lorsque son religion, le quel ferroit inconvenient, &c.

then he should not live as a dead person, nor according to his religion, which should be inconvenient, &c.

[f] F. N. B. 78. b. 30. E. 1. tit. Villen 46. 33. E. 3. ibid. 21. (Post. 137. b.) 18. F. 2. ibid. 30. 46. E. 3. 6. 4. E. 4. 25. 1. H. 4. 6. 13. E. 1. Villen. 36. 18. Aff. 10. Doct. & Stud. 141. Mirror. ca. 2. sect. 18. acc.

Si un frank home prent un niese.

[f] Some have holden, that by this marriage the wife shall be free for ever; but the better opinion of our bookes is, that she shall be privileged during the coverture onely, unlesse the lord himself marieth his niese, and then some hold, that she shall be free for ever (1).

[g] 16 H. 3. nuper obiit 17. 8. H. 3. Breve 789.

If a niese be regardant to a mannor, and she taketh a freeman to husband by licence of the lord, and the lord maketh a feoffment in fee of the manor, the husband dieth, the feoffee shall not have the niese but the feoffor; for that during the marriage she was severed from the mannor. And so is the booke 29. Aff. (which is falsly printed) to be understood.

[h] Vide Britton fol. 82. Foistesc. c. 43. 46. E. 3. 6. a.

[h] Mes son remedie est daver un action vers le baron, &c.

Albeit marriage is lawfull, yet when it worketh a prejudice to a third person, an action in this case lyeth against the husband to the value of his losse. And albeit he did not know her to be a niese, yet the action lyeth against him; for he must take notice thereof at his perill, [i] unlesse she be out of the service of the lord and vagrant; and then if one not knowing her to be a niese marieth her, some say, that in that case no action lyeth against the husband. [k] And likewise the lord shall have an action against those that were the meanes to make the villeine a knight.

31. H. 6. ca. 5. 12. H. 7. c. 7. 11. H. 4. 5. b.

Sovereigne, præcipuus, chiefe, as here, sovereigne del meason is the chiefe of the house.

31. H. 8. cap. 29.

Si non que il soit deraigne. This word (deraigne) commeth of the French word derayer, or deraigner, that is to say, to displace or to turne one out of his order; and hereof cometh deraignment a displacing or turning out of his order. So when a monke is derained, he is degraded and turned out of his order of religion, and become a lay man.

40. Aff. 27. per Finchden.

Le quel ferroit inconvenient. Ab inconvenienti is a good argument in law, as Littleton often observeth. And here Littleton concludeth, that the lord cannot take a monke out of his house, for that it should be inconvenient, which Littleton here sheweth, for divers reasons, and therefore unlawfull. And the inconvenience is, that where a man of religion should live according to his profession in religion, by the taking of him out he should not.

Si le seignior luy puisset prendre, &c. By this it appeareth, that, if a man detaineth a villaine in his house, the lord of the villaine may take him out of the house, for here the impediment, wherefore the lord could not take him out of the house, was, for that the villaine was a monke professed. And so in case of the wardship here next following.

Section 203.

BRIEFE de ravishment de garde.

This writ is given by the statute of W. 2. cap. 35. in verbis conceptis, the words of which writ be, that the defendant, talem heredem, cuius maritadium ad ipsum A.

EN mesme le maner est, si soit gardeine en chivalrie de corps & de terre d'un enfant deins age, si l'enfant, quant

IN the same manner it is, if there be a gardian in chivalry of the body and land of an infant with age, if the infant, il

(1) See ante 123. n. 3. Post. 137. b.

himself is esloigned by his guardian, or otherwise disturbed from suing the assise. 3. E. 1. c. 49. 2. Inst. 261. The statute of Westminster the second extended this provision, by permitting the prochein amy to sue in all actions; and though in this statute, as well as in the former, eloignment of the infant was mentioned, yet by construction it is not deemed necessary, but the prochein amy may sue, whether that circumstance occurs or not, it being considered merely as an instance of the necessity of the case, and as such only taken notice of by those who framed the statute. 13. E. 1. c. 15. 2. Inst. 390. But notwithstanding these statutes, as there is not any thing in them which prohibits the suing by guardian, we presume, that it remains as lawfull as it was before. It is therefore probable, that Fitzherbert and lord Coke, when they tell us, that an infant shall sue by prochein amy, did not mean to exclude the election of suing either in that way or by guardian. That Fitzherbert did not mean this, appears from his afterwards mentioning without disapprobation a case of debt, in which suing by guardian was allowed. Coke too, in his report of Rawlyn's case, says, that on search many precedents of infants suing by guardian were found; nor in that case was any objection grounded on its being a suit by guardian. 4. Co. 53. b. But whether we construe the meaning of these two judges rightly or not, a case occurred, in which the point is said to have been so adjudged. Young v. Young W. Jo. 177. However the reader il vient al age de 14 ans entra en religion, & est professe, le garden n'ad auter remedy (quant a le garde de le corps) forsque breve de ravishment de garde envers le souverain de le meason. Et si ascun esteant de plein age, que est cousin & heire delenfant, enter en le terre, le gardein n'ad ascun remedie, quant al garde de la terre, pur ceo que lentrie del heire lenfant est congeable en tiel case.

when he comes to the age of 14 yeares, entreth into religion, and is profest, the gardian hath no other remedy (as to the wardship of the body) but a writ of ravishment de gard against the sovereign of the house. And if any being of full age, who is cousin and heire of the infant, entreth into the land, the gardian hath no remedy as to the wardship of the land, for that the entry of the heire of the infant is lawfull in such case.

pertinet, &c. rapuit & abduxit &c. contra pacem. Now ravere signifieth properly to take away by violence and force. And when the sovereign took and admitted the ward into his house to be professed, this in judgement of law is a ravishment of the ward; and as it appeareth in 9. Co. Doctor Hufley's case fol. 72. our bookes before the said statute, there lay a generall action of trespas in that case.

Après l'age de 14

ans, &c. Our author mentioned this age, because it is prohibited by the statute 4. H. 4. cap. 17. of 4. H. 4. that no childe shall be received into any house of religion before that age without consent of his parents and guardians, &c.

Le gardein n'ad ascun remedie, &c. Here it appeareth, that, by the profession of the ward, the lord loseth the wardship of the land, because he is civiliter mortuus, a dead man in law, and cannot hold any inheritance; neither can the gardian continue the wardship of the land, because by the civil death of the ward the inheritance is descended to another, who is either to be in ward, or pay relieve. So as in this case the gardian hath damnum, but it is absque injuria, because he loseth the wardship of the land by act of law, viz. the descent thereof to another, and therefore the law giveth to him no remedy in this case, neither by any formed writ, nor by action upon his case, for Littleton's words are generall, (he hath nor any remedy).

Sect. 204.

ITEM, en mults divers cases le seignior poit faire manumission & enfranchisement a son villein. Manumission est properment, quant le seignior fait un fait a son villein de luy enfranchiser per hoc verbum (manumittere) quod idem est quod extra manum vel extra potestatem alterius ponere. Et pur ceo que per tiel fait le villein

ALSO, in many and divers cases the lord may make manumission and enfranchisement to his villeine. Manumission is properly, when the lord makes a deed to his villeine to enfranchise him by this word (manumittere), which is the same as to put him out of the hands and power of another. And for that that by such deed Manumission.

[1] Manumittere, quod idem est quod extra manum vel potestatem ponere. [1] Glanvil. lib. 5. cap. 5. Britton fol. 78. &c. 82. 97. 110. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 13. & lib. 2. cap. 44.

Quia quamdiu quis in servitute est, sub manu & potestate domini sui est.

Qui in potestate domini sui est, in manu domini sui esse dicitur; sed postquam manumissus est, ab illo liberabitur, ergo dicitur quasi extra manum, id est, extra potestatem domini sui missus. And here is to be noted (as in many other places is observed) what regard Littleton hath to the true etymologies of words.

[m] Enfranchise- [m] Mirror ca. 2. sect. 18. ment. (Hereby Littleton explaineth manumission) and

is

reader should at the same time be apprized, that according to another report of the same case, the court delivered no opinion on the point, whether an infant may sue by guardian. Cro. Cha. 86. See further on this subject Palm. 295. & Vin. Abr. Guardian and Ward N. 7.—What we have hitherto advanced as to suing by prochein amy applies to the courts of common law only. As to our courts of equity, the usual practice in them is to sue for infants by prochein amy and to defend by guardian. But it is said, that they may sue in either way. Pract. Reg. in Chanc. 296.—(1) Vide tamen Pasch. 8. E. 1. rot. 7. the case of Edward Rowald contra.—Hal. MSS.

is derived from the French word franchise, that is, liberty; and in the common law it hath divers significations; sometimes the incorporating of a man to be free of a company or body politique, as a free man of a city, or burgesse of a burrough, &c. sometimes to make an alien a denison; and here to manumise a villeine or bondman. So as this word est mis hors de la main & de la poier son seignior, il est appell' manumission. Et issint chescun maner de enfranchisement fait a un villein peut estre dit manumission.

the villeine is put out of the hands and out of the power of his lord, it is called manumission. And so every maner of enfranchisement made to a villein may be said to be a manumission.

[n] Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18.

[o] Fortescue cap. 46.

[p] 39. E. 3. 6. b. F. N. B. 79. a. (Dy. 266. b. 283 b.)

[q] Glanvil. lib. 5. cap. 5. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 44. Brit. fol. 79.
Mirror cap. 2. sect. 18.
(2. Ro. Abr. 736. 737.)
[r] 27. Aff. p. 49.
[s] Glanvil. lib. 5. ca. 5.
[t] Britton ubi supra.
(Ante 136. b.)

Lib. Rub. cap. 78.

(enfranchisement) is more general than manumission; for that is properly applyed to a villeine; and therefore every manumission is an enfranchisement, but every enfranchisement is not a manumission. [n] There be two kindes of manumissions, one expresse, and the other implied. Expresse, when the villeine by deed in expresse words is manumised and made free. The other implied, by doing some act, that maketh in judgement of law the villeine free, albeit there be no expresse words of manumission or enfranchisement. [o] If a villeine be manumised, albeit he become ingratfull to the lord in the highest degree, yet the manumission remaines good: and herein the common law differeth from the civill law, for libertinum ingratum leges civiles in pristinam redigunt servitutem, sed leges Anglie semel manumissum semper liberum judicant, gratum & ingratum.

There be also some cases where the villeine shall be privileged from the seisure of the lord, albeit he be not absolutely manumised or enfranchised. Sometimes ratione loci, [p] as if a villeine remaine in the ancient demeane of the king a yeare and a day without claime or seisure of the lord, the lord cannot have a writ of natisso habendo, or seise him, so long as he remaines and continues there; and the reason of this was, in respect of the service he did to the king in plowing and tillage of the demeanes, and other labours of husbandry for the king's benefit. And herewith agree old bookes, [q] which say, that this immunity was sometime granted by common consent to the king for his profit, and for the help or ease of his villeins. [r] If a villein be a priest of the king's chappel, the lord cannot seise him in the presence of the king, for the king's presence is a privilege and protection for him. Sometime ratione professionis, [s] as if a villeine be professed a monke, or a niese a nun, as hath been sayd. [t] Sometime (as some hath said) ratione dignitatis, as if the villeine be made a knight, &c. Sometime ratione matrimonii, as if a niese marry a free man, she is privileged during the marriage, but not absolutely enfranchised; for if her husband dye, she is niese againe, unlesse the lord himselfe marrieth the niese, and then she is enfranchised for ever, as hath been said before. (1) And it shall not be amisse to observe the wisdom of our ancients, with what solemnity (for more surety thereof) manumissions were made. Qui servum suum liberat, in ecclesia, vel mercato, vel comitu, vel hundredo, coram testibus & palam faciat, & liberas ei vias, & portas conscribat apertas, & lanceam & gladium, vel quæ liberorum arma, in manibus ei ponat. Our author having spoken of an expresse manumission, here followes enfranchisements in law.

Sect. 205.

(5. Co. 56. a.)

FOR when the lord enableth the villeine to have an action against him as for debt or annuity, &c. or giveth to the villeine a certaine and fixed estate in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, as a lease for yeares, this amounteth to an enfranchisement, not only during the yeares, but for ever; [u] and albeit the lease be made to the villeine without deed, yet it is an enfranchisement for ever.

[u] 30. E. 3. tit. Vil. 25. 11. H. 7. 13.

AUXI, si le seignior fait a son villeine un obligation de certaine somme d'argent, ou grante a luy per son fait un annuity, ou lessa a luy per son fait terres ou tenements pur terme des ans, le villeine est enfranchise.

ALSO, if the lord maketh to his villeine an obligation of a certaine sum of money, or granteth to him by his deed an annuity, or lets to him by his deed lands or tenements for terme of yeares, the villeine is enfranchised.

Sect.

(1) Ante 123. a. n. 3.

Sect. 206.

AUXY si le seignior fait un feoffment a son villeine, d'ascun terres ou tenements, per fait ou sans fait, en fee simple, fee taile, ou pur terme de vie ou ans (1) & a luy liver a seisin, ceo est un enfranchisement.

ALSO if the lord maketh a feoffment to his villeine of any lands or tenements, by deed or without deed, in fee simple, fee taile, or for terme of life or yeares, and delivereth to him seisin, this is an enfranchisement.

This is evident and agreeth with our bookes.

Vide 24. E. 3. 32. 22. H. 3. 61. Vill. 42.

Sect. 207.

MES si le seignior fait a luy un lease des terres ou tenements, a tener a volunt le seignior, per fait ou sans fait, ceo n'est ascunenfranchisement; purceo que il n'ad ascun manner de certainty, ne suertie de son estate, mes le seignior luy poit ouster quant il voilet.

BUT if the lord maketh to him a lease of lands or tenements, to hold at will of the lord, by deed or without deed, this is no enfranchisement; for that he hath no manner of certainty or suerty of his estate, but the lord may oust him when he will.

PER fait. So as a deed, made to a villeine by the lord, is no enfranchisement, when the deed transferreth no certaine or fixed estate, but revocable at the lord's will. If the lord release to his villeine all his right in black acre, and the villeine is not thereof seised, this is no enfranchisement; because it is voyd and can give no cause of action. If the lord attorneth to his villeine, this is no enfranchisement.

11. H. 7.

Sect. 208.

AUXY si le seignior suist envers son villein un præcipe quod reddat, s'il recover, ou soit nonsue apres appearance, ceo est un manumission, pur ceo que il puisse loyallyment entrer en la terre sans tiel suit. En mesme le manner est, s'il suist envers son villeine un action de debt, ou d'account, ou de covenant,

ALSO if the lord sueth against his villeine a præcipe quod reddat, if he recover, or be nonsuite after appearance, this is a manumission, for that he might lawfully have entered into the land without suit. In the same manner it is, if he sue against his villeine an action of debt, or account, or of covenant, or of

SI seignior suist envers son villeine un præcipe quod reddat, &c. ceo est un manumission. And the principal reason hereof is, for that by his suit he enableth the villeine to be a person able to render him the land by course of law, where the lord without any such suit might have entred. (a) But if the tenant in taylor be of a manor whereunto a villeine is regardant, and enfeoffeth the villein of the manor, and dyeth, the issue shall have a formedon against the villeine, and after the recovery of the manor he shall seise the villein. And the

[a] 24. E. 3. Discont. 16. Vid. Britton 78. & 126.

(1) The words ou ans not in L. & M.—Roh. or P. They first appear in Redm.

(Ante 122, b. 2. Ro. Rep. 409.) the reason is, for that he could not seise the villeine till hee had recovered the mannor which was the principall, and at the time of the writ brought he was no villeine.

The tenant infeoffes the villeine of the lord and an estranger upon collusion: in this case, although the lord may enter upon the villeine for the moity, yet, may he have a writ of ward against them both without enfranchisement of the villeine; for, if the lord should enter upon the villeine, then should his seigniorie be suspended, and then could not he have a writ of ward against the other.

The lord, upon a writ of covenant brought by the villeine, levies a fine to his villeine of land, which is ancient demesne; the lord of whom the land is holden reverseth the fine in a writ of deceit; albeit the authority and jurisdiction of the court is disproved, and that the lord of the villeine shall bee restored to the land given by the fine, yet is it an enfranchisement, for that he answered to the writ of covenant, and the fine was voydable, and not voyde, and therefore, being once an enfranchisement, it cannot be avoided by the reversing of the fine.

Soit nonsue (id est) non est prosecutus breve suum, for by the law the plaintife is first agent at every continuance; and therefore the record sayth, quod petens seu querens (naming them) obtulit se, who if he bee called, and make default, then he is said to be nonsuit, id est, non est prosecutus, &c.

By Littleton here it appeareth, that there is a nonsuite before appearance at the returne of the writ, or after appearance at some day of continuance. [x] The difference between a nonsuit and a retraxit on the part of the demandant or plaintife is this. A nonsuite is ever upon a demand made, when the demandant or plaintife should appeare, and he makes a default. A retraxit is ever, when the demandant or plaintife is present in court ou de trespasse, ou de hujusmodi, ceo est un enfranchisement; pur ceo que il puisse emprison le villein, & prendre ses biens sans tiel suit. Mes si le seignior fust son villeine per appeale de felony, ou il fuit endict de ceo devant, (1) ceo ne enfranchisera pas le villeine, comment que le matter de l'appelle soit trove encounter le seignior, pur ceo que le seignior ne puisse aver le villein destre pendue sans tiel suit. Mes si villeine ne (2) fuit endict de mesme le felony, devant l'appeale sue envers luy, & puis est acquite de cest felony, issint que il recouvrera damages envers son seignior pur le faux appeal, donques le villeine est enfranchise, pur la cause de le judgement de damages a luy d'estre done envers son seignior. Et plusors autres cases & matters y sont, per queux un villein poit estre enfranchise envers son seignior, &c. Sed de illis quare (3).

[x] 8. Co. 58. 62. Beecher's case. 3. H. 6. 13. Brooke tit. Nonsuit 1. 8. H. 6. 7. 50. E. 3. 12.

(as

(1) Ou il fuit endict de ceo devant in Red. but not in L. & M.—Roh.—or P.—(2) Ne in Roh. & Red. but not in L. & M.—or P. (3) De illis quare not in L. & M. or Roh.

trespasse, or of such like, this is an enfranchisement, for that he might imprison the villeine, and take his goods without such suite. But if the lord sue his villeine by appeale of felony, where he was indited of the same before, this shall not enfranchise the villeine, albeit that the matter of appeale be found against the lord, for that the lord could not have the villeine to be hanged without such suit. But if the villeine were not indited of the same felony, before the appeal sued against him, and afterward is acquitted of this felony, so as he recover damages against his lord for the false appeale, then the villeine is enfranchised, because of the judgment of damages to be given unto him against his lord. And many other cases and matters there be, by which a villeine may be enfranchised against his lord, &c. But enquire of them.

(as regularly he is ever by intendment of law untill a day be given over, unlesse it be when a verdict is to be given, for then he is demandable.) And this is in two sorts, one privative and the other positive. Privative, as upon demand made, that he make default, and depart in despite of the court, and then the entry is, [y] et postea eodem die devenit ad barram prædicti [y] Tr. 5. H. 6. Rot. 320. In tenens, & præd' petens tunc solenniter exactus non venit, sed à secula sua prædicta in contemptum curiæ se retraxit, ideo consideratum est, &c. Positive, as when the entry is, et super hoc idem querens dicit, quod ipse non vult ulterius placitum suum prædictum prosequi, sed abinde omnino se retraxit, ideo, &c. Another form thereof is, quod idem querens fatetur se (seu cognovit se) ulterius nolle prosequi versus prædicti defend', &c. de placito prædicto. [z] A departer in despite of the court is on the part of the tenant, and is, when the tenant or defendant after appearance and being present in court upon demand makes departure in despite of the court, and then the entry is, et prædicti tenens seu defendens licet solenniter exactus non revenit, sed in contemptum curiæ recessit & defaultam fecit, ideo, &c. It is called a retraxit, because that word is the effectual word used in the entry, as before it appeareth; and it is ever on the part of the demandant or plaintiffe. [a] Another difference betweene a retraxit, and a nonsuit is, that a retraxit is a barre of all other actions of like or inferiour nature: qui semel actionem renunciavit, amplius repetere non potest. But regularly a nonsuit is not so, but that he may commence an action of like nature, &c. againe. For it may be, that he hath mistaken somewhat in that action, or was not provided of his proofes, or mistaking the day, or the like. But yet for some special reasons, nonsuit in some actions is peremptory.

In a quare impedit, if the plaintiffe be nonsuite after appearance, the defendant shall make a title, and have a writ to the bishop [b] and this is peremptory to the plaintiffe, and is a good barre in another quare impedit (1); and the reason is, for that the defendant had by judgement of the court a writ to the bishop, and the incumbent, that commeth in by that writ, shall never be removed, which is a flat barre as to that presentation; and of this opinion is Littleton in our bookes. And the same law, and for the same reason it is in the case upon a discontinuance.

[c] In a writ de nativo habendo, nonsuit after appearance is peremptory; for thereby the villeine is enfranchised. And so it is if two be plaintiffes in a nativo habendo, if one be nonsuit, this is the nonsuit of both, and no summons and severance doth lie in that case, albeit it be a reall action. And this is in favorem libertatis; for, in a libertate probanda, nonsuit after appearance is not peremptory, neither is the nonsuit of the one the nonsuit of both.

[d] Nonsuit in an appeale of murder, rape, robbery, &c. after appearance is peremptory, and this is, in favorem vite, for if the defendant be acquitted, and take out processe upon the statute of W. 2. against the abettors, or if he purchase his originall writ, for that cause he may be nonsuit.

[e] If the plaintiffe in an appeale of mayhem be nonsuit after appearance, it is peremptory; for the writ saith, felonice maihemavit, and therefore the nonsuit is peremptory.

[f] In an attainr, if the plaintiffe after appearance be nonsuit, it is peremptory, and the reason is, for the faith that the law gives to the verdict, and for the terrible and fearefull judgement that should be given against the first jury if they should be convicted, and therefore upon the nonsuit, the plaintiffe shall be imprisoned, and his pledges amerced. But if the processe in an attainr be discontinued, the plaintiffe may have another writ of attainr; because upon the nonsuit there is a judgement given, but not upon the discontinuance. Note it is truly said, that exceptio probat regulam; for these cases excepted stand upon their special and particular reasons, and fall not within the general reason of the rule. It is a general rule, that nonsuite before appearance is not peremptory in any case; for that a stranger may purchase a writ in the name of him that hath cause of action, as shall be said hereafter in this section.

[g] In reall or mixt actions the nonsuit of one demandant is not the nonsuit of both, but he that makes default shall be summoned and severed; but regularly in personall actions, the nonsuit of the one is the nonsuit of both, unless it be in certaine particular cases.

[h] In personall actions brought by executors there shall be summons and severance; because the best shall be taken for the benefit of the dead. And so it is in an action of trespassse as executor for goods taken out of their owne possession. Like law in account as executors by the receipt of their owne hands.

[i] In an audita querela concerning the personalty, the nonsuite of the one is not the nonsuit of the other; because it goeth by way of discharge and freeing of themselves, and therefore the default of the one shall not hurte the other.

[k] In a quid juris clamat, the nonsuit of the one is the nonsuit of both; because the tenant cannot attorne according to the grant.

[l] Some actions follow the nature of those actions, whereupon they are grounded; as the writs of error, attainr, scire facias, and the like. If a reall action be brought by severall præcipes against two or more, if the demandant be nonsuite against one, he is nonsuite

[y] Tr. 5. H. 6. Rot. 320. In Com. Banco.

[z] F. N. B. 78. f. & 208. d. 19 E. 2. Villein 31.

[a] 8. Co. ubi supra.

[b] 5. E. 3. 35. 2. H. 5. 31. H. 6. 15. 22. H. 6. 44. 45. 33. H. 6. 1. 55. 19. E. 4. 9. 21. E. 4. 2. b. & c. F. N. B. 38. k. 7. Co. 27. b. Sir Hugh Portman's case.

[c] 6. E. 2. Vill. 26. 11. E. 2. ibid. 28. 19. E. 2. ibid. 31. F. N. B. 78. c. 4. E. 2. Nonsuit 29.

[d] 9. H. 4. 1. 12. Stamf. Pl. Cor. 148. 2. & 171. c. 22. Aff. 97. Fitz. Cor. 184. 22. E. 3. 6. 47. E. 3. 16. 7. H. 7. 5. 40. E. 3. Dam. 77. 17. E. 2. Coron. 386. 3. E. 2. Action sur l'est. 28. [e] 43. Aff. 39. 40. Aff. 1. (1 Sid. 32.)

[f] 32. Aff. 13. 19. Aff. 13. 20. E. 3. Attainr 42. 22. E. 3. 7. F. N. B. 103. d.

[g] 11. H. 6. 23. 35. F. N. B. 35. b. 19. E. 3. tit. Sever. 14. 3. E. 2. Nonsu. 18. 19. E. 3. Sev. 16. 12. E. 3. ib. 22. 38. E. 3. 9. 29. H. 6. 45. 38. E. 3. 35. 41. E. 3. Nonsuit 10. 45. E. 3. 10. 2. H. 4. 2.

[h] 2. Ro. Abr. 132. 10. Co. 134. [i] 42. E. 3. 13. 48. E. 3. 14. 28. H. 6. 3. 11. E. 2. Sev. 26. 13. E. 3. ib. 45. 18. E. 3. ib. 28. 5. E. 3. ibid. 20. 7. E. 3. 12. [j] 15. E. 3. Sever. 23. 6. Co. 25. Ruddock's case.

[k] 20. E. 3. Severance 17. [l] 47. E. 3. 6. b. 47. Aff. 3. 29. Aff. 34. 7. H. 4. 45. 34. H. 6. 31. 25. H. 6. 19. 29. E. 3. 37. 6. Co. ubi supra. 22. H. 6. 42. 4. E. 4. 33. 19. E. 2. Nonsuit 32. 18. E. 3. ibid. 31. 20. E. 3. ib. 26. 27. 19. E. 3. ibid. 12. 3. E. 3. ibid. 17. 38. E. 3. 9. 10. H. 6. 45. 44. E. 3. 16. 19. E. 3. Severance 16. (1 Sid. 378.)

(1) But lord Dyer held the nonsuit not peremptory, if another quare impedit was brought within the six months. Dall. 81. 82. Perhaps, however, he only meant to assert this in the case of a nonsuit before appearance. As to lord Coke's doctrine, other authorities for it may be added to those he cites. See 1. Brownl. 161. 2. Salk. 559.

against all; for as to the demandant it is but one writ under one teste. Note, severance is twofold, viz. by summons ad sequendum simul, and that is when one of the demandants or plaintifes never appeared: and by award of the court of nonsuit without any summons, and that is after appearance.

[m] 6. R. 2. Nonsuit 13. 25. H. 8. Nonsuit Br. 68. 20. H. 7. 5. (2. Ro. Abr. 130. 131. Post. 227. b.)

[m] The king's majesty cannot be nonsuited, because in judgement of law, he is ever present in court; but the king's attorney, qui sequitur pro domino rege, may enter an ulterius non vult prosecui, which hath the effect of a nonsuite. But in an information by an informer, qui tam, &c. the informer may be nonsuited.

[n] 2. H. 4. ca. 7. 3. E. 3. 21. 47. E. 3. 1. 2. 3. E. 4. f. 11.

[n] At the common law upon every continuance or day given over before judgement, the plaintife might have been nonsuited; and therefore before the statute of 2. H. 4. after verdict given, if the court gave a day to be advised, at that day the plaintife was demandable, and therefore might have been nonsuit, which is now remedied by that statute.

[o] 2. H. 5. 5. 8. R. 2. Nonsuit 34.

[o] But after demurrer in law joyned, if the court doth give a day over, at that day the demandant or plaintife is demandable, and therefore may be nonsuit, for that is not holpen by any statute.

[p] 9. H. 7. 1. 21. E. 3. 32. 11. Co. 39. 41. Metcalfe's case. (2. Ro. Abr. 131. contra.)

[p] And after an award to account, the plaintife may be nonsuit; and so note a diversity betwene an interlocutory award of the court, and a final judgement (1).

By these few instructions you shall the more easily understand the bookes of tearmes and yeares, and other authorities of law. And here (to returne to Littleton) it is to be noted, that, albeit the lord be nonsuit, yet the enfranchisement of the villeine doth remaine; for that grew by the appearance to the writ, and cannot be taken away by the nonsuit subsequent. So it is if the writ do abate, yet the enfranchisement remaines.

[q] 7. H. 4. 8. 11. H. 4. 13. 9. E. 4. 23. 7. H. 4. 8. a. 7. H. 7. 6. b. 5. H. 7. 15.

[q] Après appearance, for otherwise a stranger may purchase a writ in his name, and therefore Littleton materially added these words, after appearance.

Præcipe. There be three kinds of præcipes. 1. A præcipe quod reddat, whereof Littleton here speaketh. 2. A præcipe quod permittat; and 3. a præcipe quod faciat, whereof you may read plentifully in the Register, and Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium, and belongs not properly to this treatise.

Account. Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

Vid. sect. 748. 4. Co. 80. Noke's case F. N. B. 145.

Covenant. Conventio. Hereof there be two kinds, viz. a covenant personall, and a covenant reall; and a covenant in deed, and a covenant in law.

[r] W. 2. cap. 12. 22. Aff. p. 39. 33. H. 6. 2. 14. H. 7. 2. 40. Aff. 18. 40. E. 3. 42.

Ou il fuit endite de ceo. [r] For if the villeine be not first indited of it, then, upon the acquittall of the villeine, the villeine shall recover damages against the lord by the stat. of W. 2. quia multi per malitiam, &c. and consequently shall be enfranchised. But if the villeine be formerly indited of the felony, then though the villeine be acquitted upon the appeale, he shall recover no damages against the lord. For wheresoever the lord giveth to the villeine a just cause of action, he is enfranchised. [s] And therefore if the lord kill his villeine, his sonne and heire shall have an appeale, and thereby his heire shall be enfranchised, because the offence of the lord gave to the heire a just cause of action against the lord.

[s] Kelway 134.

Sect. 209.

QUE il ad esté
Custome, &c.

Here some may object, that such a custome may have a lawful beginning; for Littleton in the beginning of this chapter, sect. 174. alloweth, that [a] a freeman may take lands of the lord to be holden of him, that is, to pay a fine for the marriage of his sonne or daughter, and therefore [b] some have thought that such a custome generally within the manor should be good. But the

[a] 10. E. 3. 23. Roger de Vale's case, 15. E. 3. Aid. 33.

[b] 34. H. 6. 15. a. per Litt.

ITEM si seig- nior d'un manor

voile prescriber, que il ad esté custome deins son manor de temps dont memory ne curt, que chefcun tenant deins mesme le mannor, que maria sa file a ascun home sans licence de le seignior del man-

ALSO if the lord of a mannor will prescribe, that there hath beene a custome within his mannour time out of minde of man, that every tenant within the same mannor, who marieth his daughter to any man without licence of the lord of the

nor

(1) But Brooke says, that the award to account is a judgment, and therefore that a man cannot be nonsuited after such award. Bro. Abr. Nonsuit pl. 17. 21. E. 3. 7. Rolle, to the same purpose, cites 3. H. 4. 7. 21. E. 3. 7. 21. H. 6. 26. 1. H. 7. 1. b. See 2. Ro. Abr. 131. However he adds, that the 17. E. 3. 87. and Co. Litt. are contra. Lord Coke's opinion is particularly warranted by Metcalfe's case in the Eleventh Report, which, as he here explains, proceeded on the distinction between an interlocutory and a final judgment.

nor, ferra fine (1), & ont fait fine al seignour del mannor pur le temps esteant, cest prescription est void. Car nul doit faire tiels fines forsque tant-solement villeines. Car chescun franke home poit frankement marier sa file, et que pleist a luy & sa file. Et pur ceo que cest prescription est encounter reason, tiel prescription est voyd.

villeines, (that is) either villeines of blood, or freemen holding in villenage or base tenure. So note a diversity between a freeholder and a freeman holding in villenage. Villeines use to pay to their lords in acknowledgement of their bondage for their several heads, and thereupon it is called chevage, chevagium, of the French word chefe, as it were the service of the head. Of which Bracton saith, [c] chevagium dicitur recognitio in signum subjectionis & domini de capite suo. And sometimes it is written chivage, but more properly chiefage. [d] Chevagium signifieth also a great misprison for any subject to take summes of money, or other gifts yearly in name of chevage; because they take upon them to be their chiefe heads or leaders (3).

Pur ceo que cest prescription est encounter reason, ceo est voyd. This (2, Ro. Abr. 265. Ante 113. a.) contains one of the maxims of the common law, viz. that all customs and prescriptions that be against reason are voyd.

mannour, shall make fine, and have made fine to the lord of the mannor for the time being, this prescription is voyd. For none ought to make such fine, but onely villeines. For every free man may freely marry his daughter to whom it pleaseth him and his daughter. And for that this prescription is against reason, such prescription is voyd.

answer is, that, though it may be so in a particular case upon such a special reservation of such a fine upon a gift of land, yet to claime such a fine, by a generall custome within the mannor, is against the freedome of a freeman, that is not bound thereunto by particular tenure. But a custome may be alledged within a mannor, [b] That every tenant (albeit his person be free) that holdeth in bondage or by native tenure, the freehold being in the lord, shall pay to the lord, for the marriage of his daughter without licence, a fine: and it is called marchet, as it were a chete or fine for marriage (2). And here Littleton saith, that none ought to pay such fines, but

[b] 43. E. 3. 5. 14. H. 6. 15.

[c] Bracton lib. 1. cap. 10. Britton fol. 79. b.

[d] 27. Aff. 44.

Sect. 210.

MES en le county de Kent, ou terres & tenements sont tenus en gavelkinde, la, ou, per le custome & use de temps dont memory ne curt, les fits males doient ovelment enheriter, ceo custome est allowable; pur ceo que il estoit ove ascun reason; pur ceo que chescun fits est auxy graund gentlehome come leigne fits est,

BUT in the county of Kent, where lands and tenements are holden in gavelkinde, there, where by the custome and use out of minde of man the issues male ought equally to inherite, this custome is allowable; because it standeth with some reason, for every sonne is as great a gentleman as the eldest sonne is, and perchance will grow

EN [e] le county de Kent. For that in no county of England lands [f] at this day be of the nature of gavelkinde of common right, saving in Kent onely. But yet in divers parts of England, within divers mannors and seignories, the like custom is in force.

En gavelkinde. That is, gave all kinde: for this custome giveth to all the sonnes alike (4).

Les fitz males inheriter. And this is the generall custome extending to sonnes. But yet [g] by [g] 23. Aff. pl. 21; custome, when one brother dieth without issue, all the other [e] Vide L'etatute de Consuetudinibus Kancie, ann. 21. E. 1. 2. E. 3. 12. 3. E. 3. 21. 38. 23.

Aff. pl. 12. 8. E. 3. 42. b.

(Post. 175. b.)

[f] Vide Mirror cap. 1. sect. 3.

[g] 23. Aff. pl. 21.

(1) The words a le volente le seignior are added in L. & M.—(2) See further, as to marchet, the word in Spelm. Gloss. and the Appendix to Robinson on Gavelkind p. 2.—(3) The case, cited by lord Coke from the book of Assises, consists of various articles enquired of by a jury in the court of King's Bench; and the seventeenth of these relates to those, who receive persons under their patronage, taking from them certain yearly fees, by gift, rent, or in the name of chevage, to maintain them in wrong or right. Lambard, in treating of unlawful assemblies, describes the offence of chevage from the Book of Assises, and takes notice of it as still inquirable. Lamb. Eirenarch. ed. 1602. p. 163.—(4) This was the common etymology, when lord Coke wrote; and it was countenanced by Mr. Lambard, in the explication of words prefixed to his Anglo Saxon laws. Lamb. de Prisc. Anglor. Leg. voc. Terra ex Scripto. But the latter afterwards inclined to a more probable derivation, conjecturing that gavel signified rent, and so gavelkind imported land of such a kind as to yield rent. Lamb. Perambulat. of Kent, ed. 1596. p. 519. Mr. Somner pursues the same idea, and expatiates to support it. Somn. Gavelk. 1st. edit. 3. It is rather surprising, that lord Coke did not hit upon a like derivation, as elsewhere he describes gavel or gabel to signify rent. Post. 141. a.—See further to this point Robins. on Gavelk. 1.

Lib. 2.

(1. Ro. Abr. 6:4)

Cap. II.

Of Villenage.

Sect. 211.

other brethren may inherit (1).

Chescun fitz est auxy grand gentlehome come leigne fitz est. By this it appeareth, that gentry and armes is of the nature of gavelkinde; for they descend to all the sonnes, every sonne being a gentleman alike. Which gentry and armes do not descend to all the brethren alone, but to all their posterity. But yet jure primogenitura, the eldest shall beare, as a badge of his birthright, his father's armes without any difference; for that, as Littleton saith, section 5. he is more worthy of blood; but all the younger brethren shall give several differences, & additio probat minoritatem, and [b] hereditas inter masculos jure civile est dividenda.

Ou auterment peradventure il ne puissoit tielment creffer. The reason of this is rendered by the poet.

[b] Fortescue cap. 40.

Horace.

*Haud facile emergunt, quorum virtutibus obstat
Res angusta domi.*

31. H. 8. ca. 3. V. 18. H. 6. cap. 1. (1. Sid. 136.)

But now by the statute of 31. H. 8. a great part of Kent is made descendable to the eldest sonne, according to the course of the common law (2); for that, by the means of that custom, divers ancient and great families after a few descents came to very little or nothing.

*In plures quoties rivus deducitur amnis,
Fit minor, ac undâ deficiente, perit.*

Sect. 211.

Vide Sect. 165.

PER custome appel burgh English.

Of this custome Littleton hath spoken before in the chapter of Burgage. And in our bookes there is a special kind of Borough English [i]; as, it shall descend to the younger sonne, if he be not of the halfe blood, and if he be, then to the eldest sonne (3).

[i] 32. E. 3. tit. Age 81.

[2] Mich. 10. Ja. Eliot's case in Brieve de faux Judgement.

[k] Within the manner of B. in the county of Berke, there is such a custome, that if a man have divers daughters, and no son, and dieth, the eldest daughter shall only inherit; and if he have no daughters, but sisters, the eldest sister by the custome shall inherit, and sometime the youngest. And divers other customes there be in like cases. And herewith agreeth Britton, who saith, (l) de terres des ancienes demeynes soit use solongue le antient usage del lieu, dount en aucun lieu le tient len per usage, que le heritage soit departable entre tous les enfans freres & sores, & en aucun lieu que le eigne avera tout, & en aucun lieu que le puisne frere avera tout.

[l] Brit. 187. b.

Pur cause de son juventute poit le plus meins de tous ses freres luy mesme aider, &c. Hereby (&c.) are implied those causes wherefore a youth is lesse able to ayd himselfe, &c. which the poet briefly and pithily expresth thus:

Imberbis

ITEM, lou per custome appel

Burgh English en ascun burgh, le fits puisne inheritera tous les tenements, &c. ceo custome estoit ove ascun certaine reason; pur ceo que le fits puisne (sil fault pere & mere) per cause de son juventute poit le plus meins de tous ses freres luy mesme aider, &c.

ALSO where by the custome called

Burrough English in some burrough, the yongest son shall inherit all the tenements, &c. this custome also stands with some certaine reason; because that the yonger sonne (if he lacke father and mother) because of his yong age, may least of all his brethren helpe himselfe, &c.

(1) This extension of the custom of gavelkind, to collaterals, prevails universally in Kent. See Robins. on Gavelk. 91.—
(2) There are six other statutes for disgavelling particular lands in Kent, besides the 31. Hen. 8. though that is the only statute in print. They are mentioned in Mr. Robinson's book on Gavelkind, and the learned writer is very full in his explanation as well of them, as of the 31. H. 8. especially observing, that they are construed to alter only the partible quality of the customary descent to males, which agrees with lord Coke's manner of mentioning the 31. H. 8. See Robins. on Gavelk. p. 75.—
(3) The reader will find the chief instances of special kinds of Borough-English brought together in Mr. Robinson's Book on Gavelkind. See Append. p. 6.

*Imberbis juvenis, tandem custode remoto,
Gaudet equis, canibusque, & aprici gramine campi;
Cereus in vitium flecti, monitoribus asper,
Utilium tardus provisor, prodigus æris,
Sublimis, cupidusque, & amata relinquere pernix.*

Horace.

And againe, no living creature more infirme than man :

*Nil homine infirmum tellus animalia nutrit
Inter cuncta magis. ———*

Homer.

Sect. 212.

MES si home voile prescriber, que, si ascuns a-vers fueront sur les demesnes de son mannor là damage feants, que le seignior del mannor pur le temps esteant ad use eur de distreyner, & le distresse retainer tanque sine fuit fait a luy pur le damage a la volunt, cest prescription est void; pur ceo que il est encounter reason, que, si tort soit fait a un home, que il de ceo serroit son judge demesne; car per tiel voy, s'il avoit damages forsque al value d'un mail, il puiroit assesser & aver pur ceo C. l. que serroit encounter reason. Et issint tiel prescription, ou ascun autre prescription use, si ceo soit encounter reason, ceo ne doit (1) estre allow devant judges; quia malus usus abolendus est (2).

BUT if a man will prescribe, that, if any cattle were upon the demeans of the mannor there doing damage, that the lord of the mannor for the time being hath used to distreine them, and the distresse to retaine till fine were made to him for the damages at his will, this prescription is voyd; because it is against reason, that if wrong be done any man, that he thereof should be his own judge; for by such way, if he had damages but to the value of an halfpeny, he might assesse and have therefore C. li. which should be against reason. And so such prescription, or any other prescription used, if it be against reason, this ought not, nor will not bee allowed before judges; quia malus usus abolendus est.

EST encounter reason, que si tort soit fait a un home, que il de ceo serra son judge demesne.

For it is a maxime in law, aliquis non debet esse iudex in propria causa. And therefore a fine, levied before the baylives of Salop, was reversed; because one of the bailives was partie to the fine, quia non potest esse iudex & pars (3).

Malus usus abolendus est: and every use is evill, that is (as our author saith) against reason, quia in consuetudinibus non diuturnitas temporis, sed soliditas rationis est consideranda (4).

And by this rule cited by our author, at the parliament holden at Kilkenny in Ireland, Lionel Duke of Clarence being then lieutenant of that realme, the Irish customs called there the Brehon law, (for that the Irish call their judges Brehons) was wholly abolished; for that (as the parliament sayd) it was no law, but a lewd custome, & malus usus abolendus est (5).

But our student must know, that king John in the twelfth yeare of his reign went into Ireland, and there, by the advice of grave and learned men in the laws whom he carrieth with him, by parliament de communi omni de Hibernia consensu, ordained and established, that Ireland should be governed by the

10. E. 3. 23. 4. E. 3. 54. 7. E. 3. 24. 38. h. 3. 18. 2. H. 3. 4. 3. H. 4. 8. H. 6. 19. 5. H. 7. 9. b. Hil. 4. H. 4. coram rege Salop. (2. Ro. Abr. 92. 93. 1. Ro. Abr. 492. 496.)

(5. Co. 84)

An. 40. E. 3. at Kilkenny.

The Brehon law.

Vide sect. 265.

(Vaugh. 293.)

(1) Instead of doit it is voet in L. & M. Roh. & P.

(2) Sect. 174. is placed here in L. & M. as we have formerly noticed. See 117. b. note 2.

(3) See 14. Vin. Abr. 573. 4. Com. Dig. 6.

(4) See Dav. Rep. 32. & 7. Vin. Abr. 180. 185.

(5) Acc. 4. Inst. 358. So much of the Irish statutes of 40. E. 3. as relates to abolishing the Brehon law, is in Dav. on Ireland, fol. ed. 28. The other heads of these statutes are also given in the same book p. 44. What were the most exceptionable parts of the Brehon law, or Irish customs, are explained ibid. 36. in Spens. Irel. 1st. ed. 4. and Ware's Antiq. of Ireland. Har. 116's ed. 69.

Rot. Pat. 11. H. 3. 7. Co. 22. b.
Calvin's case.

Rot. Patent 18. H. 3. M. 17.
N. 21.

Rot. Patent 30. H. 3.

* Tri. 13. E. r. coram rege in Thesaur. in longo placito.
[m] 2. R. 3. 12. In Camera Stel-lata 1. H. 7. 3. (4. Inst. 350.)

the lawes of England (1), which of many of the Irishmen, according to their owne desire, was joyfully accepted and obeyed, and of many the same was soone after absolutely refused, preferring their Brehon law before the just and honourable lawes of England. Rex, &c. baronibus, militibus, & omnibus libere tenentibus salutem. Satis, ut credimus, vestra audivit discretio, quod quando bonæ memoriæ Johannes quondam rex Angliæ, pater noster venit in Hyberniam, ipse duxit secum viros discretos & legis peritos, quorum communi consilio, & ad instantiam Hybernensium, statuit & præcepit leges Anglicanas in Hyberniam, ita quod leges easdem in scripturas redactas reliquit sub sigillo suo ad Scaccarium Dublin.

Rex comitibus, baronibus, militibus, & liberis hominibus & omnibus aliis de terra Hiberniæ salutem. Quia manifeste esse dinoscitur contra coronam & dignitatem nostram & consuetudines & leges regni nostri Angliæ, quas bonæ memoriæ dominus Johannes rex pater noster, de communi omnium de Hyberniam consensu, teneri statuit in terra illa, quod placita teneantur in curia Christianitatis de advectionibus ecclesiarum & cepellaram, vel de laico feodo, vel de catallis, quæ non sunt de testamento, vel matrimonio: vobis mandamus, prohibentes quatenus hujusmodi placita in curiæ Christianitatis nullatenus sequi præsumatis in manifestum dignitatis & coronæ nostræ præjudicium, scitari pro certo, quod si feceritis, dedimus in mandatis justiciario nostro Hyberniam, statuta curiæ nostræ in Anglia contra transgressionem hujus mandati nostri cum justitia procedat, & quod nostrum est exequatur. In cujus, &c. teste rege apud Winchcomb, 28 die Octobris, anno regni nostri 18. Et mandatum est justicio Hyberniam, per literas causas, quod prædictas literas patentes publicè legi & teneri faciat.

Rex, &c. pro communi utilitate terræ Hyberniam, & pro unitate terrarum, provisum est, quod omnes leges & consuetudines, quæ in regno Angliæ tenentur, in Hibernia teneantur, & eadem terra eisdem legibus subiaceat, ac per easdem regatur, sicut Johannes rex, cum illic esset, statuit & firmiter mandavit. Ideo volumus, quod omnia brevicia de communi jure, quæ currunt in Anglia, similiter currant in Hyberniam sub novo sigillo regis. In cujus, &c. teste me ipso apud Woodstocke. Wherein it is to be observed, that union of lawes is the best meanes for the unity of countries. * Una & eadem lex esse debet tam in regno Angliæ quam Hyberniam. [m] Terra Hyberniam inter se habet parliamentum & omnimodas curias prout in Anglia, & per idem parliamentum facit leges & mutat leges, & illi de eadem terra non obligantur per statuta in Anglia, quia hi non habent milites parliamenti (2).

By an act of parliament (called Poyning's law) holden in Ireland in the tenth yeare of Henry the seventh, it is enacted, that all statutes, made in this realme of England before that time, should be of force and be put in use within the realme of Ireland (3); which (though it be by way of digression) is not unnecessary for our student to know. But now let us heare our author (4).

CHAP. 12.

Of Rents.

Sect. 213.

SOME have divided rents into foure kinds, viz. rent service, rent charge, rent disreynable of common right, (whereof somewhat shall be said in this chapter) and rent secke.

Rent. In Latine reditus, (a) by some dicitur à redeundo, quia retroit, & quotannis redit. * And others say it is derived of redere, for that the rent is reserved out of the profits of the land, and is not due till the tenant or lessee take the profits; for redelendo inde or solvendo, or reservando inde, or the like, [b] is as much to TROYS maners de rents y sont, cessascavoir, rent service, rent charge, & rent secke. Rent service est, pou le tenant tient sa terre de son seignior per fealty & certaine rent, ou per homage fealty & certain rent, ou per autres services & certaine rent. Et si rent service

THREE manner of rents there be, that is to say, rent service, rent charge, and rent secke. Rent service is, where the tenant holdeth his land of his lord by fealtie and certaine rent, or by homage fealty and certaine rent, or by other services and certaine rent. And if rent service at any day, that soit

[a] Fleta lib. 3. ca. 14. Britton ca. 41. Mirror ca. 2. sect. 16. Pl. Com. 132. b.

* 10. Co. 127. Clun's case.

[b] Pl. Com. 138. 139. &c. in Browning's & Belling's case. 35. H. 6. 34.

The continuation of the note on the origin of feuds, left unfinished in fol. 71. a. and intended to have been inserted here, is further postponed to the end of the work. See post. fol. 395. a.

(1) Some think, that the laws of England were introduced into Ireland before this charter of John by his father Henry the second. This opinion is strongly enforced by the testimony of an historian of the reign of Henry the third; for Matth. Paris writes, that rex Henricus, antequam ex Hibernia rediret, apud Lismore concilium congregavit, ubi leges Angliæ sunt ab omnibus grante receptæ, & juratoria cautione prestita, confirmata. Molyn. Case of Irel. Lond. ed. of 20. p. 14. & Matth. Par. ad ann. 1172. vit. H. 2. ibid. cit. The other authorities to establish the same fact are well collected by Mr. Harris in his edition of Ware's Antiquities of Ireland. See p. 78. See further 1. 1. el. Hist. Irel. 76. & Vaugh. 291.

For the remainder of the notes to this title of fol. 141. see post. fol. 143. a.

soin a ascun jour, que it ought to be payed, doit estre pay, ade- be behinde, the lord rere, le seignior poit may distraine for that distrainer pur ceo de of common right.
common droit.

say as the tenant or lessee shall shall pay so much out of the profits of the lands; for red- dere nihil aliud est, quam acceptum, aut aliquam partem ejusdem, restituere. Seu reddere est quasi retro dare, and hereof commeth redditus for a rent.

Here note for the better understanding of ancient records, statutes, charters, &c. gavel, or Domesday. gavell, gablum, gabellum, gabelletum, gabelletum, and gavilletum, doe signifie a rent (1), cus- Statutum de gavilletto anno 10.
 tome, duty, or service, yeelded or done to the king or any other lord; as Wallingford con- E. 2. tinent 276 bagas i. e. domos reddentes 9 libras de gablo i. de redditu. And Oxford, hac urbs reddebat (Ante 87. h. Post. 144. 2. Ro. pro theolonio et gablo regi 20. p. & sextarios mellis, comiti Alpharo 10 libras. And this is the Abr. 446.)
 legall signification thereof (2).

Rent service. It is called a rent service, because it hath some corporall service incident unto it, which at the least is fealty, as here it appeareth.

Sa terre. [c] A rent service cannot be reserved out of any inheritance but such as Vide sect. 218. (Ante 47. a.) is manurable, whereinto the lord may enter and take a distresse, as in lands and tenements, [c] 44. E. 3. 45. 5. Co. 4.
 reversions, remainders, and as some have said, out of the herbage of lands, and regularly Seignior Mountjoye's case 9. Aff.
 not out of any inheritances incorporeall, or that lye in grant. [d] By act of law one 24. 30. Aff. 5. 17. E. 3. 75. 7.
 rent or service may issue out of another, as if A, before the statute of quia emptores terrarum Co. 23. But's case. Pl. Com.
 had given lands to B, to hold to him by fealty and ten shillings rent, and B had made a feoff- 139.
 ment in fee to C, &c. whereby there was a mesnalty created, in this case C should hold of B, [d] 3. H. 6. 21. 5. H. 7. 16.
 either by the same services the law created, or such as he specially reserved, and B did by 21. H. 7. 39. 1. H. 4. 82. 10. H. operation of law hold those services of A by fealty and ten shillings rent, that is to say, rent 6. 12. 19. E. 3. tit. Gard. 40.
 and service out of rent and service; and if the rent be behinde, the lord paramount may dis- 21. H. 6. 11.
 traine upon the land for his rent, for both mesnalty and feigniorie doe issue out of the land, the mesnalty immediately, and the feigniorie mediately, which is worthy of due consideration and observation.

Certaine rent. [e] For the rent must be certaine, or which may bee reduced to a [e] Britton fol. 100. a. certainty, for id certum est, quod certum reddi potest. [f] Continetur carta reddendo inde annua- (Ante 96. a.)
tim ad tales terminos, vel faciundo inde talia servitia, vel tales consuetudines, quæ omnia debent esse [f] Fleta lib. 3. ca. 14.
certa & in carta expressa &c. But of this I have spoken sect. 136. And the rent may as well (Ante 91. b.)
 be in delivery of hens, capons, roses, spurres, bowes, shafts, horkes, hawkes, pepper, comine, wheat, or other profit that lyeth in render, office, attendance, and such like, as in payment of money. [g] But a man upon his feoffment or conveyance cannot reserve to him [g] 38. H. 6. 38. a. parcell of the annuall profits themselves, as to reserve the vesture or herbage of the land or (Ante 47. a. 4. b.)
 the like (3); for that should be repugnant to the grant, non debet enim esse reservatio de proficuis ipsis, quia ea conceduntur, sed de redditu novo extra proficua.

Poet distreiner pur ceo. For where there is fealty, &c. incident to the rent, there is a distresse incident also thereunto. [h] But it is to be understood, that for a rent or service, [h] Mirror ca. 2. sect. 16. 10.
 the lord cannot distreine in the night, but in the day time; and so it is of a rent charge. But E. 3. Avowry 137. 11. H. 7. 5.
 for damage feaunt one may distreine in the night, otherwise it may bee the beasts will be gone before he can take them.

De common droit. Of common right, [i] that is, by the common law so called; [i] W. 1. ca. 1. 2. H. 4. ca. 1.
 because the common law is the best and most common birth-right, that the subject hath for 7. H. 4. ca. 1. 4. H. 8. ca. 8.
 the safeguard and defence, not onely of goods, lands and revenues, but of his wife and children, his body, fame, and life also. So as the meaning of Littleton in this particular case is, that the lord may distreine for this rent of common right, that is, by the common law, without any particular reservation or provision of the party. And it is to be observed, that the common law of England sometime is called right, sometime common right, and sometime communis justitia. In the grand charter the common law is called right. Rectum nulli ven- demus; nulli negabimus aut differemus justitiam vel rectum. In the statute of W. 1. c. 1.
 it is called common droit. En primes voet le roy, & commande, que le peace de f. esglise & de la terre soit bien garde & maintaine en tous points, & que common droit soit fait a tous, auxibien aux riches, sauns regard de nulluy; which agreeth with the ancient law in the time of king Edgar. Porro autem has populo, quas servet, proponimus leges. Primum publici juris beneficio quisquam frutor, idque ex aquo & bono, sive is dives sive inops fuerit jus Lamb. fo. 78. inter Leges Regis redditor. And Fleta saith, Item quod pax ecclesie et terre inviolabiliter observetur, & quod com- Edgari. Fleta lib. 1. c. 29.
munis justitia singulis pariter exhibeatur. And all the commissions and charters for execution of justice are, facturi quod ad justitiam pertinet secundum legem & consuetudinem Angliæ. So as in truth justice is the daughter of the law, for the law bringeth her forth. And in this sense being

(1) See Acc. ante 140. a. note 4.

(2) But though in old deeds gavellet may often signify rent, and this use of the word may best agree with its origin, yet it is not the only legal signification. On the contrary, the word is now most usually applied to a remedy or process, peculiar in denomination to Kent and London, by which the lord of the fee, when his tenant is in arrear for rent or service, may force him to pay the arrears and damages, by seizing the land and holding it till payment. In Kent this remedy is founded on immemorial usage; Mr. Robinson learnedly deducing it as well from the general law of fiefs, as from the practice of our Anglo-Saxon ancestors; and the passages cited by another eminent writer, in treating of forfeiture by cesser, tending to the same point. Robins. on Gavelk. 243. Wright's Ten. 197. The gavellet, thus prevailing by the custom of Kent, may be used whether there is a sufficient distress on the land or not, but is restricted to gavelkind tenure. Robins. on Gavelk. 243. To London a writ of the same denomination was given for rent-service generally by the 10. of Edward the second, which is therefore called the statute of gavellet. But by the words of the statute this latter gavellet only lies, where the lord cannot obtain payment by distress. From this account of the gavellet in Kent and London, it appears that Sir Henry Spelman was well justified, when, after giving the etymon of gavellet, and describing it sometimes to signify the tenure of gavelkind, he adds, gavelletum juris etiam processus est huic dicatus tenuræ, casu quo tenens redditus & servitia ultra modum subducit; quod & Londoniensibus ceditur statuto an.
 10. Edwardi 2. de gavileto. Spelm. Gloss. voc. Gaviletum. We take notice of this passage from Spelman, because the learned and ingenious observer on our ancient statutes, seems to have misunderstood the gavellet thus described, for though the word originally imported rent, yet our explanation shews, that it also means a process for the recovery of rent, technically called gavellet both in Kent and London. See Barr. on Ant. Stat. ad. ed. 149.—Besides the two remedies thus called gavellet, there is another very similar one for rents-service in all parts of the kingdom; and this is the writ of cessavit, which is regulated by, if it did not wholly originate from the statutes of Gloucester and Westminster the second. 6. E. 1. c. 4. 13. E. 1. ft. 1. c. 21. 41. But lord Coke, in his comment on the statute of Gloucester, mentions his having read the record of the proceedings on a cessavit
 in

Vide sect. 214. 216. 226. 232. being largely taken, as well the statutes and customes of the realme, as that which is properly the common law; is included within common droit. Littleton in this his treatise nameth com-mon droit fixe times.

Sect. 214.

35. H. 6. 34.
(Cro. Eliz. 33. Post. 225. b.)

Vide sect. 131. 132.

SAUNS fait.

For it is a rule in law, that a rent service may be reserved without deed.

En mesme le manner, si lease soit fait, &c.

For these be rents services, because fealty is incident to these rents; for (as it hath bin said before) a lessee for life or years shall doe fealty. And if a man make a lease at will, reserving a rent, the lessee shall not doe fealty, and yet the lessor shall distreine for the rent of common right.

Rendant commeth of the word reddo, i. rem pro re dare, and signifieth yeelding or repaying; but of this I have spoken before in this chapter. Sect. 213.

ET si home voyloit

doner terres ou tenements a un auter en taile, rendant a luy certain rent per an (1), il de common droit poit distreiner pur le rent

aderere, coment que tiel done fuit fait sans fait; pur ceo que tiel rent est rent service.

En mesme le maner est, si lease soit fait a un home pur terme de vie, ou d'auter vie (2), rendant al lessor certaine rent, ou pur terme de ans rendant certaine rent.

AND if a man will give lands or tenements to another in the taile, yeelding to him certaine rent by the yeare, hee of common right may distreine for the rent behind, though that such gift was made without deed; because that such rent is rent service. In the same manner it is, if a lease be made to a man for life, or the life of another, rendring to the lessor certaine rent, or for tearme of yeares rendring rent.

Sect. 215.

(Ante 22. b. Plowd. 151. a. 162.
a. Cro. Cha. 400. 548. 2. Ro.
Abr. 60.)

REversion.

Reversio commeth of the Latine word revertor, and signifieth a returning againe; and therefore reversio terre est tanquam terra revertens in possessione donatori, sive heredibus suis, post donum finitum, &c. as in the cases that Littleton here hath put.

Il covient, que le reversion &c. soit en le donor ou lessor &c.

This is not to be understood only of a reversion immediately expectant upon the gift or lease. For if a man maketh a gift in taile, the remainder in taile reserving a rent, and keepe the reversion in himselfe, this is a rent service.

Reservant. Reserver commeth of the Latine

MES en tiel cas,

ou home sur tiel done ou lease voile reserver a luy rent service, il covient, que le reversion de les terres & tenements soit en le donor ou lessor. Car si home voile faire feoffement en fee, ou voile doner terres en taile, le remainder oustre en fee simple sans fait, reservant

a luy certaine rent, tiel reservation est void; pur ceo que nul

reversion remaine en le donor, & tiel tenant

BUT in such case, where a man upon such a gift or lease will reserve to him a rent service, it behoveth, that the reversion of the lands and tenements be in the donor or lessor. For if a man will make a feoffment in fee, or will give lands in taile, the remainder over in fee simple without deed, reserving to him a certain rent, this reservation is void; for that no reversion remains in the donor, and such tient

(1) Per an not in L. & M. or Roh. but in P. & Red.

(2) Ou d'auter vie not in L. & M. or Roh. but in P. & Red.

in the reign of king John. 1. Inst. 295. Yet this seems strange, because, in the reign of this prince, the lord of the fee had a much more easy way of recovering his tenant's land for default of service, than by a cessavit in the court of the king; namely, a distress of the land by a process of seizure in his own court. The latter mode continued till the 52. of Hen. 3. took it away, by prohibiting distress of the freehold except by the king's writ, and so leaving the tenant's chattels as the only subject for the lord's distress. It was this alteration of the old law, which, as we apprehend, gave occasion to introducing the cessavit by the statutes of Gloucester and Westminster; nor at the utmost can we account for an earlier use of the cessavit than the 52. of Hen. 3. Perhaps, therefore, lord Coke's case of king John was nothing more than a process of cesser in the lord's court, and he might only call it a cessavit by reason of the resemblance, between the proceedings on the writ of cessavit in the king's court and those on the process of cessavit in the court of the lord.—These remedies of gavellet and cessavit are now fallen wholly into disuse, Mr. Lambard not remembering an instance of resorting to the customary gavellet of Kent in his time, and the cases in our books on both the gavellets and the cessavit being all of ancient date; from which it may be presumed, that distress of the tenant's goods is now usually a very sufficient, or at least a preferable remedy. Lamb. Perambulatio. ed. 1596. p. 554. Nor whilst the others continued in use, were they applicable, except when the tenure was in fee. Booth on Real Act. 133. But in imitation of them, it hath long been the practice to reserve a power of re-entry for nonpayment of rent on granting leases for lives or years; and the legislature have also interposed against lessees, as well to obviate the difficulty from the niceties of an entry for forfeiture at common law, by enabling landlords to recover possession by ejectment in a special manner, as to qualify and prevent an abuse of the tenant's remedy of injunction in equity. 4. Geo. 2. c. 28. Further, on a like principle of convenience, a summary jurisdiction is given to justices of the peace, enabling them to restore the possession to the landlord, where the tenant deserts the premises in lease, without leaving a sufficient distress. 11. G. 2. c. 19. See further as to the cessavit and other remedies for subtraction of

(3) See Bro. Abr. Reservation 46. Dr. & Stud. Dial. 2. c. 22.

tient la terre immedi-atement de le seignior, de que son donor tenoit, &c.

tenant holds his land immediately of the lord, of whom his donor held, &c.

word reserve, that is, to provide for store; as when a man departeth with his land, he reserveth or provideth for himselfe a rent for his owne livelihood. And sometime it hath the force of saving or excepting. So as (k) sometime it serveth to reserve a new thing, viz. a rent, and (l) sometime to except part of the thing in esse that is granted. (1)

And it is to be understood, that in the case of the gift in taile, lease for life or years, the fealtie is an incident inseparable to the reversion, so as the donor or lessor cannot grant the reversion over, and save to himselfe the fealty or such like service. But the rent he may except; because the rent, although it be incident to the reversion, yet it is not inseparably incident. If a man maketh a gift in taile without any reservation, the donee shall hold of the donor by the same services that he held over. (m) But otherwise it is of an estate for life or years; for there if he reserveth nothing, he shall have fealty onely, which is an incident inseparable to the reversion, as hath been said.

Le remaindre oustre en fee simple sans fait. Here it appeareth, that if a man maketh a gift in taile, the remainder in fee, without deed, (n) the remainder is good, and passeth out of the donor by the livery of seisin: and so it is of a lease for life or yeares, the remainder over in fee; for the particular estate and the remainder, to many intents and purposes, make but one estate in judgement of law. Vide sect. 60.

Remainder, in legall latine, is remanere, coming of the latine word remaneo; for that (o) it is a remainder or remnant of an estate in lands or tenements, expectant upon a particular estate created together with the same at one time, as in the cases here of Littleton appeareth. (2)

(4) 8. E. 4. 48.
26. Aff. Pl. 66. (Ant. 47. a.)
(l) 35. H. 6. 34.

(Post. 317. a.)

(Ant. 23. a.)
(m) Litt. fo. 4.
Old tenures 5.
38. E. 3. 7. 33. H. 6. 7.

(n) 40. E. 3. 10. 10. E. 4. 1.
12. E. 4. 16. 15. E. 4. 18.
18. E. 4. 12. 18. H. 8. 4. 3. H. 7.
13. F. N. B. 219. 11. H. 4. 39.
38. E. 3. 36. 44. E. 3. 8.
(Ant. 49. b.)
(o) 2. Co. 51. Cholmelies case.
(Ant. 49. a. Plowd. 25. a.
35. a.)

Sect. 216.

*ET ceo est per force de le statute de quia emptores terrarum.
Car devaunt le dit estatute si bone fesoit un feoffment en fee simple,
per fait ou sans fait,
rendant a luy & a ses
heires certaine rent, ceo fuit rent service, & pur ceo il pouvoit distreine de common droit; & s'il fuit nul reservation d'ascun rent ne d'ascun service, uncore le feoffee tenust del feoffor per autiel service, que le feoffor tenust ouster de son seignior procheine paramont.*

AND this is by force of the statute of quia emptores terra-rum. For before that statute, if a man had made a feoffment in fee simple, by deed or without deed, yeeld-ing to him and to his heires a certaine rent, this was a rent service, and for this hee might have distrained of common right; and if there were no reservation of any rent, nor of any service, yet the feoffee held of the feoffor by the same service, as the feoffor did hold over his lord next paramont.

*Quia emptores terra-
rum.*

Hereof is spoken before in the chapter of Frankalmoigne, sectione 140.

*Per fait ou sans fait,
&c.* For all rent service may be reserved without deed (as hath been said) and as it appeareth here.

And at the common law if a man had made a feoffment in fee by parol, he might upon that feoffment have reserved a rent to him and his heires;
because it was a rent service,
and a tenure thereby created.

Et s'il fuit nul reservation, &c. le feoffee tenust del feoffor per au-tiels services, &c. This is evident, and agreeth with our bookes (*) that in this case the law created the tenure; wherein it is to be observed, how the law regardeth equity and equalitie without any provision or reservation of the party.

(2. Inst. 500. Ant. 98. b.)

(Ant. 142. b.)

(Dy. 146. b. Ant. 23. a.)

(*) Britton fol. 100. 2. E. 3. 33.
25. E. 3. gard. 21. 49. E. 3. 10.
22. Aff. pl. 53. 7. H. 4. 14.
23. E. 3. avowrie 255. 4. H. 6.
Litt. cap. taile Sect.

Ipsæ etenim leges cupiunt, ut jure regantur.

Sect.

(1) In a preceding note lord Coke asserts, that reservation is always of a thing newly created out of the land demised. Ant. 47. a. But here he is more qualified in expression, and allows the word to be sometimes used to except part of the thing granted. However, the former is the more technical use of the word; exception being a more proper term than reservation for the latter purpose. The learning on this subject will be found under the title reservation in Viner's Abridgment.

(2) See Fearn's Eff. on Conting. Rem. 3d. ed. p. 5. to 11.

Continuation of notes to 141. b.

(2) From citing this passage of the year-book of Richard the Third, according to which English statutes do not bind Ireland, and from this manner of mentioning the same passage in his 12th report, one might infer, that lord Coke was of that opinion. 12. Co. 111. 12. But in Calvin's case referring to the same year-book, he explains it to mean, where Ireland is not specially named; and so he states the rule to be in the 4th Institute. 7. Co. Calvin's case 22. b. 4. Inst. 350. 351. Here also he cites the year book of 1. Hen. 7. which controuls the year-book of R. 3. Lord Coke's explanation in Calvin's case evinces his sentiments more strongly; because Ireland, if considered as quite distinct in government from England, would have been a more apt instance to support his doctrine in favor of the post-nati of Scotland. We do not, however, mean by this to offer any opinion on the controversy about the political connection between England and Ireland. It is a subject of too much importance and delicacy, as well as of too much extent, to be discoursed of in a note. See 6. Geo. 1. c. 5. 22. G. 3. c. 53. and 23. G. 3. c. 28. The first of these statutes asserts the legislative power of Great-Britain over Ireland, and also the appellat jurisdiction. By the twolatter both are annihilated.

(3) Irish stat. 10. H. 7. c. 22.

(4) The statute for taking away military tenures leaves the tenure by villenage, as it was before; one of the provisos declaring, that the act shall not be construed to alter or change any tenure by copy of court-roll, or any services incident thereunto. 12. Cha. 2. chap. 24. f. 7.

Sect. 217.

Britton fol. 100. Fleta lib. 3. ca. 14. Vide Sect. 370.
Post. 229. 2.
(5. Co. 20. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 22.
3. Leon. 16. 2. Infl. 672.)

(p) 8. E. 4. 8. 11. H. 7. 22.
35. H. 6. 34. 20. E. 4. 13.
17. E. 3. 12. H. 4. 17.
(2. Ro. Abr. 449.)

(q) Fleta lib. 3. ca. 14.
Britton fol. 100.

(r) 12. E. 4. feoffments 8. 18. E. 2.
Afl. 381.
(Ant. 47. 2. 2. Ro. Abr. 447.
Cro. Cha. 289.)

(f) 35. H. 6. 36.
(2. Ro. Abr. 447. 425. Mo. 93.
168.)

Oldtenures. Britton cap. 66. 164.
F. N. B. 210. Bracl. 86.

PER fait endent. It cannot be a deed indented unless it be actually indented; for albeit the words of the deed be hæc indentura, &c. yet if it be not indented indeed, it is no indenture. But if the deed be indented, albeit the words of the deed be not hæc indentura, yet it is an indenture. (3)

And it is holden that (p) if a feoffment in fee be made by deed poll reserving a rent, this reservation is good; for when the feoffee accepts the deed and livery of the land, he agreeth to the rent, and the rent is reserved by the words of the feoffor, and not by the grant of the feoffee. But of this more hereafter. In the mean time it is to be noted, that of ancient time a deed indented was called charta cyrographata; (4) or charta communis, because each party had a part. And a deed poll was called charta de unâ parte. (q) Chartæ autem de purâ donatione et simplici penes donatorium & ejus hæredes debent remanere. Communes vero duplicari debent, ita quod quilibet habet partem suam; vel si una sit tantum, tunc in æquâ manu communis amici utriusque ponatur, salvo custodienda, dum cuilibet partium necesse fuerit exhibendum.

Reservant a luy.

(r) Note, it is a maxime in law, that the rent must be reserved to him from whom the state of the land moveth, and not to a stranger. (f) But some doe hold, that otherwise it is in the case of the king.

Et tiel rent est rent charge. It is called a rent charge, because the land for payment thereof is charged with a distresse. If it be to the whole value of the land, or to the fourth part of the value, then the rent is called a fee farme. (5) Here Littleton putteth his case, and so did he

MES si home, per fait endent, a cel jour fait tiel done en fee taile, (1) le remainder ouster en fee, ou lease a terme de vie, le remainder ouster en fee; ou un feoffment en fee; & per meme l'indenture il reserve a luy & a ses heires un certaine rent, & que si le rent soit aderere, que bien liroit a luy & a ses heires a distreiner &c. tiel rent est rent charge; pur ceo que tielx terres ou tenements sont charges ove tiel distresse per force de le scripture tantsolement, & nemy de common droit. Et si tiel home, sur fait endent, reserve a luy & a ses heires certain rent, sans aucun tiel clause mise en le fait, que il poit distreiner, donque tiel rent est rent secke; pur ceo que il ne poit vender de aver le rent, si ceo soit deny, per meane de distresse; & s'il ne fuit unques en cest cas seisie de le rent, il est sans remedie, come sera dit apres.

BUT if a man, by deed indented, at this day maketh such a gift in fee taile, the remainder over in fee; or a lease for life, the remainder over in fee; or a feoffment in fee; and by the same indenture hee reserveth to him and to his heires a certaine rent, and that if the rent be behind, it shall be lawfull for him and his heires to distreine, &c. such a rent is a rent charge; because such lands or tenements are charged with such distresse by force of the writing only, and not of common right. And if such a man, upon a deed indented, reserve to him and to his heires a certaine rent, without any such clause put in the deed, that he may distreine, then such rent is rent secke; for that hee cannot come to have the rent, if it be denied, by way of distres; and if in this case hee were never seised of the rent, he is without remedie, as shall be said hereafter. (2)

(1) See not in L. and M. Roh. and Redm.

(2) See post. sect. 341.

(3) The indenting or cutting in modum dentium, which is usually at the top, ever supposes two parts, being made in order that the parts when joined may be authenticated by the sameness of the cutting. See as to the use and origin of indenting charters in England, Mad. Formular. Anglican. p. 28, 29. of the dissertation prefixed.

(4) Mr. Madox objects to lord Coke's treating the chirographum as altogether the same thing with the indenture; because anciently many chirographa were not indented, but cut in the rectilinear form. Mad. Formul. Anglic. Dissert. p. 29. In fact, the name of chirograph properly belonged to those deeds, which were at first of two parts written on the same paper or parchment, with the word chirographum in capital letters between the two parts, and were afterwards divided by a cut through the middle of those letters; and thus whether the cutting was indented or in a strait line, such deeds were equally chirographa. Ibid. 28. 29. Cangii Gloss. voce chirographa. Spelm. Gloss. voce indentura. Mabill. de Re Diplomat. lib. 1. c. 2. Some indeed apply this explanation to the syngrapha, and only describe the chirographa as deeds of one part, and so called from being written with the party's own hand. Lyndw. tit. de offic. Archidiacon. c. 1. in not. But the same persons allow, that sometimes syngrapha and chirographa are used promiscuously; and in the opinion of others, they are more commonly so applied. Ibid. & Mad. ubi supra. Both the chirograph and the indenture, then, usually importing to be a deed of two parts, they are so far the same; and we do not apprehend, that lord Coke meant to carry the resemblance farther. Consequently he is not affected by Mr. Madox's observation, which seems to suppose, though too hastily, that lord Coke had considered the chirograph and the indenture as wholly the same.

(5) The

he in the next section before, of a clause of distress generally granted. (r) A man granted a rent out of certaine land, pro consilio impenso & impendendo, to have and to hold to him and to his assignees for terme of his life, payable at four feasts in the yeare, and for default of payment upon demand it should be lawfull for him to distrayne; the grantee granted the rent over; the assignee after one of the dayes demanded the rent, and distreyned, and the distresse adjudged lawfull; for he needs not make a demand at any of the dayes; as in the case of re-entry, but he may demand it when he will, for it is only to entitle him to his remedy for his meere duty (1).

Distreyner, &c. Hereby (&c.) is implied what things are distreynable, which elsewhere is expressed at large. Also where the distresse is to be taken in the same land, and in some other, which with many differences is set downe in his proper place.

Il serra sans remedie. Note, that upon a reservation of a rent upon a feoffment in fee by deed indented, (w) the feoffor shall not have a writ of annuity, because the words of reservation, as reddendo, solvendo, faciendo, tenendo, reservando, &c. are the words of the feoffor, and not of the feoffee, albeit the feoffee by acceptance of the state is bound thereby.

And where Littleton putteth his case, when a reservation is made upon an estate that passeth by livery, the same law it is, if a man at this day doe bargain and sell his land by deed indented and inrolled according to the statute, a rent may be reserved thereupon; for albeit an use had only passed by the common law, yet now by the statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. the use and possession passe together, and so it was adjudged. * And so it is of a grant of a reversion or remainder, and any other conveyance of lands or tenements, whereby any estate doth passe.

(r) 7. Co. 28. b. Maund's case H. 43. El. in Com. Banco. Rot. 1108. inter Maund & Gregory. M. 40. & 41. El. in Com. Banco inter Stanly & Read. 18. El. Dyer 348. (Hut. 23. 42. Post. 153. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 426. Dy. 2. Post. 202. a. 204. a. Dy. 51. Plowd. 7. Perk. f. 101. Mo. 5. March 149.) (Vide sect. 221. Ant. 47. a.)

(w) 33. E. 3. Annuity 52. 1. H. 4. 5. 26. Aff. Pl. 66. 21. E. 4. (1. Ro. Abr. 226.)

* Mich. 39. & 40. El. in Com. Banco inter Wicks & Tillard:

Sect. 218.

AUxy, si bone fuisse de certain terre graunt, per un fait polle, ou per indenture, un annual rent issuant hors de mesme la terre, a un auter en fee, ou en fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, &c. ouesque clause de distresse, &c. donques ceo est rent charge; & si le grant soit sans clause de distresse, donques il est rent secke. Et nota, que rent secke idem est quod redditus siccus; pur ceo que nul distresse est incident a ceo.

ALSO if a man feigned of certaine land grant, by a deed poll, or by indenture, a yearely rent to be issuing out of the same land, to another in fee, or in fee taile, or for terme of life, &c. with a clause of distresse, &c. then this is a rent charge; and if the grant be without clause of distresse, then it is a rent secke. And note, that rent secke idem est quod redditus siccus; for that no distresse is incident unto it.

This needs no explanation, for Littleton expounds it himselfe.

Seisse de terre. (x)

Note, that a rent cannot be granted out of a piscary, a common, an advowson, or such like incorporeal inheritances, but out of lands or tenements whereunto the grantee may have recourse to distreyn, or which may be put in view to the recognitors of an assise, as hath bene said before in this chapter. And though it be out of lands or tenements, (z) yet it must be out of an estate that passeth by the conveyance, (as by all Littleton's examples appeareth) and not out of a right: as if the disseisor release to the disseisor of land, reserving a rent, the reservation is void, Et sic de similibus.

Grant per fait. * Also a man may have a rent by prescription.

Rent secke idem est quod redditus siccus.

(x) 32. E. 3. tit. scir. fac. 100. 40. E. 3. Pl. Com. 139. (Ant. 47. a. 142. a. Vaugh. 202. 204.)

Vide sect. 213.

(z) 10. E. 4. 3. b. 33. H. 6. 5. 50. E. 3. 9. 8. E. 4. 8. 5. E. 3. Fines 1. 9. E. 3. 7. 46. E. 3. 27. 21. H. 6. 8. Temp. E. 1. Aff. 42.

* 19 E. 3. Title 34. (Ant. 114. a. 6. Co. 58.)

Sect.

(1) See further as to this difference between a re-entry to avoid an estate and an entry to distrain, the second point in Maund's case above cited, and Gilb. on rents 73.

(5) The true meaning of fee-farm is a perpetual farm or rent; the name being founded on the perpetuity of the rent or service, not on the quantum. See Mad. Firm. Burg. 3. Here indeed lord Coke seems to intimate the contrary, by confining the denomination of fee-farm to rents at least equal to the fourth part of the value of the land; and the word is explained in a like manner by Sir Henry Spelman and the author of the book of Old Tenures, with this difference only, that the latter restricts the value to a third. See Spelm. Gloss. voce feodi-firma, and Old Ten. tit. fee-firme. But it would be wrong to understand any of these writers, as intending absolutely and universally to exclude all rents of less value; for the word fee-farm most certainly imports every rent or service, whatever the quantum may be, which is reserved on a grant in fee; and so lord Coke himself agrees in another work, citing Britton and other books for authorities. 1 Inst. 44. Britton 164. b. The sometimes confining the term of fee-farm to rents of a certain value probably arose, partly from the statute of Gloucester, which gives the cessavit only where the rent amounts to one fourth of the value of the land; and partly from its being most usual on grants in fee-farm not to reserve less than a third or fourth of such value. See 6. E. 1. c. 4. F. N. B. 210. C. Ant. 142. a. note 2.—After the statute of quia emptores granting in fee-farm, except by the king, became impracticable; because the grantor parting with the fee is by operation of that statute without any reversion, and without a reversion there cannot be a rent-service, as Littleton himself writes in section 216. Yet I have seen a modern grant in fee of a large estate in Ireland, reserving a perpetual rent of great value. But such rent, considered as a fee-farm rent, I thought clearly void. However, as in the case I allude to, the conveyance contained a power for the grantor and his heirs and assigns to distrain for the rent when in arrear, and also a power to enter and receive the profits till all arrears should be paid, the rent might be good as a rent-charge: and so on being consulted I held it to be.—Since writing the preceding part of this note, a most valuable collection of new Reports has been published; and in one of the cases, the learned reporter has given a note relative to fee-farm rents, which well deserves attention. See the case of Bradbury v. Wright, in Mr. Douglas's Rep. of Ca. in B. R. 602. However, I so far differ from the last mentioned note, as to continue of opinion, that the term of fee-farm is not properly applicable to any rents except rents-service.

Sect. 219.

(7. Co. 84. 1. Ro. Abr. 227.)

RENT charge. Here it appeareth by Littleton, that this primâ facie is a rent charge, whereof in this chapter shall be spoken more at large.

And so it is of a rent secke.

Home grant. Put case, that A. be seised of lands in fee, and he and B. grant a rent charge to one in fee, this primâ facie is the grant of A. and the confirmation of B. but yet the grantee may have a writ of annuity against both.

(a) 16. 2. E. tit. Annuity 47. Vide sect. 314.

(a) Two men grant an annuity of twenty pounds per annum to another, although the persons be severall, yet he shall have but one annuity. But if the grant be, obligamus nos, & utrumque nostrum, the grantee may have a writ of annuity against either of them; but he shall have but one satisfaction.

(5. Co. 86. 1. Ro. Abr. 295. Hob. 59. Plowd. 439.)

Briefe de annuitie

is a writ for the recovery of an annuity. (b) An annuity is a yearly payment of a certaine summe of money, granted to another in fee for life or yeares, charging the person of the grantor onely.

(b) Doct. & Stud. ca. 3. 17. El. Dyer. 344. b. 45. E. 3. Executor 72.

(Finch's Law 301. F.N.B. 152. 2.)

(c) But not only the grantee, but his heire and his and their grantee (1) also shall have a writ of annuity. (d) But if a rent charge be granted to a man and his heires, he shall not have a writ of annuity against the heire of the grantor, albeit he hath assets, unless the grant be for him and his heires. (2)

(c) 3. E. 6. Dyer 65. And Sergeant Bendloes reporteth, that so was the opinion of the Court.

(d) 2. H. 4. 13.

Dyer 17. Eliz. 344. b.

(10. Co. 128. Hob. 58. Plowd.

457. 2. 1. Ro. Abr. 226.)

ITEM si home granta per son fait un rent charge a un autre, et le rent est arriere, le grantee poet eslier, s'il voet fuer un briefe de annuitie de ceo envers le grantor, ou distreyner pur le rent arrere, & le distresse retainer tanque il soit de ceo pay. Mes il ne poit faire, ne aver, ambideux ensemble, &c. Car s'il recover per briefe d'annuity, donques la terre est discharge de le distresse, &c. Et s'il ne fust briefe de annuitie, mes distreine pur les arrearages, & le tenant fust son replegiare, & donques le grantee avowa le prisel de le distresse en le terre en court de record, donques est la terre charge, & la person del grantor discharge d'action d'annuity.

ALso if a man grant by his deed a rent charge to another, and the rent is behind, the grantee may chuse, whether he will sue a writ of annuity for this against the grantor, or distreine for the rent behinde, and the distresse detain until he be payd. But he cannot doe, or have, both together, &c. For if he recovers by a writ of annuity, then the land is discharged of the distress, &c. And if he doth not sue a writ of annuity, but distreine for the arrearages, and the tenant sueth his replevin, and then the grantee avow the taking of the distresse in the land in a court of record, then is the land charged, and the person of the grantor discharged of the action of annuity.

Poet eslier. The grantee hath election to bring a writ of annuity, and charging the person onely to make it personall; or to distreine upon the land, and to make it real.

(9. Co. 26. and Mo. 83.)

But if a man grant a rent charge to a man and his heires, and dieth, and his wife bring a writ of dower against the heire, the heire in barre of her dower claimes the same to be an annuity, and no rent charge; yet the wife shall recover her dower; for he cannot determine his election by claime, but by suing of a writ of annuity (as Littleton saith) neither can the heire have after the endowment an annuity for the two parts; for that should not be according to the deed of grant, for either the whole must be a rent charge, or the whole an annuity. But Littleton is to be understood with some limitation: (e) for of a rent granted for owelty of partition, a writ of annuity doth not lie, because it is of the nature of the land descended

(e) 19. Aff. p. 23.

(1) Formerly it was doubted, whether an annuity was assignable, though assigns were mentioned in the grant; the argument being, that it was a mere personal contract, and therefore a chose in action. See the cases in 2. Vin. Abr. 515. and 3. Vin. Abr. 151. But in a case in C. B. 3. Cha. 1. this objection, which in strictness of law carried force with it, was over-ruled. Gerrard v. Boden Hetl. 80. It seems too, that naming assigns is not essential to the making an annuity assignable, the principle of the objection to its being so being the same, whether assigns are mentioned or omitted. However, Perkins in the special case of an annuity pro consilio impendendo requires naming of assigns. Perk. l. 101. Even then too he questions the annuity's being assignable. But this was settled in Maund's case 7. Co. 28. b. one point resolved being, that express words would make such an annuity assignable.

(2) The reason is; because our law presumes, that it is not intended to include the heir in the obligation, where he is not named; and consequently, in the case supposed by lord Coke, it is too late to elect to make the rent-charge an annuity after the death of the grantor. See post. 383. b. 384. b. 386. a 10. Co. 128. a. Vin. Abr. Annuity B. But this reasoning fails in application, if the grantor of the annuity is a body politic, and as such hath perpetual continuance. Therefore an annuity granted by the king will bind his heirs and successors, though not named, his political capacity never dying, but having continuance in his successor; and so it was adjudged the 15th of Elizabeth in Sir Thomas Wroth's case. Plowd. 455.

scended. Also of such a rent as may be granted without deed a writ of annuitie doth not lie, though it be granted by deed.

[f] And here is to be noted, that here is no election given of two severall things, as if the grant were of an annuitie or a robe yearly, &c. for there the grantor had election at the day to deliver which he would. But here is two remedies given for one yearly summe, and consequently the grantee shall at any time have election to take which of the remedies hee will; for in all cases where severall remedies be given, the party to whom the law giveth the remedies, it giveth him withall election to take which of the remedies he will.

Mes il ne poet faire ou aver ambideux ensemble. For then he should recover one thing twice, which should be a double charge to the grantor.

Note, as to elections, these diversities following: (1)

First, when nothing passeth to the feoffee or grantee before election to have the one thing or the other, there the election ought to be made in the life of the parties, and the heir or executor cannot make election. But when an estate or interest passeth immediately to the feoffee, donee, or grantee, there election may be made by them, or by their heirs or executors.

Secondly, when one and the same thing passeth to the donee or grantee, and the donee or grantee hath election in what manner or degree he will take this, there the interest passeth immediately, and the partie, his heirs, or executors, may make election when they will.

Thirdly, when election is given to severall persons, there the first election made by any of the persons shall stand.

Fourthly, in case an election be given of two severall things, alwaies he, which is the first agent, and which ought to doe the first act, shall have the election. As if a man granteth a rent of twentie shillings or a robe to one and to his heirs, the grantor shall have the election; for he is the first agent, by payment of the one, or deliverie of the other. So if a man maketh a lease, tending a rent or a robe, the lessee shall have the election causa qua supra. And with this agree the bookes in the *margent. [g] But if I give unto you one of my horses in my stable, there you shall have the election; for you shall be the first agent by taking or seisure of one of them. And if one grant to another twentie loads of hazill or twentie loads of maple to be taken in his wood of D. there the grantee shall have election; for he ought to doe the first act, s. to fell and take the same.

Fifthly, when the thing granted is of things annuall, and are to have continuance, there the election remaineth to the grantor, (in case where the law giveth to him election) as well after the day, as before. Otherwise it is when the things are to be performed unicuique vice. And therefore if I grant to another for life an annuitie or a robe at the feast of Easter, and both are behind, the grantee ought to bring his writ of annuitie in the disjunctive; for if he bring his writ of annuitie for the one onely, and recover, this judgement shall determine his election forever; for he shall never have a writ of annuitie afterwards, but a scire facias upon the said judgement. Which reason, Fitzherbert, in his Natura Brevium, (2) not observing, held an opinion to the contrarie. But if I contract with you to pay unto you twentie shillings or a robe at the feast of Easter, after the feast you may bring an action of debt for the one or for the other.

Sixthly, the feoffee by his act and wrong may lose his election, and give the same to the feoffor. As if one infeoffe another of two acres, to have and to hold the one for life, and the other in taile, and he before election maketh a feoffment of both; in this case, the feoffor shall enter into which of them he will, for the act and wrong of the feoffee. (3)

Sil recover en brieve de annuitie donques est la terre discharge de distresse. Here is to be observed, that this determination of the election of the grantee must be by action or suit in court of record; [b] for albeit the grantee distreine for the rent, yet hee may bring a writ of annuitie and discharge the land. And Littleton putteth his case here surely upon a recoverie in a writ of annuitie. [i] But if the grantee doth bring a writ of annuitie, and at the returne thereof appeare and count, this is a determination of his election in court of record, albeit he never proceedeth any further. [k] As if a wife be endowed ex assensu patris, and the husband dieth, the wife hath election either to have her dower at the common law or ex assensu patris (4); if she bring a writ of dower at the common law, and count, albeit she recover not, yet shall she never after claime her dower ex assensu patris.

[l] So if the grantee bring an assise for the rent, and make his plaint, he shall never after bring a writ of annuitie. But the purchasing of a writ of annuitie, and entrie of it in court of record, or of an assise, is no determination of the election; because an estranger may purchase a writ in the name of the grantee, and enter it of record: but if the grantee appeare thereunto, &c. then this doth amount to a determination of his election, as hath been said.

Son

(1) Lord Coke extracts the six following rules concerning election verbatim from his own Reports. See 2. Co. 36. b.

(2) See F. N. B. 152. G.

(3) But if the grant be to hold one acre for life and the other in fee, and donee makes feoffment of one acre only, it is an election to have the fee of that; and this being lawful nothing is forfeited. Perk. f. 78. Plowd. 6. b.

(4) See acc. before sect. 41.

[f] Sir Rowland Heyward's case, 2. Co. 36. 28. E. 3. 98. 41. E. 3. 10. a. 2. H. 4. 12. 6. H. 4. 10. 36. H. 6. 10. 9. E. 4. 46. 21. E. 4. 55. b. 1. E. 5. 1. F. N. B. 121. (Plowd. 439. Post. 310. b. 1. Ro. Abr. 446. 447. 725. Hob. 58.)

2. Co. 36. 37. in Sir Rowland Heyward's case.

(1. Ro. Abr. 725. Ant. 46. b. Plowd. 6. Post. 146. a. Hob. 174.)

* 9. E. 4. 36. b. 13. E. 4. 4. b. 1. 5. E. 4. 6. b. 11. E. 3. annu. 27. 11. Aff. p. 8. 29. Aff. 55. 3. E. 3. tit. Aff. 175. 43. E. 3. tit. Barre 194. (5. Co. 25. 41.) [g] 2. H. 7. 23. a.

(Ant. 90. b. 6. Co. 45.)

9. E. 4. 36. 13. E. 4. 4. and the other above said bookes. (Plowd. 6. 1. Ro. Abr. 726.)

[k] 17. El. Dyer. 344. b.

[i] F. N. B. 152. a.

5. H. 7. 33. b.

[k] 12. b. 2. Dower 158.

[l] 10. E. 4. 17.

(s. Inst. 139.)
Glanvill. lib. 12. ca. 12.
Marlbr. ca. 21.
W. 1. ca. 15. 17. W. 2. ca. 39.
Fleta, lib. 2. ca. 40.

Marlbr. ca. 21.
(Doctr. Plac. 314.)
21. H. 6. Returne de Vic. 17.
(Post 161. a.)
[m] W. 2. ca. 2. Fleta, lib. 4.
ca. 5. 4. H. 6. 15.

* Registr. F. N. B. 68.
[r] 3. E. 3. 74. 6. H. 4. 2. &
39. 9. H. 6. 39. 20. H. 6. 19.
[v] 33. E. 3. Replev. 43. 42. E.
3. 18. 9. H. 6. 25. F. N. B. 69.
F. 6. H. 7. 9. 19. E. 3. Repl.
32.
[p] 42. E. 3. 18. 11. H. 4. 17.
23. 47. E. 3. 12. 48. E. 3. 20.
7. H. 4. 17.
(2. Ro. Abr. 430. Plowd. 524.)
Marlbr. ca. 21.

[q] 30. E. 3. 22. 31. E. 3.
Repl. v. 35. & 4.
7. H. 4. 26. 28. 31. H. 6.
Prop. Prob. 5. 1. E. 4. 9.
21. E. 4. 64. 2. Eliz. Dyer 173.
21. E. 4. 66.
(2. Ro. Abr. 431.)

[r] 5. E. 3. 38. 11. H. 4. 4.
17. E. 2. Prop. Prob. 6.

34. H. 6. 47.

31. E. 3. Gage deliver. 5.

(Post. 282. b. Doct. & Stud.
129. b.)

Bracton, lib. 4. fo. 133. a. & b.

28. E. 3. 92. 3. H. 4. 12.
34. H. 6. 37. 2. E. 4. 23.
(5. Co. 19. a.)

Registr. fol. 133. Bract. fo. 121.
& 154. W. 1. ca. 11. Fleta,
lib. 2. ca. 2. F. N. B. 66. b.

Son replegiare. Littleton spake immediately before of un breife d'annuity, but here he saith son replegiare; because goods may be replevied two manner of wayes, viz. by writ, and that is by the common law, or by pleint, and that is by the statutes for the more speedy having againe of their cattell and goods. A replegiare lyeth, as Littleton here teacheth us, where goods are distreined and impounded, the owner of the goods may have a writ de replegiari facias, whereby the sherife is commanded, taking sureties in that behalfe, to redeliver the goods distreined to the owner, or upon complaint made to the sherife he ought to make a replevy in the countrey. Replegiare is compounded of re, and plegiare, as much as to say, as to redeliver upon pledges or sureties; and in the statute of Marlebridge, deliberare is used for replegiare. [m] And the sherife ought to take two kinde of pledges, one by the common law, and they be plegii de proseguendo, and another by the statute, viz. plegii de retorno habendo. Vide sect. 58. what things may lawfully be distreyned, whereupon a replegiare may be sued. The formes of the writ you shall reade in the Register and F. N. B. *

[n] It is a generall rule, that the plaintife must have the property of the goods in him at the time of the taking. [o] But yet if the goods of a villeine be distrayned, the Lord of the villeine shall have a replevy; because the bringing of the replevy amounts to a clayme in law, and vests the property in the plaintife. But in that case if the goods of the villeine be taken by a trespasser, the lord shall have no replevy; because the villeine had but a right.

[p] But there is two kinde of properties; a generall propertie, which every absolute owner hath; and a speciall propertie, as goods pledged or taken to manure his lands or the like; and of both these a replegiare doth lye.

And albeit it be provided by the statute of Marlebridge, cap. 21. quod vicecomes post querimoniam inde sibi factam ea, sine impedimento vel contradictione ejus qui dicta averia cepit, deliberare possit, &c. [q] yet where the defendant claimes property, the sherife cannot proceed; for it is a rule in law, that property ought to be tryed by writ. And therefore in that case where the tryall is by pleint, the plaintife may have a writ de proprietate probanda directed to the sherife to trie the propertie; and if thereupon it be found for the plaintife, then the sherife to make deliverance, (for so be the words of the writ) and if for the defendant, he can no further proceed. But that is but an enquest of office; and therefore if thereby it bee found against the plaintife, yet he may have a writ of replevy to the sherife; and if he returne the claime of propertie, &c. yet shall it proceed in the court of common pleas, where the propertie shall be put in issue and finally tried. And the sherife may take a pleint upon the said act out of the county, and make replevyn presently; for it should be inconvenient for the owner to forbear his cattell till the county day.

[r] It is to be noted, that a man cannot claime property by his bailife or servant; and the reason is, for that if the clayme fall out to be false he shall be fined for his contempt, which the lord cannot be unlesse he maketh clayme himselfe; for nemo punitur pro alieno delicto (1).

In a speciall case a man may have a replevyn of goods not distreyned. As if the mesne put in his cattell in lieu of the cattell of the tenant paravaile, that he is bound to acquite, he shall have a replevyn of those cattell that never were distreyned.

If a man by his deed grant a rent with claufe of distresse, and grant further, that hee shall keep the goods distreyned against gages and pledges, untill the rent be payd, yet shall the sherife replevy the goods distreyned; for it is against the nature of such a distresse to be irreplevifable, and by such an intention the currant of replevyns should be overthrowne to the hindrance of the common wealth; and therefore it was disallowed by the whole court, and awarded that the defendant should gage deliverance, or else goe to prison. And Bracton is of the same opinion; for he saith, Eodem modo de via obstructa, per breve quod iusticiet propter communem utilitatem, ne transientes ire diu impediatur, quia hoc esset commune damnum; & in hoc vicecomes & iusticiarii faciant sicut super detentionem averiorum contra radium plegii, propter communem utilitatem, ne animalia diu inclusa pereant; which in mine opinion is an excellent point of learning.

If the beasts of divers severall men be taken, they cannot joyne in a replev. but every one must have a severall replevyn (2). And so in a replevyn it is a good plea to say, that the property is to the plaintife and to a stranger; and where there be two plaintifes, that the property is to one of them.

There is also a writ de homine replegiando. But Littleton is ready to give you further instruction: therefore heare him.

Et avowia le prise, &c. en court de record. Here it appeareth, that an avowry in court of record, which is in nature of an action, is a determination of his election before any judgement given (3). And this is a good prooffe of that, which hath bene formerly said of the writs of annuity and assise (4).

Elkio

(1) This is explained to be intended only in respect to the county court; for in the king's bench the bailiff is not liable to a fine; and therefore it has been held, that there one may make conuance and claim property by a bailiff. Adj. in Hamstead. v. Oldham, 1. Lev. 90. and 2. Keb. 441.

(2) But in favor of liberty, the law permits two to join in suing the writ de homine replegiando. F. N. B. 66. F.

(3) Acc. post. 268. a. F. N. B. 152. A.

(4) See ante 145. a.

*Electio semel facta & placitum testatum non patitur regressum.
Quod semel placuit in electionibus amplius displicere non potest.*

21. H. 6. 24. per Newton.
27. H. 6. 4.

If a rent charge be granted to A. and B. and their heires; A. distreyneth the beasts of the grantor, and he sueth a replevin; A. avoweth for himselfe, and maketh conufance for B.; A. dyeth and B. surviveth: B. shall not have a writ of annuity; for in that case, the election and avowry for the rent of A. barreth B. of any election to make it an annuity, albeit he assented not to the avowry.

But here is another diversity to be observed betweene the case aforesaid of the grant of the rent where he (as hath beene said) may make it either reall or personall, and when a man may have election to have severall remedies for a thing that is meerly personall or meerly reall from the beginning. As if a man may have an action of account or an action of debt at his pleasure, and he bringeth an action of account and appeare to it, and after is nonsuite, yet may he have an action of debt afterwards; because both actions charge the person. The like law is of an assise and of a writ of entry in the nature of an assise, and the like.

(2. Co. 36. b.)

28. E. 3. 68. b.
27. E. 3. 89. b.
(6. Co. 7. a. Ant. 139. a.)

Sect. 220.

ITEM, si homo voile qu'un autre auroit un rent charge issuant hors de sa terre, mes il ne voile que sa person soit chargee en aucun maner per briefe d'annuitie, donques il doit aver tiel clause en la fine de son fait: Proviso semper, quod præfens scriptum, nec aliquid in eo specificatum, non aliquid extendat ad onerandam personam meam, per breve vel actionem de annuitate, sed tantummodo ad onerandum terras & tenementa mea de annuali redditu predicto, &c. (1) Donques la terre est chargee, & le person del grantor dischargee.

ALSO if a man would that another should have a rent charge issuing out of his land, but would not that his person bee charged in any manner by a writ of annuity, then hee may have such a clause in the end of his deed: Provided alwaies, that this present writing, nor any thing therein specified, shall any way extend to charge my person by a writ or an action of annuity, but only to charge my lands and tenements with the yearly rent aforesaid, &c. Then the land is charged, and the person of the grantor discharged.

BY this section it appeareth, that when in a generall grant the law doth give two remedies, that the grantor may provide that the grantee shall not use one of them and leave the party to the other (2). But where the grantee hath but one remedy, there that remedy cannot be barred by any proviso; for such a proviso should be repugnant to the grant.

28. H. 8. Dier 9. b.

(Hob. 72.)

De annuali redditu, &c. Here by (&c.) and the consequent of this section bee implied divers excellent points of learning, viz. If a man by his deede granteth a rent charge out of the mannour of Dale (wherein the grantor hath nothing) with such a proviso that it shall not charge his person; albeit the repugnancie doth not appeare in the deed, yet the proviso taketh away the whole effect of the grant, and therefore is in judgement of law repugnant; for upon the matter it is but a grant of an annuity, provided that it shall not charge his person (3). For which cause our author putteth his case of a rent charge issuing truly out of land. But if a man by

(1. Ro. Abr. 227. Hutt. 33.)

So it was resolved by the justices in 11. H. 8. as justice Spilman reporteth.
9. H. 6. 53.

his deed grant a rent charge out of land, provided that it shall not charge the land, albeit the grantee hath a double remedy, as hath beene said, yet the proviso is repugnant; because the land is expressly charged with the rent, but the writ of annuity is but implied in the grant, and therefore that may bee restrained without any repugnancie, and sufficient remedy left for the grantee; for which cause our author putteth his case of the restraint of bringing a writ of annuity. And yet in some case where there is a proviso

in

(1) For the operation of this sort of proviso, see Dy. 222. a. and 2. Co. 72. a.

(2) See post. 286. a. & b. 393. a.

(3) Acc. in Brediman's case, 6. Co. 38. b.

6. Eliz. Dier 227.
(4. Co. 49. a. 7. Co. 39. b.
6. Co. 41. b. Polt. 162. a.)

(Polt. 203. b. 2. Co. 72. a.)

32. Aff. p. 1.
Vide sect. 384.
(Cro. Eliz. 837. 1. Ro. Abr.
390. Mo. 811.)

* Lib. 9. cap. de condic.
sect. 362.
(10. Co. 139. a. Hob. 191. Cro.
Cha. 555.)

in the deed that the grantee shall not in any sort charge the person of the grantor generally, notwithstanding the person of the grantor shall be charged. As if a man grant a rent charge out of certaine lands to another for life, with such a proviso; the rent is behinde; the grantee dyeth; the executors of the grantee shall have an action of debt against the grantor, and charge his person for the arrerages in the life of the grantee; because the executors have no other remedy against the grantor for the arrerages; for distreine they cannot, because the estate in the rent is determined, and the proviso cannot leave the executors without remedy, as appeareth by that which hath beene said. (1) And therefore our author putteth his case of a rent charge continuing. And here is to be observed, that this word (proviso) hath divers operations. Sometime it worketh a qualification or limitation, and so it is taken here, and often in our bookes; sometime a condition; and sometime a covenant: whereof you shall reade more hereafter, sect. 320.

En le fine de son fait. Here Littleton putteth his case of one deed. But though the grant be generally, and want such a proviso, yet may the grantee by another deed by way of defeasance grant, that he shall not charge the person of the grantor, and that if hee bring a writ of annuity that the rent shall cease.

Nec aliquid in eo specificatum non aliquoliter se extendat, &c. Here is to be observed a double negative, nec, and non, which in grammaticall construction amounteth to an affirmative; for Negatio destruit negationem, & ambo faciunt affirmativum. Yet the law, that principally respecteth substance, doth judge the proviso to be a negative according to the intent of the parties, and not according to grammaticall construction, to the end the proviso may take effect; and the like you shall finde hereafter in Littleton. * Mala grammatica non vitiat cartam. Here our author putteth his case of one grantor. Put then the case, that A. and B. being joynttenants of lands in fee by their deed grant a rent charge out of those lands, provided that the grantee shall not charge the person of A. In this case if the grantee bringeth a writ of annuity, he must charge the person of B. only.

Sect. 221.

(2. Ro. Abr. 424.)

QUE si A. de B. Here wanteth words to precede these, viz. que il grant al A. de B. &c. que si A. de B. &c. as it appeareth in the original, (2) and so it appeareth in the close of this section, viz. Mes granta tant-solement que il peut distreiner. And without such a grant the clause should be imperfect.

Pur ceo que le man- nor est charge ove le rent per voy de distresse. And yet no rent is expressly granted out of the mannor. But, by the grant that he shall distreine for such a yearely summe of money, in judgement of law the mannor is charged with the rent; but the person of the grantor cannot be charged, because he expressly granteth no rent, for that would charge his person, but that the grantee should distreine, &c. which only chargeth the land.

ITEM, si home fait tiel fait en tiel maner, que si A. de B. ne soit annuellement pay al feast de Noel pur terme de sa vie xx.s. de loyal mony, que adonques bien lirroito a meme cestuy A. de B. a distreiner pur ceo en le manor de F. &c. ceo est bone rent charge; pur ceo que le manor est charge ove le rent per voy de distres (3); & uncore la person de celuy, que fait tiel fait, est discharge en tiel case de action d'annuitie, pur ceo que il ne granta per son fait aucun

ALSO, if one make a deed in this manner, that if A. of B. be not yearely payed at the feast of Christmasse for terme of his life xx.s. of lawfull money, that then it shall be lawfull for the said A. of B. to distreine for this in the mannor of F. &c. this is a good rent charge; because the mannor is charged with the rent by way of distresse; and yet the person of him, which makes such deed, is discharged in this case of an action of annuitie, because he doth annuitie

(1) At first this may seem contradicted by the statute of 32. H. 8. c. 37. according to the recital of which the executors of tenant for life of a rent charge had no remedy at common law for arrears due to their testator. But Lord Coke in another place observes, that the preamble of 32. H. 8. should be understood to apply not to tenant for his life only, but to tenant per autre vie, so long as cestuique vie lives. Polt. 162. a.

(2) The words, here stated by Lord Coke to be in the original, are not in L. & M. or Roh.

(3) In L. & M. and in Roh. &c. is added.

annuitie ale dit A. de B. mes granta tant-solement, q'il poit distreiner pur tiel annuitie, &c. not grant by his deed any annuitie to the said A. of pur tiel annuity, &c. but granteth only that he may distreine for such annuitie, &c.

and lands to the payment of a yearly rent to A. de B. this is a good rent charge with power to distreine, albeit there be no expresse words of charge, nor to distreine. Or in these words, Obligo manerium meum de C. & omnia bona in dicto manerio existent' A. de B. in annuo redditu de xx.s. ad distringend' per balivum domini regis pro redditu predicto. By this grant a rent charge issueth out of the mannor; and where the words be, ad distringendum per balivum domini regis, this is for the advantage of the grantee. And therefore the king's baily should be but his minister to distreine for his rent; and that which he may doe by his servant, he may doe by himselfe, or by any other of his servants (2).

If a man by deed grant a rent of forty shillings to another out of his mannor of Dale, to have and to perceive to him and his heirs, and grant over by the same deed, that if the rent be behind, that the grantee shall distreine in the mannor of Sale (be the mannor of Sale in the same county or in another county, and bee this grant by one deed or divers deeds) the rent is onely issuing out of the mannor of D. and it is but a paine that he shall distreine in the mannor of S.; but both the mannors are charged, the one with the rent, and the other with a distresse for the rent; the one issuing out of the land, and the other to be taken upon the land. And whereas our author puts his case of a grant for life; so it is if I grant to you, that you and your heirs, or the heirs of your body, shall distreine for a rent of forty shillings within my mannor of S. this by construction in law shall amount to a grant of a rent out of my mannor of S. in fee simple or fee taile; for if this shall not amount to a grant of a rent, the grant shall be of little force or effect, if the grantee shall have but a bare distresse and no rent in him; for then he shall never have an assise of this, &c. And this is the reason, that it is so often ruled and resolved*, that this amounts to a grant of a rent per construction of law, ut res magis valeat. And all this is necessarily implied in the (3c.) and in this case the grantee shall not have a writ of annuity, as our author faith. And whereas our author putteth his case where the distresse is to be taken in the same land out of which the rent by construction of law is issuing, hereby is implied, that if a rent be granted out of the mannor of D. and the grantor grant over, that if the rent be behinde, the grantee shall distreine for the same rent in the mannor of S. this is but a penalty in the mannor of S. for three causes.

First, the law needs not to make construction that this shall amount to a grant of a rent, for here a rent is exprestly granted to be issuing out of the mannor of D. and the parties have exprestly limited out of what land the rent shall issue, and upon what land the distresse shall be taken, and the law will not make an exposition against the expresse words and intention of the parties when this way stands with the rule of the law. Quoties in verbis nulla est ambiguitas, ibi nulla expositio contra verba expressa fienda est.

Secondly, if in this case this shall amount to a grant of a rent out of the mannor of S. then the grantor shall be twice charged. For if the grantee bringeth a writ of annuity, this shall extend onely to the mannor of D.; for upon the grant of a distresse in the mannor of S. no writ of annuity lyeth, because the mannor of S. is only charged, and not the person of the grantor as to this (3); and for this cause the bringing of the writ of annuity cannot discharge the mannor of S. of any rent; and so the law by construction against the words and the intention of the parties shall doe injury to the grantor to charge him twice.

Thirdly, if in such case the mannor of S. in which the distresse is only limited, shall be in another county, then it hath beene often adjudged, that the rent shall not issue out of the same, but the distresse shall be as a meane and remedy to compell the tenant of the land to pay the rent. And it was said, that there was no diversity in reason, that the law in construction shall make the rent to be issuing out of this, when it lyeth in the same county, and not when it lyeth in severall counties; for the words in both cases are all one, and there is no reason to say that he shall faile of a recovery by assise (4). And the bookes in 1. Aff. p. 10. and 1. E. 3. 21. and other bookes doe not say that the rent issueth in this case out of both, but that the land in which the distresse shall be taken is charged; and this is true, for it is charged with the distresse. And inasmuch as it was charged with the distresse, their opinion was, that the tenants of both of them shall be named in the assise. And the opinion of Finchden, in 41. E. 3. 13. was affirmed to be good law, that if the mannor of D. out of which the rent is granted, be recovered by an elder title, that all the rent is extinct (5); but if the mannor of S. in which the distresse is limited, be extinct, yet all the rent remains*. So if the grantee purchase parcell of the mannor of S. the rent is not extinct; for that the rent issueth onely out of the man-

Que il poest distreiner pur tiel annuity, &c.

Here by (3c.) many points worthy of observation are implied, viz. if a man seised of lands in fee bindeth his goods

18. Aff. p. 1. 18. E. 3. 32. 3. Aff. 7. 3. E. 3. 12. 10. Aff. 24. 31. Aff. p. 17. 33. Aff. (1) Annuity 52. 16. E. 3. grant 64.

7. Co. 23. 24. in Butts his case.

* 3. E. 3. 12. 3. Aff. p. 7. 14. Aff. p. 14. 16. E. 3. tit. granta 64. 18. E. 3. 32. 26. Aff. 38. 30. Aff. 12. 46. E. 3. 18. 32. 8. H. 4. 19. 9. H. 6. 9. 22. H. 6. 11. (5. Co. 55. Post. 213.)

Vide Bulwar's case.

7. Co. 3. 1. Aff. p. 10. 1. E. 3. 21. Vide 9. E. 3. 13. 31. Aff. 27. 17. E. 4. 6. 10. Aff. 4. 10. E. 3. 18. 2. E. 2. Aff. 360. 1. Aff. 10. 3. Aff. 7. 32. H. 6. 27. 22. Aff. 66. 31. Aff. 27. 29. E. 3. Assise 366. 41. E. 3. 13. per Finchden.

* Vide 17. E. 4. 6. semblable case. Vide Sect. prox. sequen.

(1) Instead of Aff. it should be E. 3.

(2) What follows on this side of the folio is taken almost verbatim from Butts' case, in 7. Co. 23. a.

(3) Acc. ant. 146. b.

(4) How the remedy by assise is affected where the rent issues out of land in severall counties, is explained by lord Coke post. fol. 153. b. 154. a.

(5) See post. 148. a. and 349. a. where the same doctrine is exprest; but it is added, that the grantee shall have a writ of annuity.

ner of D (1). And it is said, that if a man grant a rent out of three acres, and grant over, that if the rent be behind, that he shall distreine for the rent in one of the acres, this rent is entire, and cannot be a rent secke out of two acres, and a rent charge out of the third acre, and therefore it is a rent secke for the whole; and yet hee shall distreine for this in the third acre. So if a rent be granted to two and to their heires out of an acre of land, and that it shall be lawfull for one of them and his heires to distreine for this in the same acre, this is a rent secke; for inso much as they stand joyntly seised of one intire rent, it cannot be as to the one a rent secke, and as to the other a rent charge, and this distresse is as an appurtenant to the rent; and therefore if he which hath the rent dieth, the survivor shall distreine; and if both grant over the rent to another, he shall distreine for this. But if a man grant a rent out of blacke acre to one and to his heires, and grant to him that he may distreine for this in the same acre for terme of his life, this is a rent charge for his life, and a rent secke after, diversis temporibus. Otherwise it is if the distresse be limited for certaine yeares in the same land, there this remaines a rent secke intirely, for that the fee and the freehold is seck in such case.

(7. Co. 23.)

(Plowd. 524. b. 525. a.)

22. H. 6. 10. b.

If a man seised of lands in fee (2), and possessed of a terme for many yeares, grant a rent out of both for life in taile or in fee, with clause of distresse out of both, this rent being a freehold doth issue onely out of the freehold, and the lands in lease are onely charged with a distresse (3). But if he had granted the rent only out of the lands in lease for terme of the life of the grantee, this had issued out of the terme, and the land had bene charged during the terme, if the grantee lived so long.

If a man be seised of twenty acres of land, and grant a rent of twenty shillings per annum de quolibet acra terre mee (that is) out of every one acre of my land, this is a severall grant out of every severall acre, and the grantee shall have twenty pounds in all.

(Cro. Cha. 110. 217. Cro. Jam. 52. 53.)

A. doth bargain and sell land to B. by indenture, and before inrolment they both grant a rent charge by deed to C. and after the indenture is inrolled: some have said, that this rent charge is avoided; for say they, it was the grant of A. and by the inrolment it hath relation to the delivery, which (say they) shall avoid the grant, notwithstanding the confirmation of the other which had nothing in the land at that time. But the grant is good, and after the inrolment by the operation of the statute (4), it shall be the grant of B. and the confirmation of A. But if the deed had not bene inrolled, it had bene the grant of A. and the confirmation of B. and so quacunque via data the grant is good (5).

Sect. 222.

Extinct commeth of the verbe extinguere, to destroy or put out; and a rent is said to be extinguished, when it is destroyed and put out.

(2. Infl. 503. 504.)

Apportion This cometh of the word partio, quasi partio, which signifieth a part of the whole; and apportion signifieth a division or partition of a rent; common, &c. or a making of it into parts.

[2] Doct. & Stud. lib. 2. cap. 16. 21. H. 7. 2. 21. E. 3. 58.

(1. Ro. Abr. 234.)

[3] 30. Aff. 12. 9. Aff. 22.

[4] 46. E. 3. 32. 14. Aff. p. 24. 26. Aff. 38.

[a] The reason of this extinguishment is; because the rent is intire, and against common right, and issuing out of every part of the land, and therefore by purchase of part it is extinct in the whole, and cannot be [b] apportioned (7). But by act in law it may, as hereafter (8) shall be said. [c] If the grantee of a rent charge purchase parcell of the land, and the grantor by his deed

Item, si home ad un rent charge a luy & a ses beires issuant hors de certain terre, sil purchase ascun parcel de cel a luy & a ses beires, tout le rent charge est extinct & lannuitie auxy (6); pur ceo que rent charge ne poit per tiel maner estre apportion. Mes si home, que ad rent service, purchase parcel de la terre dont le rent est issuant, ceo n'extiendra tout, mes pur le parcel; car rent service en tiel cas poit

Also if a man hath a rent charge to him and to his heires issuing out of certaine land, if hee purchase any parcell of this to him and to his heires, all the rent charge is extinct, and the annuitie also; because the rent charge cannot by such manner bee apportioned. But if a man, which hath a rent service, purchase parcell of the land out of which the rent is issuing, this shall not extinguishall, but for the parcell. For

(1) See further as to extinguishment of rent, infra.

(2) The case here stated is Butts' case, 5. Co. 23.

(3) See post. 196. b. & 197. a.

(4) 27. H. 8. c. 16.

(5) See 1. Com. Dig. 544. where most of the authorities on the relation of the inrollment of a bargain and sale to its execution are referred to. See also post. 186. a. and Hynde's case, 4. Co. 71. a.

(6) In L. & M. and also in Roh. it is annuity instead of annuitie issui; and so the sense requires.

(7) Acc. S. v. 69. Noy. 5. the same doctrine prevails as to conditions and common appurtenant, and for a like reason. Post. 215. a. Ante. 122. a.

(8) See post. fol. 224. and fol. 164. a.

poit estre apportion a rent service in such solonque le value de case may be apportion-la terre. Mes si un ed according to the tient sa terre de son value of the land. But seignior per le ser- if one holdeth his land vice de render a son of his lord by the ser-seignior annuellement a vice to render to his tiel feast un cheval, lord yearly at such a ou un esperon d'or, ou feast a horse, a golden un clove, gylofer, & speare, or a clove, hujusmodi; si en tiel gilliflower, and such cas le seignior pur- like; if in this case the chase parcel de la lord purchase parcell terre, tiel service est of the land, such ser-ale; par ceo que tiel vice is taken away; service ne poit estre because such service sever, ne apportion. cannot be severed nor apportioned.

that which is his owne, viz. the rent, and dealeth not with the land as in case of purchase of part. And so was it holden in the common place, Hil. 14. Eliz. which I myselfe heard and observed. So [c] if the grantee of an annuity or rent charge of 20 pound grant 10 pound parcell of the same annuity or rent charge, and the tenant attorne, hereby the annuity or rent charge is divided. (3)

And [f] when the rent charge is extinguished by his purchase of part of the land, he shall never have a writ of annuities; because it was by the grant a rent charge, and he hath discharged the land of the rent charge by his owne act by purchase of part. And therefore he cannot by writ of annuity discharge the land of the distresse, as Littleton hath before (4) said. But if the rent charge be determined by the act of God or of the law, yet the grantee may have a writ of annuity. As if tenant for another man's life by his deed grant a rent charge to one for 21 yeares, cessy que vie dieth, the rent charge is determined; and yet the grantee may have during the yeares a writ of annuity for the arrearages incurred after the death of cessy que vie, because the rent charge did determine by the act of God and by the course of law. Actus legis nulli facit injuriam. The like law is, if the land out of which the rent charge is granted be recovered by an elder title, and thereby the rent charge is voyded, yet the grantee shall have a writ of annuity; for that the rent charge is avoyded by the course of law; and so it was holden in Ward's case above remembred against an opinion obiter in 9. H. 6. 42. a.

Car rent service in tiel case poit estre apportion. Whether this apportionment was at the common law, or by the force of the statute of quia emptores terrarum, hath bene a question in our bookes. * And it appeareth by Littleton, that it was so at the common law; for when he citeth any thing provided by any statute, he citeth the statute, as he hath done this very act before. Littleton speaketh here indefinitely of rent service, and there be divers kindes of rent services which are not within that statute; and yet such rent services are apportionable by the common law. As if a man maketh a lease for life or yeares reserving a rent, and the lessee surrender part to the lessor, the rent shall be apportioned. So if the lessor recovereth part of the land in an action of waste, or entereth for a forfeiture in part, the rent shall be apportioned.

[g] So likewise if the lessor granteth part of the reversion to a stranger, the rent shall be apportioned; for the rent is incident to the reversion. [h] So it is if tenant by knights service by his last will and testament in writing deviseth the reversion of two parts of the lands, the devisee shall have two parts of the rent.

And these cases are in mine opinion rightly adjudged against a sudden opinion in Hil. 6. and 7. E. 6. reported by serjeant Bendish to the contrary. Note, what inconvenience should follow, if by the severance of the reversion the rent should be extinct.

Purchase parcell de la terre. This is intended of a fee simple, for reciting the said purchase of part granteth that hee may distreyne for the same rent in the residue of the land, this amounteth to a new grant, and the same rent shall be taken for the like rent or the same in quantity. And so it is [d] if a man by deed granteth a rent charge out of his land to a man for life, and granteth further by the same deed that hee and his heires may distreyne in the land for the same rent, this amounteth to a new grant of a rent in fee simple. (1)

But yet a rent charge by the act of the partie may in some case be apportioned. As if a man hath a rent charge of 20 shillings, he may release to the tenant of the land 10 shillings or more or lesse, and reserve part; (2) for the grantee dealeth onely with

(Ant. 146. b.)

[d] 8. H. 4. 19.

(Post. 308. b.)

(1. Ro. Abr. 235.)

Hil. 14. Eliz.

[c] 9. H. 6. 12. 53.

E. N. B. 152. D. E.

[f] 14. E. 4. 4.

22. E. 4. le darrein case 51.

7. H. 6. 9. H. 6. 1. 5. H. 7. 33.

Ward's case cited in 2. Co. in Heyward's case fo. 26.

9. H. 6. 42.

* Brookes tit. apportionment 58.

18. E. 3. 49. 22. Aff. 52.

3. Aff. 18. 18. E. 2. Avow-rie 218. Vid. 6. Co. 1. 2. in Buerton's case. Vid. 8. Co. 105.

106. in Talbot's case.

(1. Ro. Abr. 234. Post. 215.)

[g] 14. H. 8. 12. Vid. 8. Co.

79. in Wilde's case. Pasch.

39. Eliz. Rot. 233. So it was adjudged inter Collins and Haring.

(13. Co. 57.)

[h] Trin. 43. Eliz. Rot. 243.

inter West & Laffels. & Hil.

42. Eliz. Rot. 108. in communi banco inter Ewer & Moyle.

(1) Acc. Dy. 257. a. for there is a case, in which it was held, that a rent charge should go to the heir, though heirs were not mentioned, except in the clause of distress.

(2) See acc. in the comment on sect. 537. post. fol. 305. a.

(3) But Hobart, who arguendo puts the like case, observes, that the tenant is not compellable to attorn. Hob. 25.

(4) This seems a mistake; at least I cannot find any passage of the kind in Littleton. In one copy which I have of the Coke upon Littleton, the whole of this passage is struck through with a pen; and in another it is scored under as doubtful.

(5) Ant. sect. 216.

[1] 32. H. 8. tit. Extinguishment. Br. 48. 11. Ed. 3. Cefavit 21. 17. E. 3. 37. a. (Goldsb. 44. 1. Ro. Abr. 938. 9. Co. 135. 1. Ro. Abr. 235.)

* 21. E. 4. 29. 9. E. 4. 1. 7. H. 6. 26. 4. H. 7. 6. b. 11. E. 3. Cefavit 21. (1. Ro. Abr. 235.) * 33. E. 3. Dower 138.

* 30. Aff. p. 12.

* 27. E. 3. 88.

[k] 12. H. 4. 17. 17. Ed. 2. Dower 164. 30. Aff. p. 12.

[l] 20. H. 6. 3. 9. E. 4. 1. 2. 35. H. 8. Dyer 56. 7. E. 6. Dyer 82. 9. E. 3. 6. H. 4. 17. (1. Ro. Abr. 235.)

[m] Doct. & Stud. li. 2. c. 17.

* Dyer Mich. 7. & 8. Eliz. Manuscript. The earle of Huntingdon's case. Vid. F. N. B. 234. b. Briefe de deonerando pro rata port.

for if there be a lord and tenant of 40 acres of land by fealty and 20 shillings rent [i], if the tenant maketh a gift in taile, or a lease for life or yeares, of parcell thereof to the lord, in this case the rent shall not be apportioned for any part, but the rent shall be suspended for the whole: for a rent service (saith Littleton) may be extinct for part, and apportioned for the rest; but a rent service cannot be suspended in part by the act of the partie, and in esse for other (1) part. So it is if the lessor enter upon the lessee for life or yeares into part, and thereof disseise or put out the lessee, the rent is suspended in the whole, and shall not be apportioned for any part. And where our bookes * speake of an apportionment in case where the lessor enters upon the lessee in part, they are to be understood where the lessor enters lawfully, as upon a surrender, forfeiture, or such like, where the rent is lawfully extinct in part. And yet by act in law a rent service may be suspended in part, and in esse for part. * As when the guardian in chivalrie entreth into the land of his ward within age, now is the seignorie suspended: but if the wife of the tenant be endowed of a third part of the tenancie, now shall she pay to the lord the third part of the rent. * And so it is if the tenant give a part of the tenancie to the father of the lord in taile, the father dieth, and this descends to the lord; in this case by act in law the seignorie is suspended in part and in esse for part, and the same law is of a rent charge.

Likewise a seignorie may be suspended in part by the act of a stranger. * As if two joynt-tenants or coparceners be of a seignorie, and one of them disseise the tenant of the land, the other joyntenant or coparcener shall distreine for his or her moitie.

Concerning the apportionment of rents, there is a difference betweene a grant of a rent, and a reservation of a rent: for [k] if a man be seised of two acres of land, of one in fee simple, and of another in taile, and by his deed grant a rent out of both in fee; in taile, for life, &c. and dieth, the land intailed is discharged, and the land in fee simple remaines charged with the whole rent; for against his owne grant he shall not take advantage of the weakness of his owne estate in part. [l] But if he make a gift in taile, a lease for life or for yeares of both acres, reserving a rent, the donor or lessor dieth, the issue in taile avoydeth the gift or lease, the rent shall be apportioned; for seeing the rent is reserved out of and for the whole land, it is reason that when part is evicted by an elder title, that the donee or lessee should not be charged with the whole rent, but that it should be apportioned ratably according to the value of the land, as Littleton here saith.

[m] If a man grant a rent charge out of two acres, and after the grantee recovereth one of the acres against the grantor by a title paramount, the whole rent shall issue out of the other acre: but if the recoverie be by a faint title by covine, then the rent is extinct for the whole, because he claimeth under the grantor.

If a man infeoffeth B. of one acre in fee upon condition, and B. being seised of another acre in fee granteth a rent out of both acres to the feoffor, who entreth into the one acre for the condition broken, the whole rent shall issue out of the other acre; because his title is paramount the (3) grant. But if a man maketh a lease for life of blacke acre and white acre, reserving two shillings rent, upon condition that if the lessee doth such an act, &c. that then he shall have fee in blacke acre, the lessee performes the condition, albeit now by relation he hath the fee simple ab initio, yet shall the rent be apportioned; for that the reversion of one acre whereunto the rent was incident is gone from the lessor; and so note a diversitie betweene a rent in grosse and a rent incident to a reversion, concerning the apportionment thereof. And yet in some cases a rent charge shall not be wholly extinct, where the grantee claimeth from and under the grantor. As if B. maketh a lease of one acre for life to A. and A. is seised of another acre in fee, A. granteth a rent charge to B. out of both acres, and doth wast in the acre which he holdeth for life, B. recovereth in wast; the whole rent is not extinct, but shall be apportioned; and yet B. claimeth the one acre under A. And so it is if A. had made a feoffment in fee, and B. had entred for the forfeiture, the rent is to be apportioned, and is not wholly extinct: and the reason hereof is, for that it is a maxime of law, that no man shall take advantage of his owne wrong, nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria; (4) and therefore seeing the wast and forfeiture were committed by the act and wrong of the lessee, he shall not take advantage thereof to extinguish the whole rent: and the whole rent cannot issue onely out of the other acre, because the lessor hath the one acre under the estate of the lessee, and therefore it shall be apportioned. * If the king give two acres of land of equall value to another in fee, fee taile, for life or yeares, reserving a rent of two shillings, and the one acre is evicted by a title paramount, the rent shall be apportioned.

Mes si un home tient sa terre, &c. per service de render annuelment, &c. un chival ou un esperon d'or, &c. si en tiel case le seignior purchase parcel de la terre, tiel service est ale. (5)

Chival.

(1) This position is denied by lord Hale and the court of king's-bench in the case of Hodgkins v. Robson and Thornborow, Mich. 27. Cha. 2. See the report of that case in 1. Vent. 277. 2. Lev. 143. and Pollexf. 141.

(2) Acc. in Alcough's case, 9. Co. 135. b. and there the reason is expressed, namely, that one coparcener shall not be prejudiced by the tortious act of the other. See also acc. post. 188. a.

(3) See the case of dower, post. 150. a.

(4) So also by the tortious act of the lessee a condition may be apportioned; though in general it is not divisible by act of the parties. Post. 275. a. & 4. Co. 120. a. 8. Co. 79. b.

(5) What services shall be extinguished by the lord's purchase of part of the land, and what shall be apportioned or remain, is explained much at large in Talbot's case, 8. Co. 105. and in Bruceton's case, 6. Co. 1.

Chival. Nota, in Latine destrarius is a great horse or horse of service, of the French word destrier; palfridus a horse to travell on (1), of the French word palfray; and run-cinus a nagge (you shall often read of them in record) it commeth of the Italian word ron-cino. But admit that parcell of the land holden by such entire service come to the lord by descent, whether shall the entire service wholly remaine, or be extinct? And it is holden, that in some case it shall be extinct for the whole, as suit service, and such other entire annuall suit services. But if the service be to render yearly at such a feast a horse, or the like, and the tenant infeoffe the father of the lord of part, which descends, yet the feoffor shall hold by a horse, because the service was multiplied, and each of them, viz. the feoffor and the feoffee, held by a horse.

A. hath common of pasture sauns nombre, in twenty acres of land, and tenne of those acres descend to A.: the common sauns nombre is entire and incertaine, and cannot be apportioned, but shall remaine. But if it had beene a common certaine (as for ten beasts), in that case the common should be apportioned. And so it is of common of estovers, of turbarie, of piscarie, &c. And yet in none of these cases, the descent, which is an act in law, shall worke any wrong to the terre-tenant; for he shall have that which belongeth to him, for the act in law shall worke no wrong (2).

If three joyntenants hold by an entire yearly rent, as a horse, or of a graine of wheat, and the tenants cease by two yeares, and the lord recover two parts of the land against two of them, and the third saves his part by tending of the rent, &c. and finding suretie; albeit the lord come to the two parts by lawfull recovery, grounded upon the default and wrong of the two joyntenants, yet shall the entire annuall rent be extinct (3).

If the tenant holdeth by fealty and a bushell of wheat, or a pound of comyn, or of pepper, or such like, and the lord purchaseth part of the land, there shall be an apportionment, as well as if the rent were in money: and yet if the rent were by one graine of wheat, or one seed of comyn, or one pepper corne, by the purchase of part, the whole should be extinct. But if an entire service be pro bono publico, as knights service, castle gard, cornage, &c. for the defence of the realme, or to repaire a bridge or a way, to keepe a beacon, or to keepe the king's records, or for advancement of justice and peace, as to ayd the sherife, or to be constable of England (4), though the lord purchase part, the service (5) remaines. So it is if the tenure be pro opere devotionis sive pietatis, as to find a preacher, or to provide the ornaments of such a church; or pro opere charitatis, as to marry a poore virgin, or to bind a poore boy apprentice, or to feed a poore man. And so note a diversity betweene these cases, and entire services for the private benefit of the lord.

Anno 6. R. 1. Rot. 5. War.
Bruerton's case. 6. Co. 2. 34. Aff.
15. 35. H. 6. Exec. 21. Pl. Com.
72. 40. E. 3. 40. 5. E. 2. tit.
Avowrie 206.
(2. Inst. 508. 8. Co. 105.)

F. N. B. 209. 40. E. 3. 40.

Vid. Litt. cap. tenant in common 71. b. 6. Co. 1. 2. in Bruer-ton's case. Lit. f. 49. 11. H. 7.
12. b. 24. H. 8. Tenures 53.
Brooks. 35. H. 6. 6. 11. El. Dy.
285. 16. E. 3. Avowrie 93.

Sect. 223.

MES si un home
tient sa terre dun auter, per homage fealtie & es-cuage, & per certaine rent, si le seignior purchase parcel de la terre, &c. entiel casle rent sera apportion, come est avant dit: mes uncore en cest case l'homage & fealty de-murront entier a le seignior; car le seignior avera le homage & fealtie de son tenant pur le remnant de les

BUT if a man hold his land of another, by homage fealty and escuage, and certaine rent, if the lord purchase part of the land, &c. in this case the rent shall be apportioned, as is aforesaid:
but yet in this case
the homage and fealty abide entire to the lord; for the lord shall have the homage and fealty of his tenant for the rest of the lands and tenements

PURCHASE parcel de la terre, &c. Here, by this &c. is implied, that the reasons, wherefore homage and fealty remaine and are not extinct in this case, are: First, because it can be no losse to the tenant, as it might in the case of an horse or other entire service; for there it may bee the remnant is not sufficient in value to pay it. Secondly, there is no land, but it must be holden by some service or other; and homage and fealty are the freest and least chargeable services to the tenant.

Pur ceo que tiel services ne sont passe annual services, &c. This is ratio una, but not unica, as it appeareth by that which hath

Bruerton's case ubi supra.
(6. Co. 10.)

5. E. 2. Avowrie. 206.

(1) It is used in this sense in a writ in F. N. B. 93. l.

(2) This same maxim is cited and applied ant. fol. 148. a.

(3) A learned observer on the Coke upon Littleton, whose MSS. notes I have, objects to it as against reason, that the lord should lose his service from the third jointenant. However, the year-book of E. 4. cited by lord Coke, is an authority for the position; and further it should be considered, that the case supposed is of an intire rent, that is, of one incapable of division.

(4) See post. 165. a.

(5) Acc. post. 149. b.

(Plowd. 96. a.)
 Brerton's case 6. Co.
 Talbot's case 8. Co. 104.
 8. H. 7. 11.
 (Poll. 176. b. 183. b.)

hath been said. If there be lord and tenant by fealdie and herriot service, and the lord purchase part of the land, the herriot service is extinct, (and yet it is not annuall, but to be paid at the death of the tenant) because it is entire and valuable.

Solouque l'assurance & rate de la terre, &c. Here is by this (&c.)

implied, that in some case where it is entire and valuable, and not annuall, it shall not (as hath been said) be extinguished by purchase of parts: * as knights service which is to be performed by the body of a man, if the lord purchase part, yet the tenure by knights service remains for the residue, quia pro bono publico & pro defensione regni; (2) but the escuage shall be apportioned, as here Littleton saith, because that is for the benefit of the lord, and yet it is casuall, and not annuall. And where our author speaketh of services, it is implied, that a herriot custome, though it be entire, valuable, and not annuall, by the purchase of part shall not be extinct. On the other part, when the tenure is by an entire service, and the tenant alien part of the tenancie, in what cases the rent shall be multiplied (that is) where the feoffor and the alienee shall pay the entire rent severally, (3) (for regularly it holdeth, that que in partes dividi nequeunt solida à singulis præstantur) and where not, you may read at large in my * Reports.

And by this (&c.) is also implied, that the apportionment shall not be according to the quantity of the land, but according to the quantity or value thereof, (4) as by that which hath been said appeareth.

* 7. E. 3. 29. Talbot's case
 8. Co. 104.

* Brerton's case 6. Co. 1. 2.
 Talbot's case 8. Co. 104.

Sect. 224.

5. E. 2. Avowrie 200.
 21. E. 3. 58. b. 34. Aff. 15. tit.
 apportionment. b. 28. 9. Aff. 22.

30. Aff. Pl. 12.

(Ant. 148. b.)

24. H. 6. 41. b.

NOTE here a diversity, when the grantee of a rent charge commeth to a part of the land charged by his owne act, and when by the course of law. (6)

Purchase parcel de les tenements charges en fee. And so it is if the tenant giveth to the father of the grantee part of the land in taile, and this descend to the grantee, the rent shall be apportioned; and so by act in law a rent charge may be suspended for one part, and in esse for another.

And so it is, if the father be grantee of a rent, and the son purchase part of the land charged, and the father dieth after whose death the rent descends to the son, the rent shall be apportioned; and so it is if the grantee grant the rent to the tenant of the land, and to a stranger, the rent is extinct but for a moitie.

Item, si home ad un rent charge, & son pier purchase parcel de les tenements charges en fee, & morust, & cel parcel descend a son firs, que ad le rent charge, ore cel (5) charge serra apportion solouque le value de la terre come est avantdit de rent service; pur ceo que tiel portion de la terre purchase per la pierre ne vient al firs per son fait demesne, mes per discent & per course del ley.

ALso, if a man hath a rent charge, and his father purchase parcell of the tenements charged in fee, and dieth, & this parcell descends to his sonne, who hath the rent charge, now this charge shall be apportioned according to the value of the land, as is aforesaid of rent service; because such portion of the land purchased by the father commeth not to the sonne by his owne fact, but by descent and by course of law.

IF

(1) In L. & M. &c. is here added.
 (2) Acc. ant. 149. a.
 (3) Ant. 67. b.
 (4) Acc. infra, sect. 224.
 (5) The word rent is here inserted in L. & M.
 (6) Acc. ant. 147. b.

If a man hath issue two daughters, and grant a rent charge out of his land to one of them and dieth, the rent shall be apportioned; and if the grantee in this case enfeofeth another of her part of the land, yet the moiety of the rent remaineth issuing out of her sister's part, because the part of the grantee in the land by the descent was discharged of the rent. But in all these cases where the rent charge is apportioned by act in law, yet the writ of annuity faileth; for if the grantee should bring a writ of annuity, he must ground it upon the grant by deed, and then must he, as it hath beene said, (1) bring it for the whole.

Annua nec debitum judex non separat ipsum.

9. Aff. 22.
5. R. 2. Annuity 21.

Also in respect of the realty the rent is apportioned. But the personalty is indivisible, and by act in law shall not be divided. If execution be sued of body and lands upon a statute merchant or staple, and after the inheritance of part of those lands descend to the conusee, all the execution is avoided; for the duty is personall, and cannot be divided by act in law (2).

Pl. Com. 72.
35. H. 6. tit. Execut. 21.
15. E. 4. 5.

Ne vient al fitz per son fait demesne, mes per descent & per course del ley.

If the father within age purchase part of the land charged, and alieneth within age and dyeth, the sonne recovereth in a writ of dum fuit infra etatem, or entereth: in this case the act of law is mixt with the act of the party, and yet the rent shall be apportioned; for after the recovery or entry the sonne hath the land by descent.

So it is in case the sonne recovereth part of the land upon an alienation by his father, dum non fuit compos mentis, the rent shall be apportioned for the cause aforesaid.

A man seised of lands in a fee taketh wife, and maketh a feoffment in fee, the feoffee grants a rent charge of x. pound out of the land to the feoffor and his wife and to the heires of the husband, the husband dyeth, the wife recovereth the moiety for her dower by the custome; the rent charge shall be apportioned, and she may distraine for five pound, which is the moiety of the rent (3). In which case two notable things are to be observed. First, albeit the dower be by relation or fiction of law above the rent (4), yet when the wife recovereth her dower, she shall not have her entire rent out of the residue; for a relation or fiction of law shall never worke a wrong or charge to a third person, but in fictione juris semper est æquitas. Secondly, that albeit her owne act doe concur with the act in law, yet the rent shall be apportioned.

5. E. 2. Avowry 206.

3. Co. 29. in Butler & Baker's case.

Sect. 225.

Item, si soit seignior & tenant, & le tenant tient de son seignior per fealty & certaine rent, & le seignior granta le rent per son fait a un autre, &c. reservant aluy le fealty, & le tenant atturna al grantee de le rent, ore tiel rent est rent seck a le grantee; pur ceo que les tenements ne sont tenus del grantor (5) de le rent, mes sont tenus del seignior que reserve a luy fealtie.

Also if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant holds of his lord by fealty and certaine rent, and the lord grants the rent by his deed to another, reserving the fealty to himselfe, and the tenant atturnes to the grantee of the rent, now this rent is rent seck to the grantee; because the tenements are not holden of the grantor of the rent, but are holden of the lord who reserved to him the fealty.

ET le seignior granta le rent, &c.

So it is if the lord release the rent to the tenant saving the fealty, the rent is extinct. But if there be lord and tenant by fealty and rent, and the lord by his deed reciting the tenure release all his right in the land saving his said rent, the seigniorie remaines, and he shall have the rent as a rent service, and the fealty incident to it; for the said rent is as much to say as the rent service whereunto fealty is incident.

12. E. 4. 11. 9. E. 3. 1. 40. E. 3. 22. b. 13. E. 3. tit. Releases 36. (Post. 151. a.)

And if the lord hath issue two daughters and dieth, and upon partition the fealty is allotted to the one and the rent to the other, she shall have the rent as a rent secke.

17. E. 3. 72. b.

If there be lord of a manor and tenant by fealty,

17. E. 3. 72. b.

the lord grant the fealty saving to him the suit of court and rent, the saving is good for the rent, but not for the suit to court; because the grantee

(1) Ant. 144. b. near the end.

(2) Acc. 2. Ventr. 327. For other instances of the indivisibility of debts and personal duties, see F. N. B. 46. a. Keilw. 106. a. Bro. Nov. Cas. pl. 32. 135. Heth. 53. March. 56. 61.

(3) This same case is cited and approved of in Alcoug's case, 8. Co. 135. b.

(4) See the case of condition ant. 148. b.

(5) Grantee instead of grantor in L. & M. & Roh. which is agreeable to the sense of the passage.

Lib. 2.

Cap. 12.

Of Rents.

Sect. 224.

(Plowd. 96. a.)
Brierton's case 6. Co.
Talbot's case 8. Co. 104.
8. H. 7. 11.
(Poll. 176. b. 185. b.)

hath been said. If there be lord and tenant by fealty and herriot service, and the lord purchase part of the land, the herriot service is extinct, (and yet it is not annuall, but to be paid at the death of the tenant) because it is entire and valuable.

Solouque l'afferance & rate de la terre, &c.

Here is by this (&c.) implied, that in some case where it is entire and valuable, and not annuall, it shall not (as hath been said) be extinguished by purchase of parts: * as knights service which is to be performed by the body of a man, if the lord purchase part, yet the tenure by knights service remains for the residue, quia pro bono publico & pro defensione regni; (2) but the escuage shall be apportioned, as here Littleton saith, because that is for the benefit of the lord, and yet it is casuall, and not annuall. And where our author speaketh of services, it is implied, that a herriot custome, though it be entire, valuable, and not annuall, by the purchase of part shall not be extinct. On the other part, when the tenure is by an entire service, and the tenant alien part of the tenancie, in what cases the rent shall be multiplied (that is) where the feoffor and the alienee shall pay the entire rent severally, (3) (for regularly it holdeth, that quæ in partes dividi nequeunt solida à singulis præstantur) and where not, you may read at large in my * Reports.

And by this (&c.) is also implied, that the apportionment shall not be according to the quantity of the land, but according to the quantity or value thereof, (4) as by that which hath been said appeareth.

terres et tenements tenus de luy, come il a voit adevant (1), pur ceo que tiels services ne sont pas annualls services, et ne poyent estre apportion, mes l'escuage poit, & serra apportion solouque l'afferance et rate de la terre, &c.

holden of him, as hee had before, because that such services are no yearely services, and cannot be apporportioned, but the escuage may and shall be apportioned according to the quantitie and rate of the land, &c.

* 7. E. 3. 29. Talbot's case 8. Co. 104.

* Brierton's case 6. Co. 1. 2. Talbot's case 8. Co. 104.

Sect. 224.

5. E. 2. Avowrie 200.
21. E. 3. 58. b. 34. Aff. 15. tit.
apportionment. b. 28. 9. Aff. 22.

30. Aff. Pl. 12.

(Ant. 148. b.)

24. H. 6. 41. b.

NOTE here a diversity, when the grantee of a rent charge commeth to a part of the land charged by his owne act, and when by the course of law. (6)

Purchase parcel de les tenements charges en fee. And so it is if the tenant giveth to the father of the grantee part of the land in taile, and this descend to the grantee, the rent shall be apportioned; and so by act in law a rent charge may be suspended for one part, and in esse for another.

And so it is, if the father be grantee of a rent, and the son purchase part of the land charged, and the father dieth after whose death the rent descends to the son, the rent shall be apportioned; and so it is if the grantee grant the rent to the tenant of the land, and to a stranger, the rent is extinct but for a moitie.

Item, si home ad un rent charge, & son pier purchase parcel de les tenements charges en fee, & morust, & cel parcel descend a son fits, que ad le rent charge, ore cel (5) charge serra apportion solouque le value de la terre come est avantdit de rent service; pur ceo que tiel portion de la terre purchase per la piere ne vient al fits per son fait demesne, mes per discent & per course del ley.

ALso, if a man hath a rent charge, and his father purchase parcell of the tenements charged in fee, and dieth, & this parcell descends to his sonne, who hath the rent charge, now this charge shall be apportioned according to the value of the land, as is aforesaid of rent service; because such portion of the land purchased by the father commeth not to the sonne by his owne fact, but by descent and by course of law.

If

(1) In L. & M. &c. is here added.
(2) Acc. ant. 149. a.
(3) Ant. 67. b.
(4) Acc. infra, sect. 224.
(5) The word rent is here inserted in L. & M.
(6) Acc. ant. 147. b.

If a man hath issue two daughters, and grant a rent charge out of his land to one of them and dieth, the rent shall be apportioned; and if the grantee in this case enfeofeth another of her part of the land, yet the moiety of the rent remaineth issuing out of her sister's part, because the part of the grantee in the land by the descent was discharged of the rent. But in all these cases where the rent charge is apportioned by act in law, yet the writ of annuity faileth; for if the grantee should bring a writ of annuity, he must ground it upon the grant by deed, and then must he, as it hath been said, (1) bring it for the whole.

Annua nec debitum judex non separat ipsum.

9. Aff. 22.
5. R. 2. Annuity 21.

Also in respect of the realty the rent is apportioned. But the personalty is indivisible, and by act in law shall not be divided. If execution be sued of body and lands upon a statute merchant or staple, and after the inheritance of part of those lands descend to the conusee, all the execution is avoided; for the duty is personall, and cannot be divided by act in law (2).

Pl. Com. 72.
35. H. 6. tit. Execut. 21.
15. E. 4. 5.

Ne vient al fitz per son fait demesne, mes per descent & per course delley.

If the father within age purchase part of the land charged, and alieneth within age and dyeth, the sonne recovereth in a writ of dum fuit infra etatem, or entereth: in this case the act of law is mixt with the act of the party, and yet the rent shall be apportioned; for after the recovery or entry the sonne hath the land by descent.

So it is in case the sonne recovereth part of the land upon an alienation by his father, dum non fuit compos mentis, the rent shall be apportioned for the cause aforesaid.

A man seised of lands in a fee taketh wife, and maketh a feoffment in fee, the feoffee grants a rent charge of x. pound out of the land to the feoffor and his wife and to the heires of the husband, the husband dyeth, the wife recovereth the moiety for her dower by the custome; the rent charge shall be apportioned, and she may distreine for five pound, which is the moiety of the rent (3). In which case two notable things are to be observed. First, albeit the dower be by relation or fiction of law above the rent (4), yet when the wife recovereth her dower, she shall not have her entire rent out of the residue; for a relation or fiction of law shall never worke a wrong or charge to a third person, but in fictione juris semper est equitas. Secondly, that albeit her owne act doe concur with the act in law, yet the rent shall be apportioned.

5. E. 2. Avowry 206.

3. Co. 29. in Butler & Baker's case.

Sect. 225.

Item, si soit seignior & tenant, & le tenant tient de son seignior per fealty & certaine rent, & le seignior granta le rent per son fait a un autre, &c. reservant aluy le fealty, & le tenant atturna al grantee de le rent, ore tiel rent est rent seck a le grantee; pur ceo que les tenements ne sont tenus del grantor (5) de le rent, mes sont tenus del seignior que reserve a luy fealtie.

Also if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant holds of his lord by fealty and certaine rent, and the lord grants the rent by his deed to another, reserving the fealty to himselfe, and the tenant atturnes to the grantee of the rent, now this rent is rent seck to the grantee; because the tenements are not holden of the grantor of the rent, but are holden of the lord who reserved to him the fealty.

ET le seignior granta le rent, &c.

So it is if the lord release the rent to the tenant saving the fealty, the rent is extinct. But if there be lord and tenant by fealty and rent, and the lord by his deed reciting the tenure release all his right in the land saving his said rent, the seigniorie remaines, and he shall have the rent as a rent service, and the fealty incident to it; for the said rent is as much to say as the rent service whereunto fealty is incident.

12. E. 4. 11. 9. E. 3. 1. 40. E. 3. 22. b. 13. E. 3. tit. Releases 36. (Post. 151. a.)

And if the lord hath issue two daughters and dieth, and upon partition the fealty is allotted to the one and the rent to the other, she shall have the rent as a rent secke.

17. E. 3. 72. b.

If there be lord of a manor and tenant by fealty, the lord grant the fealty saving to him the suit of court and rent, the saving is good for the rent, but not for the suit to court; because the grantee

(1) Ant. 144. b. near the end.

(2) Acc. 2. Ventr. 327. For other instances of the indivisibility of debts and personal duties, see F. N. B. 46. a. Keilw. 106. a. Bro. Nov. Cas. pl. 52. 135. Hetl. 53. March. 56. 61.

(3) This same case is cited and approved of in Alcoug's case, 8. Co. 135. b.

(4) See the case of condition ant. 148. b.

(5) Grantee instead of grantor in L. & M. & Roh. which is agreeable to the sense of the passage.

tee can keepe no court, and there is no tenure of the grantor, and therefore the suit of court is lost and perished in that case.

If the donee hold of the donor by fealty and certaine rent, and the donor grant the services to another, and the tenant attorne, some have said the rent shall not passe, because the rent cannot passe but as a rent service being granted by the name of services; and the fealty cannot passe, because as hath beene saide (1) the fealty is incident inseparable to the reversion. But it seemeth, that the rent shall passe as a rent secke; (2) because at the time of the grant it was a rent service in the grantor, and therefore there be words sufficient to passe it to the grantee, and it is not of necessity that it shall be a rent service in the hands of the grantee.

If there be lord and tenant by fealty and certaine rent, and the lord by deed grant the rent in fee saving the fealty, and grant further by the same deed that the grantee may distreine for the same rent in the tenancy, albeit a distresse were incident to the rent in the hands of the grantor, and although a tenant attorne to the grant, yet cannot the grantee distraine; for the distresse remaines as an incident inseparable to the seignior, for then the tenant should be subject to two severall distresses of two severall men. (3) And so it is if the lord in that case grant the rent in tayle or for life, saving the fealty, and further grant that the grantee may distreine for it, albeit the reversion of the rent be a rent service, yet the donee or grantee shall have it but as a rent secke, and shall not distreine for it.

It is to bee observed, that where a rent service is become a rent secke by severance of the same from the seignior, that now the nature of the rent is changed; for if the grantee purchase part of the land, the whole rent shall be extinct. And whereas in an assise for a rent service, all the tenants of the land need not to be named, but such as did the disseisin; yet in assise for the rent secke, which sometimes was a rent service, all the tenants must be named, as in case of a rent charge, albeit he were disseised but by one sole tenant. * But if the lord of a manor release the fealty to his tenant saving the rent, or that a mesnalty become a rent by surpluse, (4) those that are now secke (and sometimes were service) are part of the manor; but a rent charge cannot be part of a manor.

Attorne, &c. Of attornement shall bee hereafter said in his proper chapter and place.

Sect. 226.

SI le seignior voet granter per son fait le homage, &c. It is to be observed, that where the seignior is by homage fealty and rent, [a] if the lord grant away the homage, the fealty shall passe; for fealty is an incident inseparable to homage [b], and cannot by any saving in any grant be separated from it, for homage cannot be sole or alone. But the rent (though it be not saved) shall not passe in that case; because the rent is not incident to homage: and so it is if there be lord and tenant by fealty and rent, and the lord grant over the fealty without any savings, the rent passeth not. But fealty hath an incident inseparable belonging to it, which by no saving can bee separated, and that is a distresse; for, as Littleton saith here, a service cannot be seck (that is) without some

*EN mesme le manner est, l'ou home tient sa terre per homage fealtie et certaine rent, si le seignior grant la rent, savant a luy le homage, tiel rent apres tiel grant est rent secke. Mes la ou terres sont te-nus per homage fealty et certaine rent, si le seignior voet gran-ter per son fait le homage de son tenant
a un autre, savant a luy le remnant de les services, et le tenant atturna a luy solonque le forme del graunt;
en cest case le tenant*

*IN the same manner, where a man holds his land by homage fealty and certaine rent, if the lord grant the rent, saving to him
the homage, such rent after such grant is rent seck. But there where lands are holden by homage fealty and certaine rent, if the lord will grant by his deed the homage of his tenant to another, saving to him the remnant of his services, and the tenant attorne to him according to the forme of the grant; in this case tiendra*

. E. 3. b. Fitz Warren's case.

7. E. 3. 2. 3. Adjudged.

31. Aff. 31. 17. Aff. 10. 32.
Aff. pl. 10. F. N. B. 178. D.
22. H. 6. 3. b. 4. E. 2. Aff.
449. 28. H. 8. Dier 31.

* 31. Aff. 23. 22. Aff. 53.

(Mo. 190. 1. Leon. 14.)

[a] 40. E. 3. 22. per Curiam.

[b] 44. E. 3. 19. 20. 39. H. 6.
25. 29. Aff. pl. 20. 26. Aff.
p. 38.

(1) Ant. 143. a.

(2) See post. 152. a. the comment on sect. 230. and note 6. there.

(3) This only shews, that the tenant cannot be made liable to two severall distresses by act of his lord. But on act of law it is otherwise, of which lord Coke gives an instance post. 164. b.

(4) This passage being shortly expressed may to some be obscure. The case intended is that of lord mesne and tenant, where the rent from the tenant to the mesne is greater than the latter pays to the lord, and the lord purchases of the tenant; the consequence of which is, that the mesne becomes intitled to the surpluse rent from the lord, namely, to so much as the rent from the tenant to the mesne exceeds the rent to the lord from the mesne. See W. Jo. 234. and post. sect. 234. and fol. 154. b. and 309. b.

tiendra sa terre del grantee, & le seignior que grantast le homage n'avera forsque le rent come rent secke, & ne unques distreynera pur le rent (1), pur ceo que homage ne fealtie ne escuage ne poit estre dit secke, car nul tiel service poit estre dit secke. Car celui, que ad ou doit aver homage ou fealtie ou escuage de sa terre, poit per common droit distreyner pur ceo s'il soit aderer; car homage fealtie & escuage sont services, per queux terres ou tenements sont tenus, &c. & sont tiels, que en nul maner poient estre prises forsque come services, &c.

the tenant shall hold his land of the grantee, and the lord who granted the homage shall have but the rent as a rent seck, and shall never distrain for the rent, because that homage nor fealty nor escuage cannot be said secke, for no such service may be said secke. For he, which hath or ought to have homage fealty or escuage of his land, may by common right distrein for it, if it be behind; for homage fealty and escuage are services, by which lands or tenements are holden, &c. and are such services as in no manner can be taken but as services, &c.

distresse belonging to it, for then it were not a service, and so of homage and escuage.

Terres ou tenements sont tenus, &c. By this (&c.) and out of this section it may be collected, that if [c] there be lord and tenant by fealty and rent, the annuall rent, which is a profitable service, is of higher and more respect in law than the fealty; and therefore by the grant of the rent the fealty shall passe as an incident thereunto; but it is an incident separable, and therefore may be by a saving, as Littleton hath (2) said, separated from it. And so when the tenure is by fealty and rent, and the rent be recovered, the fealty shall includedly be recovered. [d] And where the tenure is by homage fealty and rent, by the recovery of the rent with the appurtenances upon a former right, the homage and fealty also shall be restored by necessity and indulgence of the law; for seeing the law giveth no præcipe for the homage and fealty, but for the rent only, reason would, that by the recovery of the rent the whole entire seignior shall be inclusively restored (3) in that case. But if the recovery be without title (4), there the rent is recovered as a rent seck, for that worketh no more then a grant*; but by the recovery of a manor, whether it be by title or without title, homage fealty and all other services parcell of the manor are recovered. And albeit fealty cannot be divided from homage by grant (as hath beene said) yet by extinguishment it may [e]. As if there be lord and tenant by homage fealty and rent, and the lord release the seignior and services, or all his right in the land saving the fealty and rent, or saving the said rent, or if he by expresse words release the homage saving the fealty and rent, there the fealty and rent remain, for the homage is extinct. And so note a diversity betweene a grant and a release in that case. But so long as homage continues, the fealty cannot be divided from it.

[c] 44. E. 3. 19. 26. Aff. 38. 29. Aff. p. 20. 9. E. 3. 2. 39. H. 6. 24. 25. 27. H. 8. 20. 9. E. 4. 28.

[d] Temps H. 8. Br. tit. incidents 24. 44. E. 3. 19. 29. Aff. 20. 39. H. 6. 24. 25.

(Ant. 148. b.)

* Vide sect. 149.

[e] 9. E. 3. 1. (Ant. 150. a.)

Forsque come services, &c. Here is implied a diversity betweene these corporall services of homage fealty and escuage, which cannot become secke or dry, but make tenure whereunto distresses escheats and other profits be incident, and other corporall services, as to plough, repaire, attend, and the like, and all rents whatsoever, for they may become secke or dry and make no tenure.

Sect. 227.

MES autrement est de rent, que fuit un foits rent service; pur ceo que quant

BUT otherwise it is of a rent, which was once rent service; because when it is severed

ET le seignior ne poet grant tiel rent oue distres, come est dit.

[f] For [f] 7. E. 3. 2. 3. the

(1) In L. and M. here follow these words, viz. Pur ceo que sealte ne poet estre sevre de homage et. But they are not in the Roh. edition.

(2) Sect. 225. fo. 150. a.

(3) So if land, to which common is appendant or appurtenant, be recovered in assise of novel disseisin, it is a tacit recovery of the common also. Post. 154. b. It is the same on recovery of a manor, to which a villein is regardant. Post. 306. b. So remitter to the principal is remitter to the accessory. Post. 349. b. All this is agreeable to the rule, that accessorium sequitur suum principale, which is cited in the next folio. See 152. a. and the case of trees in 11. Co. 49. b.

(4) Of recovery without title, where used to mean a common recovery, see ant. 104. a. Of recovery without title, as distinguished from a common recovery, read post. 362. a.

[L] 7. E. 4. 11. 3. H. 7. 4. 5.

the distresse is an incident inseparable to the fealty, as hath been said [g], and therefore a release of distresse is void.

Incident, Incident, a thing appertaining to or following another as a more worthy or principall; whereof you see here, and in divers other places of Littleton examples. And of incidents some be separable, and some inseparable (2), as hath been said.

il est sever per le grant le seignior de les autres services, il ne poet estre dit rent service, pur ceo que il ne ad a ceo fealty, que est incident a chescun manner de rent service; Et pur ceo est dit rent secke(1). Et le seignior ne poet grant tiel rent ove distresse, come est dit.

by the grant of the lord from the other services, it cannot bee said rent service, for that it hath not fealty unto it, which is incident to every manner of rent service; and therefore it is called rent seck. And the lord cannot grant such a rent with a distresse, as it is said.

Sect. 228.

Savant a luy le reversion, &c.

By this word (&c.) is to be observed [b], that this rent reserved is a rent service, and hath fealty incident to it; and both rent and fealty are incident to the reversion, viz.

[i] the rent incident to the reversion separably, but the fealty incident to the reversion inseparably; but by the grant of the rent, the fealty in this case shall not passe because the fealty is inseparably incident to the reversion, but the grantee shall have the rent as a rent secke. Also by this (&c.) is implied an attornment of the tenant; for without that, although by the grant the rent is turned to a rent secke, so as the tenant cannot be charged with any distresse, yet to the passing thereof there must be an attornment.

Attorne, &c. Here is implied by this (&c.) an attornment in the life of the grantee, and other incidents to an attornment, whereof you shall reade at large in the chapter of attornment (3).

Donques ad le grantee le rent come rent service; pur ceo que il ad le reversion pur terme de vie. And the reason hereof is, because the rent is incident to the reversion, as hath been said, and (as Littleton saith here) passeth away by the grant of the reversion as with the superior, without saying cum pertinentiis, (4) &c. for the reversion cannot be seck (5). But by the grant of the rent the reversion doth not passe (6).

Item si home lessa a un autre terres pur terme de vie, reservant a luy certain rent, s'il grant le rent a un autre person fait, savant a luy le reversion de la terre issint leste, &c. tiel rent nest forsque rent seck; pur ceo que le grantee nadiens en le reversion del terre, &c. Mes s'il grant le reversion del terre a un autre pur terme de vie, & le tenant attorne, &c. donques ad le grantee le rent come rent service; pur ceo que il ad le reversion pur terme de vie.

Also if a man lett to another lands for tearme of life, reserving to him certaine rent, if hee grant the rent to another by his deed, saving to him the reversion of the land so letten &c. such rent is but a rent seck; because that the grantee had nothing in the reversion of the land &c. But if he grant the reversion of the land to another for tearme of life, and the tenant attorne, &c. then hath the grantee the rent as a rent service; for that he hath the reversion for tearme of life.

[A] 41. E. 3. 16.

[i] 12. E. 4. 3. 32. H. 8. tit. Patents. Br. 26. Aff. 66. 48. E. 3. 9. b. Doct. & Stud. li. 2. ca. 9.

(1) The words which follow in this section are not in L. and M. or in the Rob. edition; nor in the two MSS.

(2) This distinction of incidents is made before fol. 93. a. For examples of incidents inseparable, see infra, and also ant. 99. a. b. 113. b. 150. b. 151. a. Bro. Nouv. Cas. pl. 7.

(3) Post. 309. a.

(4) Acc. ant. 121. b. post. 307. a.

(5) Lord Coke only means, that a reversion cannot be without fealty, and its inseparable concomitant the remedy of distress. In respect to present profit, a reversion may be dry and fruitless during the particular estates, and until it comes into possession. To a reversion of this latter kind, lord Coke himself gives the description of dry and fruitless, ant. 111. b. Hence it appears, that the word seck is used by our lawyers in two senses. According to one, it signifies want of remedy by distress, as Littleton expounds the word in section 218. In another, it imports want of present fruit and profit, as in the case of the reversion without rent or other service except fealty.

(6) See acc. from Littleton himself at the end of section 219.

Sect. 229.

ET issint est a entendue, que si home dona terre ou tenements en le taile rendant a luy & a ses heires certaine rent, ou lessa terre pur terme de vie rendant certaine rent, s'il granta le reversion a un auter &c. & le tenant atturna, tout le rent & service passe per cest parol (reversion) pur ceo que tiel rent & service en tiel cas sont incidents a le reversion, & passent per le grant de le reversion. Mes coment que il granta le rent a un auter, le reversion ne passa my per tiel grant, &c. (1) AND so it is to be intended, that if a man give lands or tenements in taile yeilding to him and to his heires a certaine rent, or letteth land for tearme of life rendering a certaine rent, if hee grant the reversion to another &c. and the tenant atturne, all the rent and service passe by this word (reversion) (2) because that such rent and service in such case are incident to the reversion, and passe by the grant of the reversion. But albeit that hee granteth the rent to another, the reversion doth not passe by such grant, &c. (3)

THIS needs no explication, but is evident by that which hath formerly beene said, saving by this (&c.) in the end is implied the old rule, That the incident shall passe by the grant of the principall, but not the principall by the grant of the incident. Accessorium non ducit, sed sequitur suum principale. (4)

Sect. 230. (5)

ISSINT nota le diversitie. Et issint est tenuis P. 21. E. 4. Mes il est adjudge, an. 26. lib. assisarum, ou les services del tenant en taile fueront grants, que ceo fuit bone grant, nient obstant que le reversion demurt. SO note the diversity. And so it is holden P. 21. E. 4. But it is adjudged 26. of the book of assises, where the services of tenant in taile were granted, that this was a good grant, notwithstanding that the reversion remaine.

THIS is added to Littleton. And therefore as I have done heretofore; and shall doe hereafter in like cases, I passe it over. And the case here cited in 26. Ass. p. 66. was contra opinionem multorum; and afterwards that judgement was reversed by writ of error, for that the services remained with the reversion as incidents (6) inseparable.

Sect. 231.

ITEM si soit seignior or mesne & tenant, & le tenant tient del mesne per service de v. s. & le mesne tient ouster per service ALSO if there bee lord mesne and tenant, and the tenant holdeth of the mesne by the service of five shillings, & the mesne SI soit seignior mesne & tenant &c. si le seignior paramont purchase le tenancie en fee, &c.

[4] Some have said, that [4] 20. E. 3. avowrie, 128. in

(1) The same distinction between granting the reversion and granting the rent is taken post. sect. 572.
(2) According to Bro. Nouv. Caf. pl. 192. this holds in the case of the king as well as in the case of a common person.
(3) See ant. 150. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 59. & infra note b.
(4) See ant. 151. a. note 3. and post. 349. b.
(5) No part of this section is in L. & M. Roh. or P.
(6) This reason is unexceptionable in respect to services, which in their nature are inseparable from the reversion, such as fealty. But it fails in respect to the rent, which Lord Coke has before represented to be a separable incident, ant. 151. b. The true construction of the grant supposed seems to be, that it is sufficient to pass the rent as a rent seek, but that for the other services it is void. It should be recollected too, that this construction is conformable to one by lord Coke on a similar case, which he states and explains in fol. 150. b. See the top of the page there.

2. E. 2. tit. Extinc. 6. 26. H. 6. ibid. 7.

[1] 7. Aff. 2. 7. E. 3. 20.

[m] 4. E. 3. 19.
See for this hereafter in the chapter of Confirmation, sect. (538.)

[n] 8. H. 6. 24.

(Post. 280. a.)
[o] 4. & 5. P. & M. Dy. 154.
(2. Co. 92. b.)

Vid. sect. 138. 139.

[p] 13. H. 4. 3. 40. Aff. p. 27.
12. R. 2. Vouch. 81.

in this case it were reason, that by the purchase of the lord paramount his feignory should be onely extinct, and that he should become tenant to the mesne, and the mesne to hold over as the lord paramount held. But that cannot bee; for that one man cannot be both lord and tenant, nor one land immediately holden of divers lords. [1] If the tenant infeoffe the lord paramount and his wife and their heires, in this case the mesnalty is but suspended; for if the wife survive, both mesnalty and feignory are revived.

It is said, that if there be lord mesne and tenant, each of them by fealty and fixe pence, the lord confirme the state of the tenant, to hold of him by fealty and three pence, that the mesnalty is extinct. (1) [m] And so in the same case, if the tenant bee an abbot, and the lord confirme his estate to hold of him in frankalmoigne, the mesnalty is (2) extinct. [n] So it is if the lord release to the tenant (3.) For whether the lord purchase the tenancie, or the tenant the feignory, the mesnalty is extinct. And albeit the mesne grant the mesnalty for life, and then the lord release to the tenant, both the reversion and the estate for life are drowned. [o] So if there bee lord and tenant, and the tenant make a gift in taile, the remainder to the king, the feignory is extinct. (4)

Que serra inconvenient. Here it appeareth, that argumentum ab inconvenienti is forcible in law, as hath been said before, (5) and shall be often observed hereafter.

[p] Le ley voet plus tost suffer mischiese que inconvenience. (6) Lex citius tolerare vult privatum damnum, quam publicum malum. Here be two maxims of the common law.

First, that no man can hold one and the same land immediately of two severall lords. Secondly, that one man cannot of the same land be both lord and tenant. And it is to be observed, that it is holden for an inconvenience, that any of the maxims of the law should be broken, though a private man suffer losse: for that by infringing of a maxime, not onely a generall prejudice to many, but in the end a publike incertainty and confusion to all would follow. And the rule of law is regularly true, res inter alios acta alteri nocere non (7) debet, et factum unius alteri nocere non debet; which are true with this exception, unlesse an inconvenience should follow, as our author here teacheth us.

Sect. 232.

IL avera le iiii. s. MES entant que BUT in as much as come rent secke. le tenant te- the tenant holds nus

(1) In the preceding case lord Coke states the doctrine upon it as a mere dictum; and by his marginal reference to the chapter of Confirmation, he apparently reserves his own opinion for a future occasion. Afterwards when he resumes the subject, he holds, that, on account of avant of privity between the lord paramount and the tenant paravail, confirmation from the former to the latter cannot abridge the services due to the mesne, and so alter the tenure between the mesne and the tenant paravail. Post. 305. b.

(2) Lord Coke in a subsequent part of his Commentary gives a different decision of this case; for there he holds, that the lord cannot extinguish the mesnalty by confirmation to the tenant paravail, there being no privity between them. Post. 305. b. But this is not any contradiction of himself; because here he is apparently giving the dictum of others.

(3) It deserves consideration, whether the release of lord paramount is not as insufficient to pass the feignory to the tenant paravail, as a confirmation, both being conveyances in which privity is required. See post. sect. 461.

(4) The reason of this is elsewhere explained to be, that the feignory being extinct for the fee simple, it cannot remain for the particular estate either for life or in tail. See post. 312. b. Quick's case 9. Co. 129. b. a case in Gouldsb. 149. and Bingham's case 2. Co. 92.

(5) Ant. 97. b.

(6) It sounds harshly to prefer a mischief to an inconvenience, the greater evil to the lesser. But the true construction of the rule obviates this objection; for it certainly means, as lord Coke's addition explains, that the law prefers a private mischief to a public inconvenience.

(7) The same maxim is cited post. 319. a. In Wingate's Maxims 317. there is a great variety of cases for illustration of the rule.

nuist del mesne per v. s. & le mesne tenuist forf- que per xii. d. issint que il avoit plus en advantage per iiii. s. que il payast a son seignior, il avera les ditz iiii. s. come rent seck annuelment de le seignior que purchase le tenancie.

of the mesne by five shillings, and the mesne hold but by twelve pence, so as he hath more in advantage by foure shillings, than he paies to his lord, he shall have the said foure shillings as a rent secke yearely of the lord which purchased the tenancie.

And yet hee shall distreyn for it (1); for, seeing the fealtie is extinct, the law reserves the distresse to the rent & for, as it hath been said in the like case, seeing the fealtie is extinct, the distresse by act in law may be preserved, Quia quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur & id sine quodres ipsa esse non potest (2). [r] And therefore if a man maketh a lease for life, reserving a rent, and bind himselfe in a statute, and [the conusee] (3) hath the rent extended and delivered to him, he shall distreyn for the rent (4), because he commeth to it by course of law.

[s] But if a rent service be made a rent secke by the grant of the lord, the grantee shall not distreyn for it; for that the distresse remaines with the fealtie. [t] If there be lord mesne and tenant, and the mesnaltie is a manor having divers freeholders, and the lord purchase one of the tenancies, and there is a rent by surplusage, this rent albeit it be changed into another nature (as hath beene said) is parcell of the manor. But yet by purchase of part of the land, the whole rent is extinct, albeit the law did preserve it.

[r] 13. H. 4. Avowrie 237. (Post. 225. b. Mo. 36.)

[s] 28. E. 3. 93. (Ant. 150. b. 151. b. 309. b.)
[t] 31. Aff. 23. 22. Aff. 53. 2. H. 6. 14.

Sect. 233.

Item si home, que ad rent seck, est un foits seisi d'ascun parcel de le rent & apres le tenant ne voit payer le rent adere, ceo est son reme- die. Il covient de aler per luy ou per autres a les terres ou tene- ments dont le rent est issuant, & la demander les arerages del rent; & si le tenant denia ceo de payer, cest de- nier est un disseisin de le rent. Auxy si le te- nant ne soit adonques prist a payer, ceo est un denier, que est un dis- seisin de rent. (5) Auxy si le tenant, ne nul auter home, soit de- murrant sur les terres

Also if a man, which hath a rent secke, be once seised of any parcell of the rent, and after the tenant will not pay the rent be- hind, this is his reme- die. Hee ought to goe by himselfe or by o- thers to the lands or tenements out of which the rent is issuing, and there demand the arerages of the rent; and if the tenant denie to pay it, this deniall is a disseisin of the rent. Also if the tenant be not then readie to pay it, this is a denial, which is a disseisin of the rent. Also if the tenant, nor any other man, be remaining SEisin, or seison, is com- mon aswel to the En- glish, as to the French, and signifies in the common law possession, whereof seisina a Latin word is made, and seisire a verbe.

D'ascun parcel. [u] A feisin of parcel is a sufficient feisin in law, to have an assise of the whole rent.

Concerning the generall (9. Co. 23.)

learning of feisins, you may reade lib. 4. Bevil's case, fol. 8. lib. 5. fol. 98. lib. 6. fol. 57. lib. 7. fol. 24. 29. lib. 9. fol. 33. And many authorities of law there cited, but sufficient is said here to explaine Littleton.

A les Terres, &c.

[w] For a demand of the tenant out of the land is not suffi- cient: but if there be a house and land, a demand on the land is sufficient; but for a condition broken, it ought to be at the house (6), as hath beene said before (7).

Arere. This word arere is to bee observed, for it is not necessary, that the

(Ant. 29. a.)

[u] 5. E. 4. 2. (Post. 315. a. Cro. Cha. 507.)

T. 18. E. 1. coram rege Nott. in Thesaur.

[w] 49. E. 3. 14. b. 14. E. 4. 4. Pl. Com. 71.

(1) If the rent may be distrained for, can it be properly called seck? Littleton in sect. 218. describes a rent to be seck, because distress is not incident to it. But if lord Coke is right here, a rent may be seck, and yet be distrained for. According to the resolution of the king's bench in W. Jo. 234. the rent, in a case such as is supposed by Littleton, is quasi a rent-service distrainable of common right. In other words, the distress is given, or rather saved, by the law, to prevent the mesne from being prejudiced by acts between lord and tenant to which the mesne is no party. This brings the case to a resemblance of a rent reserved for equality on a partition between coparceners; which by the implication of law is a rent-charge without aid of any clause of distress, and therefore called by Littleton a rent-charge distrainable of common right. See post. sect. 253.

(2) See same maxim ant. fol. 56. a. See also 11. Co. 52. a. Cro. Jam. 170. 189. and Oldfield's case, Noy 123.

(3) The words [the conusee] are not in the original, but are added by the editor as essential to the sense of the passage.

(4) Acc. Bro. Abr. Executions 143. Yet it has been said, that the reversion itself is not extendable. Bro. Nouv. Cas. pl. 227. See as to this 1. Ro. Abr. 888, pl. 6. and 7. Mod. 40. and Carth. 126.

(5) The words de rent not in L. and M. or Roh.

(6) Acc. F. N. B. 179. A.

(7) Acc. post. 201. b.

(Ant. 144. a.)

[x] 29. Aff. 51. B. II. 6. 11.
Lib. de Entries 79. b.
(5. Co. 56. 7. Co. 28. 1. Leon.
305. Cro. Jam. 9. 10. 145.)

[y] Mich. 41. E. 3. coram Rege adjudge accordingly.

(Post. 201. b.)

[z] Vid. Bract. lib. 4. fol. 161.
262. 204. Brit. ca. 42. 43. &c.
f. 83. 106. 114. 115. 118. Mir.
ca. 2. Sect. 1.
* Flet. lib. 4. ca. 1. Bra. ubi supra. (4. Leon. 48. a. Cro.
Cha. 303.)

Mirr. ca. 2. sect. 25. Bracton
lib. 4. ca. 4. Britton ca. 44. 45.
&c. Fleta, lib. 4. ca. 5. & 2. & 3.

Mirror ca. 2. sect. 25.

(7. Co. 3. b.)

the grantee of the rent should demand it at the very time when it becommeth due, but at any time after it is sufficient. For this is not like a demand of a rent upon a condition; because that is penall and overthroweth the whole state, and [x] therefore the time of demand must be certaine, to the end the lessee, donec, or scoffee may be there to pay the rent (2). But a demand of a rent secke or rent charge is but onely a formal meane to recover that which is due; [y] and therefore in that case it may be demanded after it is behinde at any time whether the tenant be present or no, for remedies for rights are ever favourably extended.

Ceo est un denier en ley. For wheresoever there is a lawfull demand of a rent, and the same is not paid, whether the tenant be present or absent, yet this is a deniall in law, (3) albeit there be no words of denyall. It appeareth here, that the demand must be made upon the land, and albeit the tenant nor any for him be there, yet must the grantee demand it, because without a demand there can be no denial in deed, or in law.

Ceo est un denier en ley. For wheresoever there is a lawfull demand of a rent, and the same is not paid, whether the tenant be present or absent, yet this is a deniall in law, (3) albeit there be no words of denyall. It appeareth here, that the demand must be made upon the land, and albeit the tenant nor any for him be there, yet must the grantee demand it, because without a demand there can be no denial in deed, or in law.

Disseisin. (4) [z] Disseisina is a putting out of a man out of seisin, and ever implyeth a wrong. (5) But disseising or ejectment is a putting out of possession, and may bee by right or by wrong. * Omnis disseisina est transgressio, sed non omnis transgressio est disseisina. Si eo animo fortè ingrediatur fundum alienum, non quod sibi usurpet tenementum vel iura, non facit disseisina, sed transgressionem, &c. Querendum est à iudice quo animo hoc fecerit, &c. (6) And of ancient time a disseisin was defined thus: Disseisin est un personel trespassse de tortious ouster del seisin (7).

Affise de novel disseisin. Affisa nova disseisina. Affisa properly commeth of the Latin word affideo, which is to associate or set together; so as properly affise is an association or sitting together. And the writ, whereby certaine persons are authorised and called together, is called affisa nova disseisina; so as affisa is but cessio (8). But because cessio is but a general word, therefore in this sense affisa is used in law for a particular cession by force of the writ de affisa nova disseisina; and accordingly it was anciently said affise in un case n'est auer chose que cession des justices. And it is called affisa nova disseisina; for that the justices of eire, before whom these affises were taken in their proper counties, did ride their circuits from 7 years to 7 years, and no disseisin before the eire if it were not complained of in the eire could be questioned after the eire; and therefore a disseisin committed before the last eire was called an ancient disseisin, and a disseisin after the last eire was called a new disseisin or nova disseisina. Affisa also signifieth a jury, of their sitting together, and also a cession of parliament, as Littleton hereafter in this chapter sheweth.

Et recovers le seisin del rent. Here, and by the (&c.) in the end of this section is implied, that our author intendeth his case where the rent issueth out of lands in one county. For if a man be seised of two acres of land in two severall counties, and maketh a lease of both of them reserving two shillings rent, in this case, albeit severall liveryes (9) be made at severall times, yet is it but one entire rent in respect of the necessity of the case, and he shall distreyn in one county for the whole, and make one avowrie for the whole. But he shall have severall affises in consilio comitatus, and in either countie shall make

- (1) The words between brackets not in L. & M. Roh. or P.
(2) Acc. as to condition of re-entry, post. 301. a. Acc. whether the condition be for re-entry or a sum nomine pene, 7. Co. 28. b. Hob. 82. 207. But the case of Thyn v. Cholmley Mo. 347. is contra as to a sum nomine pene.
(3) For disseisin of rent by denial, see post. sect. 238.
(4) See Littleton's description of disseisin, post. sect. 279.
(5) It also implieth force. Post. 237. b.
(6) The preceding passages in Latin are not from Bracton or Fleta in the places cited by lord Coke, but from Bract. 216. b.
(7) For other descriptions of disseisin besides those given or referred to by lord Coke, see post. 377. a. 6. Co. 58. The ancient authors cited by lord Coke, particularly Bracton and Fleta, are very full in explaining the various modes of disseisin. The additional marginal references to 4. Leon. and Cro. Cha. are to cases about disseisin by election, as to which see post. 306. b. and 323. a. See also the case of Taylor on demise of Atkyns v. Horde, 1. Burr. 60. In this last case it was attempted to support a common recovery by supposing the tenant to the præcipe to have gained a freehold by disseisin. The nature of a disseisin was therefore elaborately investigated by the counsel. Lord Mansfield, also, who had been recently made chief justice of the king's bench, and delivered the court's opinion in a very distinguished argument, expatiated on the same subject, in order to repel the arguments for a freehold by disseisin in the case before the court, by shewing, that the doctrine in our books about disseisins chiefly applies to disseisin by a person electing, and for the sake of certain remedies to suppose himself disseised. There will probably be occasion to refer to some points of the learning displayed in the course of this famous case in a subsequent part of the present work; especially where Littleton writes concerning disseisins by election. See post. sect. 588.
(8) It should be cessio, the word as Coke spells it tending to a wrong derivation.
(9) As to livery of lands situate in severall counties, see ant. sect. 61. 62.

ou les tenements pur payer le rent quaut il demaund les arrearages, ceo est un denier en ley & un disseisin en fait, & de tiels disseisins il poit aver affise de novel disseisin envers le tenant, & recovers le seisin del rent, & ses arrearages & ses dammages, & les costages de son breve & de son plea, &c. Et si apres tiel recovery [et execution ewe] (1) le rent soyt auter foits a luy denie, donque il avera un redisseisin, & recovers ses double dammages, &c.

ning upon the lands or tenements to pay the rent when he demandeth the arrearages, this is a deniall in law, and a disseisin in deed, and of such disseisins he may have an affise of novel disseisin against the tenant, & shal recover the seisin of the rent, & his arrearages, & his dammages, & the costs of his writ & of his plea, &c. And if after such recovery & execution had, the rent be againe denied unto him, then he shall have a redisseisin, and shall recover his double dammages, &c.

make his plaint of the whole rent; but there shall be but one patent to the justices. [a] And this assise in confinio comitatus is given by the statute of 7. R. 2. cap. 10. for no assise lay in that case at the common law, but the party might distreine. [b] But for a common of pasture, of turbary, of pischary, of estovers, and the like, in one county, appendant or appurtenant to land in another county, an assise in confinio comitatus did lye at the common law; [c] and so it is of a nufans done in one county to lands lying in another county, the like assise did lye at the common law.

[d] And albeit the counties doe not adjoyne, but there be 20 counties meane betweene them, yet the assise in confinio comitatus doth lye (1), and the justices shall sit betweene the said counties. [e] And where it is said before of two counties, the like law it is if the same extend into more counties. (2)

[f] If a man hold divers mannors or lands in divers severall counties by one tenure, and the lord is deforced of his services, he shall have severall writs of customes and services; for every county one writ returnable at one day in the court of common pleas, and thereupon count according to his case by the common law.

[g] But if the tenant in that case doe cease, the lord shall not have severall writs of cessavit ut supra; for the writ of cessavit is given by statute * and the forme and manner of the writ therein prescribed, and thereupon it is holden in our bookes that in that case a cessavit doth not lye. (3)

[h] Il avera un redisseisin & recoversa ses double damages &c. Here by this (3c.) is also to be understood, that a writ of redisseisin is given by the statute of Merton * (so called because the parliament was holden at Merton in Anno 20. H. 3.) the letter whereof is, Item si quis fuerit disseisatus de libero tenemento & coram iudiciariis itinerantibus seisinam suam recuperaverit, per assisam novae disseisinae, vel per recognitionem eorum qui fecerint disseisinae, & ipse disseisatus per vicecomitem seisinam suam habuerit, si iidem disseisatores, postea post iter iudiciariorum, vel infra, de eodem tenemento iterum eundem conquerentem disseisaverint, & inde convicti fuerint, statim capiantur, &c. (4) But the double damages are given by the statute of W. 2. cap. 26. (5)

And Littleton in few words hath made a good exposition of this statute; for where the statute saith, disseisatus de libero tenemento, Littleton expounds it [i] to extend to a rent secke or rent charge. (6) Albeit, as hath beene said, they be against common right, yet a man hath a freehold in them, [k] and he that granteth omnia tenementa sua, a rent charge or a rent secke doth passe. (7)

Coram iudiciariis itinerantibus, &c. saith the statute. But Littleton speaketh generally and so is the statute to be intended before any other justices that have authority to take assises, and justices itinerant are set downe but for an example, which is worthy of the observation, [l] being a penall law.

Recuperaverit per assisam, &c. saith the statute, here assisam is taken for the verdict of the assise, as Littleton hereafter in this chapter expoundeth the same. Vel per recognitionem, &c. or by confession. Then the question is, what if the recovery were upon a demurrer or by pleading of a record and failer of it, or by any other manner. And seeing Littleton speaketh generally, it must be understood of all manner of recoveries in an assise of novel disseisin; and so it is confirmed by the statute of W. 2. cap. 26. (8)

Recoverie. Recuperatio commeth of the verbe recuperare, i. ad rem per injuriam extortam sive detentam per sententiam iudicis restitui. And recuperatio in the common law is all one with evictio in the civill law, which is alienius rei in causam alterius abductae per judicem acquisitio.

Et execution erve. Per vicecomitem seisinam habuerit, saith the statute; but Littleton speaketh generally, (et execution erve) and execution had; so as whether it bee by the sherife or by the party, so as execution or possession be had, it sufficeth. (9)

Execution, Executio, and signifieth in law the obtaining of actuall possession of any thing acquired by judgement of law or by a fine executory levied, whether it be by the sherife, or by the entry of the party, whereof you shall reade more hereafter. (10)

Note, it appeareth here by Littleton, that [m] the recovery in a former writ must be in assise of novel disseisin, wherein these words (vel recoverie) are to be observed. And therefore if in a writ of right close in ancient demesne, the demandant maketh his protestation to sue in the nature of assise of novel disseisin, and after is redisseised, hee shall not have a writ of redisseisin; because the first recovery was not by writ of assise of novel disseisin. [n] And so it is, if the recovery were in assise of fresh force by bill according to the custome of some city or burrough. Also in ancient demesne there be no coroners. (11)

Si iidem disseisatores, saith the statute. [o] So as it must be the same disseisors: but here iidem [p] 9. H. 4. 5. F. N. B. 189. c. 23. Af. pl. 7. (Cro. Jam. 334.)

(1) Acc. Fine. Descript. del Com. L. 59. a. & 49. Aff. pl. 1. & 21. Hen. 6. 3. there cited.

(2) Fitzherbert in the place cited in the margin is a direct authority for this. But according to Finch, more than two counties cannot join. Fine. Descript. del Com. L. 59. a. See further on trial by two or more counties, 21. Vin. Abr. 103.

(3) Acc. F. N. B. 209. K.

(4) Acc. 2. Inst. 82. 115.

(5) See 2. Inst. 416.

(6) Acc. F. N. B. 178. D.

(7) So where lands and tenements are devisable by custome of a borough, both rent-charge and rent-service are within the custome. Post. sect. 385. But sometimes the word tenement is used in a more limited sense, and to exclude rents and other incorporeal hereditaments, as by Littleton in writing of descents to toll entries. See post. sect. 385.

(8) See further as to redisseisin Fitzherbert's comment on the writ of that name. F. N. B. 188. B.

(9) Acc. ant. 34. b. See also Dy. 278. b. March 95.

(10) Post. 289. a.

(11) This is an additional reason against a writ of redisseisin; because that writ requires that the coroners be taken to see it executed, and they are not officers of the court of ancient demesne. The same reason applies more strongly in respect of the sheriff, for the writ is directable to him, and he is judge as well as officer in it. See Kitch. 96. a. & Fulwood's case, 4. Co. 65. a. See also Dalt. Sher. 33. b. where the sheriff's duty in executing the writ of disseisin is explained.

[a] 10. Aff. pl. 4. 18. Aff. p. 1. & 18. E. 3. 32. 22. H. 6. 9. 10. [b] F. N. B. 180. a. (7. Co. 2. 3. 4.)

[c] F. N. B. 183. k.

[d] 5. E. 4. 2.

[e] F. N. B. 180. a.

[f] 30. E. 1. tit. Droit. F. N. B. 151. m.

[g] 18. Aff. pl. 1.

* W. 2. cap. 21.

[h] Bracton fol. 236. Britton 133. 246. Fleta lib. 4. cap. 29. Merton cap. 3. Regist. 206 207. * Mirror ca. 3. W. 2. c. 46. Vid. sect. 234.

Vide Regist. 206. b. (1. Ro. Abr. 571.)

[i] 40. Aff. 23. ac.

[k] 14. E. 4. 4. 11. H. 6. 22. (Ant. 6. a. 19. b.)

[l] Fitz. N. B. 180. h.

Vide sect. 504.

[m] 14. E. 2. tit. Rediff. 9. F. N. B. 189. g.

[n] 14. E. 3. tit. Rediff. 8. Vide the 2. part of the Institutes. Stat. de Merton, cap. 3.

(F. N. B. 188. c.)

[p] 33. E. 3. redisseisin 7.
(3. Co. 13. b. Post. 198. a.)

[q] 9. H. 4. 5. F. N. B. 188. E.

[r] F. N. B. 188. E. Registr.
9. H. 4. 5.

(Hob. 96.)

F. N. B. 188. G.

(Ant. 153. a.)

[s] 26. H. 6. tit. Aid 77.

8. E. 3. tit. Redisseisin 6.
F. N. B. 189. p.

idem is taken for non alius. And therefore if the recovery in the assise were against two disseisors, and one of them redisseise him againe, he shall have a redisseisin against him, for he is not alius. But if the recovery had been against one, and he and another redisseise the plaintife, he shall not have a redisseisin; for here is alius; and he cannot have a redisseisin against the former disseisor alone, because he is jointenant with another; [p] for joyntenancy in a writ of redisseisin is a good plea, and a stranger shall not be subject to double imprisonment and double damages.

[q] If a recovery be had against a woman in an assise of novel disseisin, and the plaintife recovereth and hath execution, the woman taketh husband, and both of them redisseise the plaintife, he shall not have a redisseisin, because the husband is alius. [r] And yet if a feme recover in an assise, and after take baron, and they are redisseised, the husband and wife shall have a redisseisin; because the husband joyneth for conformity, and it is in the right of his wife who was disseised before, so in effect it is idem disseisitor & idem conquerens. (1)

If two coparceners be disseised and recover in an assise, if after they make partition, and after they be severally disseised, they shall have severall redisseisins; and so it is of joyntenants, for they be idem conquerentes, & non alii. Also a redisseisin doth lye against the disseisor which doth redisseise, and against another to whom he made feoffment after the second disseisin; for otherwise the redisseisor might prevent the plaintife of his redisseisin. But in an assise against A and B, A is found disseisor, and B tenant, and the plaintife doth recover, and after he which was found tenant disseises the plaintife, he shall not have a redisseisin; because he did disseise him but once. (2)

De eodem tenemento, saith the statute. If the plaintife be redisseised of parcell of the tenement formerly recovered, he shall have a redisseisin.

If the mesne recovereth (3) a rent when it is a rent service, and after the rent becommeth a rent seck by surplussage, and doth redisseise him of the rent, he shall have a redisseisin; for the substance of the rent remaines, though the quality be altered. (4)

[s] If tenant in speciall taile recovereth in assise, and after becommeth tenant in taile after possibility of issue extinct, and then is redisseised, he shall have a redisseisin; for albeit the state of inheritance be altered, yet the same freehold remaineth. (5)

If a man recover land in an assise of novel disseisin, whereunto there is a common appendant or appurtenant, and after is redisseised of the common, hee shall have a redisseisin of the common, for it was tacitely recovered in the assise. (6)

Sect. 234.

Æquivocum. (7) For the better understanding hereof, of these there bee two kinds, viz. equivocum æquivocans; and equivocum æquivocatum.

Equivocum æquivocans est plurivocum, polysemus, a word of divers severall significations.

Equivocum æquivocatum est univocum, that is to say, reduced to a certaine signification. As here in Littleton's example, assisa est nomen æquivocum æquivocans; for sometime it signifieth a jury, sometime the writ of assise, and sometime an ordinance or statute. Now assise, jurata, (8) is equivocum æquivocatum; and so is breve de assisa nova disseisine, and assisa panis, &c. Even as canis est nomen æ-

ET memorandum, que cest nosme AND memorandum, that this name assise est nomen assise is nomen æquivocum; car assise æquivocum; car assise æquivocum; for sometimes cun foits est prise it is taken for a jurie; pur un jurie; car le for the beginning of commencement de le the record of an assise of record de assise de novel disseisin issint beginneth thus: assisa venit recognitura &c. which is the same, as venit recognitura &c. jurata venit recognitura. And the reason is, quod idem est quod for that by the writ jurata venit recognitura &c. est, pur ceo que per le of assise it is commanded to the sherife, briefe de assise il est command a la vi- quod faceret duodecim cont, quod faceret liberos & legales homi- duodecim

(1) So if a feme commits a redisseisin, and afterwards is married, the writ lies against both; because in that case the husband is named, not as the actor, but only in conformity to the law which will not suffer the wife to be sued alone, and to satisfy the damages. Hob. 96.

(2) See post. sect. 278.

(3) Recovery in assise must be understood.

(4) The reason is, because the alteration is made by the act of others, namely of the lord paramount and tenant paravaile. Acc. 4. Co. 9. a. and b. in Bevil's case. See ant. sect. 232. post. 309. b. ant. 152. b.

(5) Acc. 11. Co. 81. a. in Lewis Bowles's case.

(6) Other instances of tacit recovery are mentioned ant. fol. 151. a.

(7) See Hob. 303.

(8) Lord Coke means "taken for jurata."

duodecim liberos & legales homines devicinetos &c. videret tenementum illud, & nomina illorum imbreviare, & quod summoneat eos per bonos summonitores, quod sint coram iusticiariis, &c. parati inde facere recognitionem &c. Et pur ceo que, per tiel original, un panel per force de mesme le briefe devoit estre retorne &c. il est dit en le commencement del record en le assise, assisa venit recognitura &c. Auxy en briefe de droit il est communement dit, que le tenant luy poit mitter en Dieu & grand assise &c. Auxy il y ad un briefe en le register, que est appel briefe de magnâ assisa eligendâ. Issint est ceo bien prove, que cest nosme assise aliquando ponitur pro jurat. Et ascun foits il est prise pur tout le briefe d'assise; & solonque cel entent il est plus properment & plus communement prise, sicome assise de novel disseisin est prise pur tout le breve de assise de novel disseisin. Et en mesme le maner assise de nes de vicineto, &c. videret tenementum illud, & nomina illorum imbreviare, & quod summoneat eos per bonos summonitores, quod sint coram iusticiariis &c. parati inde facere recognitionem &c. And because that, by such an originall, a pannell by force of the same writ ought to be returned &c. it is said in the beginning of the record in the assise, assisa venit recognitura &c. Also in a writ of right it is commonly said that the tenant may put himselfe on God and the great assise. Also there is a writ in the register which is called a writ, de magnâ assisâ eligendâ. So as this is well proved, that this name assise somtimes is taken for a jury. And somtimes it is taken for the whole writ of assise; and according to this purpose it is most properly & most commonly taken, as an assise of novel disseisin is taken for the whole writ of assise of novel disseisin. And in the same manner an assise of common of pasture is taken for the whole writ of assise quivocum; canis latrabilis, canis marinus, canis caelestis, sunt equivoca equivocata.

Assise de novel disseisin. (2. Co. 70.)

Note [a] there be four assises, viz. this writ, an assise of mortdancester, of darreine presentment, and of utrum. (1)

Vicount. Vide (Ant. 109. b. Post. 168. a.) sect. 248. verbo (Sbi-reve.)

Quod faciat 12 liberos & legales homines de vicineto, &c.

[b] Albeit the words of the writ be duodecim, yet by ancient course the sheriff must return (2) 24: and this is for expedition of justice; for if 12 should onely be returned, no man should have a full jury appear, or be sworn in respect of challenges, without a tales, which should be a great delay of tryals. So as in this case usage & ancient course maketh law. And it seemeth to me, that the law in this case delighteth her selfe in the number of 12; for there must not onely be 12 jurors (3) for the tryall of matters of fact, [c] but 12 judges of ancient time for tryall of matters in law in the Exchequer Chamber. Also for matters of state there were in ancient time twelve Counsellors of State. He that wargeth his law must have eleven others with him, which thinke hee sayes true. And that number of twelve is much respected in holy writ, as 12 apostles, 12 stones, 12 tribes, &c.

[d] He that is of a jury, must be liber homo, that is not only a freeman and not bond, but also one that hath such freedom of mind as he stands indifferent as hee stands unsworne. Secondly, he must be legalis. And by the law every juror, that is returned for the tryall of any issue or cause, ought to have three properties.

[d] 9. E. 4. 16.

(*) First,

(1) Juris utrum.

(2) See 3. G. 2. c. 25. f. 8.

(3) In a Coke upon Littleton in my possession, there is the following marginal note on the necessity of having 12 jurors.—“In the manor of Penryn Farrein in Cornwall, there was a custome to try an issue with six jurors; and this custome was adjudged no good custome, as Rolle cheife justice affirmed in Mich. terme 1652.”—The printed books also furnish two cases against such a custom; in the first of which cases Rolle appears to have argued for it, and to have noticed that there was a multitude of records in twenty several courts in Cornwall proving it's prevalency. See Fredymock v. Perryman, Cro. Cha. 259. 1. Ro. Abr. 564. and Aike et Aimon v. Hunkin, 1. Sid. 233. However in some special cases the jury may be less than twelve; and in some must or may be more.—1. They may be less. Thus it may be in Wales under the provision of the statute of 34. & 35. H. 8. concerning Wales, which allows of six. See 34. & 35. H. 8. c. 26. f. 74. Cro. Cha. 259. 1. Sid. 233. and 3. G. 2. c. 25. f. 9. So also it is in some special cases in England, as 6 or 8 in inquiry of damages on default, and in inquiry of waste, though this latter has been questioned and even denied. Spelm. Gloss. voce jurata, Fitzh. N. B. 107. C. Dunc. Trials per Pais, cap. 6. 1. Ventr. 113. Finch. Law 400. Further there is in Glanvil a writ for a jury of 8 to inquire into the age where infancy is alledged. Glanv. lib. 13. c. 14. 15. 16.—2. Instances, in which the law allows or requires more than twelve, are, attaint in which there must be 24, the great assise in which there must be 16, the grand jury for indictments which usually consist of some number between 12 and 23, and writ of inquiry of waste in which 13 have been allowed. Finch. Law 484. Spelm. Gloss. voce jurata. 2. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 161. and Cro. Cha. 414.

(*) Artic. super Cart. ca. 9.
Regist. 178. 8. E. 3. 39.

(*) First, hee ought to bee dwelling most neere to the place where the question is moved. (2)

Secondly, he ought to bee most sufficient both for understanding, and competencie of estate. (3)

Thirdly, he ought to bee least suspicious, that is, to be indifferent as he stands unsworne: and then hee is accounted in law liber & legalis homo; otherwise he may be challenged & not suffered to be sworne. (4)

The most usual triall of matters of fact is by 12 such men; for ad questionem facti non respondent iudices: and matters in law the judges ought to decide and discusse; for ad questionem juris non respondent iuratores. (5)

Vid. sect. 162. 193.

9. H. 6. 37.

[2] Vid. Artic. super Cart. ca. 9. Fortesc. ca. 25. &c. 29.

[f] Glanvil. lib. ca. 14. 15.
Bracton lib. 3. fol. 116. a.

[g] Lamb. verb. Centuria.

[h] Lamb. fol. 91. 3.

[i] W. 2. ca. 31. Vid. Stat. de 12. E. 2. de effou. calumniandis. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 37.
Britton fol. 6. a. 12. a. 118. & 134. 12. Ad. 10.

[j] Bract. lib. 3. fol. 137.

[k] Bract. lib. 4. fol. 257. Vet. N. B. fol. 76.

[e] For the institution and right use of this triall by 12 men, and wherefore other countries have them not, and how this triall excellis others, see Fortescue at large, cap. 25. &c. 29. [f] And in ancient time they were 12 knights. This trial of the fact per duodecim liberos & legales homines is very ancient; for heere what the law was before the conquest. [g] In singulis centuriis comitia sunt, atque liberae conditionis viri duodecim aetate superiores una cum praeposito sacra tenentes iurant, &c. Nay the tryall in some cases, per medietatem lingua, (as we speake) was as ancient. [h] Viri duodecim iure consulti, Angliae sex, Walliae totidem, Anglis & Wallis ius dicunt; and of ancient time it was called duodecim virale iudicium. (6)

Now seeing we are justly occasioned, and the rather for the (&c.) herein, to speak of a challenge to jurors, to make the studious reader capable of the understanding of the bookes of law concerning this matter, it shall be necessary to say somewhat of challenges; and first what a challenge is.

Challenge is a word common as well to the English as to the French, and sometime signifieth to claime, and the Latine word is vindicare; sometime in respect of revenge to challenge into the field, and then it is called in Latine vindicare or provocare; sometime in respect of partiality or insufficiency, to challenge in court persons returned on a jury. And seeing there is no proper Latin word to signify this particular kind of challenge, they have framed a word anciently written [a] calumniare, and calumpniare, and calumpnia, which is derived of that, for that is of a quite other sense, signifying a false accuser, and in that sense [b] Bracton useth calumniator to be a false accuser: but it is derived of the old word caloir or caloire, which in one signification is to care for or foresee. And for that to challenge jurors is the meane to care for or foresee, that an indifferent triall be had, it is called calumpniare, to challenge, that is to except against them that are returned to be jurors, & this is his proper signification. [c] But sometimes a summons, summonitio, is said to be calumpniata, and a count to be challenged,

(1) The words entre les auciens estatutes are here added in L. & M. Roh. and P.

(2) See post. 157. a. ant. 125. a. n. 2. This qualification is now become unnecessary in civil cases, the 4. An. c. 16. f. 6. & 7. directing that in them the jury shall be taken from the body of the county. See ant. 125. a. n. 2. and a learned tract by the late mr. serjeant Wynne, intitled a Dissertation on the writ de non ponendis in assis & juratis. See also 2. Inst. 447. & 561.

(3) See post. 156. a.

(4) Of other modes of trying facts besides that by jury, see ant. 74. a.

(5) This decanatum, as lord chief justice Vaughan calls it on account of its frequency in the books, about the respective provinces of judge and jury, hath, since lord Coke's time, become the subject of very heated controversy, especially on prosecutions for state-libels; some aiming to render juries wholly dependent on the judge for matters of law, and others contending for nearly a compleat and unqualified independence. On the trial of John Lilburne for treason in 1649 high words passed between the court and him, in consequence of his stating to the jury that they were judges both of law and fact, and citing passages in the Coke upon Littleton to prove it. 2. State Tr. 4th ed. 69. and post. 228. a. In the case of Penn and Meade, who in 1670 were indicted for unlawfully assembling the people and preaching to them, the jury gave a verdict against the directions of the court in point of law, and for this were committed to prison. But the commitment was questioned; and, on a habeas corpus brought in the court of common pleas, it was declared illegal; lord chief justice Vaughan distinguishing himself on the occasion by a most profound argument in favour of the rights of a jury. Bushell's case 1. Freem. 1. and Vaugh. 135. However the contest did not cease, as appears by sir John Hawles's famous dialogue between a barrister and a jurymen, which was published in 1680 to assert the claims of the latter against the then current doctrine decrying their authority. Since the revolution also many cases have occurred, in which there has been much debate on the like topic. See King v. Poole in Cal. B. R. temp. Hardwicke 23. Franklin's case 9. State Tr. 275. Peter Zenger's case 10. State Tr. p. 196. of Append. and Woodfall's case 5. Burr. 261. By attending to the cases before referred to, it will be easy to trace the progress of this controversy on the limits of the jury's province.

In respect to my own ideas on this subject, they are at present to this effect:

On the one hand, as the jury may, as often as they think fit, find a general verdict, I therefore think it unquestionable, that they so far may decide upon the law as well as fact, such a verdict necessarily involving both. In this I have the authority of Littleton himself, who hereafter writes, that if the inquest will take upon them the knowledge of the law upon the matter, they may give their verdict generally. Post. sect. 368. and fol. 228.

But on the other hand I think it seems clear, that questions of law generally and more properly belong to the judges; and that, exclusively of the fitness of having the law expounded by those who are trained to the knowledge of it by long study and practice, this appears from various considerations.—1. If the parties litigating agree in their facts, the cause can never go to a jury, but is tried on a demurrer; it being a rule, and I believe without exception, that issues in law are ever determined by the judges, and only issues of fact are tried by a jury. Ant. 71. b.—II. Even when an issue in fact is joined, and comes before a jury lenged, but this is improperly. And forasmuch as mens lives, names, lands, and goods, are to be tryed by jurors, it is most necessary, that they be omni exceptione majores; and therefore I will handle this matter the more largely.

A challenge to jurors is twofold, either to the array, or to the polls: to the array of the principall pannell, and to the array of the tales. And herein you shall understand, that the jurors names are ranked in the pannell one under another; which order or ranking the jurie is called the array, and the verbe, to array the jurie; and so we say in common speech, bataille array, for the order of the bataille. And this array we call arraimementum, and to make the array arraire derived of the French word arroier; so as to challenge the array of the pannell is at once to challenge or except against all the persons so arrayed or impannelled, in respect of the partialitie or default of the sherife, coroner, or other officer that made the returne.

And it is to be knowne, that there is a principall cause of challenge to the array, and a challenge to the favour.

Principall, in respect of partialitie. As first, if the sherife, or other officers be of [a] kindred, or affinitie (1), to the plaintife or defendant, or he himselfe (2) continue [b]. Secondly, if any one or more of the jurie bee returned at the denomination of the partie, plaintife or defendant, the whole array shall be quashed. So it is if the sherife returne any one, that he be more favourable to the one than to the other, all the array shall be quashed. [c] Thirdly, if the plaintife or defendant have an action of batterie against the sherife, or the sherife against either partie, this is a good cause of challenge. So if the plaintife or defendant have an action of debt against the sherife; (but otherwise it is if the sherife have an action of debt against either partie) or if the sherife have parcell of the land depending upon the same title [d]; or if the sherife, or his bailife which returned the jurie, be under the distresse of either party; or if the sherife or his bailife be either of counsell, attorney, officer in fee or of robes, or servant of either partie, gossip, or arbitrator in the same matter, and treated thereof. [e] And where a subject may challenge the array for unindifferencie, there the king being a partie may also challenge for the same cause, as for kindred, or that he hath part of the land, or the like: and where the array shall be challenged against the king, you shall reade in our bookes.

[f] By default of the sherife, as when the array of a pannell is returned by a bailife of a franchise, and the sherife returne it as of himselfe, this shall be quashed, because the partie should lose his challenges. But if a sherife returne a jurie within a libertie, this is good, and the lord of the franchise is driven to his remedie against him.

If a peere of the realme or lord of parliament be demandant or plaintife, tenant or defendant, there must a knight be returned of his jurie, be he lord spirituall or temporall, or else the array may be quashed [g]: but if he be returned, although he appeare not, yet the jurie may be taken of the residue. And if others be joynd with the lord of parliament, yet if there be no knight returned, the array shall be quashed against all. [h] So in an attaint there ought to be a knight returned of the jurie (3).

[i] And when the king is partie, as in travers of an office, he that traverseth may challenge the array, as hereafter in this section shall appeare; and so it is in case of life; and likewise the king may challenge the array: and this shall be tried by triors according to the usuall course. [k] The array challenged on both sides shall be quashed.

[l] And if two estrangers make a pannell and not in favourable manner for the one partie or the other, and the sherife returnes the same, the array was challenged for this cause, and adjudged good.

[m] If the bailife of a libertie returne any out of his franchise, the array shall be quashed, as an array returned by one that hath no franchise shall be quashed.

Challenge to the array for favour. [n] He, that taketh this, must shew in certaine the name of him that made it, and in whose time, and all in certainty. This kinde of challenge, being no principall challenge, must be left to the discretion and conscience of the triors. As if the plaintife or defendant be tenant to the sherife, this is no principall challenge; for the lord is in no danger of his tenant; but de converso it is a principall challenge; but in the other hee may challenge for favour, and leave it to triall. So affinitie betweene the sonne of the sherife and the daughter of the partie, or de converso, or the like, is no principall challenge, but to the favour: but if the sherife marrie the daughter of either partie, or de converso, this (as hath beene said) is a principall challenge, or the like. [o] But where the king is partie, one shall not challenge the array for favour, &c. because in respect of his allegiance he ought to favour the king more (4). But if the sherife be a vadelect of the crowne, or other meniall servant of the king, there the challenge is good (5). And likewise the king may challenge the array for favour.

Note, upon that which hath been said it appeareth, that the challenge to the array is in respect of the cause of unindifferencie or default in the sherife or other officer that made the returne,

(1) In the case of Mounson and West 1 Leon. 88. it was argued, that affinity was a challenge to the favour only; and to this two judges inclined at first; but after time taken to consider the point, it was adjudged to be a principal challenge by three judges, the 4th hesitating.

(2) Having issue living by the wife, though she is dead, is sufficient to continue the husband's affinity. Nor is it necessary, that the issue should be inheritable to the land, where land is the subject of the action. Both of these positions I infer from the case of Mounson and West before cited from 1. Leon. 88.

(3) By a statute of the late king no challenge can now be taken to any pannell for want of a knight in it. See 18. G. 2. c. 18. f. 4. This provision is made in general terms; but the recital, which precedes it, is confined to the inconveniences of such challenges where peers are parties.

(4) Acc. Keilw. 102. a. But lord Hale is of a different opinion; for he expressly allows challenges for favour to prisoners in treason and felony, and consequently so far against the king. 2. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 271. Though, too, lord Coke's doctrine should be admitted, the reason he gives for it, which is almost in the words of the case of 22. E. 4. cited in the margin from Fitzherbert's Abridgement, seems rather unsatisfactory. But a better principle to found the rule upon was not unobvious; namely, that from the extensive variety of the king's connections with his subjects through tenures and offices, if favour to him was to prevail as an exception to a juror, it might lead to an infinitude of objections, and so operate as a serious obstruction to justice in suits in which he is a party.

For the remainder of the notes of this page, see fol. 158. 2.

jury for trial, either party, by demurring to evidence, which includes an admission of the fact to which the evidence applies, may so far draw the cause from the cognizance of the jury; for in that case the law is reserved for the decision of the court from which the issue of fact comes, and the jury is either discharged, or at the utmost only ascertains the damages. Ant. 72. a. Dougl. Rep. 127. 213. Buller's Nisi Pri. 2d edition 313.—III. The jury is supposed to be so inadequate to finding out the law, that it is incumbent upon the judge, who presides at the trial, to inform them what the law is; and, as a check to the judge in the discharge of this duty, either party may under the statute of Westminster the 2d. c. 31. make his exception in writing to the judge's direction, and inforce its being made a part of the record, so as afterwards to found error upon it. See post. 2. Inst. 426. Trials per Pais, 8th ed. 222. 466. Case of Fabrigas and Mostyn in xi. State Trials. Case of Money and others v. Leach 3. Burr. 1742. Buller's Law of Nisi Pri. 2d ed. 315.—IV. The jury is ever at liberty to give a special verdict, the nature of which is to find the facts at large and leave the conclusion of law to the judges of the court from which the issue comes. Formerly indeed it was doubted, whether in certain cases, in which the issue was of a very limited and restrained kind, the jury was not bound to find a general verdict. But the contrary was settled in

[a] 12. Aff. 36. 26. Aff. 311.
3 E. 4. 12. 31. Aff. 7. 29. Aff.
2. 22. E. 4. 2. 12. E. 3. Chall.
114. 21. E. 3. 5. b. 3. H. 7.
5. Pl. Com. 73. 15. H. 7. 9.
7. E. 6. Dier 78. 12. H. 6.
Chall. 159. (Plowd. 425. 2.
Ro. Abr. 638.)
[b] 21. E. 4. 74. 49. E. 3. 1.
15. E. 3. 43. 22. E. 3. 12.
9. E. 4. 46. 8. H. 5. 5. 28. Aff.
22. 41. E. 3. Chall. 99. (2. Ro.
Abr. 640. Dy. 319.)
[c] 11. H. 4. 26. 22. E. 4. 1.
38. E. 3. 25. 38. H. 6. 6. (Mo. 3.)
[d] 14. E. 3. 5. & 38. 44. Aff.
23. 22. E. 4. 1. 3. H. 6. 39.
15. H. 7. 9. b. 27. Aff. 28.
7. H. 7. 10. 26. Aff. 56. 22.
20. H. 6. 34. 33. Aff. 12. 45.
Aff. 1. 9. Aff. 8. 8. Aff. 23.
7. E. 3. 56. 21. H. 7. 38. 2.
H. 4. 13. 44. E. 3. 43. 20. H. 6.
39. 44. Aff. 18. 3. H. 6. 24.
17. E. 2. Chall. 168. 4. E. 4. 11.
[e] 4. H. 7. 44. E. 3. 38. 38.
Aff. 19. 22. E. 4. Chall. 63.
Stamf. 162. c.
[f] 39. Aff. 2. 17. E. 3. 50.
17. Aff. 11. 30. Aff. 5. 8. Aff. 3.
[g] 13. E. 3. Chall. 115. Br.
Luquet. 100. 6. Co. 54.
Countess de Rutland's case Plow.
Com. 117. 27. H. 8. 22. 4 El.
Dier. 208. 8. Eliz. Di. 246.
14. Eliz. Dier 318. 10. Eliz.
Dier 265. b. (1. Leon. 5. 2. Ro.
Abr. 636.)
[h] 17. E. 2. Attain. 69.
[i] 32. E. 4. tit. Chall. 63. Stamf.
Pl. Cor. 19. Aff. 6. b. 4. H. 7.
8. 44. E. 3. 38. (2. Ro. Abr.
645.)
[k] 8. H. 4. 22. (Mo. 895.)
[l] 6. R. 2. Chall. 102. 13. E. 3.
ibid. 108.
[m] 32. E. 3. Chall. 110. 111.
32. Aff. 6. 38. Aff. 13.
[n] 31. H. 6. Chall. 69. 8.
H. 4. 22. 27. Aff. 20. 22. E. 3.
12. Vid. 26. Aff. 21. 38. H. 6.
9. 7. H. 6. 25. 19. H. 6. 48.
20. H. 6. 38. 20. E. 4. 2. 22.
E. 4. Chall. 62.
[o] 22. E. 4. Chall. 63. 4. H. 7. 8.

returne, and not in respect of the persons returned, where there is no unindifferencie or default in the sherife, &c. for if the challenge to the array be found against the partie that takes it, yet he shall have his particular challenge to the polls (1).

In some cases a challenge may be had to the polls, and in some cases not at all. Challenge to the polls is a challenge to the particular persons; and these be of foure kinds, that is to say, peremptorie, principall, which induce favour, and for default of hundredors.

[p] 1. H. 5. Chal. 162. 9. H. 5. 7. 15. E. 4. 32. 14. H. 7. 7. 19. Doct. & Stud. lib. 2. Fortescue cap. 27. 3. H. 7. 2. 2. R. 3. 13. 32. H. 6. 26. 17. Aff. 6. 37. H. 6. 8. 22. H. 8. ca. 14. 33. H. 8. tit. Chal. Br. 217. 33. H. 8. ca. 23. 1. & 2. P. & M. ca. 10. 23. H. 6. 26. 14. H. 7. 14. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 137. 138. (2. Inst. 227.)
* Hil. 1. Ja. R.

[p] Peremptorie, this is so called; because he may challenge peremptorily upon his owne dislike, without shewing of any cause; and this onely is in case of treason or felonie, in favorem vite. And by the common law the prisoner, upon an endictment or appeale, might challenge thirtie five, which was under the number of three juries. But now by the statute of 22. H. 8. the number is reduced to twentie in petite treason, murder and felonie; and in case of high treason, and misprision of high treason, it was taken away by the statute of 33. H. 8. but now by the statute of 1. & 2. Phil. & Maria, the common law is revived. For any treason, the prisoner shall have his challenge to the number of thirtie (2) five; and so it hath beene resolved * by the justices upon conference betweene them in the case of sir Walter Raleigh and George Brookes. But all this is to be understood when any subject that is not a peere of the realme is arraigned for treason or felonie. But if hee be a lord of parliament and a peere of the realme, and is to be tryed by his peeres, he shall not challenge any of his peeres at all; for they are not sworne as other jurors be, but finde the party guiltie or not guiltie upon their faith or allegiance to the king, and they are judges of the fact, and every of them doth separately give his judgement, beginning at the lowest. But a subject under the degree of nobilitie may in case of treason or felonie challenge for just cause as many as he can, as shall be said hereafter. In an appeale of death against divers they pleade not guiltie, and one joynt venire facias is awarded, if one challenge peremptorily, he shall be drawne against all. (3) Otherwise it is of severall venire fac.

9. E. 4. 27.

(1. Ventr. 309.)

[q] 33. E. 1. ordinatio de inquisitionibus. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 162.

Note that at the common law before the statute of 33. E. 1. the king might have challenged peremptorily without shewing cause, but only that they were not good for the king, and without being limited to any number. But this was mischievous to the subject, tending to infinite delays and danger. And therefore it is enacted, [q] quod de cetero licet pro domino rege dicatur, quod juratores, &c. non sunt boni pro rege; non propter hoc remaneant inquisitiones, &c. sed assignentur certam causam calumnie sue, &c. whereby the king is now restrained. (4)

Principall, so called, because if it be found true, it standeth sufficient of it selfe without leaving any thing to the conscience or discretion of the triors. Of a principall cause of challenge to the array, we have said somewhat already. Now it followeth with like brevitie to speake of principall challenges to the polles, (that is) severally to the persons returned.

Principall challenges to the poll may be reduced to foure heads: first, propter honoris respectum, for respect of honour: secondly, propter defectum, for want or default: thirdly, propter affectum, for affection or partialitie: fourthly, propter delictum, for crime or delict.

6. Co. 52. 53. Countesse de Rutland's case. 48. E. 3. 30. 48. Aff. 6. 35. H. 6. 46. 22. Aff. 24. F. N. B. 165. D. E. & 166. Regill. 179. (1. Sid. 277.)

I. Propter honoris respectum, as any peere of the realme, or lord of parliament, as a baron, viscount, earle, marquisse, and duke; for these in respect of honour and nobilitie, are not to be sworne on juries; and if neither partie will challenge him, he may challenge himselfe, for by Magna Charta it is provided, quod nec super eum ibimus, nec super eum mittimus, nisi per legale iudicium parium suorum, aut per legem terre. Now the common law hath divided all the subjects into lords of parliament, and into the commons of the realme. The peers of the realme are divided into barons, viscounts, earles, marquisse and dukes. The commons are divided into knights, esquires, gentlemen, citizens, yeomen, and burgessees. And in judgement of law any of the said degrees of nobilitie are peers to another. As if an earle, marquisse, or duke, be to be tried for treason or felonie, a baron or any other degree of nobilitie is his peere. In like manner, a knight, esquire, &c. shall be tried per pares; and that is by any of the commons, as gentlemen, citizens, yeomen, or burgessees; so as when any of the commons is to have a tryall either at the king's suit, or betweene partie and partie, a peere of the realme shall not be impanelled in any case.

[a] 7. Co. 18. Calvin's case. 10. Co. 104. 14. H. 4. 19. b.
[b] Bract. fo. 185. Brit. fo. 135. Flet. li. 4. ca. 8. 26. Aff. 28. 3. H. 6. 39. 9. E. 4. 16. b. 21. H. 6. 20. 10. H. 7. 20.
[c] Vid. sect. 464. 38. Aff. 19. 17. Aff. 15. 4. H. 6. 28. 9. H. 5. 5. 10. H. 6. 7. 8. 18. 2. H. 7. 1. 10. H. 7. 14. 19. H. 6. 9. 7. H. 6. 25. 40. 44. 12. E. 4. 13. 3. H. 4. 4.
(See the statutes of 23. H. 8. 13. and 4. & 5. W. & M. 24.)
* 9. H. 6. Chal. 27. 9. H. 7. 1. (2. Ro. Abr. 647. Post. 272. Fortesc. 56. 62. a.)

II. Propter defectum,

1. Patriæ, [a] as aliens borne.

2. Libertatis, [b] as villeins or bondmen, and so a champion must be a freeman.

3. Anni census, i. liberi tenementi. [c] First, what yearly freehold a juror ought to have that passeth upon triall of the life of a man, or in a plea real, or in a plea personal, where the debt or damage in the declaration amounteth to fortie markes, vide sect. 464. (5) * Secondly, this freehold must be in his owne right, in fee simple, fee taile, for terme of his owne life, or for another man's life, although it be upon condition, or in the right of his wife, out of ancient demesne, for freehold within ancient demesne will not serve. But if the debt or damage amounteth

(1) Nota, on writ of right the pannel returned by the four knights shall not be challenged, but challenge ought to be taken before the four knights before the pannel made. H. 30. El. B. R. Pigott and Clarke. Hal. MSS.—See acc. post. 158. a. 294. a. Mo. 67. and Gouldsb. 23.

(2) Agreed acc. in petty treason in Swan's case, Fost. 107.

(3) Adj. acc. Plowd. 100.

(4) But according to the construction made of this statute or ordinance the king is not bound to shew cause of challenge till all the pannel is called over, and not then unless from challenges or otherwise the jury is incompleat. See State Tri. 4th ed. v. 3. p. 468. v. 4. p. 423. v. 5. p. 195. See further on this point sir John Hawles's Remarks on Trials in State Tri. 4th ed. v. 3. p. 169.

(5) See also a learned dissertation on the writ de non ponendis in assis et juratis in the Miscellany of Law-Tracts by the late Mr. Serjeant Wynne, p. 62 to 74. See too 1. Ventr. 366. and sir John Hawles's Remarks on Trials, in State Trials 4th ed. v. 3. p. 169. 187.

in Dowman's case 9. Co. 11. b. and the rule now holds both in criminal and civil cases without exception. See post. 227. b. Staundf. Pl. C. 165. a. Major Onby's case 2. L. Raym. 1494.—V. Whilst arraints, which still subsist in law, were in use, it was hazardous in a jury to find a general verdict, where the case was doubtful, and they were apprized of it by the judges; because if they mistook the law, they were in danger of an attain. Post 228. a. Hob. 227. Vaugh. 144. 2. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. 310. Gilb. Com. Pl. 2d. edition 128.—VI. If the jury find the facts specially, and add their conclusion as to the law, it is not binding on the judges; but they have a right to controul the verdict and declare the law as they conceive it to be. At least this is the language of some most respectable authorities. Staundf. Pl. C. 165. a. Plowd. 114. a. b. 4. Co. 42. b. Hal. Hist. Pl. C. v. 1. p. 471. 476. 477. and v. 2. p. 302.—VII. The courts have long exercised the power of granting new trials in civil cases, where the jury find against that which the judge trying the cause or the court at large holds to be law, or where the jury find a general verdict and the court conceives that on account of difficulty of law there ought to have been a special one. King v. Poole Caf. B. R. temp. Hardwicke 26. Though too in criminal and penal cases the judges do not claim such a discretion against persons acquitted, the reason I presume is in respect of the rule that nemo bis puniatur aut vexatur pro eodem delicto, or the hardship which would arise from allowing a person to be twice put in jeopardy for one offence; and if this be so, it only shews, that on that account an exception is made to a general rule. 4. Blackst. 5th ed. 361. 2. L. Raym. 1585. 2. Stra. 899. 4. Co. 40. a. and Wingate's Maxims, 695.

Upon the whole, as my mind is affected with this interesting subject, the result is, that the immediate and direct right of deciding upon questions of law is entrusted to the judges; that in a jury it is only incidental; that in the exercise of this incidental right the latter are not only placed under the superintendence of the former, but are in some degree controulable by them;

mounteth not to fortie marks, any freehold sufficeth. [d] Thirdly, he must have freehold in that countie where the cause of the action ariseth; and though he hath in another, it sufficeth not (1). [e] Fourthly, if after his returne he selleth away his land, or if cessy que vie or his wife dieth, or an entry be made for the condition broken, so as his freehold be determined, he may be challenged for insufficiencie of freehold (2).

4. Hundredorum. First, by the common law, in a plea recall mixt and perſonal, there ought to be foure of the hundred (where the cause of action ariseth) returned for their better notice of the cause; for vicini vicinorum facta preſumuntur ſcire (3). And now ſince Littleton wrote [f] in a plea perſonall, if two hundredors appeare, it ſufficeth (4); and in an attainr, [g] although the jury is double, yet the hundredors are not double. Secondly, [b] if he hath either freehold in the hundred, though it be to the value but of halfe an acre, or if he dwell there, though hee hath no freehold in it, it ſufficeth. [i] Thirdly, if the cause of the action riſeth in divers hundreds, yet the number ſhal ſuffice, as if it had come out of one, and not ſeverall hundredors out of each hundred. [k] Fourthly, if there be divers hundreds within one leet or rape, if he hath any freehold, or dwell in any of thoſe hundreds, though not in the proper hundred, it ſufficeth. [l] Fifthly, if the jury come de corpore comitatũs, or de proximo hundredo, where the one partie is lord of the hundred, or the like, there need no hundredors be returned at all. [m] Sixtly, if a hundredor after he be returned ſell away his land within that hundred, yet ſhall he not be challenged for the hundred, for that this notice remaines. Otherwiſe as hath bin ſaid for his insufficiencie of freehold; for his feare to offend, and to have lands waſted, &c. which is one of the reaſons of law, is taken away. [n] Seventhly, he that challengeth for the hundred muſt ſhew in what hundred it is, and not drive the other partie to ſhew it. Eightly, his challenge for the hundred is not ſimpliciter but ſecundũ quid; for, though it bee found that he hath nothing in the hundred, yet ſhall not he be drawne, but remaine prater H. that is, beſides for the hundred; and albeit he dwelleth or have land in the hundred, yet muſt he have ſufficient freehold.

III. Propter affectum: And this is of two forts, either working a principall challenge, or to the favour. And againe a principall challenge is of two forts, either by judgement of law without any act of his, or by judgement of law upon his owne act.

And it is ſaid that a principall challenge is, when there is expreſſe favor or expreſſe malice.

1. Without any act of his, as if the juror bee [a] of blood or kindred to either partie, conſanguineus, which is compounded ex con & ſanguine, quaſi eodem ſanguine natus, as it were iſſued from the ſame blood; and this is a principall challenge, for that the law preſumeth that one kiſman doth favour another before a ſtranger; [b] and how farre remote ſo ever he is of kindred, yet the challenge is good. And if the plaintife challenge a juror for kindred to the defendant, it is no counter plea to ſay that he is of kindred alſo to the plaintife, though hee bee in a neerer degree; for the words of the venire facias forbiddeth the juror to be of kindred to either partie.

[c] If a body politick or incorporate, ſole or aggregate of many, bring any action that concerns their body politick or incorporate, if the juror be of kindred to any that is of that body (although the body politick or incorporate can have no kindred) yet for that thoſe bodies conſiſt of naturall perſons, it is a principall challenge. [d] A baſtard cannot be of kindred to any, (5) and therefore it can be no principall challenge. And here it is to be knowne, that affinitas, affinity, hath in law two ſenſes. In his proper ſenſe it is taken for that neerneſſe that is gotten by marriage. Cũ duæ cognationes inter ſe diſiſe per nuptias copulantur, & altera ad alterius ſines accedit, & inde dicitur affinis. In a larger ſenſe affinitas is taken alſo for conſanguinitie and kindred, as in the writ of venire facias, and otherwiſe. [e] Affinity or alliance by marriage is a principall challenge, and equivalent to conſanguinity when it is betweene either of the parties, as if the plaintife or defendant marry the daughter or couſin of the juror, or the juror marry the daughter or couſin of the plaintife or defendant, and the ſame continues, or iſſue be (6) had. But if the ſon of the juror hath married the daughter of the plaintife, this is no principall challenge, but to the favour; becauſe it is not betweene the parties. Much more may be ſaid hereof; ſed ſumma ſequor ſaſtigia rerum.

[f] If there be a challenge for colinage, he that taketh the challenge muſt ſhew how the juror is couſin. But yet if the colinage, that is the effect and ſubſtance, be found, it ſufficeth; for the law preferreth that which is materiall before that which is formall.

[g] If the juror have part of the land that dependeth upon the ſame title. (7)

[h] If a juror be within the hundred, (8) leet, or any way within the ſeigniori immediately or mediately, or any other diſtreſſe of either party, this is a principall challenge. But if either party be within the diſtreſſe of the juror, this is no principall challenge, but to the favour.

[i] If a witneſſe named in the deed (9) be returned of the jury, it is a good cauſe of challenge of him. [k] So it is if one within age of one and twenty bee returned, it is a good cauſe of challenge.

[d] 19. H. 6. 9. 17. Aff. 15.

[e] 12. H. 7. 4. 21. H. 6. 38. 7. H. 4. 1. (Poſt. 272. b.)

(2. Ro. Abr. 636. Fortefe. 56. b. Poſt. 158. a.)

[f] 27. Eliz. ca. 6.

[g] 7. H. 4. 47.

[h] 16. E. 4. 7. 4. Mar. Br. Chal. 216. 21. E. 4. 74. 75. 9. H. 6. 66.

[i] 20. H. 6. 23. 4. Mar. Br. Chal. 216.

[k] 10. H. 6. 5. 12. H. 4. 14. 19. E. 4. 5.

[l] 37. H. 6. 11. 25. E. 3. 43. (Cro. Jam. 550.)

[m] 21. H. 6. 38. 12. H. 7. 4.

[n] 7. Eliz. Dyer 231.

Bract. fo. 185. Brit. fo. 134. 135. Fleta lib. 4. ca. 8. 21. E. 4. 11. 12.

[a] Britton fol. 135.

[b] Mirror ca. 3. de ordinance d'attaint.

Bracton } ubi ſupra.

Britton }

Fleta }

14. El. Dier 319. 21. E. 4. 75.

40. Aff. 20. Pl. Com. fo. 41. E.

3. Chal. 99. 21. E. 4. 75.

[c] 7. E. 4. 4. 17. E. 4. 7. 21.

E. 4. 20. 28. H. 6. 10. 28. Aff.

18. 34. Aff. 6. Hob. 87. 1. Saund.

344.

[d] 41. E. 3. Chal. 99. 41. E. 3.

9. 26. H. 6. Chal. 163.

[e] Mirror

Bracton }

Britton }

Fleta }

2. E. 4. 14. 21. E. 3. 5. 41. 49.

E. 3. Chal. 93. 43. Aff. 25. 26.

22. E. 4. 2. 14. H. 7. 2. 15. H.

7. 9.

[f] 19. H. 8. 7. 28. H. 8.

Dier 37. 1. Mariae Dyer 91.

2. Eliz. ibid. 177.

[g] Bracton }

Britton }

Fleta }

Mirror ubi ſupra.

[h] 9. H. 6. tit. Chal. 27. 38. E.

3. 25. 22. E. 4. Chal. 61. 4. H.

6. 25. 3. H. 6. 39. 36. H. 6.

Chal. 46. 22. E. 4. 1. 27. Aff.

28. 22. E. 3. 12.

[i] 23. Aff. 11.

[k] Mirror ubi ſupra.

2. Upon

(1) Vid. acc. per omnes juſticiarios M. 29. 30. Eliz. Clench 139.—Hal. MSS.

(2) See ant. 102. b.

(3) See Brownl. Rep. b. 194.

(4) And now by the 4. An. c. 16. & 24. G. 2. c. 18. the jury muſt be taken from the body of the county in actions or ſuits in the king's courts of record at Weſtmiſter, and in actions or informations on penal ſtatutes. But appeals of felony or murder, and indictments or preſentments of treaſon felony murder or other matter, are excepted from this proviſion; and therefore in them hundredors are ſtill in ſtriſtneſſe neceſſary.—It is obſervable, that the 24. G. 2. by which this alteration was made as to actions on penal ſtatutes, names the counties palatine of Lancaster Cheſter and Durham, and Wales, as well as Weſtmiſter. But in the 4. of An. only the latter place is mentioned.—See further on the ſubject of hundredors ant. 125. a. note 2. to which add 1. P. Wms. 207. and a caſe on the 4. Ann. in Mr. Serj. Wynne's Miſcell. Law Tracts 60.

(5) See ant. 123. a.

(6) But the iſſue muſt be living. See ant. 156. a. n.

(7) Here the ſenſe is incompleat; but I apprehend, that lord Coke means to give the exception as a principal challenge.

(8) Acc. Dy. 176. a.

(9) See ant. 6. a.

them; and therefore that in all points of law ariſing on a trial, juries ought to ſhew the moſt reſpectful deference to the advice and recommendation of judges. In favour of this concluſion the conduct of juries bears ample teſtimony; for to their honour it ſhould be remembered, that the examples of their reſiſting the advice of a judge in points of law are rare, except where they have been provoked into ſuch an oppoſition by the groſſneſſe of his own miſconduct, or betrayed into an unjuſt ſuſpicion of his integrity by the miſrepresentation and ill practice of others. In civil caſes, particularly where the title to real property is in queſtion, juries almoſt univerſally find a ſpecial verdict as often as the judge recommends their ſo doing; and though in criminal caſes ſpecial verdicts are not frequent, it is not from any averſeneſſe to them in juries, but from the nature of criminal cauſes, which generally depend more upon the evidence of facts than any difficulty of law. Nor is it any ſmall merit in this arrangement, that in conſequence of it every perſon accuſed of a civil crime is enabled by the general plea of not guilty to have the benefit of a trial, in which the judge and jury are a check upon each other; and that this benefit may be always enjoyed, except in ſuch ſmall

[1] 8. H. 5. 10. 33. H. 6. 1. 10.
H. 6. 24. 7. H. 4. 11. 18. E. 4.
12. 21. E. 4. 74. 11. R. 2. tit.
Challenge 106. 27. Aff. 13.
[m] 43. E. 3. Chal. 93. 8. H. 5.
10.

[n] Mirror ubi supra. Brit. fo.
12. 11. Aff. 36. 8. H. 4. 2.
7. E. 4. 4. 12. Aff. 26. 19. Aff.
6. 40. Aff. 10. 25. E. 3. c. 3.
[o] 40. Aff. 20. 2. H. 4. 15. 10.
H. 6. Chal. 40. 7. H. 6. 40. 19.
H. 6. 66. 4. E. 4. 11. 7. E. 4. 4.
[p] 20. H. 6. 39. 9. E. 4. 46. 35.
H. 6. 19. H. 6. 3. H. 6. 24. 7.
H. 7. 10. (2. Ro. Abr. 665.)
[q] 9. Co. 71. Peacock's case

[r] Mirror } ubi supra.
Bracton }
Britton } 12. Aff. 36.
16. Aff. 56. 28. Aff. 19. 31. Aff.
7. 44. Aff. 18.
[s] 13. H. 4. 13. 11. R. 2. Chal.
164.

[t] Bracton } ubi supra.
Fleta } 44. E. 3. 5. 38.
44. Aff. 23. 8. E. 3. 25. 43. E.
3. 31. 22. E. 4. 1. 38. H. 6. 6.
43. E. 3. Chal. 93. 11. H. 4. 26.
11. H. 6. 15. 32. E. 3. Chal. 189.
24. E. 3. 37. 39. Aff. 2. 20. Aff.
11. 43. Aff. 46.
[u] 17. Aff. 15.
[v] 8. E. 3. 39. 20. H. 6. 39.
33. H. 8. Dyer 48. (Post. 379. a.
Hob. 294.)

[x] 22. Eliz. Dyer 367.
Bracton } ubi supra.
Britton }
Fleta }
[y] 49. E. 3. 1.
[z] 9. E. 4. 6. 21. E. 4. 31. 22.
E. 4. 3. 14. H. 6. 2. 20. E. 4. 2.
3. H. 7. 5. 22. Eliz. Dyer 367.
(2. Ro. Abr. 644. 668. 669. Cro.
Jam. 547. Post. 320. b. Plowd.
74. a. Hob. 64.)

[b] Mirror ca. 3. d'ordinance d'attaint. Bract. lib. 4. fol. 185.
Britt. fol. 134. 135. Fleta lib. 4.
c. 8. 7. H. 6. 25.
[c] 9. H. 7. 3. 10. H. 7. 20. 3.
H. 7. 2. 10. E. 4. 12. 15. E. 4.
18. 12. Aff. 23. (1. Ro. Rep.
328. Cro. Jam. 547.)

[d] 6. R. 2. Chal. 141. 19. Aff.
6. 38. Aff. 22. 11. R. 2. Chal.
165. 4. H. 5. ibid. 153.
(1. Sid. 244.)

[1] Upon his own act, as if the juror hath given a verdict before for the same cause, albeit it be reversed by writ of error, or if after verdict, judgement were arrested. So if hee hath given a former verdict upon the same title or matter though betweene other persons. [m] But it is to be observed, that I may speake once for all, that in this or other like cases, hee that taketh the challenge must shew the record if he will have it take place as a principall challenge; otherwise he must conclude to the favour (1), unlesse it be a record of the same court, and then he must shew the day and terme.

[n] So likewise one may be challenged, that he was inditor of the plaintife or defendant, either of treason, felony, misprision, trespassse, or the like in the same cause.

[o] If the juror be godfather to the child of the plaintife or defendant, or à converse, this is allowed to be a good challenge in our bookes (2).

[p] If a juror hath bene an arbitrator chosen by the plaintife or defendant in the same cause, and have bene informed of, or treated of the matter, this is a principall challenge. Otherwise if he were never informed, nor treated thereof; and otherwise if hee were indifferently chosen by either of the parties, though he treated thereof. But a [q] commissioner chosen by one of the parties for examination of witnesses in the same cause, is no principall cause of challenge; for he is made by the king under the great seale, (3) and not by the partie, as the arbitrator is; but he may upon cause be challenged for favour.

[r] If hee be of counsell, servant, or of robes, or fee of either partie, it is a principall challenge. (4)

[s] If any after he be returned do eate and drinke at the charge of either partie, it is a principall cause of challenge (5). Otherwise it is of a trior after he be sworne.

[t] Actions brought, either by the juror against either of the parties, or by either of the parties against him, which imply malice or displeasure, are causes of principall challenge; unlesse they be brought by covyn either before or after the returne; for if covin be found, then it is no cause of challenge. Other actions, which doe not imply malice or displeasure, are but to the favour.

[u] In a cause, where the parson of a parish is partie, and the right of the church commeth in debate, a parishioner is a principall challenge. Otherwise it is in debt, or any other action where the right of the church commeth not in question.

[v] If either partie labour the juror, and give him any thing to give his verdict, this is a principall challenge. But if either partie labour the juror to appeare and to doe his conscience, this is no challenge at all, but lawfull for him to do it. (6)

[x] That the juror is a fellow servant with either partie is no principall challenge, but to the favour.

[y] Neither of the parties can take that challenge to the polls, which he might have had to the array.

[z] Note, if the defendant may have a principall cause of challenge to the array, if the sherife returne the jury, the plaintife in that case may for his owne expedition alledge the same, and pray proceffe to the coroners; which he cannot have, unlesse the defendant will confesse it; but if the defendant will not confesse it, then the plaintife shall have a venire facias to the sherife, and the defendant shall never take any challenge for that cause (7), and so in like cases. But on the part of the defendant any such matter shall not bee alledged, and proceffe prayed to the coroners; because he may challenge the jury for that cause, and can be at no prejudice.

[b] Challenge concluding to the favour, when either partie cannot take any principall challenge, but sheweth causes of favour, which must be left to the conscience and discretion of the triors upon hearing their evidence to finde him favourable or not favourable. But yet some of them come neerer to a principall challenge then other. [c] As if the juror be of kindred, or under the distresse of him in the reversion or remainder, or in whose right the avowrie or justification is made, or the like, these be no principall challenges; because he in reversion, remainder, or in whose right the avowrie or justification is, is not partie to the recorde; otherwise it is if they were made parties by aide, receipt, or voucher: and yet the cause of favour is apparent, so it is of all principall causes, if they were partie to the record. Now the causes of favour are infinite; and thereof somewhat may be gathered of that which hath been said, and the rest I purposely leave the reader to the reading of our bookes concerning that matter. For all which the rule of law is, that he must stand indifferent as hee stands unsworne.

[d] The subject may challenge the polles, where the king is partie. And if a man bee outlawed of treason or felony, at the suit of the king, and the partie for avoyding thereof alledgeth imprisonment, or the like, at the time of the outlawry; though the issue bee joyned upon a collateral point, yet shall the partie have such challenges as if he had been arraigned upon the crime it self, for this by a meane concerneth his life also (8).

IV. Propter

(1) Acc. 2. Brownl. 168.

(2) See Mo. 3.

(3) See an instance of such a commission in Cro. Jam. 65.

(4) See ant. 156. a. n. 4.

(5) The same thing avoids a verdict. Post. 227. b.

(6) Yet labouring a jury, though it be but to appear, is afterwards stated to amount to the crime of maintenance in a third person. Post. 369. a. Here indeed the author qualifies the labouring to appear by supposing it to be to do his conscience. But this addition of words seems a slight ground for a difference of construction.

(7) Held accordingly Hutt. 22.

(8) Staundford is of the same opinion, citing for authorities from Fitzherbert's Abridgement the cases of 11. R. 2. & 4. H. 5. here referred to by lord Coke. Staundf. Pl. C. 163. a. However the benefit of peremptory challenges on collateral issues in capital cases has been denied by the practice of latter times. Case of Okey and others East. 14. Ch. 2. 1. Lev. 61. Johnston's case Mich. 2. G. 2. Post. 46. Mr. Ratcliffe's case Mich. 20. G. 2. Post. 40.—In the report of the case last cited, lord Hale is referred to as an authority for disallowing such challenges. But lord Hale is not absolute in his opinion; and Staundford, whom lord Hale cites, not only writes with a quære in the part so cited, but in a subsequent passage gives an opinion in favour of the challenge. Staundf. Pl. C. 158. a. 163. a.

small offences as are left to the summary jurisdiction of a justice of the peace; which exception from the necessity of the times is continually increasing, but which however cannot be too cautiously extended to new objects.—Thus considered, the distinction between the office of judge and jury seems to claim our utmost respect. May this wise distribution of power between the two long continue to flourish, unspoiled, either by the proud incroachment of ill-designing judges, or the wild presumption of licentious juries.

It would be wrong to conclude this note, without referring the reader to the very forcible reasoning on the same subject, in a modern work, which contains much general legal instruction elegantly conveyed. See "EUNOMUS, or Dialogues concerning the Law and Constitution of England," vol. 3. p. 196.

(6) See further on the origin of English juries, Spelm. Gloss. voc. jurata, Dissertat. Epistolar. in Ling. Septentrion. Thesaur. Hicke. Stiernh. de jure Sueon. et Goth. vetust. lib. 1. c. 3. and Dr. Pettingal's Enquiry into the Use and Practice of Juries amongst the Greeks and Romans.

IV. Propter delictum. [a] As if the juror be attainted or convicted of treason, or felony, or for any offence to life or member, or in attain for a false verdict, or for perjury as a witness, or in a conspiracy at the suite of the king, or in any suite (either for the king, or for any subject) be adjudged to the pillory, tumbrell, or the like, or to be branded, or to be stigmatique, or to have any other corporall punishment whereby he becommeth infamous, (for it is a maxime in law repellitur à sacramento infamis) these and the like are principall causes of challenge. So it is if a man be outlawed in trespassse, debt, or any other action, (1) for he is exlex, and therefore is not legalis homo. And old bookes have said, that, if he be excommunicated, he could not be of a jury.

[f] See the statutes of W. 2. and artic. supra cartas, what persons the sherife ought to returne on juries. And see F. N. B. breve de non ponendis in assisis & juratis, (2) and the register in the same writ. And see there what remedy the party hath that is returned against law.

It is necessarie to be knowne the time when the challenge is to be taken. [g] First, hee that hath divers challenges must take them all at once, and the law so requireth indifferent trialls, as divers challenges are not accounted double. [h] Secondly, if one be challenged by one party, if after he be tried indifferent, it is time enough for the other party to challenge him. [i] Thirdly, after challenge to the array, and triall duely returned, if the same party take a challenge to the polls, hee must shew cause presently. [k] Fourthly, so if a juror be formerly sworn, if he be challenged, he must shew cause presently, and that cause must rise since he was sworne. [l] Fifthly, when the king is party or in an appeale of felony, the defendant, that challengeth for cause, must shew his cause presently. Sixthly, if a man in case of treason or felony challenge for cause, and he be tried indifferent, yet he may challenge him peremptorily. Seventhly, a challenge for the hundred must be taken before so many be sworne, as will serve for hundredors, or else hee loseth the advantage thereof. Eighthly, [m] in a writ of right, the graund jury must be challenged before the foure knights before they be returned in court; (3) for after they be returned in court, there cannot any challenge be taken unto them. Ninthly, nota [n] The array of the tales shall not be challenged by any one party, untill the array of the principall be tried; but if the plaintife challenge the array of the principall, the defendant may challenge the array of the tales. After one hath taken a challenge to the polle, he cannot challenge the array.

Now it is to be seene, how challenges to the array of the principall pannell, or of the tales, or of the polles shall be tried, and who shall be triors of the same, and to whom proceffe shall be awarded.

1. [o] If the plaintife alledge a cause of challenge against the sherife, the proceffe shall be directed to the coroners; if any cause against any of the coroners, proceffe shall be awarded to the rest; if against all of them, then the court shall appoint certaine elisors or esliors (so named ab eligendo) because they are named by the court, against whose returne no challenge shall be taken to the array, because they were appointed by the court; but hee may have his challenge to the (4) polles. [p] Note, if proceffe be once awarded for the partiality of the sherife, though there be a new sherife, yet proceffe shall never be awarded to him; for the entrie is, Ita quod vicecomes se non intromittat. But otherwise it is, for that he was tenant to either partie, or the like.

2. [q] If the array be challenged in court, it shall be tryed by two of them that be impannelled to be appointed by the court; for the triors in that case shall not exceed the number of two, unlesse it be by consent. But when the court names two for some speciall cause alledged by either partie, the court may name others. If the array be quashed, then proceffe shall be awarded, ut supra.

[r] If a pannell upon a venire facias be returned, and a tales, and the array of the principall is challenged, the triors, which try and quash the array, shall not try the array of the tales; for now it is as if there had beene no appearance of the principall pannell: but if the triors affirme the array of the principall, then they shall try the array of the tales. If the plaintife challenge the array of the principall, and the defendant the array of the tales, there the one of the principall, and the other of the tales, shall try both arrays. For other matter concerning the tales, see [s] in my Reports matters worthy of observation (5). [t] When any challenge is made to the polls, two triors shall be appointed by the court; and if they trie one indifferent, and he be sworne, then he and the two triors shall try another; and if another be tried indifferent, and he be sworne, then the two triors cease, and the two that be sworne on the jury shall try the rest. [u] If the plaintife challenge ten, and the defendant one, and the twelfth is sworne, because one cannot try alone, there shall be added to him one challenged by the plaintife, and the other by the defendant. When the triall is to be had by two counties, the manner of the triall is worthy of observation, and apparant in our [v] books. [x] If the foure knights in the writ of right be challenged they shall try themselves (6), and they shall choofe the

(1) It has been questioned, whether outlawry in a personal action is sufficient to disqualify from being a juror; and in Sir William Wirhepole's case, Mich. 3. Cha. 1. the court of king's bench was divided on this point. Cro. Cha. 135. W. Jo. 198. and Ley's Rep. 81.

(2) See the late Mr. Serj. Wynne's Dissertation upon this writ in his Miscellany of Law Tracts, p. 56.

(3) Acc. ant. 156. b. & post. 294. a.

(4) See further on awarding venires to coroners and on appointing elisors, Umfrev. Lex Coronator. 235. to 242.

(5) See also Trials per Pais, chap. 5.

(6) Acc. post. 294. a.

Continuation of the notes of fol. 156. a.

(5) Lord Coke having immediately before expressed, that the array shall not be challenged for favor against the king, he must be here understood to consider being a vadelet or other menial servant of the crown, as a principal challenge to the array; for otherwise he would be inconsistent; unless, indeed, he is supposed in the first instance to state a general rule and in the second an exception to it, which, as his words are, would be a strained construction. It is also strong evidence of lord Coke's intending to give this challenge to the array as a principal one, that he elsewhere represents being a servant of either party where the suit is between subjects as a principal challenge both to the array and to the polls. See supra and also post. 157. b. However, lord Hale will not allow this sort of exception to a juror to be more than a challenge to the favor in trials for treason or felony; citing for authority from Fitzherbert's Abridgement a case in 3. H. 6. which is a decision in point by the whole court; to which may be added the dictum in the Year-Book of 4. Hen. 7. 3. Also the practice since lord Hale's time seems to have accorded with his doctrine, there being subsequent instances in print in which such an exception when taken to the polls has been disavowed, but not one I believe of its being received. The instances of disallowing the exception as a principal challenge, to which I shall refer, are Mr. Hampden's trial in the king's-bench, Hill. 36. Cha. 2. for a misdemeanor, and Sir William Parkyns's at the Old Bailey in 1695 for high treason. See State Tri. 4th ed. v. 3. p. 825. and v. 4. p. 633. In the former the point was sharply argued on challenges by Mr. Hampden of two jurors for having offices in the king's forest; and as the counsel for Mr. Hampden relied on lord Coke and on Rolle's Abridgement of the Case of 22. E. 4. here cited by lord Coke in the margin as the ground of his doctrine, so the court adjudged against the exception as a principal challenge on the authority of the case of 3. H. 6. cited by lord Hale. In the latter Sir William Parkyns challenged two for being

[c] Mirror
Bracton } ubi supra.
Britton }
Fleta }

11. H. 4. 41. 12. H. 4. 10. 33.
H. 6. 21. (2. Ro. Abr. 650.)

[f] W. 2. ca. 38. Artic. super cart. ca. 9. F. N. B. 165. & 166.
Registr.

[g] 9. E. 4. 16. 10. H. 5. 9. 37.
H. 6. 8. 3. H. 6. 38. Brooke tit.
Chal. 8. 7. H. 6. 40. 14. H. 7. 5.
6.

[h] 9. E. 4. 16. 27. H. 8. 2.

[i] 43. E. 3. Chal. 93. 20. E. 3.

ibid. 116. 22. E. 4. ibid. 61.

7. H. 4. 41. 3. El. Dower 201.

[k] 22. E. 4. 1. 9. H. 5. 6.

[l] 1. H. 5. 10. 38. Aff. 22.

(Ant. 157. 2.)

[m] 7. H. 4. 20. 15. E. 4. 1.

[n] 9. E. 4. 27. 9. H. 5. 11. 34.

Aff. 6. 13. E. 3. Chal. 108.

[o] 18. E. 4. 8. (Fortesc. 55.)

[p] 15. H. 7. 9. 14. H. 7. 31.

18. E. 4. 3.

[q] 29. Aff. 3. 19. H. 6. 48.

21. H. 6. Chal. 38. 33. H. 6. 21.

4. E. 4. 17. 43. E. 3. Chal. 95.

2. R. 2. ibid. 101. 34. Aff. 6.

27. Aff. 28. 43. Aff. 26.

[r] 9. E. 4. 46. 19. H. 6. 48.

34. Aff. 6. 7. E. 6. Dier 78. 9.

H. 5. 11.

[s] 10. Co. 104. 105. Denbawd's

case.

[t] 19. H. 6. 9. 22. E. 4. Chal.

61. 62.

[u] 7. H. 4. 41.

[v] 11. H. 4. 61. 48. E. 3. 30.

11. H. 4. 63.

[x] 22. E. 3. 18. 39. E. 3. 2.

[y] 49. E. 3. 1. 2. (Hob. 84. 1. Sid. 374. 232. Cro. Jam. 388. 1. Ro. Rep. 110.)

[z] 2. H. 4. 14. 4. E. 4. 3. 10. 1. 3. 32. 22. Aff. 28. 31. 31. H. 6. 56. 16. Aff. 1. 5. E. 5. 35. 36.

[a] 8. H. 5. tit. Chal. 167. 2. H. 4. 3. 34. E. 3. Chal. 175. 21. H. 6. 56. 8. E. 4. 3. 16. E. 4. 1. * Bracton lib. 4. fo. 185. (7. Co. 1. Bulwer's case.)

[b] Bracton lib. 5. fo. 333. 334. Mirr. cap. 2. sect. 19. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 6. Brit. cap. 121.

[c] Bracton } ubi supra
Britton }
Fleta }
Bracton }
Britton } ubi supra.
Fleta }
Mirror }
[d] Regist. judicial. 1. 2. 107.
43. E. 3. 32. 24. E. 3. 35. 3.
E. 3. 48. 50. E. 3. 16. 8. 11. 6.
1. b. F. N. B. 97.
[e] Mirror
Bracton } ubi supra.
Britton }
Fleta }

Register 223.

[f] Bracton lib. 5. fo. 372. Britton fo. 117. Fleta 1. 6. ca. 1. Glanvil lib. 1. c. 4. 5. &c. lib. 2. ca. 7. lib. 12. ca. 1. (1. Ro. Abr. 686.)

(Post. 265. a. 345. a.)

* Britton fo. 116. Fleta lib. 2. ca. 1.

[g] Fleta lib. 6. ca. 1.

[h] Mirror ca. 2. sect. 16. & cap. 5. sect. 2.

the ground assise, and try the challenges of the parties. [y] If the cause of challenge touch the dishonor or discredit of the juror, he shall not be examined upon his oath, (1) but in other cases he shall be examined upon his oath, to informe the triors. (2) [z] If an inquest be awarded by default, the defendant hath lost his challenge; but the plaintife may challenge for just cause, and that shall be examined and tried.

Wheresoever the plaintife is to recover per visum juratorum, there ought to be fixe of the jury that have had the view or knowne the land in question, so as he be able to put the plaintife in possession if he recover.

In a proprietas probanda, and a writ to inquire for waste, the parties have beene received to take their challenges. (3) [a] But passing over many things touching this matter, I will conclude with the saying of *Bracton. Plures autem alia sunt causae recusandi juratores, de quibus ad praesens non recolo, sed quae jam enumeratae sunt sufficiant exempli causa. (4) And so let us return to Littl.

De visneto, &c. It should be vicineto. Vicinetum is derived of this word vicinus, and signifieth neighbourhood, or a place neere at hand, or a neighbour place. And the reason wherefore the jury must be of the neighbourhood, is, for that vicinus facta vicini praesumitur scire; all which is implied in this word (&c.)

Quod summeat eos, &c. Summeo is compounded of sub & moneo, & euphoniae gratia it is said summeo, to warne or summon, as in this case the sherife must warne or summon the recognitors of the assise to appeare before the justices of assise, &c. And it is truly said [b], that in this case legitimam summonitionem recipere in propria persona ubicunque inventus fuerit in comitatu in quo fuerit res petita; qui quidem si non inveniatur, sufficit, si ad domicilium fiat, dum tamen alicui de familia sua manifeste fuerit relata, &c.

Per bonos summonitores. Here two things are to be observed. 1. that the summoners must be boni (i. e. fide digni, ut valeant legitimam testimonium perhibere, cum inde per justiciarios fuerint requisiti. [c] And another faith, fems, ne serfs, ne enfans, ne nul enfans, ne nul que nest fife tenant, ne poest esse bone summoner. 2. It is spoken in the plurall number, per bonos summonitores, and therefore there must be two at the least. Nec sufficit quod summonitio fiat per unum tantum, &c. necesse est igitur quod per duos ad minus fiat, &c. There is also a summons of a tenant in a reall action; whereof, and of perrors and veiors you shall reade [d] plentifully and plainly in our bookes, whereunto being matter of courie I referre you.

Item summonitionum alia est generalis, alia specialis. Whereof you shall finde excellent matter in our [e] old bookes, where you shall also reade at large de summonitione, praesummonitione, & resummonitione.

Facere recognitionem. Cognitio is knowledge, or knowledgement, or opinion, and recognition is a serious acknowledgement or opinion upon such matters of fact as they shall have in charge, and thereupon the jurors are called recognitores assise. Vide Sect. 233. recognitionem taken for the confession of the tenant.

Pannell is an English word, and signifieth a little part; for a pane is a part, and a pannell is a little part; as a pannell of waincot, a pannell of a saddle, and a pannell of parchment wherein the jurors names be written and annexed to the writ. And a jury is said to be impannelled, when the sherife hath entred their names into the pannell, or little peece of parchment, in pannello assise.

Briefe de droit, Breve de recto. Writs of right bee of two natures: 1. A writ of right, whereof Littleton here speaketh, which is the highest writ of all other reall writs whatsoever, and hath the greatest respect, &c. and the most assured and final judgement; and therefore this writ is called a writ of right; and this in [f] old books is called dreit dreit; and this writ est darrein remede de tous recoveries enter tous ordres des pleas; and the jury in this writ is called magna assisa, or magna jurata, as Littleton here faith. 2. Writs of right in their nature, as the rationabili parte, and ne injuste vexes.

De Recto. Rectum is a proper and significant word for the right that any hath; and wrong or injury is in French aptly called tort; because injury and wrong is wrested or crooked, being contrary to that which is right and straight. Now the law that is linea recta est index sui & obliqui. And Britton * faith, that tort a la ley est contrarie, and as aptly for the cause aforesaid is injury in English called wrong. And injuria is derived of in and jus, because it is contrary to right; so as a faire tort is facere tortum. And Fleta faith [g] est autem jus publicum & privatum, quod ex naturalibus preceptis, aut gentium, aut civilibus est collectum; & quod in jure scripto jus appellatur, id in lege Angliae rectum esse dicitur. And in the [h] Mirror, and other places of the law, it is called droit; as droit defend, the law defendeth.

En le Register. Register is a most ancient booke of the common law; and it is two-

(1) Held accordingly by the court in Cook's case Salk. 153.

(2) This is one instance of the examination called a voir dire; for as a witness is on a voir dire to try an objection to his competency to give evidence, so a juror may be sworn in like manner to try the cause of challenge to him. It is thought fit to take notice of this; because in some of our books, the voir dire is described, as if confined to the challenge of a witness, and only used to distinguish such a partial swearing of a witness from swearing of him in chief. For instances of examining jurors on a voir dire, see Francia's case, State Tri. 4th ed. v. 1. p. 59. and Mr. Townley's in Fost. 7. But in both of these the challenge not being to the favour was examined into by the court without triors.

(3) Some seem to understand it as a general rule, that challenges of jurors are excluded, where the inquest is for information merely, or not being so is without an issue joined between the parties; as in inquests of office before sheriffs coroners and escheators, and in writs of inquiry for damages. Office of executor, ed. 1676. p. 240. 1. Ro. Abr. 660. Umfrev. Lex Coronator. 174. 183. and in the Introduction. 51. Probably lord Coke here means to advert to this doctrine, and to give the proprietas probanda and the writ to inquire of waste, both of which are inquests without any issue joined, as instances of exception to it. Broke adds another exception; for in abridging the case of waste from the year book of 2. H. 4. 3. he observes, that the law is the same on a writ of redisseisin. Bro. Error 31.—As to the rule itself for thus excluding challenges, be it well or ill founded, the sheriff, or other officer taking the inquest, certainly ought not to accept any jurors but such as are legally qualified; and if such are received, it seems a just ground for quashing the proceeding or for error according to the nature of the case. See Sir William Withepole's case reported in W. Jo. 198. Cro. Cha. 134. and Ley 81. and noticed in 2. Hal. H. P. C. 60.

(4) See further on challenges of jurors Kitch. French ed. 91. a. Lamb. Just. ed. of 1602. p. 379. Dalt. Sher. 1st ed. 120. Trials per Pa. chap. 9. and title Trial in Viner.

being servants of the king; but was informed by lord Holt, that it was no cause of challenge. The first of these instances was a direct adjudication; but, however, it loses part of its weight, in consequence of having occurred in an ill time whilst lord Jeffries presided in the king's-bench, and of being accompanied with ungracious and unbecoming language from him in respect to both Coke and Rolle. The second was rather an extrajudicial opinion; because the counsel for the crown consented to put by the jurors objected to on the ground of being king's servants, unless there should be a defect of other jurors, which did not happen. But lord Holt declared against the challenge in the most absolute and unreserved terms, as if it would not bear arguing.

twofold, viz. registrum brevium originalium, and registrum brevium judicialium. It is a French word and signifieth a memoriall of writs. Sometimes the register of originall writs is called registrum cancellariæ; because all originall writs doe issue out of the chauncery, as extra officinam justitiæ, for the antiquity and estimation of which booke I referre the reader to the epistle before the tenth part of my commentaries. (1)

Magna assisa eligenda is a judiciall writ of the sherife to returne fourē lawfull knights before the justices there upon their oathes to returne twelve (2) knights of the vicinage to try the mise in a writ of right. (Cro. Cha. 511.)

Assise de common de pasture, &c. Of what things an assise of novel disseisin lay at the common law, and of what by the statute, you may reade at large in my [k] Reports in John Webb's case, where the authorities of law are plentifully cited, and they and the statute well explained. But since Littleton wrote, a man may have [l] an assise of novel disseisin, assise of mord'anc', or any præcipe quod reddat, quod ei de forceat, writs of dower, or other writs originall, as the case shall require, of tythes, pensions, or other ecclesiasticall or spirituall profit, if he be disseised, deforced, wronged, or otherwise kept or put from the same, which by the lawes and statutes of the realme are made temporall or admitted to be or abide in temporall hands; so as by the said act a lay man, having tythes or offerings, may either sue for the subtraction or with-holding of the same in the ecclesiasticall court, or at the common law at his election. And seeing no speciall writ is given * by the statute, the party must have a generall writ of assise de libero tenemento, and make a speciall pleint. But his præcipe must be, quod reddat omnes & omnimodas decimas majores, mixtas, & minutas, infra Dale quoquo modo crescen' contingen' ac annuatim renovan', or the like, according to his case. [m] But neither assise nor any præcipe did lye of them as of tythes or any other ecclesiasticall duty at the common law; for the assise brought of the tenth part of all manner of corne growing in an hundred acres of land, after the tythes of the parson taken, was a lay profit apprender, and no ecclesiasticall duty.

But tythes or other ecclesiasticall duties, that came to the crowne by the statutes [n] of 27. H. 8. 31. H. 8. 37. H. 8. and 1. E. 6. are by those statutes and this of 32. H. 8. and of 1. and 2. Ph. & Maria, in the hands of laymen temporall inheritances, and shall be accounted affets; and husbands shall be tenants by the curtesie, and wives endowed of them, and shall have other incidents belonging to temporall inheritances. Only this ecclesiasticall quality they have, that the owner or possessor thereof may sue for the subtraction of the same in the ecclesiasticall court.

But by another [o] statute, remedy is given aswell to the lay person as to the ecclesiasticall person, for subtraction of all manner of prediall tythes; and he shall recover the treble value if they be not justly divided or set forth; and albeit the treble value be not expressly given to the proprietary of the tythes, yet forasmuch as he is the party grieved, and he hath the propertie and interest in the tythes, the treble value is given to him; and whensoever a statute giveth a forfeiture or penalty against him which wrongfully detaineth or dispossesseth another of his duty or interest, in that case he that hath the wrong shall have the forfeiture or penalty, and shall have an action therefore upon the statute at the common law, and the king shall not have the forfeiture in that case. And so it was [p] adjudged in the exchequer upon conference with other judges in an information for the treble value for not setting out of tythes in Islington in the county of Cambridge. (3) And if the proprietary will sue for such subtraction of tythes in the ecclesiasticall court, then he shall recover but the double value by the expresse words of the act. Wherein it is to be observed, that the act of parliament doth give a temporall remedy at the common law to parsons and vicars and other ecclesiasticall persons for an ecclesiasticall duty, and to laymen proprietaries of tythes the like remedy; but, as it hath beene said, they have election either to sue for the treble value at the common law, or for the double value in the ecclesiasticall court, or for subtraction of tythes there also. (4)

Assise de mord'ancester. Assisa mortis antecessoris. [q] This writ a man may have after the decease of his immediate ancestor; as where his father, mother, brother, sister, uncle or aunt, dye seised of any lands, and an estranger abate, &c.

Assise de darreine presentment. Assisa ultimæ presentationis, whereof you shall read [r] plentifully in our bookes.

To these may be added assisa utrum, or juris utrum [s] which is the highest writ a parson, vicar, &c. can have for the recovering of the glebe land, &c. in right of his church. But it may be demanded, wherefore these originall writs are called by the speciall name of assises more than other originall writs; and here Littleton yeeldeth the reason, because that by these writs it is commanded to the sherife quod summeat 12, which is as much to say, as to summon a jury. So as in these cases, there is a jury returned the first day, and they are to appeare

(1) See also ant. 16. b. and 73. b.

(2) This is the number mentioned in the writ to the sheriff and also in the oath of the four knights. Booth on Real Act. 96, 97. But in Mo. 67. it is said, that sometimes fourteen have been returned. In King v. Dryden, being the case cited above in the margin from Cro. Cha. 511. twenty were returned by the four knights; on which it became a question, whether twelve only should have been returned, and whether the surplusage did not vitiate the whole return. But no adjudication appears in Croke's report. However in 2. Ro. Abr. 674. where the same case is shortly reported, it is mentioned, that the court held the return good, it being observed, that several precedents were cited in favour of such a return; and that it resembled the case of a common venue, on which it was usual to return twenty-four, though the writ is restrained to twelve.

(3) The same case is more fully stated by lord Coke in 2. Inst. 650. being part of his comment on the statute of 2. Ed. 6.

(4) Since lord Coke's time a third remedy for tithes, where they are of small value, has been given; for by the 7. & 8. W. 3. c. 6. tithes under 40s. may be recovered in a summary way before two justices of the peace; and by the 7. & 8. W. 3. c. 34. which was at first temporary, but is now made perpetual, tithes under ten pounds are made recoverable from Quakers in the same way. In London tithes by the 37. H. 8. c. 12. are recoverable before the lord mayor with an appeal to the lord chancellor. To these various modes of proceeding for tithes should be added the equitable remedy by bill either in chancery or the exchequer; both of which courts have long entertained suits for tithes. Formerly, however, the jurisdiction of chancery in this respect was questioned, it being so far from settled in lord Coke's time, that there are instances of controverting it even since the Restoration. 1. Freem. 303. 2. Cha. Cal. 237. But as to the exchequer, tithes are said to have been anciently cognizable there; though this is contradicted by lord chancellor Nottingham, who dates the origin of the proceeding by English bill, and consequently that court's equitable jurisdiction over tithes, from the statute of Hen. 8. erecting the court of augmentation. Hardr. 236. 1. Freem. 303. and 33. H. 8. c. 39. This equitable interference of chancery and the exchequer with tithes is generally considered as merely incidental and collateral; namely, as a consequence of their jurisdiction in account and in enforcing discovery. 3. Blackst. Com. 9th ed. 437. and the reasons of the appellant in Whitehead and others v. Travis and others, Dom. Proc. January 1779. But some give a broader foundation to this branch of exchequer jurisdiction; and in respect of extraparochoial tithes, which are part of the ancient inheritance of the crown, they insist, that suits for tithes must ever have fallen within the compass of the exchequer's direct and substantive jurisdiction as a court of revenue. See the case of respondent in the appeal before cited, and Hardr. 217. Perhaps it is upon this idea as well as on account of the greater frequency of suits for tithes in the exchequer, that lord Hardwicke calls that court the proper jurisdiction for them. 3. Atk. 247. Yet I confess, it seems to me, that the antiquity of the exchequer jurisdiction in the particular case of extraparochoial tithes is no proof of a jurisdiction as to tithes in general. See further, as to the jurisdiction of chancery and exchequer over tithes, Rayner's Cases at large, Introd. xiv. and Vin. Abr. tit. dismers.

* Mag. Chart. ca. 12. And W.
2. ca. 25.

appeare as soone as the defendant. And because by these writs a jury is to be returned, the law calleth them assises, ab effectu; because an assise (which in this sense signifieth a jury) is to be returned. But beside the signification of the writ * of assise, whereof Littleton here speaketh, it signifieth the whole proceeding upon the writ.

In other originall writs regularly no jury is to be returned before the appearance of the parties and an issue joyned between them; and therefore these other originalls are not called assises.

[r] 19. H. 3. Juris utrum 16.
39. E. 3. 1. 7. 42. E. 3. 38. 29.
E. 3. 7. Regist. orig. 189. 33.
E. 1. 5. R. 2. ca. 2. Vid. 8. Co.
le Princes case.

Pur un ordinance. Here assisa signifieth an ordinance, &c. Ordinance, ordinatio, is derived of the verbe ordinare, to ordaine or set in order. And note, an act [r] of parliament (as Littleton here proveth) is an ordinance; for it sets downe orders, which are to bee kept as lawes: and so is ordinatio forestæ, ordinatio de inquisitionibus, and ordinatio contra servientes, and other statutes many times called ordinances; and it is said almost in every act of parliament, 'Be it therefore ordained, &c. by authority of this parliament, or the like.' But à converso, every ordinance is not a statute, as that of 8. H. 6. cap. 29. (1) for every statute must be made by the king, with the assents of the lords and commons; and if it appeare by the act, that it was made by two of them onely, it is no statute. (2)

[s] Mir. ca. 1. sect. 13. & ca.
4. de Articles de Eirc. Bract.
li. 3. fo. 136.
[t] Stanf. fo. 118. Mir. ca. 2.
sect. 15. Hoveden 313. Regist.
orig. 279.
[u] Flet. li. 1. ca. 17.

The example put by Littleton is assisa panis & cervisie. [s] This ordinance was made at a parliament holden anno 51. H. 3. and the like ordinance was made, entituled assisa cervisie, which you may see in old Magna Charta, fol. 57. b. [t] And so assisa de Clarendon, which was in 10 H. 2. and assisa forestæ ordained in anno 34. E. 1. and such like. And apply an ordinance of parliament antiquity hath called an assise, for that an act of parliament doth ordaine such a certaine order, as nothing can be done more or lesse by right. [u] And Fleta saith, et habet rex in potestate sua ut leges & consuetudines & assisas in regno suo provisat & approbatas & juratas, &c. where assises are taken for statutes, which are the effects of the sessions of parliament.

De ponderibus & mensuris, of weights and measures, is a most necessary learning to bee knowne, and daily in use, but it belongeth not to this treatise. In some other (if God so please) somewhat shall be said of them. (3)

Sect. 235.

ET le tenant attorna.

Here it appeareth, that an attornament (that is, an agreement to the grant) is no feisin of the rent.

Il ne ad ascun remedie, &c. which is as much to say, as he hath not any remedy either at the common law, or in any court of equity, which is worthy of observation.

See more of this in the chapter of attornament sect. 565.
(4. Co. 10. Poll. 314. b. 315. a.)

Voile doner al grantee un denier, ou un maile, &c. en nosme de feisin de rent, &c. Here it is to be observed, that payment of any money in name of feisin of the rent, before any rent become due, is a good feisin of the rent to have an assise when it is due; and that, which is given in the name of feisin of the rent, worketh his

ITEM si soit seignior & tenant, & le seignior granta le rent de son tenant per son fait a un autre, s'avant a luy les services, & le tenant attorna, ceo est un rent secke, come est dit adevant. Mes si le rent a luy soit denie al prochain jour de payment, il ny ad ascun remedie; pur ceo qu'il n'avoit de ceo ascun possession. Mes si le tenant, quant il attorna al grantee, ou apres, voile doner al grantee un denier, ou un maile, &c. en

ALSO if there bee lord and tenant and the lord granteth the rent of his tenant by deed to another, saving to him the other services, and the tenant attorneth, that is a rent secke, as it is aforesaid. But if the rent be denied him at the next day of payment, hee hath no remedie; because that he had not thereof any possession. But if the tenant when he attorneth to the grantee, or afterwards, will give a penie or a halfe-penie to the grantee in nosme

(1) In Dy. 144. b. the reporter questions this same statute or ordinance, and on the same ground as is expressed in the prince's case cited by lord Coke; namely, that the king and the lords are named without the commons. But the editor of the last edition of Dyer gives a note tending to obviate the objection thus taken. The 8. H. 6. c. 29. is also supported as a statute by Mr. Serjeant Hawkins and Mr. Ruffhead in the prefaces to their respective editions of the statutes at large. The latter of these urges two strong arguments in favour of the 8. H. 6. c. 29. exclusive of the general argument for presuming the assent of the commons, of which in the next note. According to the first the roll containing the 8. H. 6. has a general preface, which mentions the assent of the commons in terms referable to all the chapters of that year. The second is, that the 22. H. 8. c. 10. expressly refers to the 8. H. 6. c. 29. as a statute, and therefore that the latter has been legislatively recognized.

(2) Acc. 4. H. 7. 18. a. Mo. 824. and the prince's case 8. Co. 20. a. In 4. Inst. 25. lord Coke also describes a statute as having the consent of king lords and commons, and an ordinance as made by only one or two of them.—But Mr. Prynne is very angry with lord Coke for thus distinguishing between an ordinance and a statute. He first attacked the difference in his Irenarches Redivivus; and there he is very copious in his arguments and instances against it. But Mr. Prynne did not rest here; for he continued the subject in various subsequent publications; namely, in his preface and index to what is called Cotton's Abridgement of the Records, and in his Animadversions on the 4th Institute. See the latter book p. 13. But in all these works, particularly his Irenarches Redivivus, he appears to me to labour the point in a manner, which indicates a very considerable misapprehension of lord Coke. It is manifest from his lordship's words here, that he did not mean to deny, that the term of ordinance might not be or was not frequently applied to statutes; for he here adduces instances of such an application. His chief intent was to guard against universally and indiscriminately so considering all ordinances in parliament. But Mr. Prynne not connecting what is here said by lord Coke with his words in the 4th Institute, but looking to the latter only, tediously and provokingly argues, as if lord Coke had denied, that an ordinance could be or was in any case a statute. Not content with fighting this imaginary proposition, Mr. Prynne runs into the contrary extreme of asserting, that acts of parliament and ordinances are universally and invariably the same. Thus the true questions arising on the subject were in great measure lost sight of, or at least were so obscured by being complicated with foreign, and needless discussion, as not easily to strike the reader. The real topics for debate with lord Coke, and those which should have been pointedly attended to, were, first, whether the term of ordinance was ever in fact applied to a provision made during the time of parliament by only one or two of the three branches of the legislature; and secondly, and principally, whether naming only one or two parts of the legislature doth exclude the nosme de seisin de le rent, donques si apres a le procheine jour de payment le rent a luy soit denie, il avera assise de novel disseisin. Et issint est lou home grant a per son fait un annual rent issuant hors de sa terre a un auter, &c. si le grantor a donques ou apres paya al grantee un denier, ou un maile, en nosme de seisin de le rent, donques, si apres al procheine jour de payment le rent soit denie, le grantee poet aver assise, ou auterment nemy, &c.

name of seisin of rent, then if after at the next day of payment the rent be denied him, hee shall have an assise of novel disseisin. And so it is if a man grant by his deed a yearly rent issuing out of his land, to another, &c. if the graunter then after pay to the grauntee a penie, or an halfe-pennie, in name of seisin of the rent, then, if after the next day of payment the rent be denied, the grauntee may have an assise, or else not, &c.

effect to give seisin, and yet is no part of the rent, nor shall be abated out of the rent: but you shall read more hereof hereafter, sect. 565.

Un denier, ou un maile, &c. Here by this (&c.) is implied, that so it is of the gift of a sheepe, or an ox, or a ring, or a paire of gloves, or a pound of pepper, or of any valuable thing.

Issint si home grant per son fait un annual rent issuant hors de son terre a un auter, &c. By this (&c.) is implied, that the grant and deliverie of the deed is no seisin of the rent; and that a seisin in law, which the grantee hath by the grant, is not sufficient to maintaine an assise or any other reall action, but there must be an actuall seisin.

Sect. 236.

ITEM de rent secke home poet aver assise de mort d'ancester, ou brise de aiel ou de cosinage, & tous auters manners d'actions reals, come la case gist, sicome il poet aver d'ascun autre rent.

ALSO of rent secke a man may have an assise of mort d'ancester, or a writ of aiel or cosinage, and all other manner of actions realls, as the case lyeth, as hee may have of any other rent.

BRIEFE de aiel.

Breve de avo. This writ lieth, where the grandfather or grandmother was seised of any land in fee the day that he died, and an estranger abate, the heire shall have this writ. [w] And if the great grandfather, be-faiel, proavus, or great grandmother, be-faieles, proavia, be seised, as is aforesaid, and die, &c. the heire shall have a writ de be-faiel, proavo, or be-faieles, proavia, &c.

Bract. li. 2. fo. 67. Brit. c. 89. & c. 76. Flet. li. 5. c. 7. 8. &c. F. N. B. 221.

[w] 6. E. 3. 34. 7. E. 3. 45. Regist. 226. F. N. B. 221. a. b. Britton. ca. 76.

Briefe de cosinage. Breve de consanguinitate. [a] This writ lieth, where the great grandfather's father, tritavus (id est) tertius avus, or abavus, (id est) avus avi was seised as is aforesaid, or where grandfather's or grandmother's mother, &c. ut supr. And so it is of the seisin of the brother of the grandfather's grandfather, &c. (1)

[a] Bract. lib. 2. fo. 67. Brit. c. 89. & c. 76. Flet. l. 5. ca. 7. 8. F. N. B. 221.

Rent secke. And so it is of a rent charge to all respects.

Et tous auters manners d'actions reals. Hereupon some have gathered, that a man shall have a writ of right of a rent secke, or of a rent charge, albeit they be against common right. But that, which hath been said by Littleton of an assise of mort d'ancester, a writ of aiel, cosinage, and other actions realls, is to be understood after seisin had by some of the ancestors of the demandant; for without an actuall seisin, or seisin in deed, none of these are maintainable.

15. E. 2. Hors de son fee 27. 3. E. 3. 35. 4. E. 3. droit 31. F. N. B. 6. 14. E. 4. 5. Diversity des Courts 117. 33. E. 3. Judgm. 252.

See.

(1) See the table for the degrees of consanguinity placed before fol. 18.

the presumption of the third's having assented. As to the former of these questions, it is rather verbal; and therefore I will here only observe upon it, that using the word ordinance in the manner stated by lord Coke seems well enough to answer the purpose of discrimination; that the word may have been frequently so applied in antient times notwithstanding the numerous examples of a contrary application so industriously collected by Mr. Prynne; that lord chief justice Crew partly adopts lord Coke's idea; that Mr. Prynne himself in his later writings, though he still denies lord Coke's distinction, brings forward and acknowledges precedents, which tend in some degree to affirm it; and that calling the acts of the parliament in the reign of Charles I. without the royal assent to them ordinances seems to have originated from lord Coke's difference between an ordinance and a complete statute. See W. Jo. 103. Prynne's Index to Cott. Abridgm. of Rec. title ordinances, and his Animadv. on 4. Inst. 13. As to the second question, besides what may be found in Mr. Prynne's pieces, it has been distinctly considered by Mr. Serjeant Hawkins and Mr. Ruffhead, both of whom, in the prefaces to their several editions of the statutes, anxiously oppose lord Coke's idea of not presuming the assent of lords or commons, where the record names one but omits the other. The general purport of the reasons urged by the former is, the various irregular and sometimes inexplicit penning of the more ancient statutes, the allowed force of several statutes in which only the king is named, and the long reception of others which do mention the king and lords without the commons. The latter editor pursues the like topics more at large, but, as it seems to me, in terms less guarded; some passages of his preface being such, as may encourage a hasty and unlearned reader to fall into the unwarrantable supposition, that the right of assent in the commons is disputable even as late as the reign of Richard the second, rather than induce him to presume the fact of their assent's having been given. See further on this subject, and for the various sense of the word ordinance, 2. Whitelocke on the Writ of Parliament, Elsyng on Parl. last ed. 26. and Barringt. on Ant. Stat. 4th ed. 46.

(3) Accordingly lord Coke discourses a little on these subjects in two other works. See 2. Inst. 41. and 4. Inst. 273.

Sect. 237.

(Cen. Jan. 485. 2. Ro. Abr. 277. 456. 457. Hob. 180. Dy. 231. Cro. Cha. 109. F. N. B. 101. c.)

18. F. 3. 3. 44. E. 3. 20. b. 20. H. 7. 1. a. 21. H. 7. 40. a. F. N. B. 102. b. 6. H. 6. Distress 9. 4. E. 2. Aff. 43. 8. E. 1. ibid. 416. W. 2. ca. 6. 12. H. 7. Ketway 20. (Post. 323. a.)

[p] 6. R. 2. Rescous 10. 40. E. 3. 33. 31. E. 3. Rescous 17. 22. H. 6. 2. b. 6. E. 4. 11. b. 7. E. 4. 20. 5. E. 4. 8. 34. H. 6. 47. F. N. B. 102. E. 2. H. 4. 21. 16. 4. E. 6. Distress Br. 24. 39. E. 3. 35. 39. H. 6. 7. 4. Co. 11. Bevil's case. 8. H. 4. 1. (Ant. 47. b. 9. Co. 23.)

7. E. 4. 24. (5. Co. 76.)

17. E. 3. 43. Vid. tit. Rescous 14.

Rescous. Rescussus is here described by Littleton. It is an ancient French word coming from rescourer, (id est) recuperare, that is, to take from, to rescue or recover. Rescous is a taking away and setting at liberty against law a distresse taken, or a person arrested by the proces or course of law. And all is one, as to the point of the disseisin, to rescue the distresse after it is taken, and before hand to resist and withstand the taking of it; but yet it is no rescous, untill it be distreyned. And therefore you may make fixe disseisins of a rent service; rescous of a distresse, resistance to distreyn, replevin, (3) inclosure, counterpleading of the title, and vouching of a record and failing. If the tenant rescue the distresse, and after is disseised of the tenancie, yet the assise lieth against him for the disseisin done of the rent by the rescous.

Pur son rent arere.

Here Littleton decideth an ancient question in our bookes, [p] viz. that the rent must be behind, or else the tenant may make rescous: for if no rent be behind when the distresse is taken, how can the rescous amount to a disseisin of the rent when none is due? And so it is, if the tenant resist the lord to distreine, when there is no rent behind, this can be no disseisin of the rent for the cause above sayd, and this (as it appeareth by Littleton) holdeth as well in case of a rent service between lord and tenant, as in case of a rent charge, &c. And so I heard sir Christopher Wray chief justice say, that he had adjudged it. And that which the tenant may do when there is no rent behind, may a stranger doe, if his beasts be distrained. If the tenant tender the rent to the lord when he is to take the distresse, if notwithstanding the lord will distreyn, the tenant may make rescous. (4) If the rent of the lord be behind, and the lord distreine the cattell of the tenant in the high way within his fee, the tenant may make rescous,

ITEM sont trois causes de disseisin de rent service, scil. rescous, replevin, & enclosure. Rescous est, quaut le seignior en la terre tenus de luy distreine pour son rent arere, si le distres de luy soit rescous, ou si le seignior vient sur la terre, & voile distreyn, & le tenant ou auter home ne luy voile suffer, &c. Replevin est, quant le seignior ad distreine, et replevin soit fait de le distresse per brieve ou per plaint. Enclosure est, si les terres ou les tenements sont issint encloses, (1), que le seignior ne poyt vener deins les terres ou tenements pur distreyn. Et la cause, pur que tiels choses issint faits sont disseisins al seignior, est, pur ceo que per tiels choses le seignior est disturbe de le mean per que il doit avoir & vener a son rent, scil. de le distresse. (2)

ALSO there be three causes of disseisin of rent service, that is to say, rescous, replevin, and enclosure. Rescous is, when the lord distraineth in the land holden of him for his rent behind, if the distresse be rescued from him, or the lord come upon the land, and will distreine, and the tenant or another man wil not suffer him, &c. Replevin is, when the lord hath distrained, and replevin is made of the distress by writ or by plaint. Enclosure is, if the lands and tenements bee so enclosed, that the lord may not come within the lands and tenements for to distrein. And the cause, why such things so done be disseisins made to the lord, is for this, that by such things the lord is disturbed of the meane by which hee ought to have come to his rent, scil. of the distresse.

(1) Encloses not in L. & M. but in Roh. P. & Red.

(2) De le distresse not in L. & M. Roh. or P.

(3) In a Coke upon Littleton I have with MSS. notes, it is objected to considering replevin here as a disseisin, that bringing a replevin is a course of law, and that neither an express denial of a rent-service, nor keeping the land without any thing distrainable by law upon it, amounts to a disseisin. Yet, the annotator allows, that there is an ancient pleading in assise to warrant the doctrine, the material words of which he gives at length.

(4) See several authorities accordingly cited in the case of the six carpenters 8. Co. 146. b. & 147. a. There too lord Coke states the diversities in point of effect, between tender on the land before distress, tender after distress and before inclosure, and tender after inclosure. See also Hob. 207.

rescous, for that it is defended by law to distreine in the (1) high way. And by the same reason if the lord will distreine averia caruea, where there is a sufficient distresse to be taken (2) besides, or if the lord distrayne any thing that is not distreynable, either by the common law, or by any statute, the tenant may make rescous.

Note, there is a rescous in deed and a rescous in law. Of a rescous in deed somewhat (Ant. 47. b. F. N. B. 102. C.) hath already been spoken. A rescous in law is, when a man hath taken a distresse, and the cattle distreyned as he is driving of them to the pound goe into the house of the owner, if he that tooke the distresse demand them of the owner, and he deliver them not, this is a rescous in law, and so of the like.

And every word of Littleton is materiall, for he saith;

En la terre tenus de luy. And therefore if the lord distreine out of his fee in lands not holden of him, the tenant may make rescous, unless it bee in some speciall cases.

As if the lord come to distreine cattle which he seeth then within his fee, and the tenant or any other to prevent the lord to distreine, drive the cattle out of the fee of the lord into some place out of his fee; yet may the lord freshly follow, and distreine the cattle, and the tenant cannot make rescous, albeit the place wherein the distresse is taken is out of his fee, for now in judgement of law the distresse is taken within his fee, and so shall the writ of rescous suppose.

But if the lord coming to distreine had no view of the cattle within his fee, though the tenant drive them off purposely, or if the cattle of themselves after the view goe out of the fee, or if the tenant after the view remove them for any other cause than to prevent the lord of his distresse, then cannot the lord distreine them out of his fee, and if he doth the tenant may make rescous.

If a man come to distreine for damage feasant, and see the beasts in his soyle, and the owner chase them out of purpose before the distresse taken, the owner of the soyle cannot distreine them, and if he doth, the owner of the cattle may rescue them; for the beasts must be damage feasant at the time of the distresse; and so note a diversitie.

There is a diversitie [a] betweene a warrant of record and a warrant or an authoritie in law; for if a capias be awarded to the sherife to arrest a man for felony, albeit the party be innocent, yet cannot he make rescous. But if a sherife will, by authoritie which the law giveth him, arrest any man for felony which is not guiltie, he may rescue himselfe. (3)

Replevin [b] Is derived of replegiare to redeliver to the owner upon pledges or suretie.

[c] Also to counterplead the plaintife in an assise, by which he is delayed, maketh him that pleadeth it a disseisor. Otherwise it is, if he had pleaded nul tort, &c.

Encloser is here also described, and need no other explication; for the lord cannot [d] breake open the gates, or breake down the inclosures to take a distresse, and therefore the law accounts it a disseisin. But all these are intended by Littleton to be disseisins after an actuall feisin had, and when the rent is behind: otherwise none of these are disseisins at all.

But wherefore should a rescous of the distresse by the party himselfe, or a replevin which is a redelivery of the distresse by the sherife by the course of law to the partie, be any disseisin of the rent service? Littleton doth here yeeld the true reason; because that by the rescue, and by the suing of the replevin, the lord is disturbed of the meane by the which he ought to have and come to his rent, viz. of the distresse.

And so it is of an incloser; for he that disturbs a man of the meane disseiseth him of the thing it selfe, [e] as the turning of the whole streame that runnes to a mill is a disseisin of the mill it selfe.

So it is if a man be disturbed to enter and manure his land, [f] this is a disseisin of the land it selfe; for qui adimit medium dirimit finem, and qui obstruit aditum destruit commodum. [g] And therefore where it is said, that a man shall not be punished for suing of writs in the king's court, be it of right or wrong, it is regularly (4) true, but it sayeth in this speciall case of the writ of replevin for the cause aforesaid. [h] But denier is no disseisin of a rent service without rescous or resistance.

44. E. 3. 20. 6. R. 2. Rescous
11. 11. H. 7. 4. 21. H. 7. 40.
34. H. 6. 18. 16. E. 4. 10. lib. 9.
fol. 22. in case de avowrie.
(9. Co. 22. Plowd. 37. b. 38. a.
2. Inst. 131. Post. 268. b. 1.
Ro. Abr. 671.)

16. E. 4. 10. 2. E. 2. avowrie
182. lib. 9. ubi supra.

[a] 14. H. 7. 20. tit. Justice de peace 9. (6. Co. 54. a. 3. Inst.
221.)

[b] Brit. fol. 108. Fleta lib. 4.
cap. 1. Mirror cap. 2. sect. 15.
(Ant. 145. b.)
[c] 24. Aff. 3. 29. Aff. 52. Fleta
lib. 4. cap. 1. Britton fol. 108.

[d] 10. E. 3. 9. 49. E. 3. 14.
7. E. 3. 3. 11. H. 7. 28. 8. Aff.
18. 10. E. 4. 2.

Bract. lib. 4. fol. 161. 204.
Britton fol. 108. Fleta lib. 4.
cap. 1.

[e] 9. Aff. 19. Mirror ca. 2.
sect. 15. Brit. fol. 108. 114. 118.
141.

[f] 26. Aff. 17. 3. E. 4. 2. per Littl. 49. E. 3. 14. b.

[g] F. N. B. 42. g. 22. E. 3. 15.
43. Aff. 40. 43. E. 3. 20. faux judg. 10. 8. E. 4. 15. per Moyle.
2. R. 3. 19. (Hob. 205. 266.
1. Mod. 4. Cro. Eliz. 836. 1.
Sid. 463.)

[h] 3. E. 3. 75. 8. H. 6. 11.

Sect.

(1) It is so provided by the statute of Marlebridge chap. 15. But the king is excepted. See the commentary on that statute in 2. Inst. 131. Some distresses also by the subject are not within this provision, of which there are instances given with the reasons in 2. Inst. 133. and lord Hales' notes on F. N. B. 90. A.

(2) Acc. ant. 47. a. and more at large in 2. Inst. 133.

(3) But, such arrest virtute officii being made on a just ground of suspicion of felony, the party rescues himself at his peril; for, according to lord Hale, if in the attempt to make the rescue he is upon necessity slain, it is no felony in the officer; and on the same principle if the officer is killed it will be murder. 2. Hal. H. P. C. 85. 86. 87. 92. 93. The obvious reason is, that the law makes it a duty in the sheriff and certain other officers to arrest for felony on just suspicion; and therefore rescue from such arrest is resistance of a lawful authority. If this be so, lord Coke is here too unqualified in expression. See further on this point Post. 270. 1. Burn's Justice tit. Arrest, and Dougl. Rep. 345.

(4) Acc. Dy. 285. a. 4. Co. 146. b. 1. Bullstr. 141. But on this rule it may be asked, whether the law of England is so defective as to furnish no remedy for the injury of being harassed by vexatious and groundless suits, or, to use the language of the Roman law, no penalty to restrain the temere litigantes? It may be answered, that the rule is not to be understood so largely; for certainly there are various provisions, the object of which is to discourage the commencement of suits from an unjust or improper spirit of litigation. I. By the ancient law no person could prosecute a civil action without having in the first stage of it two or more persons as pledges of prosecution; and if judgment was given against the plaintiff or he deserted his suit, both he and they were liable to amercement to the king either for not prosecuting or pro falso clamore; and hence the clause of si fecerit te securum in writs summoning the defendant to answer. Mirr. c. 1. f. 3. c. 2. f. 24. Ant. 126. b. 127. a. Originally these pledges were or ought to have been real and responsible persons; and the amercement of them and their principal was an actual branch of royal revenue; the ascertainment of the sum to be paid as an amercement being sometimes by the jury impanelled to try the issue, and sometimes by a jury summoned for that special purpose by the coroner on receiving an estreat of the amercement. F. N. B. on the writ of miserata misericordia 75. K. Griesley's case 8. Co. 39. a. Beecher's case 8. Co. 61. a. But this guard at length lost all its vigor, and even so early as in the reign of Edward the Fourth appears to have evaporated into mere form. 18. Ed. 4. 9. b. pl. 19. However as a form it still continues; and if omitted was a ground either for a demurrer or for a writ of error, till the legislature interposed by two different statutes, the last of which has been so liberally construed as scarce to make it possible to take advantage of the non-return or non-entry of pledges in any stage of a civil suit. See 3. Bullstr. 61. and the case of Hufsey v. Moore on a penal statute ibid. 275. where the subject of pledges is most learnedly investigated. See also Fortesc. Rep. 330. 1. Willf. 226. 2. Willf. 142. II. As the amercement leviable on a plaintiff and his pledges belonged wholly to the king in respect of and by way of penalty for troubling his courts improperly, it became necessary to have a distinct provision in favor of defendants who were unjustly sued; and for this purpose the legislature introduced costs in their favor. The first law giving costs to a defendant is said to be the statute of Marlebridge c. 6. which gave an action to the lord where he was defrauded of wardship by his tenant's collusively enfeoffing his heir within age, but at the same time directed, that the seoffee should have his damages and costs where he was maliciously impleaded. 52. Hen. 3. c. 8. and 2. Inst. 112. This provision for one particular case was, but not till after a long interval, followed by various statutes of a general kind, under which at this day a defendant is almost universally intitled to costs where the suit terminates against the plaintiff. See 22. H. 8. c. 15. 4. Jam. 1. c. 3. 8. Eliz. c. 2. 13. Cha. 2. ft. 2. c. 2. 8. & 9. W. & M. c. 11. 4. & 5. An. c. 16. to which add Law of Nisi Pri. ed. of 1725. chap. 8. p. 328. Mr. Serjeant Sayer's Law of Costs c. 8. 9. & 10. and Mr. Crompton's Pract. of K. B. & C. P. common places, 2. ed. v. 2 p. 461. But the statutory provisions are confined to suits in the king's courts of common law. However our courts of equity supply this seeming defect by the exercise of a discretion in awarding costs to a defendant, which is constantly done

Sect. 238.

Britton ubi supra. Fleta lib. 4. cap. 1.

SONT 4 causes de disseisin de rent charge. And you may adde a fifth, viz. resistance to distreine, counterpleading and vouching a record and taylor thereof, as hath beene said before. (1)

14. E. 4. 4. 35. H. 6. 7. 3. Aff.
8. 10. E. 3. 9. 40. E. 3. 24.
3. H. 6. 35. 3. E. 3. 75. 29. Aff.
51. 39. Aff. 4. 40. Aff. 3. 13. E.
1. Aff. 40. 3. Aff. 8. 8. H. 6.
11. 18. E. 3. Aff. 78. (Cro. Cha.
607.)

Denier. Deniall is a disseisin of a rent charge, as well as of a rent secke; albeit he may distreine for the rent charge, as well as for a rent service. Nota, that when bookes say that a detainer of a rent charge or secke is a disseisin, it must be intended upon a demand made. (2)

If there be two joyntenants, and the grantee of a rent charge distreine for the rent, and one of them make rescous, they are both disseisors; (3) for a distresse for the rent is a demand in law, and then the non-payment is a deniall and a disseisin; but he that made the rescous is onely the disseisor with force.

ET sont 4 causes de disseisin de rent charge; scilicet, rescous, replevin, enclosure, & denier, car denier est un disseisin de rent charge, come est avantdit de rent secke.

AND there bee foure causes of disseisin of a rent charge; scz. rescous, replevin, inclosure, & deniall, for denyall is a disseisin of a rent charge, as is said before of a rent secke.

Sect. 239.

49. E. 3. 15. 29. Aff. 5. 36. Aff.
7. 10. E. 3. 19. 33. H. 6. 35.
35. H. 6. 7. b.

THE reason, wherefore inclosure is a disseisin of a rent secke, is, because the grantee cannot come upon the land to demand it.

ET deux sont causes de disseisin de rent secke; cestascavoir denier & enclosure.

AND there be two causes of disseisin of a rent secke, that is to say, deniall and inclosure.

Sect. 240.

[*] Fleta lib. 1. cap. 42. 49. E.
3. 14. 49. Aff. 5. 29. Aff. 49.
(3. Inst. 195.)

FORSTALLA, [*] forestellamentum, signifieth obstruſionem vice vel impedimentum transitus &c.

Ove force & armes.

Vi & armis.

[†] Vid. sect. 431. (Post. 257. b.)

Force, viz. in [i] the common law is most commonly taken in ill part, and taken for unlawfull violence, for maximè paci sunt contraria vis et injuria. And therefore Britton said well, speaking in the person of the king, nous volons, que tous gents plus usent judgement que force. (4) Arma. Armes in the common law signifieth any thing, that a man striketh or hurteth

ET il semble, que il y ad un auter cause de disseisin de tous les trois services avantdits, cestascavoir, si le seignior soit en alant a la terre tenus de luy pur distreyner pur le rent arere, & le tenant ceo oyant luy encounter, & luy forstala la voy ovesque force & armes, ou luy menace en tiel forme que il ne oſast

AND it seemeth, that there is another cause of disseisin of all the three services aforesaid; that is, if the lord is going to the land holden of him for to distreine for the rent behind, and the tenant hearing this encountreth with him, forestal-leth him the way with force and armes, or menaceth him in such forme, that

(1) Ant. 160. b.

(2) This is agreeable to Littleton's description of such a disseisin in sect. 233. See W. Jo. 414.

(3) See acc. as to attornment by one of two jointenants, sect. 566.

(4) Britt. 116. a.

as often as they think, that, from the want of equity in the plaintiff or on any other account, he ought to have costs. III. Where two or more conspire to harraſs any person by a false and malicious suit whether criminally or civilly, it is a crime punishable by indictment, or the parties injured may sue for damages by writ of conspiracy; and both of these remedies lie at common law, that part of the statute or ordinance of articuli super chartas, which gives remedy against conspirators by writ out of chancery, being according to both Staundford and lord Coke only an affirmance of the common law. Staundf. P. C. 172. 2. Inst. 561. 562. IV. There is also a remedy for a false and malicious prosecution, though the aggravation of a conspiracy or confederacy is wanting and the injury comes from one only; for in such a case the party prosecuted may have an action upon the case for damages. I apprehend too that such action lies, as well where the vexation is practised by a civil suit, as where it is carried on through the medium of a criminal process. F. N. B. 114. D. Indeed the numerous cases to be met with in the books are chiefly for criminal prosecutions. See 1. Vin. Abr. 17. to 35. and the case of Farmer v. Dalling 4. Burr. 1971. But there seems to be no reason for distinguishing between the writ of conspiracy and an action upon the case in this respect; and exclusively of other authorities which may probably be found upon a search, lord Hobart, mr. serjeant Rolle, and lord Holt, all concur in the idea, that where a civil suit is commenced falsely and maliciously and for the mere purpose of vexation it is actionable. See Hobart's argument in Waterer v. Freeman Hob. 205. 266. Rolle's words in Sty. 379. and Holt's argument in giving judgment in Savill v. Roberts reported in 12. Mod. 208. 1. L. Raym. and other books, and the case of an action for falsely and maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy in 1. Blackst. Rep. 427. However from the language of a case in Dyer and of another in lord Coke's Reports, I doubt, whether actions on the case for false and malicious prosecutions were in general allowed in the reign of Elizabeth. Dy. 285. a. 4. Co. 14. b. V. In some special cases, a plaintiff failing in his action is exposed to the direct and immediate punishment of fine and imprisonment by the court in which he sues, without the benefit of a jury to assess the fine, or the circuitry of a separate prosecution to try the malice. This is the law in certain actions which are of a high nature, where the injury of which the defendant is accused concerns life or limb, or is otherwise of an atrocious kind, as in appeals of felony or mayhem, and in attain; for in all these the plaintiff may be fined and imprisoned by the court, if he be barred or nonsuited, or if the writ abates by his own default. Beecher's case 8. Co. 60. a. It is the same, where the action, though not of so high an order, is apparently vexatious; for on this principle a plaintiff, who sues the

[m] 23. Eliz. Dier 375. (Ant. 146. b.)

26. E. 3. 64. 11. H. 4. fol. ult. Ognel's case ubi supra. & 7. Co. 39. b. Lillington's case.

(2. Sid. 29.)

(4. Co. 51.)

[o] 5. Co. 118. Edridge's case.

* 40. E. 3. 3. b. 11. H. 4. 85. 14. E. 4. 4. 20. H. 7. 1. a. 28. H. 8. Dier 24.

[p] 34. E. 1. Avowry 233. F. N. B. 122. 10. H. 6. 11. 11. H. 6. 8. Mich. 32. H. 8. Rot. 429. Leake's case. Ognel's case ubi supra. 3. E. 3. Debt 157. (3. Co. 66. Cro. Eliz. 893.) [q] W. 1. ca. 36. F. N. B. 82. 122.

[r] 26. E. 3. 64. 10. H. 6. 11. (Cro. Jam. 28.)

* 22. H. 6. 25. F. N. B. 121. (Poil. 351. b.)

[s] Hill. 17. Eliz. Rot. 457. inter Sharpe & Pole. Vide Ognel's case ubi supra.

[t] 19. E. 3. Jurisdic. 22.

distreyned; which now they may doe by force of this statute; for in that point it addeth [m] another remedy, than the common law gave. (1)

3. If a man make a lease for life or lives, or a gift in taile, reserving a rent, this is a rent service within this statute.

4. The distresse is the more plaine and certain remedy than the action of debt; for the action of debt must be brought against them that tooke the profits when the rent became behinde, or against their executors or administrators; but the distresse may be taken upon the land, be it either in the tenants owne hands or in the hands of any other that claimes by or from him, (that is by interpretation under him) by purchase, gift or descent. And these words, claiming onely by and from him, are to be understood claiming onely from or under him by purchase, gift, or descent, and not paramount or above him; as the lord by escheate claimeth not under the tenant by purchase, gift, or descent, but by reason of his feigniory which is a title paramount. (2)

5. If there be lord and tenant, and the rent is behinde, and the lord grant away his feigniory, and dyeth, the executors shall have no remedy for these arrerages; because the grantor himself had no remedy for them when he dyed in respect of his grant, and the statute is (in like manner as the testator might or ought to have done) Et sic de similibus; for the act giveth no remedy, when the testator himselfe hath dispenced with the arrerages or had no remedy when he dyed. (3)

6. If the tenant make a lease for life the remainder for life, the remainder in fee, the tenant for life payes not the rent due to the lord, the lord dyeth, the tenant for life dyeth: the executors cannot distreine upon him in remainder, because he claimes not by or from the tenant for life. And so it is of a reversion for the cause aforesaid. But if a man grant a rent charge to A. for the life of B, and letteth the lands to C. for life, the remainder to D. in fee, the rent is behinde by divers yeares, B. dyeth, and after C. dyeth: A. may distrein D. in remainder for all the arrerages, by the latter branch of the statute of 32. H. 8. And this diversity riseth upon the severall pennings of the former branch and of this later, which you may reade in the statute it selfe, and so expounded and adjudged [o] in Edridge's case, and the latter clause giveth the lesser estate the greater remedy.

7. For the arrerages of a nomine pance, and for reliefe, or for aid pur faire fits chevalier or pur file marier, this statute * giveth no remedy. For, for the arrerages of the nomine pance, the grantee himselfe may have an action of debt, and consequently his executors or administrators; and yet the nomine pance as an incident to the rent shall descend to the heire. For reliefe the lord cannot have an action of debt but distreine; but his executors by [p] the common law shall have an action of debt (4), for it is no rent but a casuall improvement of services. For the said aides, if the lord doth levy them, the sonne and the daughter respectively shall have an action of debt against the executors or administrators of the lord, and if they have nothing, then against the heire; but this is by the statute [q] of W. 1. Note, that all manner of arrerages of rents issuing out of a freehold or inheritance, whether they be in money or corne, cattell, fowle, pepper, comine, victuall, spurres, gloves, or any other profit to be delivered or yeilded, and whether they be annuall or every three or four yeares, &c. or the like, are within this statute; but work dayes, or any corporall service, or the like, are not within this statute.

8. A feme sole is seised of a rent in fee, &c. which is behinde and unpaid; she taketh husband; the rent is behinde again; the wife dyeth: the husband by the common law should not have the arrerages growne due before the mariage, but for the arrerages become due during the coverture the husband might [r] have an action of debt by the common law. But now this statute * by a particular clause giveth the husband the arrerages due before mariage, and the said double remedy for the same, and that he may distreine for the arrerages growne due during the coverture. So it giveth him that which he could not have before, and further remedy for that which the common law gave him. And so it hath bene [s] adjudged.

The bishop of [t] Norwich had the first-fruits of all the clergy within the diocese at every avoydance; the church became void, and another parson became incumbent, who paid the bishop parcell of his first-fruits according to the taxation of the church, and for the rest he had a day given unto him to pay it; the bishop dyed; the residue was not payd, whereupon his executors brought an action of debt: and it is adjudged that no action doth lie, because it is a meere spirituall thing and no lay contract, and therefore the court had no jurisdiction to hold plea of it.

I have bene the longer in the exposition of the said statute. (5) for that it is a generall case, and doth concerne most part of the subjects of England. (6)

Finis Libri Secundi.

THE

(1) This doctrine is impugned by the court's resolution in Turner v. Lee Cro. Cha. 471. for according to that case the statute of H. 8. only applies, where the common law gives no remedy. To this construction also the preamble of the statute affords countenance. However in a case in Cro. Eliz. 332. it seems to have been taken for granted, that the statute did not operate thus restrictively; and in Hoole v. Bell 1. L. Raym. 172. it was adjudged, that the statute being remedial extends to the executors of all tenants for life, as well to those executors who previously to the statute were intitled to action of debt, as to those executors who had no remedy whatever. Ever since too this last case, I apprehend the law to have been taken accordingly. See further as to this construction, ant. 162. a. note 4.

(2) For other cases not within the statute on a like ground, see Cro. Eliz. 332. 1. Leon. 302. 2. Vern. 612. See also on the extent of this branch of the statute Edridge's case, 5. Co. 118.

(3) Acc. by Vaughan chief justice, in his Reports 40.

(4) Adjudged accordingly in a case in Noy 43. and Cro. Eliz. 883. See also acc. ant. 83. a. & b.

(5) In 18. Vin. Abr. 542. most of the cases on this statute since lord Coke's time will be found distributed according to the severall clauses. See also Gilbert on Action of Debt, b. 1. chap. 2. & 3.

(6) The only clause in the statute of Cha. 2. for converting military into common socage tenures, which seems to affect rents, is a proviso to preserve rents certain, and to make the reliefs on them universally the same as on the death of tenant in common socage. See 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. f. 5. and as to the difference between relief for knight's service and relief for common socage, ant. sect. 112. and 126. with the commentary thereon. But various other statutory provisions relative to rents have been made since lord Coke's time; and as these are very material to the recovery of rents, it may not be amiss here to take a general review of the chief of them, though some have been incidentally noticed before in the chapters on tenants for years and tenants at will. I. There are several statutes, which extend the remedy for arrears of rent by action of debt. By the 8. Ann. c. 14. debt is given for rents on leases for a life or lives during their continuance, which the common law denied. Ant. 47. 2. note 4. The 11. G. 2. c. 19. gives action on the case to executors of a lessor or landlord, being only tenant for his own life, where he dies before or on a rent-day, and by his death the lease determines, in which case the lessee or under tenant by the common law might have avoided paying any rent. And by the 5. G. 3. c. 17. which enables ecclesiastical persons to lease tithes and other incorporeal inheritances, debt is given for recovery of rent on such leases, Ant. 47. a. note 4. II. Other statutory provisions extend the remedy for rents by distress to cases to which it was before inapplicable, particularly to rents seek. Thus the 4. G. 2. c. 28. on account of the tediousness and difficulty of the remedy for rent seek and also rents of assize and chief rents, (though why these two latter were added I do not understand) enables distraining for such rents, where they have been duly answered for three years within twenty years before the first day of the then session of parliament, or where created afterwards, as in case of rent on a lease. So too the 4. Ann. c. 14. gives distress for arrears of rent after determination of any lease, whether for life or lives, for years or at will, but with a proviso, that the distress be within six calendar months after such

T H E
T H I R D B O O K
O F T H E
F I R S T P A R T
O F T H E
I N S T I T U T E S
O F T H E
L A W S O F E N G L A N D. (1)

Chap. I.

Of Parceners.

Sect. 241.

PARceners sont en deux maners, cest-ascavoir ; parceners solonque le course del common ley, & parceners solonque custome. Parceners solonque le course del common ley sont, l'ou bome, ou feme, seisie de certaines terres ou tenements en fee simple ou en taile, n'ad issue forsque files, et devie, et les tenements discendent a les issues (2), et les files entrent en les terres ou tenements issint

PARceners are of two sorts, to wit; parceners according to the course of the common law, and parceners according to the custome. Parceners after the course of the common law are, where a man, or woman, seised of certaine lands or tenements in fee simple or in taile, hath no issue but daughters, & dieth, & the tenements descend to the issues, and the daughters enter into the lands or tenements

OUR author having treated in his two former bookes, first of estates of lands and tenements, and in his second booke of tenures whereby the same have beene holden, now in his third booke doth teach us divers things concerning both of them, as, 1. The qualities of their estates. 2. In what cases the entry of him that right hath may bee taken away. 3. The remedies, and in what cases the same may be prevented, or avoyded. 4. How a man may bee barred of his right for ever, and in what cases the same may be prevented or avoyded.

For the first, he, having spoken of sole estates, divideth the quality of estates into individued and conditionall. Individued, into coparcenary, joyntenancy, and tenancy in common. Coparcenary, into parceners by the common

(1) In the vellum MSS. of Littleton belonging to the public library at Cambridge, there is the following argument or introduction to this third book.

"En cest tierce liver aucun chose sera dit a toy, mon fitz, de parceners, de jointenantez, de tenantez in comen, de estatez de terre et tenementz sur condition, de discentez que tollount entrez, de continuell clayme, de releifz et confirmationz, de garrantiez liniall et collaterall et de garrantiez que comensont per disseisin, de attornament, de surrenders, de discontinuance, de remitterez, de tenant per elegit, de tenant per estatut merchant, de tenant per estatut de le staple &c."

On this addition to the printed copies of Littleton, sir William Jones, who kindly favoured me with the readings from the two Cambridge manuscripts, writes this observation.—"It is very remarkable, that in this argument a chapter is promised concerning surrenders, of which Littleton has not expressly and separately treated. The word surrenders, which is abbreviated by the transcriber, seems completely to have puzzled a former owner of the manuscript. He says in the margin, ceste parole est en autre fragment que j'ay : quere ce que il signifie. Since then surrenders are mentioned in two manuscripts as one of the heads of the third book, it is not improbable, that the author intended to have written a distinct chapter concerning them, as he did write concerning tenants by ELEGIT and by STATUTE MERCHANT and STAPLE."—See sect. 324. where Littleton refers to a chapter on elegits.

(2) In L. & M. and in Roh. it is filles instead of issues.

such determination and during continuance of the landlord's title and possession of the tenant indebted; whereas by the common law the power of distress ceased with the tenure. III. Other statutory provisions have variously improved the remedy of distress for rents, where it is applicable; namely, by enabling the sale of the property distrained and so giving to it the effect of an execution, by making new subjects of property distrainable, by newly regulating the mode of impounding distresses, by authorizing to distrain in any place things fraudulently carried off the premises to evade distress, and by preventing the avoidance of the whole distress for a mere informality or irregularity in part of the process. See 2. W. & M. c. 5. 8. Ann. c. 14. 4. G. 2. c. 28. and 11. G. 2. c. 19. to which add 3. Blackst. Com. 9th ed. 6. to 15. where the effect of these statutes is admirably incorporated into his view of the law of distresses with his usual excellence of order. IV. The 8. An. c. 14. f. 1. secures to landlords to the amount of a year's rent where so much or more is in arrear, in preference to persons seizing goods on the land in lease under an execution; but this favour is granted with a proviso to prevent prejudice to the crown in recovering and seizing debts fines and forfeitures.

Vide sect. 385.

common law, and parceners by the custome; and he beginneth his third book with parceners claiming by descent, which, coming by the act of law and right of blood, is the noblest & worthiest meanes whereby lands doe fall from one to another. Conditional, into conditions expresse or in deed, and conditions in law. Conditions in deed, into gages which he divideth into vadia mortua, and vadia viva. Vadia mortua, so called because either money or land may be lost: and viva, because neither money nor land can be lost, but both preserved. Then speaketh he of descents, whereby the entry of him that right hath may be taken away. And next to that of the remedy how to prevent the same, viz. by continuall claim. Then he teacheth, how a man, having a defeasible or an imperfect estate, may perfect and establish the same by three meanes, viz. by release, by confirmation, and attournment, where that is requisite.

Having spoken of a descent, being an act in law which taketh away an entry, he doth then speake of a discontinuance, the act of the party, whereby the entry of them that right have shall be taken away. And next unto that he teacheth in what case the same may be avoided by remitter. After he had treated of descents and discontinuances, which take away entries, but barre not actions, lastly, he setteth forth the learning of warranties, (a curious and cunning kind of learning I assure you) whereby both entry, action, and right may be barred, and the remedies how they may be prevented before they fall, and in what cases they may be avoyded after they be fallen. And thus have you an account of the thirteene severall chapters of his third booke. And now his method being understood, let us heare what our author will say unto us concerning parceners.

discendus a eux, donques els sont appels parceners, & quant a files els sont (1) forsque un heire a leur ancestor. Et els sont appels parceners; pur ceo que per le briefe, que est appel briefe de participatione faciendâ, la ley eux voet cohercer, que partition serra fait entre eux. Et si sont deux files al queux les terres descendent, donque els sont appels deux parceners; et si sont trois files, donque els sont appels trois parceners; et si quater files, quater parceners; & issint ouster. (2) so descended to them, then they are called parceners, and be but one heire to their ancestor. And they are called parceners; because by the writ, which is called breve de participatione faciendâ, the law will constrain them, that partition shall be made among them. And if there be two daughters to whom the land descendeth, then they bee called two parceners; & if there bee three daughters, they bee called three parceners; and foure daughters, four parceners; and so forth.

[a] Bract. lib. 2. fo. 66. 71. &c. & 76. &c. & lib. 5. fo. 443. Brit. fo. 58. 112. 128. 183. 184. 185. 189. 193. Flet. lib. 5. ca. 9. li. 6. ca. 47. Glan. li. 7. ca. 3. & li. 13. c. 11.

[b] Bract. li. 2. fo. 66. 76. Flet. ubi sup. Brit. ubi sup. & Statut de Hibern.

[c] Vide sect. 8. vers. fin.

[d] Fleta lib. 5. ca. 9. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 47.

Et quant a files els sont forsque un heire a leur [a] ancestor. This is false printed; for the original is, et quant que files els sont, els sont parceners, et sont forsque un heire a leur ancestor. (3)

Parceners. [b] Jus descendit quasi uni hæredi propter juris unitatem, sicut sunt plures filiae, &c. Et ubi omnes simul & in solidum hæredes sunt, plures coheredes sunt quasi unum corpus, propter unitatem juris quod habent. Whereupon it followeth, that albeit where there bee two parceners [c] they have moities in the lands descended to them, yet are they both but one heyre; and one of them is not the moiety of an heire, but both of them are but unus hæres.

And it is to be observed, that there is a diversity betweene a descent, which is an act of the law, and a purchase, which is an act of the party. [d] For if a man be seised of lands in fee, and hath issue two daughters, and one of the daughters is attainted of felony, the father dieth both daughters being alive; the one moiety shall descend to the one daughter, and the other moiety shall escheat. But if a man make a lease for life, the remainder to the right heires of A. being dead, who hath issue two daughters, whereof the one is attainted of felony, in this case some have said, that the remainder is not good for a moiety, but voyd for the whole; for that both the daughters should have bene (as Littleton saith) but one heire. (4)

A man

(1) See below note 3.

(2) In L. & M. and in Roh. an &c. comes in here.

(3) The words are as here corrected by lord Coke both in L. and M. and in Roh.

(4) See ant. 25. b. 26. b. and post. 196. b. 374. b. Here lord Hale introduces the following note.—Donee in tail on condition not to discontinue. Donee has issue two daughters. One discontinues. The donor may enter. R. 26. Eliz. C. B. Sir W. Moore's case. Hal. MSS.

A man makes a gift in taile, reserving two shillings rent to himselfe during his life, and if he die his heire within age then reserving a rent of twentie shillings to his heires for ever; he dieth having issue two daughters, the one of full age, the other within age: in this case the donee shall hold by fealtie onely, inasmuch as the one daughter as well as the other is his heire, and both of them (as Littleton saith) make but one heire, ergo his heire is not within age, neither is his heire in that case of full age. But if the reservation had been, "and if he die, his heire neither being within age, nor of full age, &c." in this case the reservation had bene good. And if it doth not begin in his next heire, it shall never begin as this case is; for that the precedencie is not performed. [e] But yet if one of them be of age, and the other within age, she shall have her age and other privileges and advantages that an heire within age shall have; and when they are demandants, for the nonage of the one the paroll shall demurre against them both (1). [f] Sunt autem plures participes quasi unum corpus, in eo quod unum jus habent; & oportet quod corpus sit integrum, & quod in nullâ parte sit defectus. And when the right heire doth claime by purchase, he must be (say they) a compleat right heire in judgement of law. (2) And therefore if lands be given to a man and to the heires females of his bodie, and he hath issue a son and a daughter, and dieth, the daughter shall have the land by descent; but if a remainder be limited to the heires females of the bodie of J. S. and he hath issue a sonne and a daughter, his daughter shall never take it by purchase, for that she is not heire female of the body of J. S. because he hath a sonne.

If a man give lands to another, and to the heires males of his body, upon condition, that if he die without heire female of his bodie, that then the donor shall re-enter, this condition is utterly voyd, (3) for he cannot have an heire female, so long as he hath an heire male.

And as they be but one heire, and yet severall persons; so have they one entire freehold in the land, as long as it remains undivided, in respect of any stranger's præcipe. [g] But betweene themselves to many purposes they have in judgement of law severall freeholds; for the one of them may infeoffe another of them of her part, and make liverie. [h] And this coparcenarie is not severed or divided by law by the death of any of them; for if one die, her part shall descend to her issue, and one præcipe shall lie against them, for they shall never joyne as heires to severall aunccestors in any action aunccestrell, but when one right descends from one aunccestour: and then propter unitatem juris, though they be in severall degrees from the common aunccestor, yet shall they joyne. But the issues of severall coparceners, because severall rights descend, shall never joyne as heires to their mothers; and yet when they have recovered, a writ of partition lieth betweene them.

For example, [i] If a man hath issue two daughters, and is disseised, and the daughters have issue and die, the issues shall joyne in a præcipe; because one right descends from the aunccestor; and it maketh no difference, whether the common aunccestor, being out of possession, died before the daughters or after, for that in both cases they must make themselves heires to the grandfather which was last seised, and when the issues [k] have recovered they are coparceners, and one præcipe shall lie against them. And likewise if the issues of two coparceners, which are in by severall descents, be disseised, they shall joyne in assise. But in the same case if the two daughters had been actually seised, and had bene disseised, after their deceases the issues shall not joyne; because severall rights descended to them from severall aunccestors; and yet when they have severally recovered, they are coparceners, (4) and one præcipe lieth against them, and a release made by one of them to the other is good. And so note a diversitie inter descensum in capita, & in stirpes.

And the statute of Gloucester cap. 6. made anno 6 Edw. 1. speaketh, si homo morge, &c. if a man dieth: so as that statute extendeth not, but where one dieth, and hath divers heires, whereof one is sonne or daughter, brother or sister, nephew or neece, and the others be in a further degree, all their heires from henceforth shall have their recoverie by writ of mortdaucestor. And this seemeth to me to be the common law; for Bracton, who writ before this statute, saith, [l] in casu cum sit assisa mortis antecessoris conjungenda cum consanguinitate, non erit postea recurrendum ad præcipe de consanguinitate, sed ad assisam mortis; quia persona, quæ propinquior est, & facit assisam, & trahit ad se personam & gradum remotiorem ut ubi potius procedat assisa quam præcipe, quia id, quod est magis remotum, non trahit ad se quod est magis junctum, sed è contrario in omni casu. And herewith agreeth the most of our [m] bookes: and two coparceners shall have a writ of ayel, and by their count suppose the common aunccestor to be grandfather to the one, and great grandfather to the other. (5)

I have benee the longer herein; for that this inheritance of coparceners is the rarest kind of inheritance that is in the law.

Furthermore it is to be observed, that herein also in case of coparceners, [n] sometimes the descent is in stirpes, (viz.) to stockes or roots; and sometime in capita, to heads. As if a man hath issue two daughters and dyeth, this descent is in capita, viz. that every one shall inherit alike, as Littleton here saith. But if a man hath issue two daughters, and

[e] Temps E. 1. Age 128. 8. E. 2. Judgement 240. 30. E. 3. 7. 44. E. 3. Age 47. 26. Aff. 65. 13. E. 3. Age 51. 28. Aff. 22. 29. Aff. 25. 57. 34. H. 6. 4. Aff. 17. [f] Fleta lib. 5. ca. 9. et lib. 6. cap. 47. (1. Co. 103. 2. Ro. Abr. 416.)

[g] 10. E. 4. 17. E. 3. 46. (Mo. 60.) [h] 37. H. 6. 8. 19. H. 6. 45. (Post. 196. 2.)

Vid. sect. 313.

[i] 7. E. 3. 30. 34. 48. E. 3. 14. 24. E. 3. 13. F. N. B. 221. 35. H. 6. 23. 27. E. 3. 89. 31. H. 6. 14. b. [k] 37. H. 6. 8. 9. E. 4. 13. b. 42. E. 3. 16. 17. (8. Co. 86. Post. 196. a. 364. b.)

[l] Bracton lib. 4. 254. b. Britton fol. 181. 182. & 178. 204. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 1. et 2. & 9. in fine.

[m] 19. E. 3. tit. Joyndre in Action 31. 7. E. 3. 30. et 34. 27. E. 3. 89. 48. E. 3. 14. 24. E. 3. 13. F. N. B. 221. Register. Vide 32. E. 1. Joyndre in Action 34. 13. E. 3. ibid. 29. Temps E. 2. ib. 35. 30. E. 1. ibid. 36. 25. H. 6. 23.

[n] Bracton lib. 2. 66. Britton cap. 71. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 9. et 6. cap. 47.

(1) But in the writ de partitione faciendâ the younger sister shall not have her age against the elder. Post. 171. 2.

(2) In a former note I have much at length, and as I fear tediously, endeavoured to support lord Coke in this doctrine. Ant. 24. b. note 3. But since the writing of that note a case has been published, in which the court of king's bench after three arguments decided against applying the rule to a will. See Willes and others v. Palmer and others 5. Burr. 2615. In another case also, which was three times argued, the court of exchequer, as I understand, refused to apply the rule to a marriage-settlement. Evans on demise of Burtonshaw v. Weston determined in a special verdict in Scaccar. Mich. 1774. or Hill. 1775. This latter case had been previously determined in B. R. in a case reserved in an ejectment in which mr. Burtonshaw was defendant, and there too the case was argued three times. In both courts the judgment was against mr. Burtonshaw. But the question on the construction of heirs female of the body considered as words of purchase was only a secondary point; and whether it was debated in B. R. or not, I am not at present informed. After such authorities, it can be scarce necessary to guard the reader against incautiously adopting my private ideas.

(3) As to effect from a condition's being void, see post. 206. a. & b.

(4) See the like as to jointenants, post. 188. a.

(5) See F. N. B. 197. B.

the eldest daughter hath issue three daughters, and the youngest one daughter, all these four shall inherit; but the daughter of the youngest shall have as much as the three daughters of the eldest, ratione stirpium, and not ratione capitum, for in judgement of law every daughter hath a several stocke or root.

Also if a man hath issue two daughters, and the eldest hath issue divers sonnes and divers daughters, and the youngest hath issue divers daughters, the eldest son of the eldest daughter shall onely inherit; for this descent is not in capita, but all the daughters of the youngest shall inherit, and the eldest son is coparcener with the daughters of the youngest, and shall have one moiety, (viz.) his mother's part; so that men descending of daughters may be coparceners, as well as women, and shall joyntly implead and be impleaded, as is aforesaid.

[o] 20. E. 2. Nuper ob. 14. F. N. B. 197. 7. E. 3. 13.

Braet. lib. 2. fo. 66. 71. &c. Brit. ca. 71. Fleta l. 5. ca. 9.

[o] If there be two coparceners, and the one bring a rationabili parte or a nuper obiit against the other, the defendant claime by purchase, and disclaime in the blood, the plaintife shall have a mortdauncester against her as a stranger for the whole. (1)

Parceners sont en deux manners. Here Littleton doth divide parceners; and herewith doe agree the ancient bookes of law.

Et ils sont appels parceners, &c. Parceners, participes, et dicuntur participes, quasi partis capaces, five partem capientes; quia res inter eas est communis ratione plurium personarum. This tenancie in the ancient books of law is called adequatio, and sometime familia hirsifcunda, (2) an inheritance to be divided; and many times parceners are called coparceners.

[p] Regist. Orig. 76. 316. Regist. Jud. 80. Brit. ubi sup. Flet. ubi sup. Braet. ubi supra, & 5. Co. 443. b.

Breve de participatione faciendâ. This is false printed, (3) and should be De partitione faciendâ, (4) a writ whereby the coparceners are compelled to make partition. [p] Item est alia actio mixta, quæ dicitur actio familiæ hirsifcundæ; & locum habet inter eos qui communem habent hereditatem, &c. Et locum habet, ut videtur, inter cohæredes, ubi agitur de proparte sororum; vel inter alios, ubi res inter partes et cohæredes dividi debeat, sicut sunt plures sorores, quæ sunt quasi unus hæres, vel inter plures fratres, qui sunt quasi unus hæres ratione rei quæ divisibilis est inter plures masculos, &c.

(Ant. 32. a. 150. 151.)

Des terres & tenements. It is to be considered of what inheritances daughters shall be coparceners, and how and in what manner partition shall be made betweene them. Wherin it is to be observed, that of inheritances some be entire, and some be severall: againe, of entire, some be divisible, and some be indivisible. And here it appeareth by Littleton, that parceners take their appellation, because they are compelled to make partition by writ of partitione faciendâ; where note, that Littleton alloweth well to finde out the true derivation of words, as often hath bene and shall be observed.

[q] 13. E. 2. tit. Quar. Imp. 170. 17. E. 3. 38. Flet. li. 5. c. 9. Mir. ca. 2. sect. 17. [r] 44. E. 3. tit. Partic. 6. & tit. Avowrie 75. 2. H. 6. fol. 11. (Ant. 148. a.)

If a villeine descend to two coparceners, this is an entire inheritance; and albeit the villeine himself cannot be divided, yet the profit of him may be divided; one coparcener may have the service one day, one weeke, &c. and the other another day or weeke, &c. And for the same reason a woman shall be endowed of a villeine, as before it appeareth in the chapter of dower. (5) Likewise an advowson is an entire inheritance; [q] and yet in effect the same may be divided betweene coparceners, for they may divide it to present by turnes. (6)

A rent charge is entire, and against common right; [r] yet may it be divided betweene coparceners, and by act in law the tenant of the land is subject to severall distresses, and partition may be made before seisin of the rent.

Entire inheritances not divisible, we finde divers in our bookes; and some inheritances that are divisible, and yet shall not be parted or divided betweene coparceners, as hereafter shall appeare.

[s] 2. E. 2. tit. Dower 123. [t] 17. E. 2. nuper obiit 12. 16. E. 2. ibid. 11. 5. Mariae Dier 153.

[s] If a man have reasonable estovers, as housebote, heybote, &c. appendant to his freehold, they are so entire as they shall not be divided betweene coparceners. [t] So if a corodie incertaine be granted to a man and his heires, and he hath issue divers daughters, this corodie shall not be divided betweene them; but of a corodie certaine, partition may be made.

[u] 17. E. 3. 72. [w] 13. E. 2. Quare Imped. 170. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 9. [x] Mich. 24. et 25. Eliz. inter Comitum de Huntingdon et Seignior Mountjoy. (Mo. 174.)

[u] Homage and fealtie cannot be divided betweene coparceners (7). [w] So a piscarie incertaine, or a common sauns nombre, (8) cannot be divided betweene coparceners; for that would be a charge to the tenant of the soile.—[x] The lord Mountjoy, seised of the mannor of Canford in fee, did by deed indented and inrolled bargain and sell the same to Browne in fee, in which indenture this clause was contained. Provided alwayes, and the said Browne did covenant and grant to and with the said lord Mountjoye, his heires, and assignes, that the lord Mountjoye, his heires and assignes, might dig for ore in the lands (which were greete waists) parcell of the said mannor, and to dig turfe also for the making of allome. And in this case three poynts were resolved by all the judges. First, that this did amount to a grant of an interest and inheritance to the lord Mountjoye, to digge, &c. Secondly, that notwithstanding

(1) See post. 175. 242. a.

(2) See the verb herisco or erisco used ant. 86. a.

(3) But in L. & M. and in Roh. it is the same.

(4) Monfieur Houard derives this writ from the capitulars of the first French kings. 1. Hou. Littl. 318.

(5) Ant. 32. a.

(6) See an instance of a partition of an advowson between jointenants in Carth. 505.

(7) See ant. 67. b. and Dav. Rep. 61. b.

(8) Acc. as to common sauns nombre, ant. 149. a. See the note on this sort of common, ant. 122. a.

ding this grant Browne his heires and assignes might dig also, and like to the case of common sauns number. Thirdly, that the lord Mountjoy might assigne his whole interest to one, two, or more; but then, if there be two or more, they could make no division of it, but work together with one stocke; neither could the lord Mountjoy, &c. assigne his interest in any part of the waite to one or more, for that might worke a prejudice and a surcharge to the tenant of the land; and therefore if such an incertaine inheritance descendeth to two coparceners, it cannot be divided betweene them (1).

But then it may be demanded, what shall become of these inheritances? The answer is, that it appeareth in our bookes, that regularly [y] the eldest shall have the reasonable estovers, common, pishary, corody incertaine, &c. and the rest shall have a contribution, that is, an allowance of the value in some other of the inheritance, and so of the like. But what if the common ancestor left no other inheritance to give any thing in allowance, what contribution or recompence shall the younger coparceners have? It is answered, that if the estovers or pishary or common be incertaine, then shall one coparcener have the estovers, pishary, or common, &c. for a time, and the other for the like time; as the one for one yeare, and the other for another, or more, or lesser time, whereby no prejudice can grow to the owner of the soile. Or in case of the pishary, the one may have one fish, and the other the second, &c. or one may have the first draught, and the second the second draught, &c. And if it be of a park, one may have the first beast, and the second the second, &c. And if of a mill, one to have the mill for a time, and the other the like time; or the one one toll dish, and the other the second, (2) &c. And this appeareth to be the ancient law; for it is said, [z] Sunt alie res hereditarie, que veniunt in partitionem, que, cum dividi non possunt, conceduntur uni; ita quod alie coheredes alibi de communi hereditate habeant ad valorem, sicut sunt vicaria, piscaria, pascua; vel saltem quod partem habeant pro defectu, sicut secundum piscem, tertium vel quartum, vel secundum tractum, tertium vel quartum. Item in parvis secundam, tertiam aut quartam bestiam.

But now let us turne our eye to inheritances of honor and dignity. And of this there is an ancient booke case, [*] in 23. H. 3. tit. partition 18. in these words: Note, if the earldome of Chester descend to coparceners, it shall be divided betweene them as well as other lands, and the eldest shall not have this feignory and earldome entire to herselfe, quod nota, adjudged per totam curiam. (3) By this it appeareth, that the earldome (that is, the possessions) (4) of the earldome) shall bee divided; and that where there bee more daughters than one, the eldest shall not have the dignity and power of the earle, that is, to bee a countesse. What then shall become of that dignity? The answer is [a] that in that case the king, who is the sovereigne of honour and dignity, may for the incertainty conferre the dignity upon which of the daughters he please. And this hath beene the usage since the conquest, as it is said. (6)

But if an earle that hath his dignity to him and his heires dieth, having issue one daughter, the dignity shall descend to the daughter; for there is no incertainty, but onely one daughter, and the dignity shall descend unto her and her posterity, as well as any other inheritance. And this appeareth by many precedents, and by a late judgement given in Sampson Leonard's case, who married with Margaret the only sister and heire of Gregory Fines lord Dacre of the South, and in the case of William lord Ros. (7)

But there is a difference betweene a dignity or name of nobility, and an office of honor. For if a man hold a manor of the king to be high constable of England, and dye having issue two daughters, the eldest daughter taketh husband, he shall execute the office (8) solely, and before marriage it shall be exercised by some sufficient deputy: and all this was resolved by all the judges of England, in the case of [b] the duke of Buckingham. But the dignity of the crowne of England is without all question descendible to the eldest daughter alone, and to her posterity, (10) and so hath it beene declared by act of parliament. [*] For, regnum non est divisibile. And so was the descent of Troy.

Præterea sceptrum, Illiæ quod gesserat olim Maxima natarum Priami.

Virgil 1. Æneid.

[b] If a castle, that is used for the necessary defence of the realme, descend to two or more coparceners, this castle might be divided by chambers and roomes as other houses bee. But yet, for that it is pro bono publico & pro defensione regni, it shall not be divided; for as one saith, propter jus gladii dividi non potest; and another saith, [*] pur le droit del espée que ne seffre division en aventure que la force del realme ne defaille pax taunt. But castles of habitation for private use, that are not for the necessary defence of the realme, ought to bee parted betweene coparceners as well as other houses; and wives may thereof be endowed, as hath beene said in the chapter of dower. (11)

If there be two coparceners of certaine lands with warranty, and they make partition of

(1) This same case of the earl of Huntingdon and lord Mountjoy is reported in Godb. 17. 1. And. 307. and Mo. 174. Lord Anderson gives the opinion of the judges as it was certified in writing to the privy council; but this certificate takes no notice of the point of indivisibility; nor is it one of the questions stated by lord Anderson to have been referred to the judges. In Mo. 707. the same case is cited arguendo; and there four judges are represented to have been equally divided in opinion as to the first point mentioned by lord Coke. But according to Anderson the difference of opinion was only, whether any remedy was furnished by law for the interest reserved to lord Mountjoy by the proviso. As to this latter point, see 8. Co. 46. Noy 145.

(2) How dower is to be assigned out of indivisible inheritances, see ant. 32. a.

(3) See Dav. Rep. 61. b.

(4) In 2. Ro. Abr. 254. the case of 23. H. 3. relative to the earldom of Chester is mentioned as if the daughters might have been coparceners of the dignity itself, and not merely of the possessions of the earldom. How the earldom of Chester became annexed to the crown in the reign of Hen. 3. on the death of John Scot the last earl leaving three sisters his coheirs, is explained in 1. Dugd. Bar. 45. See further on this point of indivisibility Bract. 76. b. Brit. 187. Flet. 313. and Dav. Rep. 61. b.

(5) Fitz. Abr. partition 56.

(6) This doctrine about the abeyance of titles of honor and their being revived by the royal nomination, though our books furnish little matter on the subject, is undoubtedly law; and there are many instances of an exertion of this prerogative. One of the most remarkable took place during the present reign in the person of the late mr. Norborn Berkley, who in 1764 was called to the house of peers in right of the old barony of Botetourt after an abeyance of several centuries, and was allowed to sit according to the antiquity of that barony. See Cas. in Dom. Proc. for 1764. Another instance in the present reign is the case of Mr. Francis Dashwood late lord Despencer; for in 1763 he was called to the ancient barony of that name in right of his deceased mother, who was eldest sister and one of the coheirs of an earl of Westmorland, on whose death that barony had become in abeyance; and being so summoned he took his seat as premier baron in place of lord Abergavenny, who before possessed that distinction.

(7) The first of these cases was in 1596. and the second in 1616. Both are now in print, having been published from manuscripts of the time by mr. Collins in his claims concerning baronies, &c. See p. 24. & 162. It must not be inferred from the purpose for which lord Coke cites them, that the descent of a barony to a female, where in the creation it was not confined to heirs male, was controvertible. The points debated in those cases were of another kind. In Sampson Leonard's the question was, whether the husband can be tenant by the curtesy of a title of honour. See my observation as to that point ant. 29. b. note 1. That of lord Ros depended on the effect of superadding an earldom in tail male to one having a barony before descendible to heirs general, it being contended, that the former should attract the latter in point of descent so as to be inseparable whilst the earldom continues.

[c] 29. E. 3. garrantie 70. (6. Co. 12. b.) [d] Itin. Pickering.
 8. E. 3. Rot. 34.
 (Ant. 115. a.)

of the land, the warranty shall remayne; because they are compellable to make partition. [c] But otherwise it was of joynteners at the common law, as shall be said hereafter in his proper place.—[d] Thomas de Eberston, seised of the manor of Eberston within the forrest of Pickering, had kept time out of mind a woodward for keeping of the woods parcell of that manor, and had the barke of all the trees felled in the said woods by any of the forresters of that forrest as belonging to his manor (which he could not have without a prescription). (1) Thomas of Eberston infeoffed two of the said manor; betweene whom partition was made, so as one of them had the one halfe in fevralty, and the other the other halfe. (2) Robert Wyerne afterwards had the one halfe, and Thomas Thurnise the other; and they in the eyre of Pickering claimed to keepe a woodward within the said woods, and the barke afore-said; and the truth hereof and the usage being specially found by the forrestors verderors and regardors, Willoughby Hungerford and Hanburie justices itinerants within that forrest gave judgment as followeth. Idco consideratum est, quod prædicti Robertus & Thomas habeant woodwardum & corticem in bosco prædicto de quercubus prædictis sibi & hæredibus suis imperpetuum. Salvo semper jure, &c.

Sect. 242.

AUXY si home seïsie de tene-ments en fee simple ou en fee taile devy sauns issue de son corps engender, & les tenements descendent a ses soers, els sont parceners, come est avantdit. Et en mesme le maner, lou il n'ad pas soers, mes les tenements descendent a ses aunts, els sont parceners, (3) &c. Mes si home n'ad forsque une file, el ne poit estre dit parcer-ner, mes el est appelle file & beire, &c.

ALSO if a man seised of tene-ments in fee simple or in fee-taile dieth without issue of his bodie begotten, and the tene-ments descend to his sisters, they are parceners as is afore-said. And in the same manner, where he hath no sisters, but the lands descend to his aunts, they are par-ceners, &c. But if a man hath but one daughter, she shal not be called parcener, but shee is cal-led daughter and heire, &c.

OU en fee taile. This must be intended of an estate taile made to the father and to the heires of his body; for otherwise if the estate taile were made to a man and to the heires of his body, his sisters cannot inherit. And not only daughters shall be coparceners, but sisters, aunts, great aunts, &c.

File & beire, &c. Here by (&c.) is implied sister and heire, aunt and heire, great aunt and heire, and so upward.

Sect. 243.

BY this section, and the (&c.) in the end of it, it is to be understood, that there are two kind of partitions betweene coparceners; the one in deed or expresse, and the other in law or implicate. Of partitions in deed or expresse, some bee voluntary whereof Littleton enumerates foure manners; and one compulsory, that is, by writ of partition. (4)

ET est ascavoir, que partition enter parceners poit estre fait en divers maners. Un est, quant els agreeont de faire par-tition, & sont par-tition de les tene-ments; sicome si soy-ent deux parceners,

AND it is to bee understood, that partition may be made in divers maners. One is, when they agree to make partition, & do make partition of the tenements; as if there bee two parceners to divide between them

(Ant. 46. a.)

(1) The claim of a like privilege as appurtenant to a manor is mentioned in Crompt. Jurisd. Co. 192. b. See further concerning the office of woodward in Manwood's For. Laws by Nelson, 389.

(2) It is observable in this partition, that no provision is made in respect to the office of woodward and privilege of having the bark of felled trees, which were appurtenant to the manor. In a former place lord Coke states the partition of a manor to which an advowson was appendant, and explains what the effect is on the advowson, where from want of any particular agreement between the parties it is left to the law to regulate how the advowson shall be disposed of. Ant. 122. a.

(3) Els sont parceners not in L. & M. or Roh.

(4) The reference in the margin to fol. 46. a. is to an instance of the difference in point of effect on the lessee for years of a coparcener, between partition by writ and partition without.

(8) In a late contest about the office of great chamberlain, which arose in consequence of the late duke of Ancester's leaving two sisters his co-heiresses, one of whom was married to mr. Burrell, the then attorney general made a report in conformity to the doctrine here stated by lord Coke as to the office of high constable; and this report, of which I have a copy, contains a very learned investigation of the subject. But afterwards when the case came before the lords, the judges gave it as their opinion, that the office belongs to both sisters; that the husband of the eldest is not of right intitled to execute it; and that both sisters may execute it by deputy to be appointed by them, such deputy not being of a degree inferior to a knight, and to be approved of by the king. See Journ. Dom. Proc. 25. May 1781. the printed cases of the several claimants, and the Parl. Reg. for 1780-1, v. 4. 258 to 297.

(9) S. C. Keilw. 170. b. 4. Inst. 117.

(10) See ant. 15. b.

(11) Ant. 31. b.

a devider enter eux les tenements en deux parts, chescun part per soy en severaltie & d'egal value; et si sont 3 parceners, a devider les tenements en trois parts per soy en severaltie, &c.

the tenements in two parts, each part by it selfe in severalty and of equall value; and if there bee three parceners, to divide the tenements in three parts by it selfe in severalty, &c.

The first partition in deed (F. N. B. 167.) between coparceners, is that which Littleton here speaketh of, viz. Quant els agreont & font partition de les tenements, &c. chescun part per soy en severalty & de egall value, &c. If coparceners make partitions, at full age and unmarried & of sane memorie, of lands in fee simple, it is good & firme for ever, albeit the values be unequal; but if it be of lands entailed, or if any of the parcners be of non sane memorie, it shall bind the parties themselves, but not their issues unlesse it be equall; or if any be covert, it shall bind the husband, but not the wife or her heires; or if any be within age, it shall not bind the infant; as shall be said more fully hereafter (1). The second partition followeth in the next section. And here the (&c.) implyeth further, that if there be foure parceners, then foure parts, if five, five parts and so forth. It further implyeth, that all this must be in severalty; whereof, and with what limitations this is to bee understood, it hath beene declared before. Vide sect. 241.

Sect. 244.

UN autre partition est, a eslier per agreement enter eux, certaine de lour amies, de faire partition des terres ou tenements en le forme avantdit. Et en tiels cases, apres tiel partition, le eigne file prymerment esliera un des partes issint divides, que el voit aver pur sa part, & donques la second file procheine apres luy autre part, & donques la tierce soer autre part, donques le quarte autre part, &c. si issint soit que soient plusors soers, &c. si ne soit auterment agreee enter eux. Car il poit estre agreee enter eux, que un avera tiels tenements, & un autre tiels tenements, &c. sans ascun tiel primer election, &c.

ANother partition there is, viz. to choose, by agreement betweene themselves, certaine of their friends, to make partition of the lands or tenements in forme aforelaid. And in these cases, after such partition, the eldest daughter shall choose first one of the parts so divided which she will have for her part, and then the second daughter next after her another part, and then the third sister another part, then the fourth another part, &c. if so bee that there bee more sisters, &c. unlesse it bee otherwise agreed betweene them. For it may be agreed betweene them, that one shall have such tenements, and another such tenements; &c. without any primer election.

Donques le quarte autre part, &c. 31. Aff. 16.

Here the (&c.) implyeth the 5 sister, and after her the 6 and so forth.

Car il poit estre agreee enter eux, que un avera tiels tenements & un autre tiels tenements, &c.

Here by this (&c.) is implied divers rules of law proving the conclusion of Littleton in this sect. viz. Modus & conventio vincunt legem. Pacto aliquid licitum est, quod sine pacto non admittitur. Quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se introducto. But with this limitation, that these rules extend (1. Sid. 339.) not to any thing, that is against the common-wealth or common right. For conventio privatorum non potest publico juri derogare. (1. Sid. 193. 269. Cro. Eliz. 664.)

Sect.

(1) See post. sect. 255. to 258. inclusive. See also 173. b.

Sect. 245.

* Bract. li. 2. 77. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 9. Britton ca. 72.

ENitia pars. It is called in old bookes æisnetia, which is derived of the French word eisne for eldest, as much to say as the part of the eldest; for Bracton saith, quod eisnetia semper est præferenda propter privilegium ætatis; sed esse, quod filia primogenita relicto nepote vel nepte in vita patris vel matris, decesserit, præferenda erit soror antenata tali nepoti vel nepti quantum ad eisnetiam, quia mortem parentum expectant. And herewith agreeth Fleta also, quod nota: whereby it appeareth that enitia pars is personall to the eldest, and that this prerogative or privilege descendeth

ET la part, que l'eigne soer ad, est appelle en Latin enitia pars. Mes si les parceners agree-ont, que l'eigne soer ferra partition de les tenements en le forme avantdit, & si ceo el fait, donque il est dit, que l'eigne soer esliera plus darreine pur sa part, & après chescun de ses soers, &c. (1)

AND the part, which the eldest sister hath, is called in Latine enitia pars. But if the parceners agree, that the eldest sister shall make partition of the tenements in manner aforesaid, and if she doe this, then it is said, that the eldest sister shall choose last for her part, and after every one of her sisters, &c.

[f] 45. E. 3. fines 41. 19. E. 3. quar. imp. 59. 18. E. 2. ibid. 176. 5. H. 5. 10. 38. H. 6. 9. Doct. & Stud. 116. 117. Vid. Bract. 238. 249. * 5. H. 7. 8. 34. H. 6. 40. 11. H. 4. 54. 20. E. 3. quar. imp. 63. 34. E. 3. Ibid. 198. 15. E. 3. Dar. Presentment 11. 17. E. 3. 20. 21. E. 3. 21. F. N. B. 32. (Poll. 18. b.)

not to her issue, but the next eldest sister shall have it. [f] And here is a diversity to be observed betwene this case of a partition in deed by the act of the parties, for there the privilege of election of the eldest daughter shall not descend to her issue; and where the law doth give the eldest any privilege without her act, there that privilege shall descend. As if there be divers coparceners of an advowson *, and they cannot agree to present, the law doth give the first presentment to the eldest; and this privilege shall descend to her issue; may her assignee shall have it, (2) and so shall her husband, that is tenant by the curtesie, have it also (3).

Donques il est dit l'eigne soer eslier plus darreine, &c. By this and the &c. in the end of this Section is implied, the rule of law is, cujus est divisio, alterius est electio. And the reason of the law is for avoyding of partiality; which might apparently follow if the eldest might both divide and choose (4). Now followeth the third partition in deed.

(Ipsæ etenim leges cupiunt ut jure regantur)

Sect. 246.

UN auter partition ou allotment est, sicome soient quater parceners, & après le partition de les terres fait, chescun part del terre soit per soy solement escript en un petit escrovet, & soit couvert tout en cere en lemaner d'un petit pile, issint que nul poit veier l'escrovet, & donque soient les 4 piles de cere mis en un bonnet a garder en les maines d'un indifferent home, &

ANOTHER partition or allotment is, as if there be four parceners, and after partition of the lands be made, every part of the land by itselfe is written in a little scrowle, and is covered all in waxe in manner of a little ball, so as none may see the scrowle, and then the 4 balls of waxe are put in a hat to bee kept in the hands of an indifferent man, and then the eldest daughter shall first

donques

(1) The &c. not in L. & M. or Rob.

(2) Acc. P. 18. E. Quare Impedit 176. Post. 186. b. 3. Co. 22. b. 2. Inst. 365. 2. Ro. Abr. 346. Millory's Quare Impedit 145. Three judges also held accordingly East. 23. Eliz. in Harris & Haies v. Nichois Cro. Eliz. 18. But Anderson chief justice doubted, whether a grantee should have the privilege. In Keilwey there is a case of 18 Hen. 7. in which Pro-wike chief justice is made to give it to the grantee of the eldest sister, only where it has been once exercised by herself. But he afterwards doubted his own distinction, and seemed to incline to the grantee's right generally; in consequence of which the report concludes thus: Stude bene et quere. Keilw. 49. Upon the whole therefore it seems, that the point is not quite settled; and to determine it properly would require a very careful examination of the numerous cases cited by lord Coke here and in the second Institute. See 7. Ann. c. 18.—I was led into this note by a reference to the case from Cro. Eliz. in a Coke upon Littleton of the late Mr. Beverlham Filmer, and by an opinion of the same very learned gentleman, in which he represents the point to be doubtful, and therefore dissuaded accepting the title to the next presentation of an advowson belonging to three sons as heirs in gavel-kind, unless they would all join in the grant. The eminence of Mr. Filmer as a barrister, more especially in the conveyancing line, will, I presume, fully justify me for thus introducing his name. The doubts of a lawyer so profound and correct, as he was universally allowed to be, will ever claim high respect; and it is with peculiar pleasure, that I take this opportunity of expressing the veneration with which I hold him in my remembrance.

(3) Agreed by lord Anderson in the case from Cro. Eliz. cited in the preceding note.

(4) See Hob. 107. where the doctrine is cited with approbation.

donques leigne file primerment mettra sa maine en le bonnet, quel prendra un pile de cere ovesque le scrovet deins mesme le pile pur sa part, & donques le second soer mettra sa maine en le bonnet & prendra un auter, le tierce soer le 3 pile, & le 4 soer le 4 pile, &c. & en ceo cas covient chescun de eux luy tener a sa chance & allotment.

put her hand into the hat, and take a ball of waxe with the scrowle within the same ball for her part, and then the second sister shall put her hand into the hat and take another, the 3 sister the 3 ball, & the 4 sister the 4 ball, &c. and in this case every one of them ought to stand to their chance and allotment.

Allotment. Of this partition by lots ancient authors * write, that in that case coparceners fortunam faciunt judicem. And Littleton here tearmeth it chance; for in the end of this section he saith, that in this case every of them ought to hold her selfe to her chance; and of this kinde of division you shall read in holy scripture, where it is sayd, dedi vobis possessionem quam dividetis sorte.

The &c. in the end of this section implyeth, that if there be more coparceners there must be more balls according to the number of the parceners.

* Fleta lib. 5. ca. 9. Brañton lib. 2. 75. Britton cap. 72.

Vide Numbers ca. 26. verse 54. 55. & ca. 33. ver. 54. of division by lots.

Sect. 247.

ITEM un auter partition il y ad. Sicome sont quater parceners, & ils ne voilent agreer a partition d'estre fait entre eux, donque l'un poit aver brief de partitione faciendâ envers les auters trois; ou deux d'eux poient aver brief de partitione faciendâ envers les auters deux, ou trois de eux poient aver brief de partitione faciendâ envers le quart, à leur election.

ALSO there is another partition. As if there bee foure parceners, and they will not agree to a partition to bee made betweene them, then the one may have a writ of partitione faciendâ against the other three, or two of them may have a writ of partitione faciendâ against the other two, or three of them may have a writ of partitione faciendâ against the fourth, at their election.

HERE followeth the fourth partition in deed. Littleton having spoken of voluntary partitions, or partitions by consent; now he speakes of a partition by the compulsory means of law where no partition can be had by consent. Now of what inheritance partition may be made by the writ of partitione faciendâ may partly appeare by that which hath beene sayd. Moreover it is to bee observed, that the words of the writ de partitione faciendâ be, * quod cum eadem A & B insimul & pro indiviso teneant tres acras terræ cum pertinentiis, &c. And note that this word (tenet) (1) in a writ doth alwayes imply a tenant of a freehold. And therefore [g] if one coparcener maketh a lease for yeares, yet a writ of partition doth lie (2). But if one or both make a lease for life, a writ

* 3 E. 3. 47. 48.

[g] 21. E. 3. 57. F. N. B. 62. g. 28. H. 6. 2. 11. H. 4. 3. 4. H. 7. 10. b. (Post. 176. b.)

of partition doth not lye betweene them; because non insimul & pro indiviso tenent, they doe not hold the freehold together, and the writ of partition must be against the tenant of the freehold. [b] If one coparcener disseise another, during this disseisin a writ of partition doth not lie betweene them; for that non tenent insimul & pro indiviso.

[h] 4. H. 7. 9. 11. Aff. 23 (Post. 167. b. 187. a.)

But there be other partitions in deed then here have beene mentioned. [i] For a partition made between two coparceners, that the one shall have and occupy the land from Easter untill the first of August only in severalty by himselfe, and that the other shall have and occupy the land from the first of August untill the feast of Easter yearly to them and their heires, this is a good partition (3). Also if two coparceners have two mannors by descent, and

[i] Temps E. 1. partition 21. F. N. B. 62. I. (7. Co. 5.)

(1) See the various applications of the verb tenet explained ant. fol. 1. a. & b.

(2) So too execution of dower is not prevented by a lease for years subsisting at the husband's death. Ant. 32. a. How lessee for years is affected by such a partition, is before explained by lord Coke in fol. 46. 2.

(3) See the case of a moveable fee simple, stated ant. fol. 4. a.

and they make partition, that the one shall have the one manor for one yeare, and the other the other manor for this yeare, and so alternis vicibus to them and their heires, this is a good partition. The same law is, if the partition be made in forme aforesaid, for two or more yeares, and each coparcener have an estate of inheritance, and no chattell, albeit either of them alternis vicibus have the occupation but for a certaine terme of yeares.

Of partitions in law, some be by act in law without judgement, and some be by judgement, and not in a writ de partitione faciendâ. And of these in order.

[k] 36. H. 6. 7. (Post. 192. a.)

[k] If there be lord, three coparceners mesnes, and tenant, and one coparcener purchase the tenancy, this is not onely a partition of the mesnalty, being extinct for a third part, but a division of the feignory paramount, for now he must make severall avowries (1).

[l] 37. H. 6. 8. 43. E. 3. 1.

[l] If one coparcener make a feoffment in fee of her part, this is a severance of the coparcenarie, and severall writs of præcipe shall lie against the other coparcener and the feoffee (2).

[m] 17. E. 3. 14. 15.

[m] If two coparceners be, and each of them taketh husband and have issue, the wives die, the coparcenary is divided, and here is a partition in law.

[n] 12. E. 3. Judgm. 162. 7. Aff. 10. 7. E. 3. 49. 10. Aff. 17. 12. Aff. 5. 17. 10. E. 3. 40. 43. 28. Aff. 35. 23. Aff. 18. 20. E. 3. Aff. 62. 3. E. 3. 48. b. 19. H. 6. 45. 7. H. 6. 4. 3. E. 4. 10. * Braet. lib. 4. fo. 216. b.

[o] 3. E. 3. 48. 21. R. 2. tit. Nuper ob. 22. 4. H. 7. 10. 30. E. 1. Nup. ob. 18. F. N. B. 9. b.

* Britton fol. 112. a.

[p] 6. Co. 12. & 13. Morrice's case accorde. (Post. 187. a.)

[n] If two coparceners be, and one disseise the other, and the disseisee bringeth an assise, and recover, it hath beene said, that she shall have judgement to hold her moiety in severalty. And this seemeth (say they) verie ancient, and thereupon vouch Braetôn, * si res fuerit communis locum habere poterit communi dividendo judicium. And [o] so (say they) if the one coparcener recover against another in a nuper obiit, or a rationabili parte, the judgement shall be, that the demandant shall recover and hold in severalty. But Britton is to the contrary; for he saith, * et si ascun des parcerers soit enget ou disturbe de la seisin per ses auters parcerers, un, ou plusors, al disseisee viendra assise per severall pleint sur les parcerers & recovra, mes nemy a tener en severaltie, mes en common solongue cco que avant le jyst, &c. [p] And this seemeth reasonable; for he must have his judgement according to his plaint, and that was of a moiety, and not of any thing in severaltie, and the sherife cannot have any warrant to make any partition in severalty or by metes and bounds.

Sect. 248.

Braet. fo. 66. &c. Brit. 71. &c. Brit. ca. 72. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 9.

NOTE the first judgement in a writ of partition, whereof Littleton here speaketh, is, quod partitio fiat inter partes prædictas de tenementis prædictis, cum pertinentiis, after which judgement. By this &c. viz. tenements, &c. is implied, that a writ shall be awarded to the sherife, quod assumptis tecum 12 liberis & legalibus hominibus de vicineto tuo, per quos rei veritas melius sciri poterit, in propria personâ tuâ accedas ad tenementa prædicta cum pertinentiis, & ibidem per eorum sacramentum, in præsentia partium (3) prædictarum per te præmuniendarum si interesse voluerint, prædicta tenementa cum pertinentiis per sacramentum bonorum & legalium hominum prædictorum, habito respectu ad verum valorem earundem, in duas partes aequales partiri & dividi, & unam partem partium illarum, &c.

This last &c. in this section is evident.

Judgement. Judi-

ET quant judgement sera done sur tiel brief, le judgement sera tiel; que partition sera fait enter les parties, & que le vicount en son proper person alera a les terres & tenements, &c. & que il per le serement de xii loyalx homes de son bayliwicke &c. fera partition enter les parties, & que l'un part de mesmes les terres & tenements soyent assignes al plaintiff ou a l'un des plaintiffs, et un auter part a un auter parcener, &c. nient fera-

AND when judgement shall be given upon this writ, the judgement shall be thus; that partition shall be made betweene the parties, and that the sherife in his proper person shall go to the lands and tenements, &c. & that he by the oath of 12 lawful men of his bailiwicke, &c. shall make partition between the parties, & that one part of the lands & tenements shall be assigned to the plaintiff or to one of the plaintiffs, & another part to another parcener, &c. not making mention in sum

Ockam ca. quid sit liber judicarius. (4) 40. E. 3. 45. 9. Aff. 2. 8. Aff. 35. 49. E. 3. 2. Regist. F. N. B. 16.

(1) But according to Bro. Nouv. Caf. 108. the lord should have notice of the partition.

(2) Acc. ant. 67. b. post. 175. a. 195. a. But this sort of partition is not a partition in the sense in which Littleton writes of partitions, nor in the common sense of the word. He means a division of the land itself; whereas what lord Coke here calls a partition is a mere severance of the unity of title, which operates, as Littleton afterwards states, by making a tenancy in common. See sect. 309.

(3) These words enjoining the partition to be made in the presence of the parties shew, that the proceeding before the sheriff is quite open. So too as it seems should be the execution of a commission of partition issued by chancery as a court of equity, such commission being in nature of a writ at common law for the like purpose. But I understand, that there have been instances of treating the commission of partition as a close proceeding, and that on that idea it has been sometimes the practice to annex an oath of secrecy to the commission. This practice, I presume, has grown from not attending to the difference between commissions to divide lands and commissions to examine witnesses merely. In the latter sort of commission an oath to keep the depositions secret is expressly required by an order of chancery of the 9th of February 1721; and exclusively of the order the proceeding implies secrecy, the depositions being ever kept close under seal, till leave is obtained to divulge them by the passing of publication. But neither the language nor spirit of this order is applicable to commissions of partition, which like the writ of partition ought to be openly executed.

(4) See Dialog. de Scaccar. lib. 1. cap. 16. which has the same title.

sant mention en le judgement de l'eigne soer pluie de puisne. the judgement of the eldest sister more than of the youngest.

And thereupon antiquitie called that excellent booke in the exchequer, Domesday, Dies iudicii. Sicut enim distributi & terribilis examinis illa novissima sententia nulla tergiversationis arte valet eludi, &c. sic sententia ejusdem libri inficiari non potest, vel impune declinari; ob hoc nos eundem librum judicarium nominamus, &c. quod ab eo sicut a prædicto iudicio non licet ullâ ratione discedere. By Littleton it appeareth, that the formes of judgements, pleas, and other legall proceedings, doe conduce much to the right understanding of the law and of the reason thereof; as here Littleton rightly collecteth upon the forme of the judgement, that the sherife shall deliver to them such parts as he thinkes good, and that the eldest coparcener shall have no election when partition is made by the sherife. And it is to bee observed, that there bee two judgements in a writ of partition. Of the former Littleton speaketh in this place. And when partition is made by the oath of twelve men, and assignement and allotment thereof, and so returned by the sherife, then the latter judgment is, ideo consideratum est, quod partitio prædicta firma & stabilis imperpetuum teneatur, and this is the principall judgement. [7] And of the other, before this be given, no writ of error doth lie. (2)

Shireve is a word compounded of two Saxon words, viz. shire, and reve. Shire, satrapia, or comitatus, commeth of the Saxon verbe shiran, i. partiri, for that the whole realme is parted and divided into shires; and reve is præfectus, or præpositus; so as shireve is the reve of the shire, præfectus satrapie, provincia, or comitatus. And he is called præfectus, because he is the chiefe officer to the king within the shire; for the words of his patent be, commisimus vobis custodiam comitatus nostri de &c. And he hath a threefold custodie, triplicem custodiam, viz. First, vite justitie; for no suit begins, and no processe is served but by the sherife. Also he is to returne indifferent juries for the triall of mens lives, liberties, lands, goods, &c. Secondly, vite legis; hee is, after long suits and chargeable, to make execution, which is the life and fruit of the law. Thirdly, vite reipublice; he is principalis conservator pacis within the countie, (3) which is the life of the common wealth, vite reipublice pax.

He is called before sect. 234. viscount, in Latyne, vicecomes, i. vice comitis, that is, in stead of the earle of that countie, who in antient time had the regiment of the countie under the king. For it is said in the Mirror, * that it appeareth by the ordinance of antient kings before the conquest, that the earles of the counties had the custodie or gard of the countie, and when the earles left their custodies or gards, then was the custodie of counties committed to viscounts, who therefore (as it hath beene sayd) are called vicecomites. And Ockam cap. quid centuria, &c. porro vicecomes dicitur, quod vicem comitis suppleat.

Marcuphis saith, this office is judiciaria dignitas; Lampridius, that it is officium dignitatis. Fortescue saith, quod vicecomes est nobilis officarius. And see there, and observe well his honourable and solemne election and creation at this day. But to confirme all that hath beene said touching this point, and to conclude the same, among the lawes of Edward the confessor (4) I finde it thus recorded. Verum quod modo vocatur comitatus olim apud Britones temporibus Romanorum in regno isto Britannia vocabatur consulatus, & qui modo vocantur vicecomites tunc temporis vice-consules vocabantur; ille vero dicebatur viceconsul, qui consule absente ipsius vices supplebat in jure & in foro. (5) Herein many things are worthy of observation. First, for the antiquity of counties. Secondly, that which wee called comitatum, the Romanes more latinely called consulatum. Thirdly, whom the Saxons afterwards called (as hath beene said) shireve or earle, the Romanes called consul. Fourthly, that the sherife was deputy of the consull or earle; and therefore the Romanes called him viceconsul, as we at this day call him vicecomes. Fifthly, that the sherife in the Romanes time, and before, was a minister to the king's courts of law & justice, and had then a court of his owne, which was the county court, then called curia consulatus, as appeareth by these words, ipsius vices supplebat in jure et in foro. Sixthly, that this realme was divided into shires and counties, and those shires into cities, burroughes, and townes, by the Brittaines: so that king Ælfred's division of shires and counties was but a renovation or more exact description of the same. (6) Lastly, the consequence that will follow upon these things being so ancient, (as in the time of, and before the Romanes) the studious reader will easily collect. And afterwards, fol. 135. amongst the lawes of the same king it appeareth, that those whom the Saxons sometimes called (and now we call) aldermen, or eorles, the Romanes called senatores, et similiter olim apud Britones temporibus Romanorum in regno isto Britannia vocabantur senatores, qui postea temporibus Saxonum vocabantur aldermani, non propter ætatem, sed propter sapientiam & dignitatem, cum quidam adolescentes essent, jurisperiti tamen & super hoc experti. (7)

[7] 11. Co. 40. Hill. 39. Eliz. Rot. 327. in Banke le Roy inter An. Countes de War & le Seignior Berkley. (Fortesc. 52. Ant. 50. a. 109. b.)

Vide the second part of the Institutes. W. 1. c. 10.

* Mirror cap. 1. sect. 3:

Ockam cap. Quid Centur. &c.

Fortescue cap. 24. 12. R. 2. cap.

Lambert fol. 129. 121

Cæsar. Polichro. Huntingdon. Polidor inter leges Malmucii. Hooker lib. 2.

De

(1) See same explanation of iudicium, ant. 39. a.

(2) The difference between an interlocutory judgment or award and a final principal or plenary judgment is here pointed at; as to which see Metcalfe's case 11. Co. 38. both questions in it depending on the distinction. See also Office of Exec. ed. 1676. chap. 17. p. 279. How the civil and canon laws distinguished between interlocutory and definitive sentences, especially in point of appeal, and between sentences merely interlocutory and interlocutory sentences having the effect of definitive, may be collected in some degree by consulting Voet. ad Dig. lib. 42. tit. 1. f. 4. Perez. in Cod. lib. 7. tit. 62. Wood's Civ. L. 8vo ed. 379. and Gilb. Chan. c. 10. As to the difference between interlocutory and final decrees or orders in our courts of equity, see Pract. Reg. in Chan. 122. and 153. and Nolle v. Foot in Dom. Proc. 12. March 1739. On the same subject in our ecclesiastical courts, see 1. Ought. Ord. and Consett's Pract. of Spirit. Co. 3d edit. 229. to 250. These references may assist inquiry; but a far more extended information will be necessary, before the distinctions can be well ascertained, and the use of them in point of appeal conclusion or otherwise be fully understood.

(3) See Lamb. Just. ed. of 1602. p. 12. 13. and 2. Inst. 174. in both of which books the coroner is so styled.

(4) Concerning the dispute about the authenticity of these laws, see notes 3. & 4. ant. 68. b. to which add Preface to 8. Co. Rep. 1. Tyr. Hist. b. 6. p. 103. Ibid. v. 2. p. 62. Brad. Intro. to Eng. Hist. 260. and a note by the late bishop of St. David, dr. Squire, in his book on the Anglo-Saxon Gov. in Engl. ed. of 1753, p. 219. Mr. Selden's opinion of these laws was, that "as the ordinary copies are, and as they speak in the published volume of Saxon laws, they are not without many mixtures of somewhat later transcribers." Seld. on Tithes, ed. 1618. p. 225. A like temperate caution concerning these laws is interposed by sir Henry Spelman and Mr. Somner. Spelm. Gloss. 3d ed. 67. Reliq. Spelm. 61. Somn. on Gavelk. 101. But dr. Brady is not content with this; for, moved by that excess of party-spirit, which is so destructive of truth and so much tarnishes his learned writings on the English history, he indiscriminately and passionately rejects the whole body of these laws. His words in one place are as follow. "The factious bishops and churchmen and the seditious and dissolute barons made a noise for king Edward's laws. But what they were it is now a hard matter to know. Those, put forth under his name with Mr. Lambard's Saxon laws, were none of his. They are incoherent farce and mixture, and a heap of nonsense, put together by some unskilful bishop"

De son Bayliwicke. It appeareth before, that the enquest must be de vicinato of the place where the lands doe lie, and not generally de balivâ tuâ. By this it appeareth, that the sherife is balivus, and his county called balivâ; and therefore it is good to be seene what balivus originally signified, and whereof it is derived.

Flet. lib. 2. cap. 67. (Cro. Jam. 178. Plowd. 28. b. 1. Ro. Abr. 339.)
Bract. lib. 3. tract. 2. cap. 33. nu. 3. Idem lib. 3. fo. 121. b.

Bract. li. 3. 156. b. Brit. fo. 56. Flet. li. 2. ca. 63. (10. Co. 103. Poit. 295. a.)

Baylife (1) is a French word and signifies an officer concerning the administration of justice of a certaine province; and because a sherife hath an office concerning the administration of justice within his county or bailiwick, therefore he calleth his county balivâ sua. For example, when he cannot find the defendant, &c. he returneth, non est inventus in balivâ meâ.

I have heard great question made, what the true exposition of this word balivus is. In the statute of Magna Charta cap. 28. the letter of that statute is, nullus balivus de cetero ponat aliquem ad legem manifestam nec ad juramentum simplici loquelâ suâ sine testibus fidelibus ad hoc inductis. And some have said, that balivus in this statute signifieth any judge; for the law must be waged and made before the judge. And this statute (say they) extends to the courts of common pleas, king's bench, &c. for they must bring with them fideles testes, &c. and so hath bene the usage to this day.

Glave. li. 1. ca. 9.

But I have perused a very ancient and learned reading upon this statute; and the reader taketh it, that, at the common law before this statute, he, that would make his law in any court of record, must bring with him fideles testes. And this opinion herein is warranted by Glanvil, who wrote in the reign of Henry the second. But the reader holdeth, that in the courts which were not of record, (2) as the county court, the hundred court, the court baron, &c. there the defendant without any faithfull witnesses might before this stat. have made his law, for remedy whereof this act was made; and therefore (saith he) the statute extendeth to the judges of such courts as are not of record. In 10. H. 4. it is holden, that if a lord, that hath a franchise in a leet, doth not enquire of things enquirable, and punish them, the sherife shall enquire in his turne, et si le vicount ne faire en son torne, le baylie le roy enquirer quant il vient, ou autrement serra inquis per justice en eire, where baylie le roy is understood justice le roy. And in the *Mirror it is holden, that the statute doth extend to everie justice, minister of the king, steward, &c. and all comprehended under this word baylife.

10. H. 4. 4. (Cro. Jam. 551. 584.)

* Mir. ca. 5. sect. 2. Vi. Bract. fo. 409. Flet. li. 2. ca. 63. 56.

The chiefe magistrates in divers ancient corporations are called baylifs, as in Ipswich, Yarmouth, Colchester, &c. And baylife in French is diocetes, nomarcha, in English, a bailife or governor. But of this thus much shall suffice.

Sect. 249.

Brit. fo. 187. b. acc. Bract. l. 2. fo. 71. &c. Flet. l. 5. ca. 9.

SOUTH son seale, &c.

Note, the partition, made and delivered by the sherife and jurors, ought to bee returned into the court under the seale of the sherife, and the scales of the twelve jurors; for the words of the judicial writ of partition, which doth command the sherife to make partition, are, assumptis tecum 12, &c. (so as there must be twelve) & partitionem inde, &c. scilicet facias justiciariis, &c. sub sigillo tuo, & sigillis eorum per quorum sacramentum partitionem illam feceris, &c.

And this is the reason, wherefore in this case the partition, which they make upon oath, ought to be returned under their scales: & the reason of that is for the more strengthening of the partition

ET de la partition que le vicount ad issint fait il ferra notice as justices (3) south son seale & les seales de cheescun de les 12, &c. Et issint en ceo case poies veier, que l'eignejoer n'averâ my la primer election, (4) mes le vicount luy assignera sa part que el averâ, &c. Et poit estre que le vicount doit assigner primerement un part a le plus puisne, &c. & darreinement a l'eigne, &c.

AND of the partition which the sherife hath so made, he shall give notice to the justices under his seale, and the scales of everie of the 12, &c. And so in this case you may see, that the eldest sister shal not have the first election, but the sherife shall assigne to her her part which shee shal have, &c. And it may be that the sherife will assigne first one part to the youngest, &c. and last to the eldest, &c.

(1) See ant. 61. b. at the bottom. The additional references in the margin on the side of the word bailiff relate to bailiffs of manors.

(2) Concerning the distinction of courts of record, see ant. 117. b.

(3) In L. & M. and in Roh. there is an &c. here.

(4) An &c. here in L. & M. and in Roh.

"bishop monk or clerk many years after his death to serve the ends and deligis of the present times." General Pref. to Brad. Eng. Hist. xxx. See further Wright. Ten. 65. note (i).

(5) The passage here cited from the laws of Edward the Confessor seems rather a remark by the copier or translator of the law, than a part of the law itself; and perhaps it is on this account, that Lambard distinguishes this passage in the printing by an Italick letter. But whether the passage is to be deemed part of the law or not, the comparison it draws, of the Roman denominations of their territorial government and officers in Britain with those of the Saxons, seems to me quite imaginary. At least I am not able to find any trace of authority to prove such an use or application of the words "consulatus consul and vice-consul" amongst the Romans whilst Britain was a part of their empire, as this extract supposes.

(6) This agrees with the idea of sir John Spelman in his life of Alfred, and of mr. St. Amand in his Essay on the Legislative Power of England. Dr. Stuart in his Historical Dissertation on the English Constitution makes some additional remarks in support of the same opinion. See 2d ed. of this latter book, 250.

(7) The remark above in note 5. on the former extract from Lambard's Anglo-Saxon Laws equally applies to this second one. As to the origin and office of sheriffs, see further Preface to 3. Co. Rep. Dav. Rep. 60. Dalt. on Sher. Spelm. Gloss. vocibus comites comitatus & vicecomes, Seld. tit. Hon. ed. 1681. p. 627. 2. Henry's Hist. Gr. Brit. 242. a note by lord Fortescue in his ancestor's book on absolute and limited monarchy, 112. and Stuart's Hist. Dissert. on Engl. Const. 2d ed. 241.

tion by the 12, and that the sherife should not returne what partition he would. Now after all this, this (S^c.) viz. 12, &c. doth imply, that the principall judgement upon the partition so returned is, ideo consideratum est per curiam quod partitio firma & stabilis imperpetuum teneatur. (1) The latter two (S^c.) are evident. (2)

Sect. 250.

ET nota, que partition per agreement perenter par-ceners poit estre fait per la ley enter eux, auxibien per parol sans fait, come per fait.

AND note, that partition by agreement betweene par-ceners may bee made by law betweene them, as well by paroll without deed, as by deed. (3)

HERE it appeareth, that [r] not onely lands and other things that may passe by livery without deed, but things also that do lie in grant, as rents commons advowsons and the like that cannot passe by grant without deed, whether they bee in one county or in severall counties, may be parted and divided by paroll without deed. [s] But a partition betweene joyntenants is not good without deed, albeit it be of lands, and that they be compellable to make partition by the statutes of 31. H. 8. cap. 10. and 32. H. 8. cap. 32. because they must pursue that act by writ de partitione faciendi; and a partition betweene joyntenants without writ remains at the common law which could not bee done by paroll. And so it is and for the same reason of tenants in common. But if two tenants in common be, and they make partition by paroll, and execute the same in severalty by livery, this is good, and sufficient in law. And therefore where bookes say, that joyntenants made partition without deed, it must be intended of tenants in common and executed by livery.

[r] 3. E. 4. 9. 10. 9. E. 4. 38. 11. H. 4. 3. 9. H. 4. partition 13. 21. E. 3. 38.

(Dy. 350. b. Post 187. a. 198. b.) [s] Vide sect. 290. 3. H. 4. 1. 19. H. 6. 25. 28. H. 6. 2. 3. E. 4. 9. 10. 47. E. 3. 22. 47. Aff. 8. 19. H. 6. 1. 17. E. 3. 46. 30. Aff. 8. lib. 4. fo. 73. h. 6. fo. 12. 13. 2. H. 7. 5. Dier 18. Eliz. 358. 31. H. 8. Dier 46. 2. Eliz. Dier 179. 28. H. 8. Dier 29. 1. Mar. Dier 98. (1. Leon. 103. 6. Co. 12. 8. Co. 42. Post 186. a. 193. b. 200. b. 335. a. 2. Inst. 403.)

Nota, betweene joyntenants there is a twofold privity, viz. in estate and in possession: betweene tenants in common, there is privity onely in possession, and not in estate: but par-ceners have a threefold privity, viz. in estate, in person, and in possession.

Sect. 251, & 252.

ITEM si deux meafes descendent a deux par-ceners, & l'un meafé vault per an 20 s. l'auter forsque 10 s. per an, en cest cas partition poit estre fait enter eux en tiel forme; cestascavoir, que un par-cener avera l'un meafé, & que l'auter par-cener avera l'auter meafé; & celui que avera le meafé que est de value de 20 s. & ses heires payeront un annual rent

ALSO if two mefes descend to two par-ceners, and the one meafe is worth twenty shillings per annum, and the other but ten shillings per annum, in this case partition may bee made betweene them in this manner; to wit, the one par-cener to have the one meafe, and the other par-cener the other meafe; and she which hath the meafe worth 20 shillings per annum and her heires shal pay

PER parol. Nota,

Here [t] a rent may be granted for owelty of partition without (4) deed, even as a rent in case of a lease for yeares, for life, or a gift in taile, may bee reserved, without deed; and so may a rent be assigned to a woman out of the land, whereof shee is dowable, &c. without deed. But albeit an exchange for lands in the same county may be without deed; yet a rent granted for equality (5) of the same exchange cannot be without deed. And the cause of the difference is apparent; for coparceners are in by descent, and compellable to make partition.

[t] 8. E. 3. 16. 21. Aff. p. 1. 21. E. 3. 38. 11. H. 4. 61. 45. E. 3. 21. 2. H. 6. 14. 21. H. 6. 11. 1. Mar. Dier 91.

(Ant. 34. b.)

(Mo. 29.)

Le rent, &c.

The same law is of common of estovers, or a coradie, or a common of

(1) See acc. ant. 168. a.

(2) Here I shall subjoin to Littleton's explanation of the different modes of express partition the following notices for the aid of students. I. Since Littleton's time a statute has been made for newly regulating the proceedings on a writ of partition, with a view to render them less dilatory and more effectual; and this statute equally extends to par-ceners joint-tenants and tenants in common. See 8. & 9. W. & M. c. 31. What the form of proceeding under the writ of partition was before, is explained in Flet. lib. 5. c. 9. Bract. lib. 2. c. 33. Brit. c. 71. 72. 73. and Booth on Real Actions 244. II. Partition by release between co-parceners, which I do not observe to be noticed by Littleton or Coke, is mentioned in 2. Fulbeck's Paral. fol. 57. b. III. There is a partition by judgment exclusive of that on the partitione faciendi. An instance of it is stated in 6. Co. 12. b. IV. Littleton hereafter adds to the forms of partition explained by him in this chapter, one other form; namely, partition by throwing into hotchpot, which is the subject of sect. 266. V. Besides the writ of partition mentioned by Littleton there was another also issuing out of chancery, which was called a writ of livery and partition. It applied, where land holden of the king in capite descended to two or more as co-parceners, in which case they could not have livery of their land from the crown without a partition, the reason of which is explained in Staundf. Prerog. 24. b. 81. b. The various forms of this writ of partition may be seen by consulting F. N. B. 256. F. 259. C. 261. B. C. and Reg. Orig. 316. 317. It differed from the common writ de partitione faciendi in almost every respect. That was directed to the sheriff, this to the escheator: that was returnable in the common pleas, this in chancery: that was executed with a jury, this without: that was given for the benefit of the party suing it, this grew out of a policy to increase the number of the king's tenants in capite for his advantage: the partition in that was confirmed by a judgment of the court on return of the writ, the partition in this had no such solemnity added to it; and lastly the partition on that was conclusive on the parties though infants and all claiming under them, but the partition on this was open to subsequent inquiry and if unequal avoidable by scire facias in chancery or a partitione faciendi at common law. See Staundf. Prerog. and Fitzb. N. B. in the places before cited and post. 171. a. & b. See further on the force of such partition in chancery 29. Aff. pl. 3. Bro. Abr. jurisdiction 114. partition pl. 10. But this species of partition under the writ of livery is no longer in force: for it was a mere incident to livery; and livery being taken away by the 12. Cha. 2. c. 24. as one of the great grievances from tenure in capite, all writs of livery of course are, as a very learned writer has forcibly expressed it, uno flatu dispersed. See Mr. serjeant Wynne's Observat. on F. N. B. in his Miscellany of Law Tracts p. 51. VI. Another kind of partition in chancery unnoticed by Littleton was, where two persons succeeded as co-parcenary heirs to land holden of the king in capite and one of them being within age was in ward to the crown; for then the king's committee of the infant heir might of pasture, &c. or a way granted upon the partition by the one coparcener to the other. All which and the like, albeit they lie in grant, yet upon the partition may they be granted without deed.

Issuant hors de mesme le mease, &c.

[x] For if it be granted out of other lands then descended to the coparceners, then there must be a deed. [z] But if the rent be granted generally (out of no land in certaine) for owelty of partition, pro residuo terræ, it shall bee intended out of the purpartie of her that granteth it.

[a] If there be three coparceners, and they make partition, and one of them grant twenty shillings per annum out of her part to her two sisters and their heires for equality of partition, the grantees are not joynteners of this rent; but the rent is in nature of coparcenary, and after the death of the one grantee the moiety of the rent shall descend to her issue in course of coparcenary, and not survive to the other, for that the rent doth come in recompence of the land, and therefore shall ensue the nature thereof; and if the grant had beene made to them two of a rent of twenty shillings, viz. to the one ten shillings, and to the other ten shillings, yet shall they have the rent in course of coparcenary, and joyne in action for the same.

[b] If one coparcener be married, and for owelty of partition the husband and wife grant a rent to the other two out of the part of the fem covert, this partition being equall shall charge the part of the fem covert for ever.

[c] If two coparceners by deed indented alien both their parts to another in fee, rendering to them two and their heires a rent out of the land, they are not joynteners of this rent, but they shall have the rent in course of coparcenary; because their right in the land, out of which the rent is reserved, was in coparcenary.

Purront distreiner de common droit, &c. That is, [d] in this case the law doth give a distresse, lest the grantee should bee without remedy, for the which upon the partition she hath given a valuable recompence in land, which descended, &c. And so in the case of dower abovementioned. (1) de v. s. issuant hors de mesme le mease a l'auter parcener & a ses heires a tous jours, pur ceo que chescun de eux auroit owelty en value.

a yeerely rent of five shillings issuing out of the same mease to the other parcener and to her heires for ever, because each of them should have equality in value.

Sect. 252.

ET tiel partition on fait per parol est assés bone; & mesme le parcener, que avera le rent, & ses heires, purront distreiner de common droit pur le rent en le dit mease de le value de 20 s. si le rent de 5 s. soit aderere en asun temps, en quecunque mains que mesme le mease deviendra, coment que ne fuit unques ascun escripture de ceo fait enter eux de tiel rent.

AND such partition made by paroll is good enough; and that parcener, who shall have the rent, & his heires, may distrein of common right for the rent in the sayd mease worth twenty shillings, if the rent of 5 shillings be behinde at any time, in whose hands soever the same mease shall come, although there never were any writing of this made betweene them for such a rent.

Sect. 253.

TERRES & tenements, &c. Here (&c.) implyeth a caution, viz. that they be such lands

EN mesme le maner est de tous maners de terres & tenements

IN the same manner it is of all manner of lands and tenements

(1) See ant. 34. b. 153. a. and Sheph. Comm. Assur. 425.

might assent to make partition with the other co-parcener, in which case the writ for livery to the co-parcener of full age recited that with such assent the king had assigned certain estates for the purparty of such co-parcener, and directed the escheator to give livery accordingly. F. N. B. 260. B. This mode of partition in chancery is also at an end from the same cause as the writ of partition and livery. VII. A new compulsory mode of partition has sprung up, and is now fully established: namely by decree of chancery exercising its equitable jurisdiction on a bill filed praying for a partition: in which case 'tis usual for the court to issue a commission for the purpose to various persons, who proceed without a jury. How far this branch of equitable jurisdiction, so trenching upon the writ of partition and wresting from a court of common law its antient exclusive jurisdiction over this subject, might be traced by examining the records of chancery, I know not. But the earliest instance of a bill for partition I observe to be noticed in the printed books is a case of the 40. Eliz. in Tothill's Transact. of Chanc. title partition. According to the short report of this case the court interposed from necessity in respect of the minority of one of the parties, the book expressing that on that account he could not be made party to a writ of partition; which reason seems very inaccurate, for, if lord Coke is right, that writ doth lye against an infant, and he shall not have his age in it, and after judgment he is bound by the partition. See post. 171. b. But probably in lord Coke's time this was a rare and rather unsettled mode of compelling partition; for I observe in a case in chancery of the 6. Cha. 1. which was referred to the judges on a point of law between two co-parceners, that the judges certified for issuing a writ of partition between them, and that the court ordered one accordingly; which, I presume, would scarce have been done, if the decree for partition and a commission to make it had then been a current and familiar proceeding with chancery. 1. Cha. Rep. 49. However it appears by the language of the court in a very important cause, in which the grand question was whether the lord chancellor here could hold plea of a trust of lands in Ireland, that in the reign of James the Second bills of partition were become common. 1. Vern. 421. 2. Cha. Caf. 189. For other reported cases on bills of partition, see Toth. Transact. tit. partition, 1. Cha. Rep. 235. 3. Cha. Rep. 29. 2. Cha. Caf. 214. 237. 2. Vern. 232. 1. P. Wms. 446. 2. P. Wms. 518. As to the forms of a commission of partition, see 1. Prax. Alm. Cur. 3d ed. 93. 94. Clerk's Tutor in Chanc. 3d ed. 360. and 2. Harrison's Chanc. last ed. 396. For cases in which chancery interposes by awarding commissions to ascertain boundaries, which subject in some degree connects with commissions of partition, see Tothill 24. 126. 130. Nelf. Ch. Rep. 14. 121. 1. Cha. Rep. 41. 63. 259. Rep. temp. Finch. 131. 186. 210. Car. Rep. 107. 17. 96. 239. 462. 1. Cha. Caf. 145. 1. Vern. 359. 456. 2. Vern. 38. and 1. Vef. 453. To these add Fitzh. N. B. 133. on the writ de perambulatione faciendi, which being considered may perhaps throw some light on the origin of this branch of equitable

ments, &c. lou tiel rent est reserve a un ou a divers parceners sur tiel partition &c. Mes tiel rent n'est pas rent service, mes est rent charge de common droit (1) ewe & reserve pur egalite de partition (2).

ments, &c. where such rent is reserved to one or to divers parceners upon such partition, &c. But such rent is not rent service, but a rent charge of common right had and reserved for equality of partition.

and tenements out of which a rent for egalite of partition may be granted, whereof sufficient hath been said before.

Reserve al un. Here reservation is taken for a grant; and if it be used upon the partition, doth amount in this case to a grant, which is worthy the observation.

Sect. 254.

ET nota, que nulles sont appellees parceners per le common ley, mes females ou les heires de females, que veignent a terres & tenements per discent: car si soers purchase terres ou tenements, de ceo ils sont appellees joyntenants, & nemy parceners.

AND note, that none are called parceners by the common-law, but females or the heires of females, which come to lands or tenements by discent: for if sisters purchase lands or tenements, of this they are called joyntenants, and not parceners.

This needs no explanation.

Sect. 255.

ITEM si deux parceners de terres en fee simple font partition enter eux, & la part de un vault plus que le part de l'auter, si els fueront al temps de la partition de pleine age, s. de 21 ans, donques la partition tous dits demurrera, & ne sera unques defeat. Mes si les tenements (dont els font partition) soyent a eux en fee taile, & le part que l'un ad est

ALSO if two parceners of land in fee simple make partition between themselves, and the part of the one valueth more then the part of the other, if they were at the time of the partition of full age, s. of 21 yeares, then the partition shall alway remaine and be never defeated. But if the tenements (whereof they make partition) be to them in fee taile, and the part of the one

DONQUES le partition tous dits

demurrera, &c. Hereby it appeareth, that the inequality of the value shall not impeach a partition made of lands in fee simple between coparceners of full age, (3) no more then it shall doe in case of an exchange. (4)

9. H. 6. 5. and other the bookes above said.

Ils sont concludes durant leur vies. This inequall partition doth so conclude the parceners themselves, as sice that hath the inequall part shall not avoid it during her life.

Concludes. This word (Post. 352. a.) is derived of con and claudo, (5) and in this sense significth to close or shut up her mouth that she cannot speake to the contrary.

Huf-

(1) See ant. 153. a. note 1.

(2) In L. and M. &c. here.

(3) Ant. acc. 166. a.

(4) Ant. 51. a.

(5) Acc. ant. 37. a.

equitable jurisdiction; and concerning the modes of partition by our law see the cases under that title in Fitzh. Abr. Bro. Abr. and Viner.—Concerning partition by the Roman law, see Fulbeck in his parallel of the civil canon and English Laws b. 2. p. 57. This neglected but ingenious writer extracts from the Roman law three actions having the like object with our writ of partition. These are the action de familia heredeunda, the action pro socio, and the action de communi dividundo. He applies the first to partition amongst co-heirs, the second to that amongst joint-tenants, and the third to that amongst tenants in common; an assimilation, in which he is partly followed by lord Stair in respect to the law of Scotland. Stair's Instit. 48. The second and third of these Roman actions are treated of in lib. 10. tit. 2. & 3. of the Digest, tit. 1. of the same book being upon the action finium regundorum, which partly answers to our bill in equity for ascertaining boundaries. It is remarkable also, that Fleta represents the three Roman actions last mentioned as a part of our law. Flet. lib. 5. c. 9. p. 309. See further as to the Roman law about partition 1. Dom. Civ. L. by Strah. 325. For partition according to the French law, see tit. partage in their books; and for the like subject in the Scotch law, see concerning the obligation of division, heirs portioners, commonities, and writs of division, in Stair's Instit. 48. 477. 169. 576. and in Erskine's Instit. 468.

(3) In 1. Atk. 542. there is a case in equity, in which lord Hardwicke allows of a parol agreement for a partition. See infra note 4. and 1. Vern. 472.

(4) Here the eleventh edition of this book has a note questioning whether such parol grant would be good now in respect of the 29. Cha. 2. c. 3. and Mr. serjeant Hawkins in his Abridgment makes a like question. See supra note 3.

(5) Of equality in exchanges, see ant. 50. b. 51. a. & b.

11. Aff. p. 23.

See after the chapter of Garr. (2)
(Doctor & Stud. 65.)

[g] 21. E. 3. 34. 35. 2. E. 2.
Ballard 19. 11. Aff. 23. 30. Aff.
7. 17. E. 3. 59. (8. Co. 101. b.
Poll. 244. b.)

Husband and wife tenants in speciall taile of certaine lands in fee have issue a daughter, the wife dyeth, the husband by a second wife hath issue another daughter, both the daughters enter (where the eldest is only inheritable) and make partition: the eldest daughter is concluded during her life to impeach the partition, or to say that the youngest is not heire, and yet she is a stranger to the taile, but in respect of privity in their persons the partition shall conclude, for a partition between meere strangers in that case is voyd, but the issue of the eldest shall avoid this partition as issue in taile.

[g] I. S. seised of lands in fee hath issue two daughters, Rose and Anne, bastards cigne and mulier puisne, and dieth. Rose and Anne doe enter and make partition. (3) Anne and her heires are concluded for ever. (4) melieux en annuall value que est la part le l'auter, coment que els sont concludes durant leur vies a defeater la partition; uncore si le parcener, que ad le meinder part en value, ad issue & devy, l'issue poit disagree a la partition, & enter & occuper en common l'auter part que fuit allotte a sa aunt, & if sint l'auter poit enter & occuper en common l'auter part allotte a sa soer, &c. si come nul partition n'est fait. (1)

is better in yearly value then the part of the other, albeit they be concluded during their lives to defeat the partition; yet if the parcener, which hath the lesser part in value, hath issue and dye, the issue may disagree to the partition, and enter and occupy in common the other part which was allotted to her aunt, and so the other may enter and occupy in common the other part allotted to her sister, &c. as if no partition had beene made.

Sect. 256.

ELS & leur barons.

Here it appeareth, that the wife must be party to the partition, and so are the bookes * to bee intended that speake of this matter.

* 42. Aff. 22. 8. E. 4. 4. 9. E. 3. 38. 15. E. 4. 20. F. N. B. 62. 29. Aff. 23. 9. H. 6. 5. 43. Aff. 14.

Et defeatera la partition. Note, the partition shall not bee defeated for the surplusage onely to make the partition equall, but here it appeareth that it shall bee avoyded for the whole. But of this more shall be said hereafter in this chapter, section 264. [b] And though the partition be unequal, yet is not the partition voyd, but voydable; for if after the decease of the husband, the wife entereth into the unequal part, and agreeeth thereunto, this shall binde, and therefore Littleton

[b] Vid. 2. E. 2. Cui in vita 17.

ITEM si deux parceners de tenements en fee preignent barons, & els & leur barons sont partition enter eux, si la part l'un est meinder en anual value que la part l'auter, durant les vies leur barons la partition esloyera en sa force. Mes comment que il esloyera durant les vies les barons, uncore apres la mort le baron, celui feme, que ad le meinder part, poit enter en la part sa

ALSO if two parceners of lands in fee take husbands, and they and their husbands make partition betweene them, if the part of the one bee lesse in value then the part of the other, during the lives of their husbands the partition shall stand in its force. But albeit it shal stand during the lives of their husbands, yet after the death of the husband, that woman which hath the lesser part may enter into

(1) This case of Littleton turns upon the inequality of the partition; for if the parts are equal, it binds notwithstanding infancy. Ant. 166. a. Poll. 173. b.

(2) See the case of discontinuance stated by lord Coke post. 373. b.

(3) In a Coke upon Littleton I have with MSS. notes and references, the annotator is for excluding from such an estoppel as is here stated a partition in pais. His note is thus expressed: "If two make partition in court of record, when one of them had no right, he thereby shall gain a moiety by estoppel or conclusion. Bro. Nouv. Cal. pl. 306. But otherwise I conceive of a partition in pais; though the book speaketh generally; and upon this difference you shall read a like case in this booke fol. 46. a."

(4) Acc. Dr. & Stud. dial. 1. c. 19. where mulier puisne sues livery with bastard cigne. See Bro. Abv. entrie c. 31. and descent 9. But it is said, that this sort of estoppel will not bind in chancery. Cary's Rep. 26. See further 2. Co. 4. b. Cr. Cha. 110. Pollexf. 67. and 3. Com. Dig. 278.

soer come est avant-dit, & defeatera la partition.

her sisters part as is aforesaid, and shall defeat the partition.

useth the word (defeatera), which proveth it to bee voydable.

Sect. 257.

MES si le partition fait perenter les barons (1) fuit tiel, que chescun part al temps d'allotment fait fuit de egall annuall value, donque il ne poit apres estre defeat en tielx cas.

BUT if the partition made betweene the husbands were thus, that each part at the time of the allotment made was of equall yearly value, then it cannot afterwards be defeated in such cases.

PERenter les barons. This is mistaken, for the originall is perenter eux, that is, betweene the barons and fems, and not as it is here betweene the barons, therefore this error would be hereafter reformed.

Al temps del allotment. Hereby it appeareth, that if the parts at the time of the partition bee of equall yearly value, neither the wives nor their heyres shall ever avoyd the same; and the reason hereof is, for that the husbands and wives were compellable by law to make partition, and that which they are compellable to doe in this case by law, they may doe by agreement without processe of (2) law. If the annuall value of the land be equall at the time of the partition, and after become unequal by any matter subsequent, as by surrounding, ill husbandry, or such like, yet the partition remains good.

9. H. 6. 5. And other the bookes above said. (Post. 179.)

*Judicis officium est, ut res ita tempora rerum
Quarere; quæsito tempore tutus eris.*

But if the partition be made by force of the king's writ, and judgement thereof given, it shall binde the fem-coverts for ever, albeit the parts be not of equall annuall value; because it is made by the sherife by the oath of twelve men by authority of law; and the judgement is, that partition shall remaine firme and stable for ever, as hath beene said. [a] But a partition in the chancery where one coparcener is of full age and such livery, and one other is within age and hath an unequal part allotted to her, this shall not binde her at full age; for in a writ directed to the escheator to make partition, there is a salvo jure, and there is no judgement upon such a partition. But if such a partition be equall, it shall binde, so that a part of the land holden in capite bee allotted to every of the coparceners, for to that end there is an expresse proviso in the writ. [b] And this partition may be avoyded either by seire fac' in the chancery, or by a writ de partitione faciendâ at the common law at her full age (3).

[a] F. N. B. 256. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 9. H. 6. 6. 21. E. 2. 31.

[b] Vide 21. E. 3. 31.

Sect. 258.

ITEM si deux parcer-ners sont, et le puisne esleant deins l'age de 21 ans, & partition est fait enter eux, issint que la purpartie que est allot al puisne est de meindre value que la purpartie l'auter, en cest case le

ALSO if two coparceners be, and the youngest being within the age of twenty-one years, partition is made betweene them, so as the part which is allotted to the youngest is of lesse value than the part of the

AS before in the case of the fem-covert, [c] so it is in the case of the infant; for if the partition be equall at the time of the allotment, it shall binde him for ever; because he is compellable by law to make partition, and he shall not have his age in a partitione faciendâ;

[c] 43. Aff. 14. 9. H. 6. 5. 6. 7. E. 3. 13. 8. E. 3. 24. 10. H. 4. 5. 31. Aff. 16. 21. H. 6. 25.

(1. Ro. Abr. 138. Hob. 179.)

(1) Instead of les barons it is eux in L. & M. & Roh.

(2) In 1. Atk. 541. there is a case, in which lord chancellor Hardwicke is represented to say, that a partition by agreement between two husbands will not bind the inheritance of their wives. But, notwithstanding this high authority, I take the doctrine of Littleton and Coke, that such a partition will bind the wives unless it be unequal, to be clear law, and for the cogent reason here given by the latter. See acc. F. N. B. 62. F.

(3) Acc. F. N. B. 62. H.

dā; (2) and though the partition be unequal, and the infant hath the lesser part, yet is not the partition void but voidable by his entry, for if he take the whole profits of the unequal part, after his full age, the partition is made good for ever. And therefore Littleton here giveth him a caveat, that in that case he take not the whole profits of his unequal part, neither shall an unequal partition in the chancery binde an infant as appeareth before. (3) But a partition, made by the king's writ de partitione faciendā by the sherife by the oath of twelve men, and judgement thereupon given, shall binde the infant, though his part be unequal, causā quā supra.

lepuisne, durant le temps de son nonage, & auxy quaut el vient a pleine age, s. de 21 ans, poit enter en la purpartie a sa soer allot & defeatera la partition. Mes bien soy gard tiel parcener quant el vient a sa plein age, que el ne preigne a son use demesne tous les profits des terres ou tenements que a luy furent allots. Car donques el soy agreea a le partition a tiel age, en quel case la partition estoiera & demurra en sa force. Mes peradventure les profits de la moitie el poit prendre, relinquant les profits de l'auter moitie a sa soer. (1) other, in this case the youngest, during the time of her nonage, and also when shee commeth to full age, s. of 21 yeares, may enter into the part allotted to her sister, and shall defeat the partition. But let such parcener take heed when she comes to her full age, that shee taketh not to her owne use all the profits of the lands or tenements which were allotted unto her; for then shee agrees to the partition at such age, in which case the partition shall stand and remaine in its force. But peradventure she may take the profits of the moitie, leaving the profits of the other moitie to her sister.

Sect. 259.

THE law hath provided for the safety of a man's or woman's estate, that * before their age of twentie one yeares they cannot binde themselves by any deed, (4) or alien any land (5), goods, or chattels (6).

Age de 21 ans.

Before this age a man or woman is called an infant.

Fait. Factum, Anglicè, a deed, and signifieth in the common law, an instrument consisting of three things, viz. writing, sealing, and delivery, comprehending a bargain or contract between party and party, man or woman. It is called of the civilians litterarum obligatio.

Feoffment. Of this word sufficient hath bin

ET est ascaroir, que quant il est dit, que males ou females sont de pleine age, ceo serra entendue d'age de 21 ans; car si devant tiel age, ascun fait ou feoffement, grant, release, confirmation, obligation, ou auter scripture, soit fait per ascun de eux, &c. ou si ascun deins tiel age soit baylife ou recevoir a ascun home, &c. tout serve pur nient, & poit estre awayde.

AND it is to be understood, that when it is said, that males or females bee of full age, this shall be intended of the age of 21 yeares; for if before such age any deed or feoffment, grant, release, confirmation, obligation, or other writing, bee made by any of them, &c. or if any within such age bee baylife or receiver to any man, &c. all serve for nothing, and may be avoided. Al-

Auxy

* Vid. sect. 402. 403. (2. Infl. 673. F. N. B. 192. 5. Post. 246. a. 337. b. 350. a. & b. 380. a. Ant. 171. a. 8. Co. 44. b.)

Brit. fo. 65. 66. & 101. Flet. li. 3. ca. 14.

(Perk. sect. 135.)

(1) In L. & M. & Rob. an &c. here.

(2) Acc. 6. Co. 4. b. But there the reason given for an infant's not having his age in partition is different, namely that both coparceners are in possession. In the year book of 9. H. 6. 6. b. the reason is expressed to be the prejudice which otherwise there might be to the infant.

(3) See the case of partition of an advowson between coparceners, where one is within age, in F. N. B. 36. D.

(4) See ant. 51. b. note 2. and 52. a. note 2. To the references there add 3. P. Wms. 298.

(5) Not even though a special power is given to him, though it is otherwise with a feme covert. So held by lord chancellor Hardwicke in a case in 1. Ves. 298. and 3. Atk. 695. See Mo. 512. But by the 7. An. c. 17. an infant having a real estate only as a trustee or under a mortgage is enabled to convey under the direction of the court of chancery or the court of exchequer. However this act is deemed not to extend to trusts merely constructive. 2. P. Wms. 549. 3. P. Wms. 337. Another exception to an infant's not being able to alien land arises from the custom of particular places, as the custom of Kent in respect to gavelkind lands, which may be aliened by an infant on attaining 15. See the late Mr. Robinson's excellent Treatise on Gavelk. 193. and Mo. 512.

(6) But an infant may before 21 dispose of personal estate by last will, though it is controverted at what age this testamentary power begins to attach in infants. On this point I have heretofore expressed my notions at length. See note 6. of fo. 89. b.

Auxy home devant le dit age ne serra my jure en un enquest, &c. (1) so a man before the sayd age shall not be sworne in an enquest, &c.

sayd before in the first chapter of the first booke.

Grant. Concessio is in the common law a conveyance of a thing that lies in grant and not in livery, Lib. 3. fol. 63. in Lincoln Colledge case.

which cannot passe without deed; as advowsons, services, rents, commons, reversions, and such like. Of this also sufficient likewise hath been said in the first chapter of the first booke.

Release, confirmation, &c. Of these shall be spoken hereafter in their proper places and chapters.

Obligation is a word of his owne nature of a large extent; but it is commonly taken in the common law, for a bond containing a penalty, with condition for payment of money or to do or suffer some act or thing, &c. and a bill is most commonly taken for a single bond without condition.

Ou auter scripture soit fait per ascun de eux, &c. Here by this (&c.) is implied some exceptions out of this generality, [d] as an infant may bind himselfe to pay for his necessary meat, drinke, apparell, necessary physicke, and such other necessities, and likewise for his good teaching or instruction, whereby he may profit himselfe afterwards: but if he bind himselfe in an obligation or other writing with a penalty (2) for the payment of any of these, that obligation shall not bind him. [e] Also other things of necessity shall bind them, as a presentation to a benefice, (3) for otherwise the laps shall incurr against him. Also if an infant be an executor upon payment of any debt due to the testator, hee may make an acquittance; but in that case a release without payment is voyd (4): and generally whatsoever an infant is bound to do by law, the same shall bind him, albeit he doth it without suit of law. (5) But of this common learning this little tast shall suffice.

Baylife ou receiver al ascun home, &c. By this &c. many things are implied, as that by baylife is understood a servant that hath administration and charge of lands goods and chattels to make the best benefit for the owner, against whom an action of account doth lie for the profits which he hath raised or made or might by his industry or care have reasonably raised or made, his reasonable charges and expences deducted. [f] But one under the age of twenty one yeares shall not be charged in any such account; (6) because, by intendment of law, before his full age hee hath not skill and ability to raise or make any such improvement and profit.

An account against a receiver is, when one receiveth money to the use of another to render an account; but upon his account he shall not be allowed his expences and charges. [g] And therefore a man cannot charge a baylife as a receiver; because then the baylife should lose his expences and charges.

In an account against a receiver, the plaintife must declare by whose hands the defendant received the money, which he shall not doe in the case of a baylife. [h] But in some case in an action of account against one as receptor denariorum, he shall have allowance of his expences and charges, and also shall account for the profit he received (7) or might reasonably receive; and this was provided by law in favour of merchants, and for advancement of trade and trafficke.

As if two joynt merchants occupy their stocke goods and merchandizes in common to their common profit, one of them naming himselfe a merchant shall have an account against the other naming him a merchant, and shall charge him as receptor denariorum ipsius B. ex quacunque causa & contractu ad communem utilitatem ipsorum A. & B. provenien' sicut per legem mercatoriam rationabiliter monstrare poterit.

[i] If there be two joyntenants or tenants in common of lands, and the one make the other his baylife of his moiety, he shall have an action of account against him as baylife: and so are the bookes to be intended, that speake of an action of account in that case. (8)

So as there be but three kinds of writs of account, viz. against one as gardian, wherof Littleton hath spoken before in the chapter of focage; the second against one as baylife; and the third as receiver; as here it appeareth. [k] For a man shall not be charged in an account as surveyor, controller, apprentice, reve, or heyward. And to maintaine an action of account, there must be, either a privity (9) in deed by the consent of the partie, for [l] against a disseisor or other wrongdoer no account doth lie; or a privity in law ex provisione legis made by the law, as against a gardian, &c. wherof sufficient hath been spoken in the chapter of focage. (10)

[d] 18. E. 4. 2. 21. H. 6. 3. lib. 9. fol. 87. Pinchons case. (2. Ro. Abr. 146. Cro. Eliz. 920. 2. Infl. 483. Cro. Cha. 179. Cro. Jam. 494. 560. 1. Ro. Abr. 729. Plowd. 364.)

[e] 8. E. 4. 4. 9. H. 6. 5. 17. E. 3. 9. 29. Aff. 25. 2. Mar. Dyer 104. 105. (5 Co. 29. b. 27. 2. 6. Co. 3. Cro. Cha. 324. 590. 502. Mo. 105. Cro. Jam. 320. 1. Sid. 41. 259. 446.)

[f] Fleta li. 2. ca. 64. & c. 67. Britton fol. 62. 70. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 64. 41. E. 3. 39. 46. E. 3. account 40. 2. R. 2. 104. 45. 6. R. 2. ibid. 3. E. 3. 10. (Cro. Jam. 177. 1. Leon. 219.)

[g] 13. E. 3. infant 9. 17. E. 2. account 121. 21. E. 3. 8. 10. H. 4. 14. 2. H. 4. 13. regill. 135. (Finch L. 302. 303. Noy 12.)

[h] 43. E. 3. 31. 46. E. 3. 3. b. 4. H. 6. 27. (1. Ro. Abr. 119. 2. Infl. 379. 4. Leon. 39. 1. Ro. Rep. 87.)

[i] 30. E. 3. 1. account 127. 47. E. 3. 22. 10. H. 7. 16. Bract. h. 5. f. 334. Brit. f. 62. Fleta l. 2. c. 64. & 51. 5. E. 3. 1. lib. in. trat. 17. 18. 19. (F. N. B. 117. d. Post. 182. a. Cro. Jam. 410.)

[j] 45. E. 3. 10. 3. E. 3. 27. 39. E. 3. 27. 47. E. 3. 22. F. N. B. 118. (Post. 186. 200. b.)

[k] 13. E. 3. account 76. 41. E. 3. ibidem 34. 8. E. 3. 46. 8. E. 4. 6. b. F. N. B. 119. d. (2. Infl. 379. F. N. B. 119. c. 1. Ro. Abr. 119.)

[l] 2. Mar. B. account 89. F. N. B. 117. Pl. Com. 542. 2. H. 4. 12. 33. H. 6. 2. 4. H. 7. 6. & c. (F. N. B. 219. c.)

Ne

(1) No &c. in L. & M. or Rob.

(2) Acc. 1. Ro. Abr. 729. pl. 8. Mo. 679. Cro. Eliz. 920. Godb. 219. But lord Coke's words imply, that a single bond, that is, one without a penalty, being given for necessities, may be good against an infant; and so it hath been frequently adjudged. See March 145. 1. Ro. Abr. 729. pl. 8. and 1. Lev. 86.

(3) See acc. ant. 89. a. and note 1 there.

(4) Acc. post. 264. b.

(5) See F. N. B. 168. d. and the notes b. & c. in the 4to edition as to infant's binding himself to serve.

(6) See acc. ant. 88. b.

(7) See Dy. 21. b.

(8) But now one jointenant or tenant in common may have account against the other as bailiff for receiving more than his share of profits, though there is no appointment of him as bailiff. See 4. An. c. 16. f. 27. See too 1. Leon. 219.

(9) See as to this and the king's prerogative in charging persons as accountants the earl of Devonshire's case 11. Co. 89. a.

(10) Ant. 90. b.

Ne ferra jure en un enquest, &c.

[m] Bract. lib. 5. fo. 340. b.

[n] 13. E. 3. Ley 50.

[o] 26. E. 3. 63. 2. Marie Dyer

104. 105.

[p] Vid. devant cap. de Homage et cap. de Fealty sect. 85. 91.

Bract. li. 2. fo. 124. Britton fo.

73. 74. et fol. 19. Fleta lib. 1.

cap. 27.

[q] 11. H. 6. 40. 1. H. 7. 25.

15. E. 4. 24. (Post. 295.)

[r] 46. E. 3. 10. 9. E. 4. 24.

15. E. 4. 2. 21. H. 3. 23.

(Post. 295. a. Cro. Eliz. 161.)

[m] quid minor jurare non potest. For example, [n] an infant cannot make his law of non summons; [o] and therefore the default shall not grieve him; for seeing the meane to excuse the default is taken away by law, the default it selfe shall not prejudice him. But yet this rule hath an exception, that [p] an infant, when he is of the age of 12 yeares, shall take the oath of allegiance to the king (1): and this was, as Bracton saith, secundum leges sancti Edwardi; but indeede such was the law in the time of king Artbur. (2) [q] An infant cannot upon his oath make his law in an action of debt. [r] And the husband and wife of full age, for the debt of the wife before the coverture, shall make their law.

Sect. 260.

LA terre en fee simple est allot a la file puisne. It is first to be observed upon this whole case, that the fee simple land is allotted to the yongest daughter, and the land entailed to the eldest. This partition primâ facie is good; (4) and herein the partition differeth from the exchange, where in the exchange the estates must be equal.

But yet this partition by matter subsequent may become voidable (as Littleton here puts the case). The eldest coparcener hath by the partition and the matter subsequent barred herself of her right in the fee simple lands, inso-much as when the yongest sister alieneth the fee simple lands and dieth, and her issue entreth into halfe the lands entailed, yet shall not the eldest enter into halfe of the lands in fee simple upon the alience; for by the alienation, the privie of the state is destroyed.

Le puisne file alien la terre en fee simple, &c.

The same law it is, if the yongest daugh-

ITEM si terres ou tenements soyent dones a un home en le taile, quel ad tant des terres en fee simple, et ad issue deux files, et devie, & ses deux files font partition enter eux, issint que la terre en fee simple est allot a la file puisne en allowance des terres & (3) tenements tailes allottes a la file eigne, si, apres tiel partition fait, la puisne file alienast sa terre en fee simple a un auter en fee, & ad issue fits ou file & devie, l'issue poit bien entrer en les tenements tailes & eux tener & occuper en purpartie ovesque son aunt. Et ceo est pur deux causes. Un est, pur ceo que l'issue ne poit aver ascun remede de la terre alien per sa mere, pur ceo que la terre fuit a luy en fee simple, & pur tant que il est un de les heires en taile, & n'ad my ascun recompence de ceo que a luy assiert de les tenements tailes, il est

ALSO if lands or tenements be given to a man in taile, who hath as much land in fee simple, and hath issue two daughters and die, and his two daughters make partition betweene them, so as the land in fee-simple is allotted to the younger daughter in allowance for the lands and tenements in taile allotted to the elder daughter, if, after such partition made, the yonger daughter alieneth her land in fee simple to another in fee, & hath issue a son or daughter & dies, the issue may enter into the lands in taile and hold and occupy them in purparty with her aunt. And this is for two causes. One is, for that the issue can have no remedie for the land sold by the mother; because the land was to her in fee simple; and in as much as she is one of the heires in taile, & hath no recompence of that which belongeth to her of the lands in taile, it is reason reason

(1) Acc. ant. 68. b. & 78. b. See also 128. a.—Another exception is, that he may be sworn as a witness at 14, and before if he appears to understand an oath or rather as it is expressed by lord Hale hath competent discretion. 11. Mod. 228. 2. Hal. H. P. C. 278.—Also according to lord Hale in some cases of exigence, as in rape, an infant of tender years may be examined without oath.—In 1. Stra. 700. there is a case in which an infant of 7 years was refused. There too the point about examining infants as witnesses is ably argued. The same point was touched upon incidentally in the great case of Onychund and Barker before lord chancellor Hardwicke about receiving a Gentoo's evidence; which I more particularly refer to here; because in it lord Hale's doctrine of admitting infants to give evidence in criminal cases without oath is said to have been over-ruled at the Old Bailey after mature deliberation and also by lord Raymond. 1. Atk. 29. See 1. Hal. Hist. P. C. 302. 634. and 2. Hal. H. P. C. 279. and Lamb. Just. 24. 1602. p. 85.

(2) See notes 3. and 4. of fol. 68. b.

(3) In L. & M. instead of terres & it is autres.

(4) Acc. F. N. B. 62. M.—Here lord Hale's MS. makes a question, whether such partition be void or voidable, being made by husband, and cites M. 30. 31. Eliz. B. R. Morris and Maule.

reason, que el eit sa purparty de les tenements tailes, & nosnement quant tiel partition ne fait ascun discontinuance (1).

Mes le contrary est tenu M. 10. H. 6. s. que le heire ne poit enter sur le parcener que ad la terre taile, mes est mis a formedon.

deed or in law descended. If on the other side the eldest coparcener alien the land entailed and dyeth, her issue shall have a formedon alone (4) for the whole land entailed; for so long as the partition continueth in force (5), she is only inheritable to the whole land entailed.

Et n'ad my ascun recompence. This is intended, as it appeareth, of a full recompence.

Tiel partition ne fait ascun discontinuance. And the reason thereof is, for that it passeth not by Every of seisin, but the partition is in truth lesse then a grant, for that it maketh no degree, but each coparcener is in by descent from the common ancestor. See more of this in the chapter of discontinuance. Section 262.

Mes le contrary est tenu, &c. This is no part of Littleton, and is contrary to law as appeareth by Littleton himselfe; and besides, the case intended is not truly vouched, for it is not in 10. H. 6. but in 20. H. 6. and yet there it is but the opinion of Newton obiter by the way. Vide F. tit. part. 1. 20. H. 6. 14.

Sect. 261.

UN autre cause est, pur ces que il serra rette la folly del eigne soer, que el voit suffer ou agree a tiel partition, ou el puiroit aver si el voile la moitie de la terre en fee simple & son moitie des tenements en le taile pur soy purparty, & issint estre sure sans damage.

in fee simple, and this she might doe ex provifione legis. But when she will not submit her to the policie and provision of the law, but betake herselfe to her owne policy and provision, there the law will not ayde her, as here by Littleton it manifestly appeareth. And so it is in the other case. (*) As if a man be seised of three mannors of equal value in fee, and taketh wife, and chargeth one of the mannors with a rent charge, and dyeth, she may by the provision of the law take a third part of all the mannors and hold them discharged; but if she will accept the entire mannor charged, it is holden that she shall hold it charged.

ANother reason is, for that it shall be accounted the folly of the eldest sister, that she would suffer or agree to such a partition, where she might if shee would have had the moity of the land in fee simple and a moity of lands entailed for her part, and so to be sure without losse.

UN autre cause, &c.

This is another reason to prove, that by the partition the eldest daughter hath concluded her selfe, as is aforesaid.

Son moitie des terres en le taile.

For if a writ of partition had beene brought, the eldest should not have beene compelled to take the whole estate in taile, for the prejudice that might after ensue, but might have challenged the one moity of the lands in taile, and another moity of the lands in (*) 26. E. 3. dower 123. 17. E. 2. tit. dower 164. 18. H. 6. 27. (Ant. 32. b. 33. a.)

A

(1) In L. & M. Rob. and the two Cambridge MSS. these words are added, de le taile, si come sera dit en apres en le chapitre de discontinuance. What follows in this section is not in L. & M. Rob. or the MSS.

(2) For the effect of this doctrine about reversions on estates tail, and with what qualification it should be understood, see the authorities collected in 1. Vin. Abr. 141. pl. 2. to which add 2. Atk. 206. and post. 174. b.

(3) Lord Coke may be here presumed to mean a lineal warranty; because hereafter he allows and in his time it was the common learning, that collateral warranty would bar the issue in tail without recompence. Post. 374. b.

(4) In a Coke upon Littleton I have with MS. notes there is the following remark.—“Quare of this; for I think the formedon must be brought in the name of the issue and the surviving parcener, and then the parcener to be summoned and severed, and then the issue to make a special count and shew the partition.”

(5) See post. 176. b. and sect. 274.

Dyer 1. Mar. 98.

A partition of lands intailed betweene parceners, if it be equall at the time of the partition, shall bind the issues in taile for ever (1), albeit the one doe alien her part.

But here it may be demanded, that seeing Littleton saith, that it shall betaken to be the folly of the eldest parcener, &c. what if so be the eldest did not know of the estate tayle either in respect of the antiquity thereof, or for want of having of the evidence, or for any other cause, what folly can be imputed to her?

The answer is, that it is presumed in law, that every one is consant of her right and title to her owne land; and on the other side it should be arrected (2) great folly in her to bee ignorant of her owne title. And therefore the reason of Littleton doth firmly hold.

Sect. 262.

BEfore (3) it appeareth, that when the privity of the estate is destroyed by the feoffment of one coparcener, that upon eviction of a moiety by force of an entayle against the other she shall not enter upon the alienee. But in this case that Littleton here putteth, when the privity of the state remaineth, and the part of the one is evicted, (*) she shall enter and hold in coparcenary with her other coparcener; and so it is in the case of an exchange. By reason of the &c. in the end of this section there may two questions be justly demanded.

What if the whole estate in part of the purparty of one parcener be evicted by a title paramount; whether is the whole partition avoyded, for that Littleton here putteth the case that the whole purpartie of the one is defeated?

The second question is, whether if but part of the state of one coparcener be evicted, as an estate in taile, or for life, leaving a reversion in the coparcener, whether that shall avoid the partition in the whole?

To the first it is answered, that if the whole estate in part of the purparty bee evicted, that shall avoyd the partition in the whole, bee it of a mannor, that is entire, or of acres of ground, or the like that bee severall; [u] for the partition in that case implyeth for this purpose both a warrantie and a condition in law (4), and either of them is entire, and giveth an entry in this case into the whole. And so hath

AUXR si home soit seifie en fee d'un carve de terre per just title, & disseist un enfant deins age d'un auter carve, & ad issue deux files, & morust seifi d'ambideux carves, l'enfant adonque esteant deins age, & les files entront & font partition, issint que l'un carve est allotte al purparty l'un, come per case al puisne en allowance d'auter carve que est allotte a le purparty de l'auter, si puis l'enfant enter en le carve dont il fuit disseist sur la possession le parcener que ad mesme le carve, donques mesme le parcener poit entrer en l'auter carve que sa soer ad, & tener en parcenary ovesque luy. Mes si le puisne aliena mesme la carve a un auter en fee simple devant l'entrie l'enfant, & puis l'enfant enter sur le possession l'alienee, don-

ALSO if a man bee seised in fee of a carve of land by just title, and hee disseise an infant within age of another carve, and hath issue two daughters, and dyeth seised of both carves, the infant being then within age, and the daughters enter and make partition, so as the one carve is allotted for the part of the one, as per case to the youngest in allowance of the other carve which is allotted to the purpartie of the other, if afterward the infant enter into the carve whereof hee was disseised upon the possession of the parcener which hath the same carve, then the same parcener may enter into the other carve which her sister hath, and hold in parcenary with her. But if the yongest alien the same carve to another in fee before the entry of (*) 15. E. 4. 3. a. per Littleton. lib. 4. fo. 121. 122. Ballard's case.

[u] 13. E. 4. 3. 42. Aff. 22.

(1) Acc. ant. 166. a. 2. Vern. 233.

(2) This word, which is so uncommon that I cannot find it noticed in any dictionary I have seen, is apparently used for reckoned. Lord Coke seems to borrow it from Littleton's use of the word rette at the beginning of the section here commented upon.

(3) Ant. 172. b.

(4) That is a condition to give re-entry and a warranty to vouch and have recompence. See post. 384. a.

que el ne poit enter en l'auter carve; pur ceo que per son alienation el ad luy tout ousterment dismisse d'aver ascun part de les tenements come parcener. Mes si le puisne devant l'entrie l'enfant fait de ceo un lease pur terme d'ans, ou pur terme de vie, ou en fee tayle savant la reversion a luy, & puis l'enfant enter, là paraventure auterment est; pur ceo que el ne soy dismisse de tout ceo que juit en luy, mes ad reserve a luy le reversion & le fee, &c.

the infant, and after the infant enter upon the possession of the alienee, then she cannot enter into the other carve; because by her alienation she hath altogether dismissed her self to have any parte of the tenements as parcener. But if the youngest before the entry of the infant make a lease of this for terme of yeares, or for terme of life, or in fee tayle saving the reversion to her, and after the infant enter, there peradventure otherwise it is; because she hath not dismissed her selfe of all which was in her, but hath reserved to her the reversion, & the fee, &c.

it beene lately resolved [a] both in the case of exchange and of the partition.

To the second, if any estate of freehold be evicted from the coparcener in all or part of her purparty, it shall be avoyded in the whole. (1) As if A. bee seised in fee of one acre of land in possession, and of the reversion of another expectant upon an estate for life, and hee disseise the lessee for life who makes continuall clayme; A. dyeth seised of both acres, and hath issue two daughters; partition is made, so as the one acre is allotted to the one, and the other acre to the other; the lessees enter: the partition is avoyded for the whole, and so likewise hath [p] it beene lately resolved.

[q] Yet there is a diversity betweene the warranty, and the condition which the law createth upon the partition. Where one coparcener taketh benefit of the condition in law (2) she defeateth the partition in the whole. But when shee voucheth by force of the warranty in law for part, the partition shall not bee defeated in the whole, but shee shall recover recompence for that part. And therein also there is another diversity betweene a recovery in value by

[a] Bostard's case lib. 4. fol. 121.

[p] Bostard's case, ubi supra.

[q] Vide 5. E. 3. tit. voucher 249.

(6. Co. 12. b. 1. Ro. Abr. 815, 4. Co. 122.)

force of the warranty upon the exchange and upon the partition. For upon the exchange he shall recover a full recompence for all that he loseth. But upon the partition she shall recover but the moiety, or halfe of that which is lost, to the end that the losse may be equall. (3).

Many other diversities there be between exchanges and partitions; for there are more and greater privities in case of partition in persons blood and estates, than there is in exchanges; all which were too tedious to rehearse in this place, seeing so much as hath beene said herein is sufficient for the explanation of the cases of partition which Littleton hath put.

18. E. 2. tit. aid 171. 19. H. 6. 26. (Ant. 50. b.)

Donques el ne poit enter en l'auter carve, &c. By this is also approved that which hath beene often said before, that when the whole privy betweene coparceners is destroyed, there ceaseth any recompence to be expected either upon the condition in law or warranty in law by force of the partition.

Per son alienation il ad luy tout ousterment dismisse d'aver ascun part de les tenements come parcener. Hereupon it followeth, that if one parcener maketh a feoffment in fee, and after her feoffee is impleaded and voucheth the feoffor, [r] she may have aid of her coparcener to deraigne a warranty paramount, (4) but never to recover pro rata against her by force of the warranty in law upon the partition; for Littleton here saith, that by her alienation she hath dismissed her selfe to have any part of the land as parcener, and without question as parcener she must recover pro rata, upon the warranty in law against the other parcener.

And yet in some case the feoffee of one coparcener shall have aid of the other parceners to deraigne the warranty paramount. And therefore [a] if there be two coparceners and they make partition, and the one of them enfeoffes her sonne and heire apparent and dieth, the sonne is impleaded, albeit he be in by the feoffment of his mother, yet shall he pray in ayd of the

[r] 41. E. 3. 24. 11. H. 4. 22. 23. 14. E. 3. 24. 24. (Hob. 21. 26.)

[a] 43. E. 3. 23. Pl. Com. 4. E. 3. 15. 5. E. 3. 7. 38. E. 3. 17. &c.

(1) So it is of an exchange. Hob. 152. Calthrope's reading on lord and copyholder 92. 1. Ro. Abr. 815.

(2) That is, by entry.

(3) See acc. the case of dower post. 384. b. See also the provision in favour of the lord for the third part not devisable by the Statute of wills 34. & 35. H. 8. c. 5. f. 11.

(4) See 31. H. 8. c. 1. f. 1. 4 H. 7. 3. a. & Plowd. Mansel's case 7. a. & b.

[5] 32. E. 1. tit. aid 178.
3 E. 2. ibid. 163. (Post. 384. b.)

the other coparcener to have the warranty paramount; and the reason [5] of the granting of this aid is, for that the warranty between the mother and the sonne is by law admulled, (1) and therefore the law giveth the sonne albeit he be in by feoffment, to pray in ayd of the other parcener, to deraigne the warranty paramount; wherein is to bee observed the great equity of the common law in this case;

Ipsæ etenim leges cupiunt ut jure regantur.

[*] 2. H. 6. 16. (Flowd. 9. b.
Manuel's case.)

[*] But if a man be seised of lands in fee, and hath issue two daughters, and make a gift in taile to one of them, and dye seised of the reversion in fee which descends to both sisters, and the donee or her issue is impleaded, she shall not pray in ayd of the other coparcener, either to recover pro rata, or to deraigne the warranty paramount; for that the other sister is a stranger to the state taile, whereof the eldest was sole tenant, and never partition was or could be thereof made. (2)

(Ant. 173. a.)

Mes si le puisne devant l'entrie l'enfant fait de ceo un lease, &c. ou en fee taile savant le reversion a luy, &c. This (upon that which hath beene said) (3) needeth no explanation. Only this is to be observed, that, albeit it is in the power of tenant in taile to cut off the reversion, yet if the infant enter before it be cut off, the law hath such consideration of this reversion, that she that loseth it shall enter into her sisters part, and hold with her in coparcenary, for that the privity between them was not wholly destroyed. (4)

Sect. 263.

(F. N. B. 162. c.)

ITEM si soient trois ou quater parceners, &c. que sont partition enter eux, si le part d'un parcener soit defeat per tiel loyal entrie, el poit enter & occuper les auters terres ov'esque tous les auters parceners, & eux compeller de faire nouvel partition de les auters terres enter eux, &c.

ALSO if there be three or four coparceners, &c. which make partition between them, if the part of the one parcener be defeated by such lawfull entrie, she may enter and occupie the other lands with all the other parceners, and compell them to make new partition between them of the other lands, &c.

INTER eux, &c. This &c. implieth, that so it is betweene the surviving parceners and the heires of the other, or betweene the heires of parceners, all being dead.

Sect. 264.

LE baron soy tient einscome tenant per le curtesie. This is no severance of the state in coparcenary, [5] for the other coparcener and the tenant by the curtesie shall be joyntly impleaded; for he doth continue the state of coparcenary, as the other parcener did. (5)
Vers le tenant

ITEM si sont deux parceners, & l'un prent baron, & le baron & sa feme ont issue enter eux, & la feme devy, & le baron soy tient eyns en le moity come tenant per le curtesie, en ceo cas le parcener que survesquist & le tenant per le curtesie bien poient faire par-

ALSO if there be two parceners, and the one taketh husband, and the husband and wife have issue betweene them, and his wife dieth, and the husband keepes himselfe in as tenant by the curtesie, in this case the parcener which sur-titution

[5] 24. E. 3. 29. 31. E. 3. Bricle 339. 9. E. 4. 13. 19. H. 6. 26. 3. H. 6. 26. 3. H. 6. Aff. 1. 27. H. 6. 8. 21. E. 3. 14. (Ant. 167. b.)

(1) Acc. post. 390. a.

(2) See post. 177. b. contra as to land given in frankmarriage. See also 2. H. 6. 16.

(3) Ant. 173. a. and note 2. there.

(4) See ant. 103. a. & b.

(5) Acc. post. 175. b. See also fo. 192. a. and Bro. joinder in action 40.

titim enter eux, &c. Et si le tenant per le curtesie ne voit agreer al partition d'estre fait, donques le parcener que survesquist poit aver envers le tenant per le curtesie, brieve de partitione faciendâ, &c. & luy compeller de faire partition. Mes si le tenant per le curtesie voile aver partition enter eux d'estre fait, & le parcener que survesquist ne voit ceo aver, donque le tenant per le curtesie n'avera aucun remedy pur aver partition, &c. Car il ne poit aver brieve de partitione faciendâ, pur ceo que il n'est parcener, car tiel brieve gift pur parceners tantselement. Et issint poyes veyer, que brieve de partitione faciendâ gift envers tenant per le curtesie, & uncore il mesme ne poit aver tiel brieve.

tenant by the curtesie, and yet he himselfe cannot have the like writ.

before. But a nuper obiit and a rationabili parte (3) doe lye onely betweene two coparceners on both sides.

If three coparceners be, and the eldest doth purchase the part of the youngest, the eldest, having one part by descent and the other by purchase, shall have a writ of partition at the common law against the other middle sister, et sic de similibus. And so it is in a far stronger case, if there be three coparceners, and the eldest taketh husband, and the husband purchase the part of the youngest, the husband for his part is a stranger and no parcener, and yet he and his wife shall have a writ of partition against the middle sister at the common law, because he is seised of one part in the right of his wife who is a parcener. (4)

Pur aver partition, &c. Here by this &c. is included all others that be strangers in blood, whether they come to their estates by purchase or by act in law. Since Littleton wrote, by the statutes [d] one joyntenant or tenant in common may have a writ of partition against the other; and therefore at this day the alienee of one parcener may have a writ of partition against the other parcener, because they are tenants in common: and the like had bene attempted in former parliaments [*] but prevailed not untill these latter statutes.

[e] The tenant by the curtesie shall have a writ of partition upon the statute of

veth, and the tenant by the curtesie may well make partition between them, &c. And if the tenant by the curtesie will not agree to make partition, then the parcener which surviveth may have against the tenant by the curtesie a writ of partitione faciendâ, &c. & compel him to make partition. But if the tenant by the curtesie would have partition to be made between them, and the parcener which surviveth will not have this, then the tenant by the curtesie cannot have any remedy to have partition, &c.

For hee cannot have a writ of partitione faciendâ, because he is no parcener. For such a writ lyeth for parceners onely. And so you may see, that a writ of partitione faciendâ lyeth against per le curtesie brieve de partitione faciendâ, &c. Here by the &c. is implied, that albeit that the tenant by the curtesie be an estranger in blood, yet the [c] writ de partitione faciendâ clearly lies against the tenant by the curtesie, because he continueth the estate of coparcenary.

If two coparceners be, and one doth alien in fee, they are tenants in common, and severall writs of præcipe must be brought against them; (1) and yet the parcener shall have a writ of partition against the alienee at the common law, which is a far stronger case then the case put of tenant by the curtesie.

Tiel brieve gift pur parceners tantselement.

Hereby it appeareth, that neither the tenant by the curtesie, nor (much lesse) the alienee of a coparcener shall have a writ of partitione faciendâ at the common law; (2) for Littleton saith here, that such a writ lyeth onely for parceners, [*] but it may be brought by a parcener against strangers, as it appeareth

[c] 3. E. 3. 47. 9. E. 5. 13. 16. E. 3. Aid 129. 19. E. 3. ibid. 144.

28. E. 3. 51.

[*] 3. E. 3. 47. 48. (F. N. B. 197; Plowd. 306. b.)

Dier 1. Marix 98.

F. N. B. 52. Registr.

[d] 31. H. 8. cap. 1. 32. H. 8. cap. 32. Vid. sect. 290.

[*] Rot. Parl. 1. R. 2. nu. 82.

[e] Brooke tit. partition 41. 32.

(1) Acc. ant. 167. b. But it is no severance, if the alienation be only for life. Post. 192. a.

(2) See acc. Dy. 98. b.

(3) See ant. 164. b.

(4) See in F. N. B. 62. S. the form of the writ in such a case.

32. H. 8. ca. 32. for albeit he is neither jointenant nor tenant in common, for that a præcipe lyeth against the parcener and tenant by the curtesie, as hath been said, yet he is in equall mischief as another tenant for life.

[f] Mich. 7. & 8. Eliz. Bendloes inter Wotton & Cooke. (1) Dier 3. Mariz 128. A. & 7. Eliz. 243.

[f] If there be three coparceners and a stranger purchase the part of one of them, he and one other of the coparceners shall not joyne in a writ of partition, neither by the common law, nor by force of the statute; for the words of the preamble of the statute be (and none of them by the law doth or may know their severall parts, &c. and cannot by the lawes of this realme make partition thereof, without other of their mutuall assents, &c.) Now in this case the one of the plaintifes, viz. the parcener, may have a writ of partition at the common law, and the other parcener being a purchaser may have it by the statute; and therefore they shall not joyne in one writ.

Cap. 2. Parceners by Custome. Sect. 265.

(1. Sid. 136. Ant. 140. a.) See before all the ancient authors of the law concerning gavelkind ubi supra. Lambert verbo terra exscript.

[g] 5. E. 4. 8. b. 21. E. 4. 56. b. Plo. Com. 129. b. in Buckleis case. Vide sect. 8. versus finem. (1. Sid. 138. Doct. Plac. 105.)

[h] Berockesire. Hereford.

[i] Lamb. verb. Welfamen. Silvester Giraldus.

MES il covient en le declaration de faire mention de le custome. Well said Littleton, [g] that he in his declaration must make mention of the custome, as to say, that the land is of the custome of gavelkinde; but hee shall not prescribe in it. And so is it of Burgh English. And these two vary in that point from other customes; for the law, when they are generally alledged, taketh knowledge of these two. (4)

In [h] Domesday it is thus said, duo fratres tenerunt in paragio (5) quisque habuit aulam suam, & potuerint ire quod voluerint.

Auxy tiel custome est en auters lieux Angleterre. Of this sufficient hath beene said before. (6)

North Gales. Wales, Wallia. It commeth [i] of the Saxon word wealh, which signifieth peregrinus, or exterus; for the Saxons so called them, because in troth they were strangers to them being the remaine of the old and ancient Britons, a wise and warlike nation inhabiting in the west part of England. These men have kept their proper language for above these thousand yeares past; and they to this day call us Englishmen Saxons, (that is) Saxons. And the like custome, as our author here saith was in North Wales, was also in Ireland; for there the lands also (which is one marke of the ancient Brittons) were of the nature of gavelkinde: but where by their Brehon law the bar-

PARCENERS per le custome sont lou home seisie en fee simple, ou en fee taile, de terres ou tenements que sont de tenure appel gavelkind deins le county de Kent, & ad issue divers fits & devie, tielx terres ou tenements descenderont a tous les fits per le custome, & ovelment enheriteront & ferront partition enter eux per le custome, sicome females ferront, et briefe de partitione faciendâ gist en ceo cas, sicome enter females.

Mes il covient en la declaration de faire mention de le custome.

Auxy tiel custome est en auters lieux d'Angleterre. Et auxi tiel custome est en North Gales, &c. (2)

PARCENERS by the custome are, where a man seised in fee simple, or in fee taile, of lands or tenements which are of the tenure called gavelkind within the countie of Kent, and hath issue divers sonnes and die, such lands or tenements shall descend to all the sons by the custome, and they shall equally inherit and make partition by the custom, as females shall do, and a writ of partition lieth in this case as between females. But it behooveth in the declaration to make mention of the custome. Also such custome is in other places of England, and also such custome is in North-Wales, (3) &c.

(1. S. C. is also in Dy. 260. b.

(2) In L. & M. and the two MSS. it is en Northumberland et North Wales, &c.

(3) But by the 34. & 35. H. 8. gavelkind descent of lands in Wales is expressly taken away, and all lands there are made descendible to the eldest son according to the common law of England. See that statute c. 26. f. 91. and 128. Also in Kent various estates have been made descendible according to the common law by special statutes for this purpose. See Robins. on Gavelk. 75.

(4) But according to a very accurate writer on gavelkind this doctrine must be restrained to the special descent of gavelkind and Borough English lands, which is considered as the essence of both; and therefore the other customs incident to gavelkind and Borough English land must be specially pleaded. See Robins. on Gavelk. 41. For this difference several authorities are cited; namely, as to gavelkind a case in Cro. Cha. 562. another in 1. Lev. 79. 1. Sid. 137. and Raym. 76. and a third in 2. Sid. 153. and as to Borough English a case in 1. Salk. 243. I rather introduce these references because mr. Robinson's treatise is become very scarce.

(5) This word means equality, being derived from the adjective par, and made a substantive by the addition of agium. Read more concerning the termination of agium ant. 86. a. See also as to disparagatio ant. 80. a.

(6) Ant. 14. a. and 140. a. See also book 1. chap. 7. of Robinson on Gavelkind, where the reader will see a most learned dissertation on the origin antiquity and universality of partible descents.

stards inherited with their legitimate sons, as to the bastards that custome was abolished. (1) Vide sect. 212. And agreeing with Littleton in this point, see an old statute. * Aliter usitatum est in Wallia, * Stat. Walliz, an. 12. E. 1. quàm in Angliâ, quoad successionem hereditatis, eò quòd hereditas partibilis est inter heredes masculos, et à tempore cuius non extitit memoria partibilis extitit, dominus rex non vult, quòd consuetudo illa abrogetur, sed quòd hereditates remaneant partibiles inter consimiles heredes sicut fieri consuevit, Et fiat partitio illius sicut fieri consuevit. (2)

Parceners per le custome, &c. Well sayd Littleton, "by the custome," for sons are parceners in respect of the custome of the fee or inheritance, and not in respect of their persons, as daughters and sisters, &c. be. [b] Et sunt participes quasi partem capientes, &c. ratione ipsius rei quæ partibilis est, et non ratione personarum, quæ non sunt quasi unus heres & unum corpus, sed diversi heredes, ubi tenementum partibile est inter plures coheredes petentes, qui descendunt de eodem stipite & semper solent dividi ab antiquo. [4] Brañ. li. 5. fo. 428. Brit. cap. 71. Flet. lib. 5. cap. 9.

Sect. 266.

ITEM il y ad autre partition quel est d'auter nature et d'auter forme que aucuns des partitions a-vaunt dits sont. Sicome home seise de certain terres en fee simple ad issue deux files, et l'eigne est mary, et le pere dona parcel de ses terres a le baron ove sa file en frank-mariage, et morust seise de le remnant, le quel remnant est de plus greinder value per an que sont les terres dones en frank-mariage.

Also there is another partition which is of another nature and of another forme then any of the partitions aforesaid be. As if a man seised of certaine lands in fee simple hath issue two daughters, and the eldest is married, and the father giveth part of his lands to the husband with his daughter in frankemariage, and dyeth seised of the remnant, the which remnant is of a greater yearly value then the lands given in frank-mariage.

DONA parcel de ses terres a le baron ove sa file en frankmariage.

Here it appeareth, that a gift in frankemariage may be made after marriage, as hath beene sayd in the chapter of fee tayle. (3)

Le quel remnant est de plus greinder value per an, &c.

Admit, that the lands given in frankmariage are of greater value than the lands descended in fee simple, shall the other sister have any remedy against the donees? It is plaine she shall not; because it is lawfull for a man to dispose of his own lands at his will and pleasure.

Sect. 267.

EN cel case, le baron, ne le feme, avera riens pur tour purpartie de le dit remnant, sinon que ils voient mitter leur terres dones en frank-mariage en hotch-pot ovesque le rem-

IN this case, neither the husband, nor wife, shall have any thing for their purpartie of the said remnant, unless they will put their lands given in frank-mariage in hotch-pot, with the remnant of the

EN cel case, le baron, ne le feme, avera riens pur tour purpartie, &c. [1] This gift in frankmariage shall prima facie be intended a sufficient advancement; and therefore the remnant shall descend to the other coparcener, onely with this provision in law

tacite annexed, that if the donees

[1] 8. H. 3. breve 380. 34. E. 1. nuper obiit 15. adjudge 4. E. 3. 49. 10. Aff. p. 14. Vi. 10. E. 3. 38. & 30. Aff. 7. Brañton lib. 2. fol. 77. lib. 5. fo. 428. Brit. ca. 72. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 47.

(1) The gavelkind descent of lands in Ireland was an incident to the custom of tanistry, and as such fell to the ground with its principal in consequence of a solemn judgment against the latter in a case of the fifth of James the first. For this case, which is excellently reported by sir John Davis, who was attorney-general in Ireland at the time, see Dav. Rep. 23. But in the reign of queen Anne, the policy of weakening the Roman Catholic interest in Ireland was the cause of an Irish statute to make the lands of papists descendible according to the gavelkind custom unless the heir conformed within a limited time. See Robins. on Gavelk. 17. However now by an Irish statute of the present reign the descent of the lands of papists is again reduced to the course of the common law. Irish Stat. of 17. & 18. G. 3. c. 49. f. 1.—Lord Coke, from his supposing that the Brehon law of partibility except as to bastards remained in Ireland, seems not to have been aware of the case of tanistry. Indeed what he writes in this respect was before that case more applicable to Wales than Ireland; for the statute of Wales cited in the next passage confirms the partible descent of lands there amongst males with an exception excluding bastards, whereas I doubt whether there is any evidence of confirmation of the Brehon law with such an exception. See ant. 141. a. where lord Coke himself takes notice of a total abolition of the Brehon law.

(2) See ant. 175. b. note 4.

(3) See ant. 21. b. See also acc. as to dower ex assensu patris after marriage F. N. B. 151. L.

nees will put the land into botchpot, then she shall out of the remnant make up her part equall. But the donees must doe the first act, and in the meane time the whole fee simple land descends to the other. And this is warranted here by Littleton, viz. that the donees shall have nothing for the purpartie of the remnant, unlesse they will put their lands given in frankmariage in botchpot so as the donees must doe the first act; and more expressely after in this chapter, (1) where he directly saith, that the other sister shall enter into the remnant, and them to occupy to her owne use, unlesse the husband and wife will put the lands given in frankmariage into botchpot. And herewith agreeth Fleta, (2) who saith, cum dicat tenens excipiendo, quod non tenetur petenti respondere, quia A. participem habet, &c. replicari poterit à petente, quod prædictus A. tenet quandam partem in maritagium de communi hereditate, nec vult illud in partem ponere. And here are three things (that I may speake once for all) to be observed. First, that in this speciall case where there be two daughters, one of them onely shall inherit the lands in fee simple. Secondly, that in this case there lieth no writ of partition; because non tenent in simul & pro indiviso. Thirdly, if the parcener, to whom the land in fee simple descended, will not put the lands in botchpot, then may the donees enter into the fee simple lands, and hold them in coparcenarie with her.

And it seemeth by our old bookes, [k] that by the ancient law there was a kind of resemblance hercof concerning goods. Si autem post debita deducta, & post deductionem expensarum quæ necessarie erunt, id totum, quod tunc superfuerit, dividatur in tres partes; quarum una pars relinquatur pueris (3) si pueros habuerit defunctus, secunda uxori si superstes fuerit, & de tertiâ parte habeat testator liberam disponendi facultatem. Si autem liberos non habeat, tunc medietas defuncto, & alia medietas uxori: si autem sine uxore decesserit liberis existentibus, tunc medietas defuncto, & alia medietas liberis tributur: si autem sine uxore & liberis, tunc id totum defuncto remanebit. And by the law before the conquest it was thus provided, si quis incuria siue morte repentina fuerit intestatus mortuus, dominus tamen nullam rerum suarum partem (præter eam quæ jure debetur heredi nomine) sibi assumito, verum eas judicio suo uxori liberis & cognatione proximis jussu pro suo cuique jure distribuito.

But it appeareth by the Regist, [l] and many of our bookes, that there must be a custome alleged in some county, &c. (5) to inable the wife or children to the writ de rationabili parte bonorum; (6) and so hath it bene resolved in parliament. [m] But such children, as be reasonably advanced by the father in his life time with any part of his goods, shall have no further part of his goods; for the words of the writ be, nec in vitâ patris promossi fuerunt. (7)

Note, the custome of London is, that if the father advance any of his children with any part of his goods, that shall bar them to demand any further part, unlesse the father under his hand or in his last will do expresse and declare, that it was but in part of advancement, (8) and then that child so partly advanced shall put his part in botchpot with the executors and widow, (9) and have a full third part of the whole, accounting that which was formerly given unto him as part thereof. And this is that in effect, which the civilians call collatio bonorum. (10)

E:

(1) See sect. 268.

(2) See also acc. F. N. B. 197. O.

(3) Though pueri more commonly means boys, yet it is plain, that here it comprehends children of both sexes; because afterwards liberi is used for the same purpose. The word is used in the same large sense in the writ de rationabili parte bonorum; and therefore Fitzherbert observes, that the son and daughter may join in that writ. F. N. B. 122. C. Also this large sense of pueri is warranted both by the application of the word in the Roman law, and by its derivation from the Greek word παις, which is masculine or feminine according to the article before it. To this effect Justinian's Digest in the title de verborum significatione gives the following extract from the commentary of the Roman lawyer Julius Paulus on his famous predecessor Sabinus, Pueri appellatione etiam puella significatur: nam et feminas puerperas appellant recentes ex partu; et Græci παῖς communiter appellatur. See Dig. lib. 50. tit. 16. leg. 163. and Menag. Jur. Civil. Amcenitates cap. 39. voce puerpera, where that learned French writer expatiates on the etymology of puer. I have been induced to give this explanation of the word puer by a case in our own law-books, which actually turned upon the question, whether a daughter could take lands under that description. The case arose on a remainder in a settlement made by a man on his first marriage seniori puero of the husband and the heirs of his body; and this was decided by two judges against one to intitle a daughter and only child of the first marriage in preference to the son of a second. Dy. 337. b. However there is a much earlier case on the construction of pueri, in which it was interpreted to exclude females. Hob. 33. and the case there cited from 30. Aff. 47. & 30. E. 3. 27. But now indeed, when legal instruments are so universally expressed in the English tongue, it is not probable, that any dispute should arise in our courts of justice about the interpretation of this Latin word.

(4) The chapter of Fleta is here referred to erroneously. It should be cap. 57.

(5) The places, usually named, as those in which the customary division of personality on a death prevailed and so in favor of wife and children restrained the testamentary power to a third or a moiety, are these: the province of York, the city of London, and various districts of Wales. But since lord Coke's time several statutes have been made to remove this restraint in each of these different places; and under those statutes the whole of the personal estate is now disposeable by last will in them through England and Wales, with this exception however, that there is still no statute affecting either the city of Chester which is part of the province of York, or such other places not within that province or London or Wales as may have such a custom; though whether there be any such places, I am uncertain. See for the province of York 4. W. & M. c. 2. & 2. & 3. An. c. 5. for London 11. G. 1. c. 18. and for Wales 7. & 8. W. 3. c. 38. Indeed sir William Blackstone treats the testamentary power over personal estate as now prevailing through all England, 2. Blackst. Comm. 9th ed. 493. But if there be no other statutes than those he cites, being the same as are before mentioned, I take this to be a mistake so far at least as regards the city of Chester. The fact is, that both the cities of York and Chester were excepted in the 4. of W. & M. and that the 2. & 3. An. take away the exception as to the city of York only. As too the statutes, which subject the custom of dividing the personal estate of deceased persons to the testamentary power, do not name any place in England except London and the province of York, it follows, that the local [k] Glanvil. lib. 7. cap. 5. Bracton lib. 2. fol. 60. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 5. (1) Magna Carta cap. 18. 3. F. N. B. 222. 30. E. 3. 25. 31. E. 3. Resp. 60. 31. Aff. 14. 17. E. 2. Detincw 17. E. 3. 17. 1. E. 2. Detincw 56. 31. H. 8. tit. rationab. parte bonorum 6.

* Lamb. f. 119. 68. (Poll. 185; b. Ant. 149. b.)

[l] Regill. 142. 34. E. 1. Detincw 60. 1. E. 4. 6. 7. E. 4. 21. 43. E. 3. 38. (F. N. B. 122. L.) [m] 3. E. 3. dette 156. 40. E. 3. 18.

Et il semble que cest parol (botchpot) est en English a pudding, &c. Littleton both here and in other places searcheth for the signification of words, in all arts a thing most necessary; for ignoratis terminis ignoratur & ars. Vide for Etymologies, sect. 95. 119. 135. 154. 164. 204. 234. &c.

Hutspot or botspot is an old Saxon word, and signifieth so much as Littleton here speaks. And the French use botchpot for a commixion of divers things together. It signifieth here metaphorically in partem posito. In English we use to say bodgepodge, in Latine sarrago or miscellaneum.

The residue of this section needeth no explication.

Vide Brit. cap. 72. 4. E. 3. 47. 6. E. 3. 30. 10. E. 3. 38. 24. 4. 3. 27. F. N. B. 262. Regitt. 320. Fleta lib. 6. ca. 47. (1) Mich. 10. E. 1. coram rege Hereford in thesaur.

Sect. 268.

ET cest terme (botchpot) n'est forsque un terme similitudinarié, & est a tant adire, cestascavoir, de mitter les terres en frankmarriage & les auters terres en fee simple ensemble; & ceo est a tiel extent de conuſter le value de tous les terres, s. de les terres dones en frankmarriage, & de le remnant que ne fueront dones, & donques partition ferra fait en le forme que ensuist. Sicome, mittomus que home soit seisie de 30 acres de terre en fee simple, chescun acre de value de 12 d. per an. & que il ad issue deux files, & l'une est covert de baron, & le pier dona 10 acres de les 30 acres a le baron ove sa file en frankmarriage, & morust seisie de le remnant, donques l'auter soer entra en le remnant, s. en les 20 acres, & eux occupiera a son use demesne, si non que le baron et sa feme voile mitter les 10 acres dones en frankmarriage, ove les 20 acres en botchpot, cestascavoir, ensemble; & donque quant le value de chescun acre est conus, cestascavoir que chescun acre vault per an, & est assesse ou enter eux agreee, que chescun acre vault per an 12 d. donques le partition

AND this tearme (botchpot) is but a tearme similitudinary, & is as much to say, as to put the lands in frankmarriage and the other lands in fee simple together; and this is for this intent, to know the value of all the lands scz. of the lands given in frankmarriage, and of the remnant which were not given, and then partition shall be made in form following. As, put the case that a man be seised of 30 acres of land in fee simple, every acre of the value of 12 pence by the yeare, and that he hath issue two daughters, and the one is covert baron, and the father gives ten acres of the 30 acres to the husband with the daughter in frankmarriage, and dyeth seised of the remnant, then the other sister shall enter into the remnant, viz. into the 20 acres, and shall occupie them to her owne use, unless the husband and his wife will put the 10 acres given in frankmarriage, with the 20 acres in botchpot, that is to say, together; and then when the value of everie acre is knowne, to wit, what every acre valueth by the year, and is assessed or agreed between them, that every acre is worth by the yeare 12 pence, then the partition shall be ferra local custom of any other part of England on this subject is not disturbed by any statutory provision. It now only remains to add here, that though the testamentary power is thus extended over the whole personalty notwithstanding the customs within London or the province of York or within any part of Wales, yet in the case of an intestacy the customs of those places still operate, there being a special provision to save them and all other peculiar customs in the statute of Cha. 2. for distributing the personal estates of intestates. See 22. & 23. Cha. 2. c. 10. See further as to the statutes about these customs in the latter part of note 9. infra.

(1) This reference to Fleta is wrong. It should be lib. 5. cap. 9. p. 314.

(5) In Swinburne on testaments there is a curious dissertation explaining the custom of the province of York in respect to filial portions; and in the course of it, the question, what sort of advancement shall exclude a child, is considered at large. This valuable part of Swinburne is not in the first edition; but was afterwards added by him. It is otherwise as to many additions in the latter editions of his book; these being full of enlargements coming from others, but printed without discriminating them from Swinburne's own work. This manner of treating authors in new editions is ever dissatisfactory and unjustifiable; but in respect to law-books, it is peculiarly inconvenient, the weight and authority of these so much depending on the character of the author. To Swinburne on this subject add the title gills in Dr. Burn's Eccles. Law, in the course of which it is learnedly attempted to give the result of every thing to be met with on the subject in Swinburne's book or elsewhere.

(6) Acc. 2. Inst. 33. But in this point some of great respect differ from Lord Coke. Fitzherbert in his commentary on the writ de rationabili parte honorum contends, that the distribution, which excludes the testamentary power from one third or one moiety of the personal estate, was in his time the general law of the land, and therefore needed not a special custom to support it. He is followed by Swinburne in the same idea, and even by our great modern commentator on the law of England, who cites Finch's law to prove, that the general law was taken to be as represented by Fitzherbert as late as the reign of Charles the first. However Mr. Justice Blackstone states, that about this period the general law insensibly changed; which serra fait en tiel forme, cestascavoir le baron & sa feme averont oultre les 10 acres dones a eux en frankmarriage 5 acres en severalte de les 20 acres, & l'au-ter soer avera le remnant, s. 15 acres de les 20 acres pur sa pur-partie, issint que accomptant les 10 acres que le baron & sa feme ount per le done en frankmarriage, et les auters 5 acres de les 20 acres, le baron et sa feme ont autant en annual value que l'auter soer ad.

made in this manner, viz. the husband and wife shall have be- sides the 10 acres given to them in frankmarriage 5 acres in several- tie of the 20 acres, and the other sister shall have the remnant, s. 15 acres of the 20 acres for her purpartie, so as accounting the 10 acres which the baron and fem have by the gift in frankmarriage, and the other 5 acres of the 20 acres, the husband and wife have as much in yearly value as the other sister.

Bract. lib. 2. fol. 77. lib. 5. fol. 428. Brit. cap. 72. and Fleta lib. 6. ca. 47. 4. E. 3. 49. 10. E. 3. 37. [n] 10. E. 3. 37. 10. All. 14. 4. E. 3. 49. [o] 29. All. 23. (Ant. 169. b.)

AND herewith in expresse tearmes agreeth Bracton, Britton, and Fleta, and all the bookes abovesaid and many others. And it is worthy the observation [n] that after this putting into hotchpot, and partition made, the lands given in frankmarriage are become as the other lands which descended from the common ancestor, and of these lands if she be impleaded [o] she shall have aide of the other parcener as if the same lands had descended. (1) So the coparcener that hath a rent granted to her for owelty of partition, as is aforesaid, hath the rent, as if it had descended to her from the common ancestor.

Sect. 269.

*ET issint tous foits sur tiel partition les terres dones en frankmarriage demurgent a les donees & a lour heires selon-que le forme de le done: car si l'auter parcener averoit riens de ceo que est done en frankmarriage, de ceo ensucroit en-convenience & chose encounter reason, que la ley ne voit suffer. Et la cause, pur que les terres dones en frankmarriage serront mis en hotchpot, est ceo.
Quant home done terres ou tenements en frankmarriage ove sa file ou ove auter cosin, il est entendus per la ley, que tiel done fait per tiel parol (frankmarriage) est un avancement, & pur avancement de sa file ou de son auter cosin, & nosmement*

AND so alwaies upon such parti- tion the lands given in frank- marriage remaine to the donees and to their heires according to the forme of the gift: for if the other parcener should have any of that which is given in frankmar- riage, of this would ensue an in- convenience and a thing against reason, which the law will not suffer. And the reason, why the lands given in frankmarriage shal bee put in hotchpot, is this. When a man giveth lands or tenements in frankmarriage with his daugh- ter, or with his other cousin, it is intended by the law, that such gift made by this word (frankma- riage) is an advancement, and for advancement of his daughter, or of his cousin, and namely when quant

(Hob. 10.)

(1) See ant. 174. b. contra as to gift in tail to a daughter not being in frankmarriage.

amounts to an admission that lord Coke's doctrine of the necessity of a special custom for the rationabili parte bonorum became perfectly established within a few years after his advancing it, and that this was so without the aid of any statute. It is observ- able also, that mr. justice Blackstone considers Bracton and Fleta as clear authorities against lord Coke. But mr. Somner, whose very learned and extended discussion of this subject seems to have escaped the author of the Commentaries, though not inclined to an intire agreement with lord Coke, cites various passages of the same ancient authors, from which it appears, that their writings in this respect are contradictory. See in Somn. Gavelk. 91. a dissertation on the question, whether the writ de RATIONABILI PARTE BONORUM was by the common law or by custom. Nor is it a slight testimony of its being settled law in lord Coke's time not to allow of the writ de rationabili parte bonorum without a special custom, that mr. Somner, whose book before cited was finished as early as 1647 though not published till the restoration, observes on the order of partition under this writ, that it was then, and that not lately, antiquated and vanished out of use in Kent and other counties, surviving only in the province of York and some few cities.

(7) What under the custom of the province of York ought to be deemed a reasonable advancement sufficient to bar the right to a filial portion, is largely discoursed upon in Swinburne on Testaments part 3. sect. 18. For the cases since Swinburne's time, see Eq. Caf. Abr. 160. 161. 11. Vin. Abr. 198. Burn's Ecclef. L. tit. will.

(8) Mr. Somner writes doubtfully on the preceding doctrine, and makes it questionable, whether the child advanced may not waive his former portion and elect to take benefit of the customary partition in the way of hotchpot. Somn. Gavelk. 91. By others the doctrine is absolutely denied in another form, by insisting, that the advancement must be equal to the customary share; and that, if the child advanced can prove the advancement to be less, then such child on the terms of throwing the ad- vancement into hotchpot is intitled to the benefit of the customary partition, notwithstanding any declaration of the father to the contrary. Green's Priv. Lond. 52. 53. But in a case before lord chancellor Somers, the mayor and aldermen of London certifi- ed the custom in terms not wholly agreeing either with lord Coke or with the differences from him before stated. According to this certificate, though the advancement shall not be equal to the customary share at the father's decease, yet the child so ad- vanced quant le doner et ses heires n'averont ascun rent ne service de eux, sinon que soit fealty, tanque le quart degree soit passe, &c. Et pur tiel cause la ley est, que el a-vera riens de les auters terres ou tenements descendus a l'auter parcener, &c. sinon que el voile mitter les terres dones en frankmariage en hotchpot, come est dit. Et si el ne voile mitter les terres dones en frankmariage en hotchpot, donque el n'avera riens del remnant, pur ceo que serra entendu per la ley, que el est sufficement avance, a que a-vancement el soy agree & luy tient content.

the donor and his heires shall have no rent nor service of them but fealtie untill the fourth degree be past (1). And for this cause the law is, that she shall have nothing of the other lands or tenements descended to the other parcener, &c. unlesse shee will put the lands given in frankmariage in hotchpot, as is said. And if she will not put the lands given in frankma-riage in hotchpot, then she shall have nothing of the remnant, because it shall be intended by the law, that shee is sufficiently advanced, to which advancement shee agreeth and holds her selfe content.

DE ceo ensueroit enconvenience & chose encounter reason que la ley ne voet suffer.

Quod est inconveniens aut contra rationem non permittitur in lege. Hereby it appeareth, as it hath beene often noted, [o] that an argument ab inconvenienti aut ab eo quod est contra rationem is forcible in law. [p] Nihil enim, quod est inconveniens, est licitum.

Regula.
[o] Vid. sect. 138. 139. 231. 440.
478. 488. 722.
[p] 40. Aff. 27.
(Ant. 23. b.)
Sect. 20.

Tanque le quart degree soit passe, &c. Here by &c. is implied how the degrees shall be accounted, whereof sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 270.

MESME la ley est THE same law is perenter les between the heirs beires de les donees of the donees in franken frankmariage, et mariage, & the other les auters parceners, parceners, &c. if the &c. si les donees en donees in frankmarifrankmariage deviont age die before their devant leur auncester, ancestor, or before ou devant tiel parti- such partition, &c. as tion, &c. quant a mit- to put in hotchpot, ter en hotchpot, &c. &c.

BY these three &c. in this section is implied, that if either the donees dye before the ancestor, or survive the ancestor and die before such a partition, or if the donees and all the parceners die before such partition upon the putting into hotchpot, their issues shall have the same benefit to put the lands into hotchpot; for that benefit is heritable, and descendible to the issues.

Sect. 271.

ET nota, que AND note, that gifts dones en frank- in frankmarriage mariage fueront per were by the common

Continue, &c. By this &c. is to be understood, that before the statute it was a fee simple, and since

(1) See ant. 21. b.

vanced shall be excluded from any further part of the customary estate, unless the father shall by his last will or some other writing signed with his name or mark declare the value of such advancement, in which case the child advanced, bringing the advancement into hotchpot, shall, notwithstanding the father's declaration of having fully advanced the child, have as much more as will make the advancement a full customary share. This certificate was considered by lord Somers as conclusive of the question; and has been since referred to by lord chancellor Hardwicke, as settling the point. See the case of Chase v. Box in 1. L. Raym. 484. & 1. Eq. Caf. Abr. 154. in which latter book the certificate from the city is given at length. See also lord Hardwicke's words in 1. Vef. 16. and those of Fortescue master of the rolls in 3. Atk. 45. Being therefore taken as the rule of future decision, the certificate demands particular attention. The result with respect to its operation upon the several ideas, which, as is before stated, have prevailed concerning this point of the custom, may be thus stated.—Mr. Somner's notion, of a general right of election in the child advanced to waive his advancement and claim the customary share, seems to fall to the ground; there being no election, except where the father under his hand ascertains the advancement by confessing what its value was, and being so ascertained it can be proved to be less than what the custom gives.—The opinion, that the advanced child is universally at liberty to prove his customary share greater than the advancement and so intitle himself to the benefit of the customary partition, seems to fail; because the terms of the certificate appear to admit no other evidence to ascertain what the value of the advancement was, than the father's hand-writing, though it must be confessed, that excluding other evidence is scarce to be satisfactorily accounted for, unless the common reason of the difficulty of taking an account of such advancements shall be deemed a sufficient one.—As to lord Coke's representation of the custom, this also receives some qualification from the beforementioned certificate: for, though it leaves him perfectly right, where the father is silent about the advancement; yet it crosses lord Coke's opinion of the effect of the father's declaring the advancement to be in full, and makes such declaration inoperative where the advancement admitted by the father's hand-writing is not actually full and adequate.

(9) Here

[7] 12. H. 4. 11. 31. E. 3.
Gard. 116.

(Ant. 21. a.)

since the statute a fee taile. So as it is true, that [g] the gifts doe continue (as our author here saith) but not the estates; for the estate is changed, as at large appeareth in the chapter of estates in taile. And albeit our author here saith, that such gifts have beene alwaies since used and continued, yet now they be almost growne out of use, and serve now principally for mooted cases and questions in law that thereupon were wont to rise.

*la common ley de- law before the sta-vant le statute de tute of Westm. second, Westminster second, and have beene alet tout temps puis ad waies since used and este use et continue, continued, &c.
&c.*

Sect. 272.

THE lands given in frankmariage and the lands in fee simple must move from one and the same ancestor, for the lands given in frankmariage are in respect of the advancement accounted in law, as hath beene said (1), as if the same had descended from the same ancestor who died seised of the fee simple lands, and there is no reason to barre the donee of her full part of the fee simple lands that descended from another ancestor from whom shee had no such advancement.

Nemy per le donor, &c. Here &c. implieth no more but that donor that made the gift of frankmariage. The other two &c. in this section need no explanation.

ITEM, tiel mitter en hotchpot, &c. est lou les auters terres ou tenements que ne fueront dones en frankmariage descendent de les donors en frankmariage tant-solement; car si les terres descenderont a les files per le pier le donor, ou per le mere le donor, ou per le frere le donor ou auter ancestor, et nemy per le donor, &c. la auterment est, car en tiel cas el, a quel tiel done en frankmariage est fait, avera sa part, sicome nul tiel done en frankmarriage ust este fait, pur ceo que el ne fuit avance per eux, &c. cins per un auter, &c.

ALSO, such putting in hotchpot, &c. is, where the other lands or tenements which were not given in frankmariage descend from the donors in frankmariage only; for if the lands shall descend to the daughters by the father of the donor, or by the mother of the donor, or by the brother of the donor or other ancestor, & not by the donor, &c. there it is otherwise; for in such case, shee, to whom such gift in frankmariage is made, shal have her part, as if no gift in frankmariage had beene made, because that she was not advanced by them, &c. but by another, &c.

Sect. 273.

BY this section and the &c. herein some have gathered, that the value of the lands shall be accounted as they were at the time of the gift in

ITEM, si home seisie de 30 acres de terre chescun acre de ovel annual value, eiant issue deux files come est avant-dit, et dona 15 acres de

ALSO if a man be seised of 30 acres of land everie acre of equall annual value, and have issue two daughters as afore-said, and giveth 15 acres

cco

(1) Ant. 177. b.

(9) Here lord Coke extends the putting into hotchpot so as to make it for the benefit both of the executors in respect of the testamentary third and of the wife for her third part. But Salkeld reports it as the opinion of sir Edward Northey, that the custom requires the advanced share to be brought into hotchpot for the benefit of other children only; and therefore that in case of there being no other child besides the advanced one, such child shall have his full orphan's part without any regard to what has been already received. Salk. 426. See further concerning this custom of London a discourse in justification of it in 2. Stow's Surv. of Lond. Strype's ed. of 1720. first Append. 61. and the statute of 11. G. 1. c. 18. For the cases on the custom and the statute of 11. G. 1. concerning it, see Eq. Caf. Abr. 150. to 160. the title custom of London in New Abr. Viner's Abr. and 2. Eq. Caf. Abr. Com. Dig. tit. guardian G. 2. and the contin. in same part, and Burn's Eccl. L. tit. wills. Add to these March. 107. Forrest. 130. Barnard. Ch. Rep. 430. 2. Ark. 43. 523. 644. and 3. Ark. 213. 616. See also Flet. 1. 2. p. 125.—Note, that though the 11. G. 1. c. 18. enables making a will of the whole personalty notwithstanding the custom, yet this is with the exception of freemen agreeing by writing upon or in consideration of marriage or otherwise to be subject to the custom. In this respect therefore there is a difference in the form of the statute alteration of the custom as to London and the alteration as to Wales and the province of York, the statutes as to these two latter not providing for an agreement to abide by the custom. Perhaps however it may be doubted, whether an express provision was necessary to create such an exception; but on this point I do not mean to offer any opinion.

(10) See on the collation of goods Dig. lib. 37. tit. 6. 1. Dom. Civ. L. by Strah. 687.—The Roman law in respect to the collation of goods deserves the particular attention of the English lawyer; as our statute for distribution of the personal estate of intestates contains a like provision to prevent children advanced in the life-time of the intestate from having double portions, which was apparently borrowed in some degree from the collatio bonorum, and may therefore be considerably influenced in the construction by the rules of the Roman law and the doctrine of the civilians on that title. See 21. & 23. Ch. 2. c. 10. f. 5. Forrest. 276. See also for the cases in general on this part of the statute of distribution, 11. Vin. Abr. 109. 2. Com. Dig. 145. Continuation of same book 176. and Eq. Caf. Abr. 246.

ceo a le baron ove sa file en frankmarriage, & morust seise de les auters 15 acres, en cest cas el auter soer avera les 15 acres issint descendus a luy sole, et le baron et sa feme ne mitteront en tiel cas les 15 acres a eux dones en frankmarriage en hotchpot; pur ceo que les tenements dones en frankmarriage sont de anxy grand et de bone annual value come les auters terres descendus, &c. Car si les terres dones en frankmarriage sont de tant egal annual value, que le remnant sont, ou de plus value, en vaine et a nul entent tielx tenements dones en frankmarriage serra mis en hotchpot, &c. pur ceo que el ne poit riens aver de les auters terres descendus, &c. car si el averoit ascun parcel de les tenements descendus, donques el avera plus de annual value que sa soer &c. que la ley ne voit, &c. Et si come est parle en les cases avantdits de deux files ou de deux parceners; en mesme le maner est en semblable cas, l'ou sont plusors soers ou plusors parceners, solonque ceoque le case & le matter est &c.

hereof to the husband with his daughter in frankmarriage, and dies seised of the other 15 acres, in this case the other sister shall have the 15 acres so descended to her alone, and the husband and wife shall not in this case put the 15 acres given to them in frankmarriage into hotchpot, because the tenements given in frankmarriage are of as great and good yearly value as the other lands descended, &c. For if the lands given in frankmarriage be of equall or of more yearly value then the remnant, in vaine and to no purpose shall such tenements given in frankmarriage be put in hotchpot, &c. for that she cannot have any of the other lands descended, &c. for if shee should have any parcell of the lands descended, then she shall have more in yearly value then her sister, &c. which the law will not, &c. And as it is spoken in the cases afore said of two daughters or of two parceners; in the same manner it is in the like case, where there are more sisters or more parceners, according as the case and matter is, &c.

frankmarriage. But it is clear, that the value shall be accounted as it was at the time of the partition; for if the donor purchase more land after the gift, or if the land given in frankmarriage be by the act of God decayed in value, or if the remnant of the lands in fee simple be improved after the gift, or de converso, (Ant. 32. a. 171. a.) the law shall adjudge of the value as it was at the time of the partition, (unlesse it be by the proper act or default of the parties) as hath beene said before in the former chapter. And some have collected upon this section, that the reversion in fee of the lands given in frankmarriage shall only descend to the donee; for otherwise the other sister shall have more benefit then the donee, which should be against the reason of our author.

In vaine & a nul entent, &c. For it is a maxime in law, lex non præcipit inutilia, quia inutilis labor stultus.

Regula. Vid. sect. 194. 578. lib. 5. fo. 89.

Lib. 3. Cap. 2. Of Parceners by Custome. Sect. 274, 275, 276.

Sect. 274.

(Ant. 172 b.)

ET est ascavoir, que terres ou tenements dones en frankmariage ne serra mise en hotchpot, forsque ou terres descende en fee simple; car de terre descendus en fee taile partition serra fait, sicome nul tiel done en frankmariage ust este fait.

31. Aff. pl. 14.

AND it is to be understood, that lands or tenements given in frankmariage shall not bee put in hotchpot, but where lands descend in fee simple; for of lands descended in fee taile partition shall be made, as if no such gift in frankmariage had beene made.

FOR of lands intailed the donee in frankmariage shall have as much part as the other coparcener, because, over and besides the land given in frankmariage, the issue in taile claimeth per formam doni, and both of the parceners must equally inherit by force of the gift, & voluntas donatoris &c. observetur.

Sect. 275.

ITEM nuls terres serra mise en hotchpot ove auters, sinon terres que fueront done en frankmariage tant solement: car si ascun feme ad ascuns auters terres ou tenements per ascun auter done en le tayle, el ne unques mittera tiel terre issint done en hotchpot, mes el avera sa purpartie de le remnant descendus, &c. scilicet a tant que l'auter parcener avera de le mesme remnant.

17. E. 1. tit. taile 26. 6. E. 3.
30. b. 4. E. 3. 49. 50.

ALSO no lands shall bee put in hotchpot with other lands, but lands given in frankmariage only: for if a woman have any other lands or tenements by any other gift in taile, she shal never put such lands so given in hotchpot, but she shal have her purparty of the remnant descended, &c. (videlicet) as much as the other parcener shall have of the same remnant.

Bract. li. 2. fo. 77.

FOR if the ancestor infeoffeth one of his daughters of part of his land, or purchase lands to him and her, and their heires, or giveth to her part of his lands in taile speciall or generall, she notwithstanding this shall have a full part in the remnant of the lands in fee simple; for the benefit of putting &c. into hotchpot is onely appropriated to a gift in frankmariage, (quia maritagium cadit in partem) which shall be (as is aforesaid) accounted as parcel of her advancement.

Sect. 276.

ITEM un auter partition poet estre fait enter parceners, que variaist de les partitions avantdits. Sicome y sont trois parceners, & le puisne voet aver partition, & les auters deux ne voillont, mes voilent tener en parcenarie ceo que a eux affi-

ALSO another partition may be made betweene parceners, which varieth from the partitions aforesaid. As if there bee three parceners, and the youngest will have partition, and the other two will not, but will hold in parcenarie that which to them belon-

ert

ert sans particion, en ceste case, si un part soit alot en severalty al puisne joer selonque ceo que el doit aver, donques les auters poient tener le remnant en parcenarie, & occuper en common sans partition si els voient, & tiel partition est asfets bone. Et si apres l'eigne ou le mulnes parcenier voile fayre partition inter eux de ceo que ils teignent, ils poient ceo bien faire quant a eux pleist. Mes l'ou partition serra fait per force de brieve de partitione faciendâ, la auterment est; car la covient, que chescun parcenier avera sa part en severaltie, &c.

Plus serra dit des parceniers en le chapter de Joyntenants, & auxy en le chapter de Tenants in Common.

geth, without partition, in this case if one part be allotted in severalty to the youngest sister, according to that which shee ought to have, then the others may hold the remnant in parcenarie, and occupy in common without partition, if they will, and such partition is good enough. And if afterwards the eldest or middle parcenier will make partition betweene them of that which they hold, they may well do this when they please. But where partition shall be made by force of a writ of partitione faciendâ, there it is otherwise; for there it behoveth, that every parcenier have her part in severaltie, &c.

More shall be said of parceniers in the chapter of Joyntenants, and also in the chapter of Tenants in Common.

HERE it is to be observed, that this partition is good by consent, for consensus tollit errorem; but if it be by the king's writ, then everie parcenier must have his part. And here you may see that modus & conventio vincunt legem. 24. H. 3. tit. Partic. 19. Regula.

En severaltie, &c. Here by this &c. is implied another kind of severaltie than our author hath mentioned; and that is, that the one parcenier shall have the land in severaltie from the feast of Easter until the gule of August, (that is, the first of August) and the other in severaltie from thence untill the feast of Easter, or the like, & sic alternis vicibus to them and their heires in perpetuum, whereof sufficient hath beene spoken before. (1)

Cap. 3. Of Joyntenants. Sect. 277.

Joyntenants sont, sicome home seise de certaines terres ou tenements, &c. & enfeoffe deux, trois, quater, ou plusors, a aver & tener a eux pur term de leur vies, ou pur terme d'auter vie, per force de quel feoffment ou lease ils sont sei-

Joyntenants are, as if a man bee seised of certaine lands or tenements, &c. and infeoffeth two, three, foure, or more, to have and to hold to them for term of their lives, or for terme of another's life, by force of which feoffment or THIS agreeth not with the original, (2) for it should bee, joyntenants sont, sicome home seise de certaine terres ou tenements, &c. & ent enfeoffe deux, ou trois, ou quater, ou plusors, a aver & tener a eux & a leur heires, ou lessâ a eux pur terme de leur vies ou pur terme d'auter vie, per force de quel feoffment ou lease, &c. The error may easily bee perceived by that which is in print, viz. "by force of which feoffment or lease," &c. ergo there must be

(1) Ant. 4. a. and 167. a.
(2) Notwithstanding lord Coke's censure of the text here, it agrees with the print of the two earliest editions, neither the edition by L. & M. nor the Rohan one having any of the words added by lord Coke, except ent before enfeoffe. But I think that his addition seems requisite to the sense intended to be conveyed by Littleton, as well for the reason assigned by lord Coke, as because otherwise Littleton's description of jointenancy might be construed to exclude an estate in fee, which certainly could not be his intention. Probably therefore the omission of an estate in fee was an error in the manuscript from which Littleton was first printed. The addition of an estate in fee to Littleton's description of jointenancy was first introduced by Rastell in his edition of 1534. which I was first led to observe by a note I was favoured with from mr. justice Blackstone.
(3) I take this reference to Bracton to be erroneous. But in fol. 28. a. of Bracton there is a chapter, which connects with Littleton's on jointenancy; the first branch of it being de donationibus factis pluribus simul sive successivis. See also Bract. fo. 12. b. & 13. a.
(4) It should be cap. 46. to which as a corresponding part of an almost co-temporary writer add Bract. fol. 48. a.

be feoffment and lease spoken of before.

There be also joyntenants

by other conveyances than Littleton here mentioneth, as by fine, recoverie, bargain and sale, release, confirmation, &c. So there be divers other limitations than Littleton here speaketh of: as if a rent charge of ten pounds be granted to A. and B. to have and to hold to them two, viz. to A. untill he be married, and to B. untill he be advanced to a benefice, they be joyntenants in the meane time, notwithstanding the severall limitations, (1) and if A. die before marriage, the rent shall survive; but if A. had married, the rent should have ceased for a moitie, & sic de converso on the other side.

7. E. 4. 29. 11. H. 4. 26. (5. Co. 51.)

Littleton having spoken of one kinde of tenants pro indiviso, viz. of parceners, commeth now to another, viz. joyntenants, and first of joyntenants of freehold. If an alien and a subject purchase lands in fee, they are joyntenants, and the survivorship shall hold place, (2) et nullum tempus occurrit regi, upon an office found.

Flet. lib. 6. ca. 47. Braët. lib. 5. fol. 435. a. (Noy 13. Ant. 164. Cro. Jam. 83. 166. Post. sect. 311.)

Joyntenants. So called, because the lands or tenements &c. are conveyed to them jointly, conjunctim feoffati, &c. or qui conjunctim tenent, and are distinguished from sole or severall tenants, from parceners, and from tenants in common, &c. and anciently they were called participes, & non heredes. And these joyntenants must jointly implead and jointly be impleaded by others, (3) which propertie is common betweene them and coparceners; but joyntenants have a sole qualitie of survivorship, which coparceners have not. Littleton, having now spoken of parceners and of joyntenants of right, doth next speake of joyntenants by wrong.

Sect. 278.

IT is to be observed, that some disseisors be tenants of the land, and some be no tenants of the lands; & of both these kinds Littleton here speaketh.

50. E. 3. 2. 17. Aff. 14. 14. Aff. 12. 8. Aff. p. 39. 10. E. 3. 47. 10. Aff. 22. 23. H. 8. tit. disseis. p. 77. 28. Aff. 21. 27. Aff. 30. 12. E. 4. 9. 7. E. 4. 7. b. 38. Aff. 7. 21. H. 7. 35. 29. Aff. 50. 21. H. 8. 25. 35. H. 6. 61. 21. E. 4. 46. 15. E. 4. 15. F. N. B. 179. g. (Mo. 53. Post. 374. a. Ant. 10. a. 1. Ro. Abr. 660. Post. 188. a.)

&c. In the first &c. nothing is implied but foure or five, or more. But in the latter &c. many things be to be understood. As of disseisors that be no tenants, some are coadjutors whereof Littleton here speaketh, some counsellors, commanders, &c. when the disseisin is not to be done to any of their uses. Also if A. disseise one to the use of B. who knoweth not of it, & B. assent to it, in this case til the agreement, A. was tenant of the land, & after agreement B. is tenant of the land, but both of them be disseisors: for omnis ratiobabitio retrotrahitur & mandato equiparatur. (4) And it is worthie of the observation, and implied also in the latter &c. that seeing coadjutors, counsellors, commanders, &c. are all disseisors, that albeit the disseisor which is tenant dieth, yet the assise lieth against the coadjutor, counsellor, commander, &c. and tenant of the land, (5) though he be no disseisor. (6)

Post. 245. a. 258. a.)

(1. Ro. Abr. 663.)

[4] 50. E. 3. 2. (Cro. Cha. 303. 1. Ro. Abr. 661. 662. Post. 223. a.)

[a] The demandant and others in a præcipe did disseise the tenant to the use of the others, and the writ did not abate; for the demandant was a disseisor, but gained no tenancy in the land, for that he was but a coadjutor.

A man disseiseth tenant for life to the use of him in the reversion, and after he in the reversion agreeth to the disseisin, it is said, that he in the reversion is a disseisor in fee, for by the disseisin made by the stranger, the reversion was divested, (7) which (say they) cannot be reversed

(1) See ant. 169. b. post. 183. b. Hob. 171. and Shephard's Common Assurances 189. In the two latter books, especially in Hobart, there is a variety of curious matter expounding the nature and use of a feilicet and how far it may qualify the premisses or habendum in a conveyance. See also 1. P. Wms. 18. and the case of a bond to two with a feilicet severing the money between them in Dy. 350. Lord Hobart seems to consider the feilicet as a sort of ancillary clause, which may explain, but cannot operate in absolute contradiction of the premisses or habendum. In a Coke upon Littleton I have the learned annotator considers the feilicet as less potent than the habendum, observing upon the case here stated by lord Coke, that though the feilicet cannot sever the joint estate given in the premisses and the habendum, yet that the habendum might so controul the premisses. He therefore holds, that if the grant of ten pounds had been to A. and B. habendum to A. till he be married, and to B. till he be advanced to a benefice, there they would be tenants in common. This nice distinction between the habendum and the feilicet in point of effect I leave to the consideration of the learned reader.

(2) See post. 186. a.—Lord Coke in his reports qualifies this by adding till office found under the great seal. 5. Co. 52. b. But if the natural-born subject survives the alien, and then the king's title is found by office, shall it by relation to the creation of the jointenancy defeat the subject's title by survivorship? The words of lord Coke both here and in the 5th report are ambiguous. His first words here favour the surviving jointenant. But his subsequent introduction of the rule of nullum tempus occurrit regi, with the qualification in the 5th report, tends to a different conclusion. Though too lord Coke takes notice of a joint purchase by an alien and a subject, yet there is not enough to solve the difficulty. See post. 288. a. See as to this point of relation in offices finding the king's title W. Jo. 78. and Nichols's case Plowd. 481.

(3) See the statute de conjunctim feoffatis 34. E. 1. lord Coke's notice of it in 2. Inst. 527. and Theloall's Dig. Orig. Br. in the chapter on jointenants in b. 2. fol. 456.

(4) But infants and femes covert are exceptions to this rule; for commandment before or agreement after is not sufficient to make them disseisors, but it must be by their actual entry or their own proper act. Post. 357. b. F. N. B. 179. G. 3. H. 4. 17. a. Also in the case of persons of full age, if a disseisin to the use of another be accompanied with a forcible entry, his subsequent agreement, though it makes him a disseisor, shall not charge him with the force on the statute of 8. Hen. 4. actual entry being necessary for that purpose. Ant. 16. a. & b.

(5) That is, he that is seised of the freehold by title from the disseisor, as by feoffment lease or descent from him.

(6) See ant. 154. b.

(7) Why disseisin of tenant for life makes a fee in the disseisor is thus accounted for by lord Hobart with his usual peculiarity and energy of phrase. "A grant to J. S. and his heirs during the life of J. D. is no fee, but a special occupancy, as is resolved in Chudleigh's case. But a disseisin of an estate for life by necessity in law makes a quasi fee; because wrong is unlimited, and ravens all that can be gotten, and is not governed by terms of the estates, because it is not contained within rules." Hob. 223.

revested by the agreement of him in the reversion, for that it maketh him a wroug doer, and therefore no relation of an estate by wrong can helpe him. (1)

Coadjutor. Coadjutor est qui auxiliatur alteri, and is derived à coadjuvando, Anglicè a fellow helper.

Sect. 279.

ET nota que disseisin est properment, l'ou un home entra en ascun terres ou tenements l'ou son entre n'est pas congeable, & ousta celuy que ad franktenement, &c.

AND note that disseisin is properly, where a man entreth into any lands or tenements where his entry is not congeable, & ousteth him which hath the freehold, &c. THIS description of a disseisin and the &c. in this place is understood onely of such lands and tenements whereunto an entry may bee made, and not of rents, commons, &c. (2) whereof sufficient hath been said before (3) in the chapter of rents; and so in effect Littleton described it before the edition of his book. And note here, that every entry is no disseisin, unlesse there be an ouster also of the freehold. And therefore Littleton doth not set downe an entrie onely but an ouster also, as an entry and a claimer, or taking of profits &c. Now as there be joyntenants by disseisin, so are there joyntenants by abatement, intrusion, and usurpation, all which are included in the latter &c.

3. E. 4. 2. 34. Aff. 11. 12. 26. Aff. 17. 41. Aff. 10. 24. E. 3. 31. Pl. Com. 89. Parson de Hony Lane 7. Aff. 10. 11. Aff. 25. 12. E. 3. tit. Aff. 88. 45. Aff. 7. 9. Aff. 19. 39. Aff. 1. 13. E. 2. Aff. 374.

Sect. 280.

ET est asavoir, que la nature de joyntencie est, que celuy que survesquist avera solement l'entier tenancie selonques tiel estate que il ad, si le joynture soit continue, &c. Sicome si trois joyntenants sont en fee simple, & l'un ad issue & devie, uncore ceux que survesquent averont les tenements entier, & l'issue n'avera riens. Et si le second joyntenant ad issue & devie, uncore le tierce que survesquist avera les tenements entier, & eux avera a luy & a ses

AND it is to be understood, that the nature of joyntencie is, that he which surviveth shall have only the entire tenancie according to such estate as he hath, if the joynture be continued, &c. As if three joyntenants bee in fee simple, and the one hath issue and dieth, yet they which survive shall have the whole tenements, and the issue shall have nothing. And if the second joyntenant hath issue and dye, yet the third which surviveth shall have the whole tenc-

SI le joynture soit continue, &c.

Here by this &c. many points of learning are to bee observed. As that it is proper to joyntenants onely to have lands by survivor; for no survivor of other tenants pro indiviso shall have the whole by survivor, but onely joyntenants; and this is called in law jus accrescendi. Omnes scissati sunt simul habendi & tenendi, nec totum nec partem separatam nec per se, sed ut quilibet eorum totum habeat cum aliis in communi; & cum unus moriatur, non descendit aliqua pars heredi morientis, nec separata nec in communi ante mortem omnium, sed pars illa communis per jus accrescendi accrescit superstitionibus de persona ad personam usque ad ultimum superstitem. But although survivorship bee proper to joyntenants, yet it is not proper quarto modo (that is) omni, soli & semper; for there may bee joynt-

Bracton lib. 4. fol. 262. b. Britton cap. 35. Ficta lib. 3. ca. 4. & ca. 10. 49. E. 3. fol. 5. 6.

(1) Acc. 277. b. To what lord Coke has written on disseisin by procurement, a learned annotator in a Coke upon Littleton I have adds the following references relative to procurers of trespasss, namely 11. H. 7. 6. a. 12. H. 7. 14. a. 21. H. 7. 22. a. 13. ii. 7. 13. a.

(2) In respect to disseisin of rents, read post. 306. b. 323. a. & b.

(3) Ant. sect. 233. and the comment thereon.

joyntenants, though there be not equall benefit of survivor on both sides. As if a man letteth lands to A. and B. during the life of A. if B. dyeth, A. shall have all by the survivor, but if A. dyeth B. shall have nothing. (1)

Two or more may have a trust or an authoritie committed to them jointly, and yet it shall not survive. But herein are divers diversities to be observed. First, there is a diversitie betweene a naked trust or an authoritie, and a trust or authoritie joynted to an estate or interest. (2) Secondly, there is a diversitie between authorities created by the partie for private causes, and authoritie created by law for execution of justice. As for example, [b] if a man devise that his two executors shall sell his land, if one of them dye, the survivor shall not sell it; (3) but if he had devised his lands to his executors to be sold, there the survivor shall sell it; which diversitie is implied by our author, for hee saith, that he that surviveth shall have the entire tenancie.

If a man make a letter of attorney to two, to do any act, if one of them dye, the survivor shall not do it: but if a venire facias be awarded to four coroners to impannell, and returne a jury, and one of them dye, yet the other shall execute and returne the same.

If a charter of feoffment [c] be made, and a letter of attorney to four or three jointly and severally to deliver seisin, two of them cannot make livery; because it is neither by them four or three jointly, nor any of them severally: but if the sherie upon a capias directed to him make a warrant to four or three jointly or severally to arrest the defendant, two of them may arrest him, because it is for the execution of justice [d] which is pro bono publico, and therefore shall be more favourably expounded, then when it is onely for private; and so hath it bene adjudged. (4) Jura publica ex privato promiscue decideri non debent.

Et devie. Note there is a naturall death and a civill death, and Littleton's case is to be intended of both; and therefore [e] if two joyntenants be, and one of them entreth into religion, the survivor shall have the whole. (5)

Sect. 281.

ET come le survivor tient lieu enter joyntenants, (6) en mesme le maner il tient lieu enter eux queux ont joynt estate ou possession ove auter de chattel real ou personal. Sicome si leas de terres ou tenements soit fait a plusieurs par terme des ans, celui, que survesquist de les leseees, avera les tenements a luy entier durant le terme per force de mesme le leas. Et si un cheval ou un au-

AND as the survivor holds place betweene joyntenants, in the same manner it holdeth place betweene them which have joynt estate or possession with another of a chattell, reall or personall. As if a lease of lands or tenements bee made to many for terme of yeares, hee, which survives of the leseees, shall have the tenements to him only during the terme by force of ter

(9. Co. 75. b.)

(1. Sid. 6)

[a] 39. Aff. p. 17. 30. H. 8. tit. devie B. Dyer 3. Eliz. 190. 49. F. 3. 16. 2. Eliz. Dyer 177. 23. Eliz. Dyer 371. 4. Eliz. Dyer 210. (Mo. 61. 311.)

10. H. 4. 2. & 3. 14. H. 4. 31. 30. H. 6. 12. 31. Aff. 20. 33. H. 8. joynt. Br. 62. 30. H. 8. condition Br. 190.

[c] 38. H. 8. Dyer 62. 27. H. 9. fol. 6. [5. Co. 61. Yelv. 25. 26. Cro. Eliz. 913. 914.]

[d] Pasch. 45. E. 2. in the king's bench between King and Hobbes. (Hunt. 127.)

[e] 21. R. 2. judgment 263. (Ant. 129. b.)

(1) See further as to benefit of survivorship on one side only, post. 193. a. 239. b. & Dy. 10. b.

(2) See ant. 112. b. 113. a. post. 297. a.

(3) In a former part I have ventured to make a doubt of this, and to contend that the power to sell being given to the executors by reason of an office and interest, which do go to the survivor, may well survive with them. See ant. note 2. to 113. a.

(4) See acc. as to warrant of the peace to two, Lambard's Justice ed. 1602 p. 84.

(5) See ant. note 7. of fol. 3. b. and note 1. of fol. 132. b. Add Ley's case 2. Ro. Abr. 43.

(6) See in L. & M. and Roh.

ter chattel personal sont done a plusors, celui que survesquist a- vera le cheval solement. the same lease. (1) And if a horse, or any other chattell personall be given to many, hee which surviveth shall have the horse onely.

HEREBY it is manifest, that survivor holdeth place regularly as well betweene joynte- (Cro. Eliz. 33. 2. Ro. Abr. 86. nants of goods and chattels in possession or in right, as joyntenants of inheritance or 87.) freehold.

Chattell, Or Catell, whereof commeth the word used in law [f] Catalla, and is as [f] Regist. origin. 139. 244. Bract. lib. 2. 39. H. 6. 36. Littleton here teacheth, twofold, viz. reall and personall, and putteth examples of both. Standford Pr. 45.

Sect. 282.

EN mesme le maner est de dets & duties, &c. car si un obligation soit fait a plusors pur un debt, celui que survesquist avera tout le det ou dutie. Et issint est d'autres covenants & contracts, &c. (3) IN the same manner it is of debts and duties, &c. for if an obligation be made to many for one debt, hee which surviveth shall have the whole debt or dutie. And so is it of other covenants and contracts, &c.

NOW he speaketh of debts, duties, covenants, contracts, &c. (2)

Dets & duties, &c.

Here by force of this &c. (1. Ro. Abr. 6.) an exception is to be made of two joynt merchants; for the wares, merchandizes, debts, or duties, that they have as joynt-merchants or partners, shall not survive, but shall goe to the executors of him that deceaseth; and this is per legem mercatoriam, which (as hath beene said)

(Ant. 172. 2. Cro. Jam. 306. 1. Ro. Abr. 6. Cro. Cha. 301. 1. Sid. 236. 179.) (5)

is part of the lawes of this realm, for the advancement and continuance of commerce and trade, which is pro bono publico, for the rule is, that jus accrescendi inter mercatores pro beneficio commercii locum non habet. (4)

And to the latter &c. in this section the like exception must be made.

sect. 283.

ITEM ascuns joyntenants poient estre, que poient aver joint estate, et estre joyntenants pur terme de leur vies, et uncore ils ont severall enheritances. Si come terres soient dones a deux homes et a les heires de leur deux corps engendres, en cest case les donees ont joint estates pur terme de leur deux vies, et uncore ils ont ALSO there may be some joyntenants, which may have a joint estate, & be joyntenants for terme of their lives, & yet have severall inheritances. As if lands be given to two men and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, in this case the donees have a joint estate for term of their two lives, and yet they have severall inheritances; for if one of ILS ont joynt estate pur terme de leur deux vies, &c.

Vide sect. 296. (P. 189. b.)

Note, albeit they have severall inheritances in taile, and a particular estate for their lives, yet the inheritance doth not execute and so breake the joynttenancy, but they are joyntenants for life, and tenants in common of the inheritance in taile.

Si come home & sem poient aver, &c.

Here a diversity is implied, when the estate of inheritance is limited by one conveyance,

Vide Westcote's case 2. Co. 60. 61. (1. Sid. 83.)

(1) And this benefit of survivorship takes place on a lease for years to two, though one of the lessees dies before entry. Ant. 46. b.

(2) See further, as to things of which there shall be a survivorship, and where expresse words are necessary to give that benefit, 11. Co. 3. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 86. B. 2. 2. P. Wms. 672. and tit. survivor in Vin. Abr. and tit. joyntenants B. 1. & D. ibid.

(3) No &c. in L. & M. or Rob.

(4) See more fully as to this 2. Brownl. 99. See also acc. Noy 55.

(5) These additional references are retained, though they scarce deserve it; for they only relate to different instances of the lex mercatoria, and do not touch the particular rule against the jus accrescendi.

as in this case it is, there are no severall estates to drowne one in another. But when the states are divided in severall conveyances, their particular estates are distinct and divided, and consequently the one drownes the other. As if a lease bee made to two men for terme of their lives, and after the lessor granteth the reversion to them two, and to the heires of their two bodies, the joynture is severed, and they are tenants in common in possession. And it is further implied, that in this case of Littleton there is no division betwene the estate for lives, and the severall inheritances; for in this case they cannot convey away the inheritances after their decease, (1) for it is divided only in supposition and consideration of law, and to some purposes the inheritance is said to be executed, as shall bee said hereafter.

If a man make a lease for [f] life, and after granteth the reversion to the tenant for life and to a stranger and to their heires, they are not joyntenants of the reversion, but the reversion is by act of law executed for the one moiety in the tenant for life, and for the other moiety he holdeth it still for life the reversion of that moiety to the grantee.

And so it is, if a man maketh a lease [g] to two for their lives, and after granteth the reversion to one of them in fee, the joynture is severed, and the reversion is executed for the one moiety, and for the other moiety there is tenant for life the reversion to the grantee (2).

If lessee for life granteth his estate to him in the reversion, and to a stranger, the joynture is severed, and the reversion executed for the one moiety by the act of law. (3)

severall inheritances; car si l'un des donees ad issue et devy, l'auter que survesquist avera tout per le survivor pur terme de sa vie, et si celui que survesquist auxy ad issue et devy, donques l'issue del un avera l'un moitie, et l'issue del auter avera l'auter moitie de la terre, et ils tiendront la terre enter eux en common, et ne sont pas joyntenants, mes sont tenants en common. Et la cause, pur que tielx donees en tiel cas ont joynt estate pur terme de leur vies, est, pur ceo que al commencement les terres fueront dones a eux deux, les queux parols sans plus dire sont joint estate a eux pur terme de leur vies. Car si home voit lesser terre a un auter per fait ou sans fait, nient feasant mention quel estate il averoit, et de ceo fait liverie de seisin, en ceo case le lessée ad estate pur terme de sa vie; et issint entant que les terres fueront dones a eux, ils ont joint estate pur terme de leur vies. Et la cause, pur que ils averont severall inheritances est ceo, entant que ils ne peuvent aver per nul possibi-

the donees hath issue and dye, the other which surviveth shall have the whole by the survivor for terme of his life, and if he which surviveth hath also issue and die, then the issue of the one shall have the one moiety, & the issue of the other shall have the other moiety of the land, and they shal hold the land betwene them in common, and they are not joyntenants, but are tenants in common. And the cause, why such donees in such case have a joynt estate for terme of their lives, is, for that at the beginning the lands were given to them two, which words without more saying make a joynt estate to them for terme of their lives. For if a man will let land to another by deed or without deed, not making mention what estate he shall have, and of this make liverie of seisin, in this case the lessee hath an estate for terme of his life; and so in as much as the lands were given to them, they have a joint estate for term of their lives. And thereason why they shall have severall inher-

lity

Vid. 12. E. 4. 2. b.

(Sect. 283.)

[f] 39. H. 6. 2. b.
(4. Leon. 37. Post. 299. b. Cro.
Jam. 260. 261.)

[g] Wesons case, ubi supra.

Ibidem 7. H. 6.

(1) See post. 154. b.

(2) Vid. Hil. 35. Eliz. B. R. rot. No. 96. Perkins & Pecke Dr. 12. 41. E. 3. 21. 21. H. 6. 40. 40. Aff. 45. E. 3. 2. — Hil. 37. Eliz. Dickson v. Marsh B. R. rot. No. 103. Devisé to eldest son and another for life. Held, that they are jointenants though the fee descends; but male. Hal. MSS. See as to the latter case Cro. Jam. 260.

(3) See post. 192. 200. b. 335. 2.

lity un heire enter eux engender, sicome home et feme poient aver, &c. doncque la ley voet que leur estate et leur enberitance soit tiel come reason voet, solonque la forme et effect des parols del donee, &c. ceo est a les beires que l'un engendra de son corps per aucun de ses femes (1) [Sales beires quel auter engendra de son corps per aucun de ses femes] &c. issint il covient per necessitie de reason, que ils averont several inberitances. Et en tiel cas si l'issue d'un des donees apres la mort des donees devie, issint que il n'ad aucun issue en vie de son corps engendre, doncque le donor ou son heire poit enter en la moity come en son reversion, &c. coment que l'autre des donees ad issue en vie &c. Et la cause est, que entant que les enberitances sont several &c. le reversion de eux en ley est several, &c. et le survivor del issue del auter ne tiendra pas lieu d'aver l'entierie.

vor of the issue of the other shall hold no place to have the whole.

And the reason of this is, for that it is a maxime in law, that every man's grant shall bee taken by construction of law most forcible against himselfe. Quelibet concessio fortissimè contra donatorem interpretanda est; which is so to be understood, that no wrong be thereby done, for it is another maxime in law, quid legis constructio non facit injuriam. And therefore if tenant for life maketh a lease generally, this shall bee taken by ritances is this, inas-much as they cannot by any possibility have an heir between them ingendred, as a man and woman may have, &c. the law will that their estate & inheritance be such as is reasonable, according to the forme & effect of the words of the gift, & this is to the heires which the one shall beget of his body by any of his wives, and to the heirs which the other shall beget of his body by any of his wives, &c. so as it behoveth by necessitie of reason, that they have several inheritances. And in this case if the issue of one of the donees after the death of the donees dye, so that he hath no issue alive of his body begotten, then the donor or his heire may enter into the moity as in his reversion, &c. although the other donee hath issue alive, &c. And the reason is, forasmuch as the inheritances be several &c. the reversion of them in law is several &c. and the survivor

If a man maketh a lease for life and granteth the reversion to two in fee, the lessee granteth his estate to one of them, they are not joyntenants of the reversion; for there is an execution of the estate for the one moitie, and an estate for life, the reversion to the other of the other moity. (2)

Here Littleton hath well resolved a doubt, for of ancient time it hath beene said, [b] that when lands have beene given to two women and to the heires of their two bodies begotten (which case our author putteth in the next section) that the husband having issue should bee tenant by the courtesie living the other sister; for that as some held the inheritance was executed, and that the sisters were tenants in common in possession, and consequently the husband to be tenant by the curtesie, which hee could not bee if the women had a joynt estate for terme of their lives; and likewise it was said [i] that the issue of the one should recover the moity in a formedon living the other sister. But, verba sunt hæc, and Littleton, grounding himselfe upon good authority in law, hath cleared this doubt.

Nient feasant mention quel estate il averoit.

Here Littleton addeth materially (not making mention of what estate) for [k] if in the premisses lands bee letten, or a rent granted, the general intendment is, that an estate for life passeth; but if the habendum limit the same for yeares or at will, the habendum doth qualifie the general intendment of the pre-

[h] 17. E. 3. 51. 78. 18. E. 3. 39. 50. E. 3. Statham tit. done. 50. E. 3. leoffements & faitz 97.

(Ant. 13. a.)

[i] 44. E. 3. taile 13. 8. Aff. 33. 24. E. 3. 29. 7. H. 4. 16. Corbet's case 1. Co. 84. b. 4. Mariae Dier 145. See before in the chapter of ten by the curtesie sectione. (Ant. 30. a. 2. Ro. Abr. 90.)

[k] Pl. Com. in Throgmorton's case. (2. Co. 23. 55. 5. Co. 111. 2. Ro. Abr. 66.)

Regula. (5. Co. 8. a. Plowd. 161. a. Ant. 42. a.)

(1) In L. & M. & Roh. the following words here placed between brackets are omitted.

(2) But it is otherwise on a surrender; for that enures to both jointenants of the reversion. Post. 192. a. See further Perk. Sect. 80.

construction of law an estate for his owne life that made the lease, for if it should be a lease for the life of the lessee it should be a wrong to him in the reversion. And so it is if tenant in taile make a lease generally, the law shall conuise this to be such a lease as hee may lawfully make, and that is for terme of his owne life, for if it should be for the life of the lessee, it should be a discontinuance, and consequently the state which should passe by construction of law should worke a wrong. (1)

Et issint entant que les terres fueront dones a eux ils ont joynt estate pur leur vies. This is plaine, but with this exception, unlesse the habendum doth otherwise limit the same. And therefore if a lease be made [1] to two, habendum to the one for life, the remainder to the other for life, this doth alter the generall intendment of the premises, (2) and so hath it beene oftentimes resolved. And so it is if a lease be made to two, habendum the one moiety to the one, and the other moiety to the other, the habendum doth make them tenants in common; and so one part of the deed doth explaine the other, and no repugnancy betweene them, et semper expressum facit cessare tacitum. (3)

[1] 8. E. 3. 227. tit. tenem. & suis 73. 30. H. 8. tit. joint. Br. 53. Dyer fo. 361. Pl. Com. 169. (Hob. 171. Post 190. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 65. 68. 1. Leon. 10. 11.)

Braston.
(2. Ro. Abr. 66. 5. Co. 19. a. Hob. 313.)

Per nul possibilitie. Here it is to be observed, that where the grant is impossible to take effect according to the letter, there the law shall make such a construction as the gift by possibilitie may take effect, which is worthy of observation. Benigne faciendæ sunt interpretationes cartarum propter simplicitatem laicorum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat.

Issint il covient per necessitie de raison. The reason of the law is the life of the law; for though a man can tell the law, yet if he know not the reason thereof, he shall soon forget his superficial knowledge. But when hee findeth the right reason of the law, and so bringeth it to his natural reason, that he comprehendeth it as his own, this will not only serve him for the understanding of that particular case, but of many other; for cognitio legis est copulata & complicata; and this knowledge will long remaine with him. All which is plainly implied by the words and Ec. of our author in this section.

Et en tiel case si l'issue d'un des donees apres la mort des donees devie issint que il n'ad ascun issue en vie de son corps engendres, donques le donor ou son heire poe enter en le moitie. This is mistaken in the imprinting, and varieth from the originall, (4) which is, si l'un donee ou l'issue d'un des donees apres la mort des donees devie, issint que il n'ad ascun issue, &c. For it is evident, that if the one donee himselfe dieth without issue, the inheritance doth revert for a moiety, and after the decease of the other donee, the donor may enter into that moiety; and whether the issue of the one donee dieth without issue at any time, either in the life of the other donee, or after his decease, it is not materiall, for whensoever no issue is remaining of the one donee, so as the state taile is spent, the donor may after the decease of the surviving donee enter into that moiety. (5)

Arist. 1. Metaphys.

Et la cause est, que entant que les inheritances, &c. Littleton in this chapter hath often said, et la cause est, which is worthe of observation, for then wee are truly said to know any thing when we know the true cause thereof. Tunc unumquodque scire dicimus, cum primam causam scire putamus. Scire autem propriè est rem ratione & per causam cognoscere.

Ving. 1. Georg.

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas.

And therefore all students of law are to apply their principall indeavour to attaine therunto, all which is implied by the words and severall Ec. in this section.

(Post. 191. b. Hob. 33.)

Here the cause of the entrie of the donor into a moiety in this case is, that in as much as the inheritance is severall, the reversion is severall. Therefore upon the severall determination of the estate in taile, the donor may enter. And the law termeth a reversion to bee expectant upon the particular estate; because the donor or lessor, or their heirs, after every determination of any particular estate, doth expect or looke for to enjoy the lands or tenements againe.

Dyer 14. El. 300.

Le reversion de eux en ley est severall, &c. Hereby, and by this Ec. is implied, that upon one joynt or entire gift or lease there is one joynt or entire reversion, and upon severall gifts or leases there bee severall reversions. And this is to be understood of the reversion in the donor or his heirs. But albeit the gifts or leases be severall, yet if the donors or lessors grant the reversion to two or more persons and their heirs, they are joyntenants of the reversion. And so it is of a remainder. And therefore if a gift be made to two men and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, the remainder to them two and their heirs, they are joyntenants for life, tenants in common of the state taile, and joyntenants of the fee

(1) Acc. ant. 41. a. and there the reason is more fully expressed.

(2) Acc. Perk. sect. 174.

(3) Acc. sect. 298. See also 2. Co. 55. a. & b. ant. 180. b. post. 189. a. 199. b.

(4) But lord Coke's correction is not conformable either to L. & M. or the Roh. edition.

(5) See Hob. 33.

fee simple in remainder; for they are joynt purchasers of the fee simple, and the remainder in fee is a new created estate, but the reversion remaining in the donor or his heires is a part of his ancient fee simple. (2. Co. 60. b. post. 299. b.)

Sect. 284.

ET sicome est dit de males, en mesme le manner est l'ou terre est done a deux females, & a les heires de leur deux corps engendres.

AND as it is said of males, in the same manner it is where land is given to two females, and to the heires of their two bodies engendred. the law will never intend a possibility upon a possibility, as first to marry the one, and then to marry the other (1); secondly, the form of the gift is, to the heires of their three bodies, which is not possible, and therefore they shall have several inheritances. And so it is, if a gift be made to one man and to two women, mutatis mutandis. In the same manner, if a gift in taile be made to a man and his mother, [m] or to a man and his sister (2), or to him and his aunt, &c. in this and like cases, albeit the gift is made to a man and a woman, yet they have severall inheritances; because they cannot marry together, and are within the rule and reason of our author.

IF a man giveth lands to two men and one woman, and the heires of their three bodies begotten, in this case they have severall inheritances; for albeit it may be said, that the woman may by possibility marry both the men one after another: yet first she cannot mar-

44. E. 3. tit. Taile 13. (Ant. 25. b.)

(a. Ro. Abr. 48. 1. Co. 120. 156. b. Ant. 46. b. 10. Co. 50. b.)

[m] 18. E. 3. 39. 7. H. 4. 16.

Sect. 285.

ITEM si terres soyent dones a deux & a les heires de l'un de eux, ceo est bone jointure, et l'un ad franktenement, et l'auter ad fee simple. Et si celui que ad le fee devie, celui que ad le franktenement ave-ra l'entiertie per le survivor pur terme de sa vie. En mesme le manner est, l'ou tenements sont dones a deux & les heires del corps d'un de eux engendres, l'un ad franktenement, & l'auter ad fee taile, &c.

estate in possession, the words in the writ be true, that he was seised in dominico suo ut de feodo (4). Likewise the heir may have a writ of right, which also in some sort proves the fee simple executed; or the heir may have a scire facias to execute the fine, by which the heir supposeth that

ALSO if lands be given to two and to the heires of one of them, this is a good jointure, and the one hath a freehold, and the other a fee simple. And if he which hath the fee dieth, he which hath the freehold shall have the entiertie by survivor for terme of his life. In the same manner it is, where tenements be given to two & the heires of the body of one of them engendred, the one hath a freehold, & the other a fee taile, &c.

BY this section, and the &c. in the end of it, they are joyntenants for life, and the fee-simple or estate taile is in one of them; and because it is by one and the same conveyance, they are joyntenants, and the fee-simple is not executed to all purposes, as hath been said before (3).

If a fine be levied to two, [u] and to the heires of one of them, by force whereof hee is seised, he that hath fee dieth, and after the joyntenant for life dieth, and an estranger abates, in this case the heir may either suppose the fee simple executed, and have an assise of Mortdauncester, the words of which writ be, Si R. pater fuit seifitus die quo obiit in dominico suo ut de feodo; which cannot be said of him that hath but a remainder expectant upon an estate for life; but in respect that he is seised of a fee simple, and of a joynt

(2. Co. 60. b.)

(Sect. 283.)

[u] 42. E. 3. 9. 10. 11. H. 4. 55. 31. E. 3. scire facias 19. 29. H. 8. Mortd. B. 59. 4. E. 3. 37. F. N. B. 196. & 219. 4. E. 3. Itinere Derby. 24. E. 3. 70.

(2. Co. 61.)

(1. Ro. Abr. 686.)

(1) Yet in fol. 20. b. lord Coke allows a present estate tail in a case of double possibility equal to that here supposed; namely the case of a gift to the husband of A. and the wife of B. and the heirs of their bodies. See further on this head Vin. Abr. tit. possid. in, and Fearn on Conting. Rem. 3d ed. 176.

(2) See Dy. 326. a.

(3) Ant. 182. b. See also post. 297. b. Fearn on Conting. Rem. 23. 24. 26. 28. 29. Bro. Nouv. Caf. pl. 260. 303. 387. These references will introduce the reader to most of the learning on this curious point.

(4) See however Bro. Nouv. Caf. pl. 115. which is contra.

(Post. 281.)

that the fee was not executed, or he may maintaine a writ of intrusion where the heire maketh the like supposition, and shall terme it a remainder. (1) And yet when land is given to two and to the heires of one of them, he in the remainder cannot grant away his fee simple, as hath beene said. (2)

Sect. 286.

CLaimer riens per discent de son compaignon, &c. By which &c.

F. N. B. 204. E. 207. 7. H. 6. 2. 13. H. 7. 22. 10. E. 3. 34. 17. R. 2. tit. charge 15. 5. H. 5. 8. Vide sect. 289. (6. Co. 79. a.)

is implied, that so it is if one joyntenant acknowledge a recognisance or a statute, or suffreth a judgment in an action of debt, &c. and dieth before execution had, it shall not bee executed afterwards. (5) But if execution be sued in the life of the consor, it shall bind the survivor. And it is further implied, that both in the case of the charge and of the recognisance statute and judgement, if he that chargeth, &c. survive, it is good for ever.

[e] 9. H. 6. 32. (Hob. 3. Plowd. 418. b.)

And so it is [e] if a man bee possessed of certaine lands for term of yeares in the right of his wife, and granteth a rent charge, and dyeth, the wife shall avoyd the charge; (6) but if the husband had survived, the charge is good during the terme.

If a villeine purchase lands, and binde himselfe in a recognisance, if the lord enter before [p] execution, the lord shall avoyde the same, as it hath beene said. But otherwise it is if he had made a lease for yeares, for the reason that Littleton here yeeldeth in this section. (7)

[f] 8. E. 3. tit. execution Statutam.

If two joyntenants bee of a terme, [g] and the one of them grant to I. S. that [j] 14. H. 8. 22. Pl. Com. 263. 6. in dame Hales case.

ITEM si deux joyntenants sont seises d'estate en fee simple, & l'un graunt un rent charge per son fait a un auter hors de ceo, que a luy affiert (3) en cest case durant la vie le grantor le rent charge est effectuell; mes apres son deceffe le grant de le rent charge est void, quant a charger la terre, car celui que ad la terre per le survivor tiendra tout la terre discharge. Et la cause est, pur ceo que celui que survesquist clayma & ad la terre per le survivor, (4) & ne my ad, ne poet de ceo claymer rien per discent de son compaignon, &c. Mes auterment est de parceners, car si soient deux parceners des tenements en fee simple, et devant ascun partition fait l'un charge ceo que a luy affiert per son fait d'un rent charge, &c. et puis morust sans issue, per que ceo, que a luy affiert, discent a l'auter parcenter, en cest case l'auter parcenter tiendra la terre charge, &c. pur ceo que il vient a cel moitie per discent, come heire, &c.

ALSO if two joyntenants be seised of an estate in fee simple, and the one grants a rent charge by his deed to another out of that which belongeth to him, in this case during the life of the grantor the rent charge is effectuell; but after his decease the grant of the rent charge is void, as to charge the land, for he which hath the land by survivor shall hold the whole land discharged. And the cause is, for that he which surviveth claimeth & hath the land by the survivor, and hath not, nor can claime any thing by descent from his companion, &c. But otherwise it is of parceners, for if there be two parceners of tenements in fee simple, & before any partition made the one chargeth that which to her belongeth by her deed with a rent charge, &c. & after dieth without issue, by which that which belongeth to her descends to the other parcenter, in this case the other parcenter shall hold the land charged, &c. because shee came to this moity by descent, as heir, &c.

if

(1) Acc. F. N. B. 204. E. So also such heir shall have a writ of entry in consimili casu, where the surviving tenant for life aliens in fee. F. N. B. 207. B.

(2) See ant. 182. b.—There is a seeming difficulty in this passage. But I conceive lord Coke's meaning to be, that, though for some purposes the estate for life of the jointenant having the fee is distinct from and unmerged in his greater estate, yet for granting it is not so, but both estates are in that respect consolidated notwithstanding the estate of the other jointenant; and therefore that the fee cannot in strictness of law be granted as a remainder eo nomine, and as an interest distinct from the estate for life. This explanation is confirmed by a note in a Coke upon Littleton I have, in which it is strongly observed, that "the two estates, viz. for life and in fee, or rather one knotted estate, are so confounded together in one person, that he cannot sever them and make them distinct estates, for he cannot grant the estate for life reserving to himself the fee simple, nor can he grant the fee simple and reserve the estate for life, but he may put away all his interest by feoffment or he may forfeit all." See Bro. Nouv. Cuf. pl. 115. It also much agrees with the language of lord Coke's report of Wiscot's case, especially where he observes, that when an estate is made to three and the heirs of one, he, who hath the fee, cannot grant over his remainder, and continue in himself an estate for life, for which lord Coke cites 12. E. 4. 2. b. See 3. Co. 61. a. Besides if the passage here should be understood to signify, that the jointenant having the fee could not in any form pass away the fee subject to the estate of the other jointenant, it would not only be contrary to the power of alienation necessarily incident to a fee simple, but would be inconsistent with lord Coke's own doctrine in a subsequent part of his commentary. See the case of an estate to father and son and the heirs of the father, post. 367. b. See also post. sect. 578. Indeed lord Coke's position thus qualified appears to have a strictness in it, which with some may perhaps render it questionable. However he seems justified by the words of the year-book, which he cites as his authority; for they are, that, if two have land to them and the heirs of one, he who hath fee cannot grant the reversion of his companion to another; but if both alien all passeth. See further as to grant of a remainder or reversion by one having a present and previous estate, Sheph. Touchstone 237. and Sheph. Common Assur. 12. 13.

(3) &c. in L. and M. & Roh.

(4) &c. in L. and M. & Roh.

(5) See acc. 7. H. 7. 13. b. & 2. Ro. Abr. 88.

(6) Yet the husband's alienation of term itself or of any part of it binds the wife surviving. Post. 351. 2. The reason of this difference is explained post. 185. a. It is also well explained in Finch's L. 98. and in the New Abridgement tit. baron & feme. C. 2. See further 1. Vern. 306.

(7) See also the reason given in sect. 289.

if he pay to him ten pound before Michaelmasse, that then he shall have his terme, the grantor dyeth before the day, I. S. payes the summe to his executors at the day, yet hee shall not have the tearme, but the survivor shall hold place; for it was but in nature of a communication: (1) but if he had made a lease for yeares, to begin at Michaelmasse, it should have bound the survivor. (2)

And where Littleton putteth the case of a rent charge, it is so likewise implied, that if one joyntenant granteth a common of pasture, or of turbary, or of estovers, or a corody, or such like, out of his part, or a way over the land, this shall not bind the survivor: for it is a maxime in law, that jus accrescendi præfertur oneribus; and there is another maxime, that alienatio rei præfertur juri accrescendi.

If one joyntenant in fee simple be indebted to the king, and dyeth, [r] after his decease no extent shall be made upon the land in the hands of the survivor.

If a recovery be had against one joyntenant, who dyeth before execution, the survivor shall not avoid this recovery; because that the right of the moitie is bound by it.

If one joyntenant in fee take a lease for yeares of an estranger by deed indented and dyeth, the survivor shall not be bound by the conclusion; because he claymes above it, and not under it.

Et la cause est, pur ceo que celui que survesquist clame & ad la terre per survivor, &c. Here againe Littleton sheweth the reason: and the cause, wherefore the survivor shall not hold the land charged, is, for that he claymeth the land from the first feoffor, (3) and not by his companion, which is Littleton's meaning when he saith, (that he claymeth by survivor) for [s] the surviving feoffee may plead a feoffment to himselfe without any mention of his joynt feoffee. (4) And this is the reason, that if two joyntenants be in fee, and the one maketh a lease for yeares, reserving a rent and dyeth, the surviving feoffee [t] shall have the reversion by survivor, but he shall not have the rent, because he claymeth in from the first feoffor, which is paramount the rent. If there be two joyntenants in fee, and the one joyntenant granteth a rent charge out of his part, and after releaseth to his joynt companion and dyeth, he shall hold the land charged; for that he is out of the reason and cause set downe by Littleton, because he claymeth not by survivor, in as much as the release prevented the same. And of this opinion was Littleton himselfe [u] before the edition of his booke. But all men agree, that if A. B. and C. be joyntenants in fee, and A. chargeth his part, and then releaseth to B. and his heirs, and dyeth, that the [w] charge is good for ever; because in that case B. cannot be in from the first feoffor, because he hath a joynt companion at the time of the release made, and several writs of præcipe must be brought against them. (5) And albeit the release of one joyntenant to the residue of the joyntenants makes no degree in supposition of law, neither is there any severall estate between them, but the estate of him that releaseth is as it were extinguished and drowned in their estate and possession, so as one præcipe lyeth against them, (7) yet shall they hold the land charged as is aforesaid. As if tenant for life grant a rent charge, and after surrendreth his estate to the lessor, albeit the estate charged be drowned, and the lessor is not in by him, yet hee shall hold it charged. (8)

Mes autrement est de parceners, car si sont deux parceners, &c. This is to be intended as well of parceners by custome as of parceners by the common law; and here is implied the reason of the diversity, for that the survivor doth claime above the charge, and the heire by descent under the charge. (9)

Sect. 287.

ITEM si sont deux joyntenants des terres en fee simple deins un burgh, l'un les terres & tenements sont devisables per testament, & si l'un de les dits deux joyntenants devise ceo que a luy affiert per son

ALSO if there bee two joyntenants of land in fee simple within a borough, where lands and tenements are devisable by testament, & if the one of the said two joyntenants deviseth that which to him be-

PER son testament,

&c. Either in writing, or nuncupative, according to the custome.

Et la cause est, pur ceo que nul devise poet prendre effect mes apres le mort le devisor (10) & per sa mort tout la terre maintenant devient per la ley a son companion, &c.

(1) See Dy. 337. a.

(2) See post. sect. 289.

(3) For this same reason a wife shall not have dower out of lands of which her husband was joyntenant. Ant. 37. b. See post. 385. a. a case of warranty depending on the same principle.

(4) Acc. F. N. B. 219. B.

(5) As to the partial effect of such a release on the jointenancy, see post. sect. 304.

(6) It should be 12. a.

(7) See the case of waste in Brownl. Rep. 238.

(8) Acc. 338. b. 233. b.

(9) In Calthrop's reading on Copyholds 64. the doctrine of admission on the death of copyholders being jointenants or parceners is stated according to this diversity.

(10) Acc. ant. 112. a. b. as a reason for the goodness of a devise by husband to wife.

Pl. Com. in Fulmerston's case.

(Plowd. 258. b. Ant. 30. a.)

(Plowd. 418. Hob. 3. Cro. Eliz. 33.)

1. II. 5. executors 108.

[*] Fleta lib. 2. cap. 50. (3)
 Bracton lib. 2. fol. 60. Britton
 fol. 178.

Lamb. fol. 119. 58

Ec. Here doth their claimes commence at one instant: and although an instant est unum indivisibile tempore quod non est tempus nec pars temporis, ad quod tamen partes temporis connectuntur, and that instans est finis unius temporis & principium alterius; (1) yet in consideration of law there is a prioritie of time in an instant, as here the survivor is preferred before the devise, for Littleton saith, that the cause is that no devise can take effect till after the death of the devisor, and by his death all the land presently commeth by the law to his companion. Whereby it appeareth, that Littleton by these words post mortem & per mortem, though they jump at one instant, yet alloweth priority of time in the instant which he distinguisheth by per & post. And the reason of this prioritie is, that the survivor claymeth by the first feoffor (as hath bin said) and therefore in judgment of law his title is paramount the title of the devisee, and consequently the devise void, and the rule of law is that jus accrescendi præfertur ultimæ voluntati. (2)

Two fems joyntenants of a lease for yeares, one of them taketh husband and dieth, yet the terme shall survive; for though all chattels reals are given to the husband, if he survive, yet the survivor between the joyntenants is the elder title, and after the marriage the feme continued sole possessed; for, if the husband dyeth, the feme shall have it, and not the executors of the husband. (3) But otherwise it is of personall goods.

If a man be seised of a house, and possessed of divers heirlomes, that by custome have gone with the house from heire to heire, and by his will deviseth away the heirlomes, this devise is void; for as Littleton here saith, the will taketh effect after his death, and by his death the heirlomes by ancient custome are vested in the heire (4), and the law preferreth the custome before the devise. And so it is if the lord ought to have a herriot when his tenant dieth, and the tenant deviseth away all his goods, yet the lord shall have his herriot for the reason aforesaid. And it hath beene anciently said, that the herriot shall bee paid before the mortuary. [x] Imprimis autem debet quilibet, qui testaverit, dominum suum de meliore re quam habuerit recognoscere, & postea ecclesiam de alia meliore, &c. wherein the lord is preferred, for that the tenure is of him. This dutie to the lord is very antient; for in the lawes before the conquest it is said, sive quis incuriâ, sive morte repentinâ, fuerit intestat' mortuus, dominus tamen nullam rerum suarum partem (præter eam quæ jure debetur herioti nomine) sibi assumito (6). In the Saxon tongue it is called heregeat, as much to say (as I take it) as the lords best; for here is lord, and geat is best. But let us returne to Littleton.

Mes auterment est de parceners seises des tenements devisable en tiel casé del devise, &c. causâ quâ suprà.

The reason is evident, for that there is no survivor between coparceners, but the part of the one is descendible, and consequently may be devised.

Sect.

(1) Therefore in Fitzwilliam's case 6. Co. 32. it was argued, that the indulgence of the law in connecting two times to make one instant time cannot be extended to three times. See post. 298. a. a case in which priority of time in an instant is allowed, for sake of saving the remainder in fee of a rent from the effect of a suspension of the particular estate.

(2) Acc. as to goods, Office of Exec. ed. 1676. p. 26. Perk. sect. 226. Swinb. on Testam. part 3. sect. 6.

(3) See ant. 46. b. post. 351. a. and the case of a purchase by husband and wife jointly, the former being a villein, in 2. Ro. Abr. 733. D. pl. 2.

(4) Acc. ant. 18. b.

(5) It should be cap. 57.

(6) See this same passage cited ant. 176. b.

testament, &c. & mortuif, ceo devise est voide. Et la cause est, pur ceo que nul devise poit prender effect mes apres la mort le devisor, et per sa mort tout la terre maintenant devient per la ley a son companion, que survive, per le survivor; le quel il ne claime, ne ad reins en la terre per my le devisor, mes en son droit de mesme per le survivor solongue le course de ley, &c. & pur cel cause tiel devise est voide. Mes auterment est de parceners seises des tenements devisables en tiel casé de devise, &c. causâ quâ suprà.

longeth by his testament, &c. and dieth, this devise is voide. And the cause is, for that no devise can take effect till after the death of the devisor: and by his death all the land presently commeth by the law to his companion, which surviveth, by the survivor; the which hee doth not claime, nor hath any thing in the land by the devisor, but in his owne right by the survivor according to the course of law, &c. and for this cause such devise is void. But otherwise it is of parceners seised of tenements devisable in like case of devise, &c. causâ quâ suprà.

Sect. 288.

ITEM il est communement dit, que chescun joyntenant est seisie de la terre qu'il tient joyntment (1) per my et per tout; et ceo est autant adire qu'il est seisie per chescun parcel et per tout, &c. et ceo est voier, car en chescun parcel, et per chescun parcel, et per tous les terres et tenements, il est joyntment seisie ovesque son companion. (2)

them two and their heires, I may enter into a moiety.

And where all the joyntenants joyne in a feoffment, every of them in judgment of law do give but his part. (6) If an alien and a subject purchase lands joyntly, the king upon office found shall have but a moiety. (7) And Littleton afterwards in this chapter (8) saith, that one joyntenant hath one moiety in law, and the other the other moiety. And therefore if two joyntenants be [2] and both they make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and that for breach thereof one of them shall enter into the whole, yet he shall enter but into a moiety, because no more in judgment of law passed from him: (9) and so it is of a gift in taile or a lease for life, &c.

Yet every joyntenant may warrant the whole; [a] because a man may warrant more then passeth from him. (10)

If two joyntenants make a feoffment in fee [b] and one of the feoffors dye, the feoffee cannot plead a feoffment from the survivor of the whole, because each of them gave but his part; but otherwise it is on the part of the feoffees, as hath beene said before.

And where two joyntenants be, the one of them [c] may make the other his baylife of his moiety, and have an action of account (11) against him. And one joyntenant [d] may let his part for yeares or at will to his companion.

If two joyntenants be of certaine lands, and the one of them by deed indented [e] bargaineth and selleth the lands, and the other joyntenant dyeth, and then the deed is inrolled, there shall passe nothing but the moiety which the bargainer had at the time of the bargain. (12)

ALSO it is commonly said, that every jointenant is seised of the land which hee holdeth joyntly per my & per tout; and this is as much to say, as he is seised by every parcell & by the whole, &c. and this is true, for in every parcell, and by every parcell, and by al the lands and tenements, he is joyntly seised with his companion.

ITEM est communement dit &c. That is, it is the common opinion, and communis opinio is of good authoritie in law. A communis observantia non est recedendum, (3) which appeareth here by Littleton.

Per my & per tout. Et sic totum tenet & nihil tenet, s. totum conjunctim, & nihil per se separatim. And albeit they are so seised (as for example where there bee two joyntenants in fee) yet to divers purposes each of them hath but a right to a moiety; as to encoffe give or demise, or to forfeit (4) or lose by default in a præcipe. (5) If my villein [y] and another purchase lands to

Vide sect. 697.

(Post. 350. a. a. Co. 65. b. a. Ro. Abr. 86.) Vide Bracon lib. 5. fo. 430. Britton cap. 35. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 4. 40. E. 3. 40. 18. E. 2. bre. 831. 35. H. 6. 39. Vide the second part of the Institutes upon the 6. chapter of the statute de bigamis. Fleta lib. 1. cap. 28. 40. Alf. 79. 48. E. 3. 16.

[y] Vid. 6. E. 3. 4. 7. E. 4. 29. 11. El. Dyer 183. (a. Co. 58. a. Cro. Jam. 91. 1. Leon. 47.)

[2] Pl. Com. in Browning's case, fol. (133. a.) (Post. 192. a.)

[a] Vide the second part of the Institutes upon the 6. chapter of the statute de bigamis.

[b] 14. E. 4. 5. and the other bookes abovesaid.

[c] 21. E. 3. 60. (Post. 200. b.)

[d] 11. H. 3. 60. 33. (Post. 193. b. 335. a.)

[e] 6. E. 6. tit. Faits inroll. 9. Br. (Cro. Cha. 217. 569. 1. Co. 173.)

Sect. 289.

ITEM si deux joyntenants sont seies de certain terres en fee simple, & l'un lessa ceo que a luy affiert a un estranger pur terme de 40 ans, & devie devant le term com-

ALSO if two joyntenants bee seised of certain lands in fee simple, and the one letteth that to him belongeth to a stranger for terme of forty yeares, and dyeth before the PER force de mesme le dit lease, &c.

By this &c. is implied, [f] that where our author speaketh of joyntenants seised in fee, that so it is if two be seised for life, and one make a lease to begin presently or in [f] Vid. sect. 286. & 660. & sect. 2.

(1) &c. in L. & M. & Roh.

(2) &c. in L. & M. & Roh.

(3) This fine maxim is cited post. 229. b. and 364. b. In Wingate's Maxims 751. there is a variety of cases collected to illustrate the application of this rule. Other rules immediately connected with this are, that communis error facit jus and res judicata pro veritate habetur, and also that minimè mutanda sunt que certam interpretationem habuerunt, as to which see post. 365. a. Hob. 147. Wing. Max. 758. and ant. 51. b. in the margin.—In a late ecclesiastical case of great importance, in which bonds of resignation were condemned by the supreme court of appellant jurisdiction, these four maxims appear to me to have included the chief topic of argument in favour of such bonds.

(4) Acc. as to copyholders being jointenants Calthrope's Reading 97. Kitch. French ed. 82. a.

(5) See ant. 125. b.

(6) Acc. 11. H. 7. a. pl. 5.

(7) See ant. 180. and note 2. there.

(8) Post. sect. 291.

(9) See ant. 47. a. & post. 214. a. the case of a lease by two jointenants with reservation of rent to one, and the difference there taken between such a lease by parol and one by deed indented. See also Dy. 263. a.

(10) See post. sect. 700.

(11) See ant. 171. a.

(12) See ant. 147. b.

(Dy. 187. a. 2. Ro. Abr. 89.)

[6] 11. H. 4. 90. 14. H. 8. 6. 17. E. 4. 6. a. 9. H. 6. 52. 21. H. 7. 29. 14. H. 7. 4. 18. E. 3. execution 56. 11. El. Dy. 285. Plow. Com. 160. a. Temps E. 1. Aff. 422. 20. H. 6. 4. 7. H. 7. 13. 10. H. 7. 24. (Ant. 4. b.)

in futuro, and dieth, this lease shall binde the survivor, as it hath been adjudged. (4) [g] And if one joyntenant grant vestituram terræ, or herbagium terræ, for yeares, and dieth, this shall binde the survivor; for such a lessee hath right in the land. So it is if two joyntenants be of a water, and the one granteth the severall pishary.

L'un lessa. The one letteth. If two joyntenants bee of an advowson, and [b] the one presenteth to the church, and his clerke is admitted and instituted, this in respect of the privity shall not put the other out of possession; (5) but if that joyntenant that presenteth dieth, it shall serve for a title in a quare impedit brought by the survivor. (6) But yet if one joyntenant or tenant in common present, or if they present severally, the ordinary may either admit or refuse to admit such a presentee, unless they joyn in presentation, and after the fixe moneths he may in that case present by lapse (7).

[1] Brañ. li. 4. fo. 238. 245. 247. Brit. fo. 223. 45. Ed. 3. Fines 41. 18. E. 2. Quar. Imp. 176. 38. H. 6. 9. 19. E. 3. ib. 50. 5. H. 5. 10. F. N. B. 34. V. (Plowd. 332. b. 333. a. 10. Co. 135. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 346. F. N. B. 33. E. Ant. 166. b. Poil. 243. a & sect. 299.)

But if two or more coparceners bee, [i] and they cannot agree to present, the eldest shall present; and if her sister doth disturbe her, she shall have a quare impedit against her; and so shall the issue and the assignee of the eldest, and yet he is tenant in common with the youngest. (8) And in the same manner the tenant by the curtesie of the eldest shall present. But if there bee foure coparceners and the eldest and the second present, and the other two present jointly or severally, the ordinary may refuse them all; for the eldest did not present alone, but she and one other of her sisters. But now let us returne to Littleton. (9) mence, ou deins le terme, en cest case apres son decease le lessee poet enter et occuper la moitie a luy lesse durant le terme, &c. coment que le lessee n'avoit unques possession de ceo en la vie le lessor, per force de mesme le lease, &c. Et le diversitie perenter le case de grant de rent charge (1) [avant dit, et cest case est ceo. Car en grant de rent charge per] joyntenaunt, &c. les tenements demurgent tous foits come ils fueront adevant, sans ceo que ascun ad ascun droit d'aver ascun parcell de les tenements forsque eux mesmes, et les tenements sont en tiel plyte, come ils fueront devant le charge, &c. Mes ou lease est fait per un joyntenant a un auter pur terme des ans, &c. maintenaunt per force de le lease le lessee ad droit en mesme la terre, cestascavoir, de tout ceo que a son lessour affiert, et d'aver ceo per force de mesme le lease durant son terme. (2) Et ceo est la diversitie. (3) term beginneth, or within the terme, in this case after his decease the lessee may enter and occupie the moitie let unto him during the terme, &c. although the lessee had never the possession thereof in the life of the lessor, by force of the same lease, &c. And the diversitie betweene the case of a grant of a rent charge aforesaid, and this case, is this. For in the grant of a rent charge by a joyntenant, &c. the tenements remaine alwayes as they were before, without this that any hath any right to have any parcell of the tenements but they themselves, and the tenements are in the same plight as they were before the charge, &c. But where a lease is made by a joyntenant to another for terme of yeares, &c. presently by force of the lease the lessee hath right in the same land, (videlicet) of all that which to the lessor belongeth, and to have this by force of the same lease during his terme. And this is the diversitie.

Sect.

(1) The following words between brackets not in L. & M. or Roh.

(2) Vie instead of terme in L. & M. & Roh.

(3) Ec. in L. & M. & Roh.

(4) See acc. Cro. Jam. 91. & 2. Brownl. 175.

(5) See post. 243. a. 249. a.

(6) Acc. more fully 2. Inst. 365. According to F. N. B. 34. the law is the same between coparceners, which agrees with lord Coke's doctrine about them in 2. Inst. 365. & post. 243. a. See further the case of usurpation of a right of presenting ant. 149. a. See also the case of attornment to one of two joyntenants, post. sect. 566. Add 5. Co. 97. b.

(7) See 5. H. 7. 8. a. Burn. Ecc. L. tit. advowson, Watf. Compl. Incumb. c. 8.

(8) See my note on this subject ant. 166. b. Hob. 119. Dy. 55. a.

(9) See further on presentation where more than one have an interest in an advowson, 2. Gibf. Cod. 1st ed. 804. ant. 17. b. 18. a. 17. Vin. Abr. 345. Mallory's 2^d.

Sect. 290.

ITEM joyntenants (s'ils voilent) poient faire partition enter eux, et la partition est assés bon; mes de ceo faire ils ne ferront compels per la ley; mes s'ils voilent faire partition de leur proper volunt & agreement, le partition estoiera en sa force.

ALSO joyntenants (if they will) may make partition betweene them, and the partition is good enough; but they shall not bee compelled to doe this by the law; but if they will make partition of their own will and agreement, the partition shal stand in force.

POyent faire partition. But this partition must bee [k] by deed [k] Vid. sect. 259. 318. (Ant. as hath beene said before. 169. a. F. N. B. 62. f.) But joyntenants for yeares may [l] make partition without deed.

(Post. 198. b.)

Ilz ne serra compell.

This is true regularly; but, by the custome of some cities and boroughs, one joyntenant or tenant in common may compell his companion, by writ of partition grounded upon the custome, to make partition. (1) tenants and tenants in common generally are compellable to make partition by writ framed upon the statutes [m] of 31. & 32. H. 8. as before hath been said. (2) And albeit they be now compellable to make partition, yet, seeing they are compellable by writ, they must pursue the statutes, and cannot make partition by parol, for that remaines at the common law. And by Littleton's authoritie herein it seemeth to me, that if one joyntenant or tenant in common disseise another, and the disseisee bring his assise for the moytie, that in this case, though the plaintife prayeth it, yet no judgement shall bee given to hold in severaltie, for then at the common law there might have beene by compulsion of law a partition between joyntenants and tenants in common, and by rule of law the plaintife must have judgement according to his pleint or demand.

F. N. B. 62. b.

If two joyntenants be [n] of land with warranty, and they make partition by writing, the warrantie is destroyed; but if they make partition by writ of partition upon the statute, the warrantie remaines, because they are compellable thereunto, (3)

[m] 31. H. 8. ca. 1. 32. H. 8. ca. 32. Vid. sect. 264. 247. 259. Mich. 16. & 17. El. 1. 340. Inter Harris & Eden adjudge. acc. 18. El. Dyer 350. b. Vide before in the chapter of partition, many bookes cited concerning this matter. (Ant. 175. a. sect. 250. Mo. 29. Dy. 350. Ant. 167. b.) 3. E. 3. 48. F. N. B. 9. b. 7. Aff. 10. 7. E. 3. 29. 10. Aff. 17. 10. E. 3. 40. 43. 12. Aff. 15. 17. 12. E. 3. judgement 102. 20. E. 3. Aff. 62. 28. Aff. 35. 23. Aff. 10. 7. H. 6. 4. 19. H. 6. 45. 3. E. 4. 10. Vid. sect. 247. Brit. fo. 112. lb. 6. fo. 12. & 13. Morrice's case.

[n] 29. E. 3. tit. Garr.

Sect. 291.

ITEM si un joynt estate soit fait de terre a le baron & a sa feme & a un tierce person, en ceo cas le baron et sa feme n'ont en ley en leur droit forsque le moitie, &c. (4) [et le tierce person avera tant come le baron et sa feme ont, s. l'auter moitie, &c.] Et la cause est, pur ceo que le baron et sa feme ne sont forsque un person en

ALSO if a joynt estate be made of land to husband and wife and to a third person, in this case the husband & wife have in law in their right but the moity, and the third person shall have as much as the husband & wife, viz. the other moity, &c. And the cause is, for that the husband and wife are but one person in

LE baron & sa feme n'ont en ley en leur droit forsque le moitie, &c.

(Post. 299. b. 351. a. 2. Co. 68.)

William Ocle and Joane his wife [o] purchased lands to them two and their heires; after William Ocle was attainted of high treason for the murder of the king's father E. 2. and was executed; Joan his wife survived him; E. 3. granted the lands to Stephen de Bitterly and his heires; John Hawkins the heire of the said Joan in a petition to the king discloseth this whole matter, and upon a scir. facias against the patentee hath judgement to recover the lands,

[o] Mich. 33. E. 3. coram rege Salop. in Thesaur. (Post. 326. a. 1. Ro. Abr. 389. 388. 9. Co. 140.)

(1) For instances of such custom, see for London F. N. B. 62. b. and for gavelkind land ant. sect. 265. and Robins. on Gavelk. 108.

(2) Ant. 169. a.—In a Coke upon Littleton I have, there is the following note on the extent of the statutes of 31. and 32. H. 8. "Adjudged by St. John cheife justice and Windham and Archer justices, Hillary 1659 in the common bench, in the cause "between Major and the lord Coventry, that a tenant by elegit may have a writ of partition by the statute of 32. H. 8. and it is "within the meaning thereof." This is followed with a reference to Cro. Cha. 44. where it is said, that the statute doth not extend to copyholds.

(3) Acc. ant. 165. a. and b. as to parceners, because they are compellable to make partition at common law. See the case of aid between parceners after partition ant. 174. a. and b.

(4) The words following between brackets not in L. and M. or Roh.

Vide sect. 665.

lands, for the reason here yeelded by our author.

But if an estate be made to a man and a woman and their heires before marriage, and after they marry, the husband and wife have moities between them, which is implied in these words of our author, baron & sa feme. (2)

Forsque un person en Ley. Bract. saith [p] vir & uxor sunt quasi unica persona, quia caro una & sanguis unus.

(3) It hath bin said, that if a reversion bee granted to a man and a woman and their heires, and before attornment they entermarry, and then attornment is made, that the husband and wife shall have no moities in this case, (4) no more than if a charter of feoffment be made to a man and a woman, with a letter of attornie to make livery, they entermarry, and then livery is made secundum formam chartæ, in which case it is said that they have no moities. But certain it is, that if a feoffment were made before the stat. of 27. H. 8. of uses to the use of a man [q] and a woman, and their heires, and they entermarry, and then the statute is made, if the husband alien it is good for a moiety; for the statute executes the possession according to such qualitie, manner, forme, and condition, as they had in the use, so as though it vest during the coverture, yet the act of parliament executes severall moities in them, seeing they had severall moities in the use. (5)

If an estate be made to a villeine and his wife [r] being free, and to their heires, albeit they have severall capacities, viz. the villeine to purchase for the benefit of the lord, and the wife for her owne, yet if the lord of the villeine enter, and the wife surviveth her husband, she shall enjoy the whole land, because there be no moities betweene them.

A man makes a lease to A. and to a baron and feme, viz. to A. for life, to the husband in taile, and to the feme for yeares, in this case it is said, that each of them hath a third part in respect of the severallie of their estates.

If a feoffment be made to a man and a woman and their heires with warrantie, [s] and they entermarry, and after are impleaded and vouch and recover in value, moities shall not be betweene them; for though they were sole when the warrantie was made, notwithstanding at the time when they recovered and had execution they were husband and wife, in which time they cannot take by moities.

Albeit baron and feme (as Littleton here saith) be one person in law, so as neither of them can give any estate or interest to the other, (6) yet if a charter of feoffment bee made to the wife, the husband as attorney to the feoffor may make livery to the wife; (7) and so a feme covert, that hath power to sell land by will, may sell the same to her husband, because they are but instruments for others, and the state passeth from the feoffor or devisor.

If a husband, wife, and a third person purchase lands to them and their heires [t] and the husband before the statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 1. had aliened the whole land to a stranger in fee, and died, the wife and the other joyntenant were joyntenants of the right, and if the wife had ley, et sont en semblable case, sicome estate soit fait a deux joyntenants, ou l'un ad per force de joynture l'un moitie en ley, & l'auter l'auter moitie, &c. (1) En mesme le maner est l'ou estate est fait a le baron et a sa feme et as auters deux homes, en tiel cas le baron et sa feme n'ont forsque la tierce part, et les auters deux homes les auters deux parts, &c. Causâ quâ suprà.

law, and are in like case as if an estate be made to two joyntenants, where the one hath by force of the joynture the one moiety in law, and the other the other moiety, &c. In the same manner it is where an estate is made to the husband and wife and to two other men, in this case the husband and wife have but the third part, and the other two men the other two parts, &c. causâ quâ suprà.

PLUS serra dit del matter touchant joyntenancie, en le chapter de tenants en common, et tenant per elegit, et tenant per statute merchant.

MORE shall be said of the matter touching joyntenancy in the chapter of tenants in common, & tenant by elegit, and tenant by statute merchant.

[p] Bract. li. 5. fo. 416. 20. H. 3. Dilcent 52. lib. 4. fo. 68. Toker's case. Pl. Com. 483. Nichols case.

[q] 4. Mar. Dyer 149. 3. Mar. Dyer 122. 29. H. 8. Dyer 32.

[r] 40. Aff. p. 7.

[s] Pl. Com. 483. Nichols case.

10. H. 7. 20.

[t] 11. E. 3. cui in vita 9. 16. E. 3. ibid. 36. E. 3. ib. 20. 35. Aff. pl. 15. 31. H. 6. tit. Ent. congeable 54. 19. H. 6. 45. F. N. B. 193. k.

(1) No Sec. in L. & M. or Roh.

(2) See acc. as to this difference between a joint estate to husband and wife before marriage and one after, Calthrope's Read. on Copyh. 92. F. N. B. 194. B. See further case of Butler and Baker 3. Co. the case of Margery More ant. 133. a. the case of 4. Aff. 4. cited in 1. Ro. Abr. 271. and the case of Ward and Walthew Yelv. 101.

(3) See ant. 112. a. where the same passage from Bract on is cited.

(4) See acc. post. 310. a. and there the doctrine is more positively expressed. See further the case of a lease for life to baron and feme and afterwards confirmation, post. 299. b.

(5) See Dy. 200. a.

(6) Acc. ant. 112. a. and observe note 6. there.

(7) Acc. ant. 52. a.

had died, the other joyntenant should have had the whole right by survivor (1); for that they might have joynted in a writ of right (2), and the discontinuance should not have barred the entrie of the survivor, for that he claymed not under the discontinuance, but by title paramount above the same by the first feoffment (3), which is worthie of observation. But if the husband had made a feoffment in fee but of the moiety, and he and his wife had dyed, their moiety should not have survived to the other.

And for the better understanding of this diversity divers things are worthy of observation.

First, that a right of action and a right of entrie may stand in joynture; for at the common law the alienation of the husband was a discontinuance to the wife of the one moiety, and a disseisin of the other, so as after the death of the husband, the wife hath a right of action to the one moiety, and the other joyntenant a right of entrie into the other, but they are jointenants of the right, because they may joyne in a writ of right.

Vide sect. 302.
(Post. 327. b.)

Secondly, that a right of action or a bare right of entrie cannot stand in joynture with a freehold or inheritance in possession, and therefore if the husband make a feoffment of the moiety, this was a discontinuance of that moiety, * and the other jointenant remained in possession of the freehold and inheritance of the other moiety, which for the time was a severance of the jointure (4); and so are all the bookes, which seemed to varie amongst themselves, cleerely reconciled.

* Vide the statute of 32. H. 8. 2. it is no discontinuance at this day.

If two joyntenants be of a rent, and the one of them disseise the tenant of the land, [u] this is a severance of the joynture for a time; for the moiety of the rent is suspended by unitie of possession (5), and therefore cannot stand in joynture with the other moiety in possession. And this is to be observed, that there shall never bee any survivor, unlesse the thing be in joynture at the instant of the death of him that first dyeth: (6) for the rule is, nihil de re accrescit ei, qui nihil in re quando jus accresceret habet.

[u] Pl. Com. 419. Bratchbridge's case.

Also if a man demise lands to two, to have and to hold to the one for life, and the other for yeares, they are no joyntenants; for a state of freehold cannot stand in joynture with a terme for yeares: and a reversion upon a freehold cannot stand in joynture with a freehold and inheritance in possession, as shall be said in the next chapter (7). Neither can a seisin in the right of a politique capacity stand in joynture with seisin in a natural capacity, as shall be said hereafter (8).

46. E. 3. 21. 19. H. 6. 45. 37. H. 8. 8. 3. E. 4. 10.

If two femes be jointly seised, and they take barons, and the barons joyne in an alienation and dye, the wives are joyntenants of the right, and may joyne in a writ of right; and yet they may have severall writs of cui in vita at their election; but when they have recovered in those severall writs, they shall be joyntenants againe. But if the barons had aliened severally, this had bin a severance of the joynture for a time, for the reason abovesaid.

If two joyntenants, the one for life, and the other in fee, lose by default, the one shall have a writ of right, and the other a quod ei de forceat; and yet when they have severally recovered, they shall be joyntenants againe (9). So it is if two joyntenants bee disseised, and an assise is brought, and the one is summoned and severed, and the other recover the moiety, and after another assise is brought, and he that recovereth is summoned and severed, and the other recover, albeit they severally recover, yet they are joyntenants againe (10).

And in all cases where the joyntenants pursue one joynt remedy, and the one is summoned and severed and the other recover, he that is summoned and severed shall enter with him; but where their remedies be severall, there the one shall not enter with the other, till both have recovered: and the same law is of coparceners. If lands [w] be demised for life, the remainder to the right heires of I. S. and of I. N. I. S. hath issue and dieth, and after I. N. hath issue and dieth, the issues are not joyntenants, because the one moiety vested at one time, and the other moiety vested at another time (11). And yet in some cases there may be joyntenants, and yet the estate may vest in them at severall times.

Vid. Lit. cap. Remitter, the last case. (Post. 364. b.)
10. H. 6. 10. 31. H. 6. tit. Entre congeable. 46. E. 3. 21. b. 3. E. 4. 10. 37. H. 6. 8.
[w] 24. E. 3. 29. 18. E. 3. 28. 38. E. 3. (Cro. Jam. 259.)

If a man [x] make a feoffment in fee to the use of himselfe and of such wife as he should afterwards marrie, for terme of their lives, and after he taketh wife, they are joyntenants, and yet they come to their estates at severall times (12).

[x] 17. El. Dyer Brent's case (12)

And so it is if I disseise one to the use of two, and the one agrees at one time, and the other at another, yet they are joyntenants.

In this section are three &c. the first and second are at large explained before, the last is intended where more parties take then three.

Cap.

(1) Acc. 2. Ro. Abr. 88. D. pl. 3.

(2) See post. 337. a.

(3) See post. 364. b. and ant. 185. a.

(4) Acc. post. 337. b.

(5) See ant. 148. b.

(6) Acc. post. 193. a.

(7) Post. sect. 302. near the end.

(8) Post. sect. 297.

(9) See post. 214. a. and Bro. Abr. jointenants 6.

(10) A like case of parceners is stated before, and resolved in the same way. Ant. 164. a. See further 19. H. 6. 45. b.

(11) For other cases, where joint words are construed to operate severally for the like reason, see the arguments in mr. justice Windham's case, 5. Co. 7. 2.

(12) It is in Dy. 339. b. pl. 48. but without any name. It is also much at large in 2. Leon. 14.

(13) See contra as to an estate at common law, the case of a gift to one and his children ant. 9. a. The reason of the difference is, that in the case of the use the estate is vested and settled in the feoffees till the future use comes in to esse. See further as to this difference and the reason of it, 1. Co. 100. b. 101. a. and Dy. 274. b.

Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 292.

TENANTS en common sont ceux, que ont terres ou tenements en fee simple, fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, &c. les queux ont tielx terres ou tenements per severall titles, & nemy per joint title, et nul de eux sca-voit de ceo son severall, mes ils doivent per la ley occuper tiels terres ou tenements en common, & pro indiviso a prendre les profits en common. Et pur ceo que ils aviendront a tielx terres ou tenements per severall titles, et nemy per un joynt title, et leur occupation et possession serra per la ley perenter eux en common, ils sont appels tenaunts en common. Sicome un home enfeoffa deux joyntenants en fee, et l'un de eux alien ceo que a luy affiert a un auter en fee, ore le alienee et l'auter joyntenant sont tenants en common; pur ceo que ils sont eins en tiels tenements per severall titles, car l'alienee vient eins en la moitie per la feoffement d'un des joyntenants, et l'auter joyntenant ad l'auter moitie per force de le premier feoffement fait a luy et a son compaignion, &c. (1). Et issint ils sont eins per severall titles, cestascavoir, per severall feoffements, &c. (2)

TENANTS in Common are they, which have lands or tenements in fee simple, fee taile, or for terme of life, &c. and they have such lands or tenements by severall titles, and not by a joynt title, and none of them know of this his severall, but they ought by the law to occupie these lands or tenements in common, and pro indiviso to take the profits in common. And because they come to such lands or tenements by severall titles, and not by one joynt title, and their occupation and possession shall be by law betweene them in common, they are called tenants in common. As if a man infeoffe two joyntenants in fee, and the one of them alien that which to him belongeth to another in fee, now the alienee and the other jointenant are tenants in common; because they are in such tenements by severall titles, for the alienee cometh to the moytie by the feoffement of one of the joyntenants, and the other joyntenant hath the other moitie by force of the first feoffement made to him and to his companion, &c. And so they are in by severall titles, that is to say, by severall feoffements, &c.

(Noy 13.)

Flet. li. 3. ca. 4.

Littleton having spoken of parceners, which are onely by descent, and of joyntenants which are onely by purchase and by joint title, speaketh now of tenants in common, which may be by three meanes, viz. by purchase, by descent, or by prescription, as hereafter in this chapter shall appeare (3).

Ou

(1) No &c. in L. & M. or Roh.

(2) No &c. in L. & M. or Roh.

(3) See sect. 310. which gives an instance of tenancy in common by prescription.

Ou pur terme de vie, &c. Here &c. implyeth pur terme d'auter vie, or for term of yeares, or for any other fixed estate in the land.

And here it appeareth, that the essential difference betweene joyntenants and tenants in common is, that joyntenants have the lands by one joint title and in one right, (1) and tenants in common by severall titles or by one title and by severall rights; which is the reason, that joyntenants have one joint freehold, and tenants in common have severall freeholds. Onely this propertie is common to them both, viz. that their occupation is undivided, and neither of them knoweth his part in severall.

Vide sect. 296.

The example that Littleton putteth in this section is perspicuous, and needeth no explication.

Sect. 293.

ET est asavoir, que quant il est dit en ascun livre que home est seise en fee sauns plus dire, il ferra entendue en fee simple; car il ne ferra entendue per tiel paroll (en fee) que home est seise en fee taile, sinon que soit mis a ceo tiel addition, fee taile, &c.

AND it is to bee understood, (Ant. 1. b. 11. Co. 38.) that when it is said in any booke that a man is seised in fee, without more saying, it shall bee intended in fee simple, for it shall not bee intended by this word (in fee) that a man is seised in fee taile, unlesse there bee added to it this addition, fee taile, &c.

THIS is evident, and secundum excellentiam it shall be taken for the highest and best fee, and that is fee simple. Vide devant sect. 99. (Ant. 73. a.)

Addition in fee taile, &c. Here is implied a maxime in law, viz. that additio probat minoritatem; as it is vulgarly said, the younger sonne giveth the difference (2).

Sect. 294.

ITEM si trois joyntenants sont, & un de eux alien ceo que a luy affiert a un auter home en fee, en cest cas l'alienee est tenant en common ovesque les auters deux joyntenants; mes uncore les auters deux joyntenants sont seises des deux parts joyntment que remayne (3), & de ceux deux parts le survivor enter eux deux tient lieu, &c. (4)

ALSO if three joyntenants bee, and one of them alien that which to him belongeth to another man in fee, in this case the alienee is tenant in common with the other two joyntenants; but yet the other two joyntenants are seised of the two parts which remain joyntly (5), and of these two parts the survivor between them two holdeth place, &c.

THIS needeth no explication, onely the &c. in the end of this section implyeth, that the same law is where there be more joyntenants than three.

Sect.

(1) See post. 299. b. the first line.

(2) The difference of arms is meant. See more particularly as to this ant. 140. b.

(3) Que remayne not in L. & M. or Roh.

(4) No &c. in L. and M. or Roh.

(5) See sect. 304. & 312.

Sect. 295.

ITEM si soient deux joyntnants en fee, & l'un dona ceo que a luy affiert a un auter en le tayle⁽¹⁾ [& l'auter done ceo que a luy affiert a un auter en le taile] les donees sont tenants en common, &c.

ALSO if there bee two joyntenants in fee, and the one giveth that to him belongeth to another in tayle, and the other giveth that to him belongs to another in taile, the donees are tenants in common, &c.

Vide sect. 300.

THE &c. in the end of this section implyeth, that so it is when a lease for life or per auter vie is made, for in that case also the lessees are tenants in common.

Sect. 296.

SI terres sont do-nes a deux homes, &c.

Of this sufficient hath been spoken in the chapter [a] of joyntenants.

[a] Sect. 283. (Ant. 182. 2.)

Mes si terres sont dones a deux abbes, &c.

In this case of the two abbots in respect of their several capacities, albeit the words bee joynt, yet
the law [b] doth adjudge them to be severally seised (3).

(1) Saund. 319.

[b] 7. H. 7. 9. b. 16. H. 7. 15.
b. 3. H. 7. 11. 10. E. 4. 16. b.
5. H. 7. 25. 18. E. 3. 27. 49. E. 3.
25. b. (2. Ro. Abr. 91. 2. Saund.
319.)

Vide sect. 200.

The &c. in the end of this section implyeth, that so it is, if any [c] body politique or corporate, be they regular, as dead persons in law (whereof our author here speaketh) or secular: as if

[c] 4. H. 7. 45. 18. E. 3. 27. b.

MES si terres sont
dones a deux homes,

& a les heires de leur deux corps engendres, les donees ont joint estate pur terme de leur vies; & si chescun de eux ad issue & devy, leur issues tiendront en common, &c. Mes si

terres sont dones a deux abbes, sicome al abbe de Westminster & al abbe de

S. Albon, a aver & tener

a eux & a leur successors, en cest cas ils ont maintenant al commencement estate en common, & nemy joynt estate. Et le cause est, pur ceo que chescun abbe, ou auter souveraigne, de meason de religion, de-vant que il fuit fait abbe, ou souveraigne, &c. il fuit forsque come mort person en ley, et quant il est fait abbe (2), il est come un home person able en ley tant sole-ment a purchaser et aver

terres ou tenements ou

BUT if lands be given to two men, and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, the donees have a joynt estate for tearme of their lives; and if each of them hath issue and dye, their issues shall hold in common,

&c. But if lands be given to two abbots, as to the abbot of Westminster and to the abbot of Saint Albons, to have and to hold to them and to their successors, in this case they have presently at the beginning an estate in common, & not a joynt estate. And the reason is, for that every abbot or other soveraigne of a house of religion, before that hee was made abbot or soveraign, &c. was but as a dead person in law, and when he is made abbot, he is as a man person able in law onely to purchase and have lands or tenements or other things to the use of his house, and auters

(1) The words between brackets not in L. & M. or Roh.

(2) &c. in L. & M. and Roh.

(3) Here joint words are construed to make several estates in respect of the several capacities of the donees. In a former part vesting at several times makes joint words to operate severally. Ant. 84. a. and mr. justice Wyndham's case 5. Co. 7. a. there cited in a note. A few passages further, lord Coke gives an instance of joint words passing two entire things to two grantees in consequence of the several quality of the things granted. Post. 190. the case of a corrody. See further as to the effect from several capacities in the grantees, post. 191. b. and ant. 183. b. near the end.

autres choses al use de sa meason, et nemy a son proper use, come auter seculer home poit, & pur ceo al commencement de leur purchase ils sont tenants en common, et si l'un de eux devie, l'abbe que survesquist n'avera my tout per le survivour, mes le successeur de l'abbe que morust tiendra le moitie en common ove l'abbe que survesquist, &c.

not to his own proper use, as another secular man may, and therefore at the beginning of their purchase they are tenants in common, and if one of them die, the abbot which surviveth shall not have the whole by survivor, but the successor of the abbot which is dead shall hold the moiety in common with the abbot that surviveth, &c.

lands be given to two bishops, to have and to hold to them two and their successors: albeit the bishops were never any dead persons in law, but alwayes of capacite to take, yet seeing they take this purchase in their politique capacite, as bishops, they are presently tenants in common, because they are seised in severall rights, for the one bishop is seised in the right of his bishoprick of the one moiety, and the other is seised in the right of his bishoprick of the other moiety, and so by severall titles and in severall capacities, whereas joyntenants ought to have it in one and the same right and capacite, and by one and the same joynt title. The like law is, if lands be given to two parsons and their successors or to any other such like ecclesiasticall bodies politique or incorporate, as hath bin said.

(5. Co. 8. a. justice Wyndham's case.)

If a corodie be granted to two men and their heires, in this case, because the corodie is incertaine and cannot be severed, it shall amount to a severall grant to each of them one corodie; for the persons be severall, and the corodie is personall. (1)

Sect. 297.

ITEM si terres soient dones a un abbe & a un seculer home, a aver & tener a eux, s. al abbe & a ses successeurs, & al seculer home a luy & a ses heires, donques ils ont estate en common, causâ quâ suprà.

ALSO if lands be given to an abbot & a secular man, to have and to hold to them, viz. to the abbot and his successors, and to the secular man to him and to his heires, they have an estate in common, causâ quâ suprà.

AND so it is, if lands be given to the parson of Dale and to a lay man, to have and to hold to them, that is to say, to the parson and his successors, and to the lay man and his heires, they are presently tenants in common for the causes abovesaid. So of a bishop, &c. Et sic de similibus.

F. N. B. 49. I. 16. E. 3. joindre en action 27. 16. Aff. pl. 1. 2. R. 3. 16. 7. H. 7. 9. 13. H. 8. 14. (5. Co. 8.)

If lands be given to the king and to a subject, to have and to hold to them & to their heires, yet they are

Pl. Com. in feig. Barkley's case.

tenants in common, and not joyntenants; for the king is not seised in his naturall capacite, but in his royall and politique capacite, in jure coronæ, which cannot stand in joynture with the seisin of the subject in his natural capacite. So likewise if there be two joyntenants, and the crowne descend to one of them, the joynture is severed, and they are become tenants in common. But if lands be given to A. de B. bishop of N. and to a secular man, to have and to hold to them two and to their heires, in this case they are joyntenants; for each of them take the lands in their naturall capacite.

(Ant. 16. a.)

If lands be given to John bishop of Norwich and his successors and to John Overall doctor of divinity and his heires, being one and the same person, he is tenant in common [d] with himselfe. But our author's rules doe not hold in chattels reals or personals; for if a lease for yeares be made or a ward granted to an abbot and a secular man, or to a bishop and secular man, or if goods be granted to them, they are joyntenants, because they take not in their politique capacity. (2)

(Post. 310. b. 2. Ro. Abr. 91.) [d] 13. H. 8. 14. 16. H. 7. 15. 9. H. 6. 25. 45. E. 3. 25.

Sect.

(1) Lord Coke cites no authority for this. But in 8. E. 4. 17. there is a case, which tends to confirm and explain his doctrine as to a corrody's not being grantable to more than one. The case arose on grant of a corrody by Hen. 6. to two and the longer liver, where one was dead, the question being, whether during the life of the survivor this was sufficient to justify the prior of Friswith, on whom the corrody was chargeable, in refusing a new grantee sent by Edward the fourth. Upon this case NELE serjeant argued for the king, that a corrody which is for one man cannot be given to two, for two men cannot have the maintenance of one man; and thence he inferred, that the grant to the two was void. But the judges distinguished; for they all said, that if the corrody be to have certain bread and certain service, this may be granted to twenty men, &c. as to have 20 breads or 6 gallons of ale, &c. but that a corrody to sit every day in the hall of the prior and to be served as the men of the prior are, this cannot be granted to many, for every one of them would have as much as one had heretofore, which would not be reason, &c.—I was carried to this case in the year book of E. 4. by a reference in Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium, which in the commentary on the writs de corrodio habendo & de annua pensione contains a great variety of learning on this antiquated subject. See F. N. B. 230. F.

(2) In a former part lord Coke explains the reason of this to be, that no chattel can go in succession in the case of a sole corporation, no more than a lease for yeares to one and his heirs can go to heirs. Ant. 46. b. But there are exceptions to this rule. The king is mentioned as one by lord Coke ant. 90. a. Another is, where there is a special custom, as the care of the chamberlain of London, for orphanage monies. Fulwood's case 4. Co. 65. a. to which add Arundel's case Hob. 64. and ant. 10. 9. a. note 1. there. 92. a. And the case of a bond to a lay person and an abbot in F. N. B. 120. B.

Lib. 3. Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 298, 299, 300.

Sect. 298. (1)

AND the reason is, because they have severall freeholds and an occupation pro indiviso.
(Cro. Cha. 75. Ant. 183. a. b.)

Here is to be observed, that the habendum doth sever the premises that prima facie seemed to be joynt; for an expresse estate controllis an implied estate, as hath beene said.
(1. Ro. Abr. 89. 90. Ant. 183. b.)

ITEM si terres soient dones a deux a aver, et tener, s. l'un moitie a l'un et a ses heires, et l'auter moitie a l'auter et a ses heires, ils sont tenants en commun.

ALSO if lands bee given to two to have and to hold, s. the one moity to the one and to his heires, and the other moity to the other & to his heires, they are tenants in common.

Sect. 299.

11. Aff. pl. 16.

45. E. 3. 18. 44. Aff. 11.

21. E. 4. 22. b.

AND the like law is, if the feoffment bee made of a third part or a fourth part, &c. And if there be an advowson appendant, they are also tenants in common of the advowson. (3) And albeit it is said, that such a feoffment of a moitie or third part, &c. is not good without writing, for that (as they say) a man cannot create an uncertain estate in land by parol; yet is the law cleere, that such a feoffment is good by parol without writing, and such an uncertain estate shall passe by livery, and so it appeareth in our bookes.

If a verdict finde, that a man hath duas partes manerii, &c. in tres partes divisas, this shall not be intended to be in common; but if verdict bee in tres partes dividendas, then it seemeth that they are tenants in common by the intendment of the verdict. (4)

But if a man be seised of a manor whereunto an advowson is appendant, and maketh a feoffment of three acres parcell of the manor together with the advowson to two, to have and to hold the one moity together with the moitie of the advowson to the one and his heires, and the other moity together with the other moity of the advowson to the other and his heires, this cannot be good without deed; for the feoffor cannot annex the advowson to these three acres, and disannex it from the rest of the manor, without deed. (5)

21. E. 4. 22. b.

5. E. 3. 23. 67. Temp. E. 1. Feoffments 115. 34. E. 1. quar. impd. 179. 10. Eliz. Dyer 28. 22. E. 3. 6. Feoffments 116. 6. E. 3. 56. 39. E. 3. 38. 9. E. 3. 16. 17. E. 3. 3. 18. E. 3. 43. 43. E. 3. 26. 23. Aff. 8. 33. H. 6. 5. 2. (Post. 333. b. Cro. Cha. 433. Cro. Jam. 15.)

ITEM si home seise de certain terres enseoffa un auter de le moitie de mesme la terre sans ascun parlance de assignement ou limitation de mesme la moitie en severaltie al temps del feoffment, donques le feoffee & le feoffor tiendront leur parts de la terre en commun.

ALSO if a man seised of certaine lands infeoffe another of the moitie of the same land without any speech of assignement or limitation of the same moity in severaltie at the time of the feoffment, then the feoffee and the feoffor shall hold their parts of the land in common (2).

Sect. 300.

ET est ascavoir, que en mesme le maner come est avantdit de tenants en common, de terres ou tenements en fee simple, ou en fee taile, en mesme le maner poit estre

AND it is to be understood, that in the same manner as is aforesaid of tenants in common, of lands or tenements in fee simple, or in fee taile, in the same

(1) In L. & M. and Roh. this section is placed immediately after sect. 300.

(2) Brooke in his Abridgment title feoffments de terres pl. 75. cites this section of Littleton, and in support of it refers to various cases in Fitzherbert's Abridgment. See further Bro. Nouv. Caf. 154. 124. 6. Co. 1. and Dy. 187. a. pl. 5.

(3) See post. 307. a.

(4) In a case in the king's bench during lord Holt's time, the question was, how the surrender of a copyhold to the use of three sons and two daughters equally to be divided and their respective heirs ought to be construed; and this passage of the Coke upon Littleton was much relied upon by two of the judges as an authority to shew, that the words equally to be divided imply a tenancy in common. But lord Holt, who was for a jointenancy, observed, that no such matter appears in the case of 21. E. 4. here cited by lord Coke in the margin as his authority, and that he was not positive therein, but only wrote it as his conjecture. 1. P. Wms. 19. in the case of Fisher v. Wigg, which is also reported in Salk. 391. Com. 88. 92. 12. Mod. 296. and 1. L. Raym. 622. In the two latter books and in P. Williams this case is reported very much at large; and as the arguments on each side are very elaborate, it is an authority fit to be resorted to, wherever the doubt is, whether there shall be a tenancy in common or jointenancy. See also the case of the earl of Anglesey v. Ram. in Dom. Proc. Sept. 1727. Barker v. Gyles. 2. P. Wms. 280. and 3. Brown. Parl. Caf. 297. Hall v. Digby and others. 4. Brown. Parl. Caf. 224. Hawes v. Hawes. 1. Will. 165. and Gaskin v. Gaskin Mich. 18. G. 3. B. R. in Mr. Henry Cowper's Reports just published. In this last case the word equally was deemed sufficient to create a tenancy in common in a will; and lord Mansfield declared the opinion of the two judges who differed from Holt to be the better and more liberal one; and Mr. Justice Aston noticed, that equally to be divided had been adjudged a tenancy in common even in a deed. I am happy in having this early opportunity of citing a collection of reports, which promises so much new and useful information to the profession. See further as to the words sufficient to make a tenancy in common, particularly the cases in equity on the subject, 2. Com. Dig. 175. and continuation to the same work 201.

(5) Besides the references in the margin, see Dy. 48. b. pl. 3. and Doderide on Advowsons 30.

*de tenants a terme de vie. Sicome deux joyntenants sont en fee, et l'un lessa a un home ceo que a luy affiert pur terme de vie, et l'auter joyntenant lessa ceo que a luy affiert a un auter pur terme de vie, &c. les deux lesses sont tenants en common pur leur vies, &c. **

manner may it be of tenants for terme of life. As if two joyntenants bee in fee, and the one letteth to one man that which to him belongeth for terme of life, and the other joyntenant letteth that which to him belongeth to another for terme of life, &c. the said two lessees are tenants in common for their lives, &c.

Vid. Sect. 295. where this is sufficiently explained before.

Sect. 301.

Item si home lessa terres a deux homes pur terme de leur vies, & l'un granta tout son estate de ceo que a luy affiert a un auter, donques l'auter tenant a terme de vie, et celui a que le graunt est fait sont tenants en common, durant le temps que ambideux les lesses sont en vie.

Also if a man let lands to two men for terme of their lives, & the one grants all his estate of that which belongeth to him to another, then the other tenant for terme of life, and he to whom the grant is made, are tenants in common during the time that both the lessees be alive.

Et memorandum, que en tous autres tiels cases, coment que ne sont icy expressément moves ou specifies, si sont en semblable reason, sont en & semblable ley.

And memorandum, that in all other such like cases, although it be not here expressly moved or specified, if they be in like reason, they are in the like law.

of the Common Law, That wheresoever there is the like reason, there is the like law. Ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus; or ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus esse debet; for ratio est anima legis. And therefore ratio potest allegari deficiente lege. But it must be ratio vera et legalis et non apprens. And here it appeareth that argumentum à simili is good in law. Sed similitudo legalis est casuum diversorum inter se collatorum similis ratio, quod in uno similitum valet, valebit in altero, dissimilium dissimilis est ratio.

AND so it is if lands^(2. Roll. Abr. 89. 90. 1. Rep. 84. b.) bee letten to two for terme of their lives, et eorum alterius diutius viventi (1), and one of them granteth his part to a stranger, whereby the joynture is severed, and dyeth, here shall bee no survivour, but the lessor shall enter into the moiety, and the survivour shall have no advantage of these words, et eorum alterius diutius viventi, for two causes. First, for that the joynture is severed.^(4. Rep. 73. b. 2. Cro. 378. 417. 696.) Secondly, for that those words are no more then the Common Law would have implied without them, and expressed eorum quæ tacite insunt nihil operatur. Hereby it appeareth that in case of leases for life it is more beneficiall for the lessor to have the joynture severed then to have it continue.

Si soient en semblable reason sont en semblable ley. Here Littleton citeth one of the Maximes of the Common Law, That wheresoever there is the like reason, there is the like law. Ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus; or ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus esse debet; for ratio est anima legis. And therefore ratio potest allegari deficiente lege. But it must be ratio vera et legalis et non apprens. And here it appeareth that argumentum à simili is good in law. Sed similitudo legalis est casuum diversorum inter se collatorum similis ratio, quod in uno similitum valet, valebit in altero, dissimilium dissimilis est ratio.

* &c. not in L. and M. or Roh. not in Roh.

† Mesme added L. and M. but not in Roh.

‡ les added in L. and M. but || Semble L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Here lord Coke speaks only of a jointenancy for life; in which case, the words and the survivor of them are merely words of surpluage; as without them the lands, upon the death of one jointenant, go to the survivor. But in the creation of a jointenancy in fee, particular care must be taken not to insert these words. For the grant of an estate to two and the survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor, does not make them jointenants in fee; but gives them an estate of freehold during their joint lives, with a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor. Whether, during their joint lives, the fee continues in the grantor, or remains in abeyance; and whether they can convey their estate; and what is the proper mode of conveyance to be used for this purpose; are points which have been much agitated, and which, perhaps, are not yet quite settled. They were all mentioned in the case of Vick v. Edwards, 3. P. Will. 372. In that case, lands were devised to B. and C. and the survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor in trust to sell: lord chancellor Talbot held that the fee was in abeyance; that the trustees joining in a fine of the premises, might make a title to a purchaser by way of estoppel; and that the heirs joining might be of use, as it would supply the want of proving the will; but that, in every other respect, it would be void. Five years before this case was heard, the duchess of Marlborough having contracted to purchase an estate from the devisees in trust of Sir John Wittewronge's will, where the devise was worded in a manner similar to that upon which the case of Vick v. Edwards arose, application was made to Parliament for an act to enable the trustees to convey the estate to her.—In the preamble of the act it is mentioned, "That the devise of the premises by the will of Sir John Wittewronge was not effectual in the law to vest the absolute fee simple thereof in the trustees therein named, there being, by the words of the will, no fee vested but upon a contingency of survivorship, and which could not vest or take effect till after the death of two of the trustees." But notwithstanding the case of Vick and Edwards, it seems now to be the prevailing opinion that, in these cases, the fee is not in abeyance, but remains pending, and subject to the contingency, in the grantor and his heirs.—In support of which it is said, that the whole fee must be supposed to be in the grantor at the time of the conveyance; that so much of it as he does not part with continues in him; that in this case there is something undisposed of, viz. the intermediate estate, till by the death of one of the parties the remainder vests, and is executed in the survivor; which, therefore, continues in the grantor, as part of his old reversion: That if a remainder is limited on a contingency, and the contingency fails, the donor has the land again.—This is called his possibility of reverter; and that this possibility of reverter is in fact nothing but his old reversion. Besides, the law never supposes the fee to be in abeyance, unless where it is necessary to recur to that construction for preserving some estate or right. But that in the present case no such necessity exists. The cases of Carter and Barnardiston, 1. P. W. 505. Purefoy v. Rogers, 2. Saund. 380. and many other cases of authority, strongly favour this latter opinion. — As to the question, whether the contingent remainder,

Sect. 302.

SI deux joyntenants en fee, &c.

This needeth no explanation.

Et sur ceo case un question poert surder, &c.

Here Littleton maketh a question, and sheweth the reasons on both sides, and concludes with a Quare. When Littleton maketh a question, and sheweth the reason on both sides, the latter is ever his owne, [a] and the better. But time hath made this question without question; for now all agree, that the joynture is severed for the time, according to the latter opinion here set down in Littleton, whose reasons are unanswerable: for many times the change of the freehold makes an alteration or change of the reversion. As if tenant in taile, or the husband seised in the right of his wife, or tenant for life, make a lease for life of the lessee, in everie of these cases the lessor doth gaine a new reversion by wrong, as shall be said more at large in the chapter of Discontinuance; and if the elder brother grant the reversion (expectant upon a freehold) for life, it shall cause possessio fratris, as hath beene layd.

Per mesme le reason le reversion que est dependant sur mesme le franktenement est sever de le joynture, &c.

If two joyntenants in fee be, and they both joyne in a lease to an abbot and a secular man for term of their lives, here the reversion that is dependant upon severall freeholds is severed. And so it is if they joine in a lease to two secular men, to have and to hold the one moiety to the

*ITEM * si deux joyntenants en*

fee sont, et l'un lessa ceo que a luy affiert

a un auter pur terme

de sa vie, le tenant

a terme de vie durant

sa vie, et l'auter joyn-tenant que ne lessa

pas, sont tenants en common. Et sur ceo case un question puit

surder; † si come en

tiel case mittomus que

le lessor adissuet devie

vivant l'auter joyn-tenant son compari-on, et vivant le tenant

a terme de vie, le question poert estre tiel:

Si le reversion de la moitie ‡ que le lessor

avoit descendra a l'issue

le lessor, ou quel auter

joyntenant avera ||

cel reversion per le survivor? Afcuns ont dit en cest case, quel auter

joyntenant avera cel

reversion per le survivor: et leur reason est

tiel, scilicet que quant

les joyntenants fue-ront joyntment seises

§ en fee simple, &c. coment quel un de eux fist estate de ceo que a luy affiert pur terme de ¶ sa vie, et coment que il

adsever le franktene-

ment de ceo que a luy

ALSO if there bee

two joyntenants in fee, and the one letteth that to him belongeth to another for terme of his life, the tenant for term of life

during his life, and the other jointenant which did not let, are tenants in common. And upon this case a question may arise; as in such case admit that the lessor hath issue and die, living the other joyn-tenant his companion, and living the tenant

for life, the question may be this, Whether the reversion of the moiety which the lessor hath shall descend to the issue of the lessor, or that the other join-tenant shall have this reversion by the survivor? Some have said in this case, that the other jointenant shall have this reversion by the survivor: and their reason is this, scil. That when the jointenants were jointly seised in fee simple,

&c. although that the one of them make an estate of that to him belongeth for term of his life, and although that hee hath severed the affiert

Vid. 33. H. 6. 4. b.

[a] Vide Sect. 340. 375. 439. 440. 462. 463. 464. 482. 483. 648. 720. 729. Vid. Sect. 170.

Vid. Sect. 8. 7. H. 5. (Ant. 15. a.)

7. H. 7. 9.

(Ant. 189. b.)

* Si deux not in Roh. but in L. and M. Roh. || Cel reversion-ceo in L. and M. and Roh. and M. or Roh.

† Si not in L. and M. or Roh.

§ En-de in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added in L. and M. and Roh. § Sa not in L.

mainder, in this case, can be conveyed? it may be observed, that, supposing the reversion remains in the donor, if he and the donees join together in a common conveyance by lease and release, or bargain and sale, the estate for life of the donees will merge in the reversion, the contingent remainder be destroyed, and the fee effectually conveyed to the purchaser.—But, supposing the fee to be in abeyance;—on admitting it to be in the donor and his heirs, and supposing them not to join, the only modes of conveyance for this purpose now in use are a fine or a common recovery, in which the person entitled to the contingent fee comes in as vouchee. Lord Talbot, as was mentioned before, held, in the case of Vick v. Edwards, that the trustees joining in a fine might pass a good title to a purchaser by estoppel. It should be observed that, in this case, the word Estoppel must not be understood in its strict technical sense; all that is meant by it is, that the fine operates by way of conclusion upon, or bar to, the vendors, till the contingency happens upon which the fee is to arise, and then passes it to the purchaser. This doctrine is open to objection; but it seems to be generally acquiesced in; and, perhaps, the liberality of succeeding times may think a common conveyance by lease and release, or bargain and sale, sufficient in these cases to pass the fee, without either a fine or a common recovery.

affiert per le lease, uncore il n'ad sever le fee simple, mes le fee simple demurt a eux joyntment come il fuyt adevant. Et issint semble a eux, que l'auter joyntenant que survesquist, avera le reversion per le survivour, &c. Et auters ont dit le contrarie, & ceo est lour reason, scilicet, que quaut l'un des joyntenants lessa ceo que a luy affiert a un auter pur terme de sa vie, per tiel lease le franktenement est sever de le joynture. Et per mesme le reason le reversion que est dependant sur mesme le franktenement, est sever de le joynture. Auxy si le lessor ust reserve a luy un annual rent sur le leas, le lessor solement averoit le rent, &c. le quel est un prooffe que le reversion est solement en luy, et que l'auter n'ad riens en cel reversion, &c. Auxy si le tenant a term de vie fuit impleade, &c. & fist default apres default, donques le lessor ferroit de ceo solement receive a defendre son droit, et freehold of this which to him belongs by the lease, yet he hath not severed the fee simple, but the fee simple remains to them jointly as it was before. And so it seemeth to them, that the other joyntenant which surviveth shall have the reversion by the survivor, &c. And others have said the contrary, and this is their reason, scilicet, that when one of the join-tenants leaseth that to him belongeth, to another for terme of his life, by such lease the freehold is severed from the joynture. And by the same reason the reversion which is depending upon the same freehold is severed from the joynture. Also if the lessor had reserved to him an annual rent upon the lease, the lessor onely should have had the rent, &c. the which is a prooffe, that the reversion is onely in him, and that the other hath nothing in the reversion, &c. Also if the tenant for terme of life were impleaded, & maketh default after default, the lessor shall be only received for this, to defend one for life, and the other moiety to the other for life, for both these cases are warranted by the authority of Littleton.

If two joyntenants be of a lease for twenty one years, and the one of them letteth his part for certaine yeares, part of the terme, the joynture is severed, and survivor holdeth not place, for a terme for a small number of yeares is as high an interest as for many more yeares; and so was it resolved Hil. 18. El. Regina, in Communi Banco, * which I myselfe heard. (Post. Sect. 319. 199. a.)

If two coparceners be in fee, and the one make a lease for life, this is no severance of the coparcenary, for notwithstanding the lord shall make one avowrie upon them both.

But if two joyntenants be, and one maketh a lease for life, this is a severance of the joynture, as Littleton here taketh it, and several avowries shall be made upon them (1). (Ant. 167. a.)

Auxy si le lessor ust reserve un annual rent, le lessor solement avera le rent, &c. But if two joyntenants make a lease for life, reserving a rent to one of them, the rent shall enure to them both, because the reversion remains in jointure, unless the reservation be by deed indented, and then he onely to whom it is reserved shall have it. But if they make a lease by deed indented, reserving or saving the reversion to one of them, that is void, because they had the reversion before, but the rent is newly created. (Ant. 47. a.) (Post. 214. a.)

And so it is if such a lessee for life should surrender to one of them, it shall enure to them both, for that they have a joynt reversion. But if the lessee grant his estate to one of them, no part of it shal enure to his companion, because for the moiety belonging to his companion, it is in effect in

(1) Upon the death of either of the lessees, one moiety of the estate goes to the surviving lessee or his assignee, and the reversioner may enter upon the other moiety. See Dy. 67. fir W. Jones 55. 2. P. Will. 740. But this is to be understood where the jointenants are for life; for if the jointenants are in fee, and the jointure is severed, the right of survivorship is wholly taken away, and their shares go to their respective heirs. So if there be jointenants of a term of years, and the jointure is severed, their shares go to their respective personal representatives. See 1. Salk. 158. It should also be observed, that the case put by Littleton supposes the jointenant to grant his estate for his own life only; for if he grants it for a longer term than that of his own life, or for the life of any other person, it is a forfeiture. See 4th Leon. 236.

Lib. 3.

Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 302.

38. H. 6. 24. b. 2. R. 3. 11c.
Extinguishment 3.

(4 Lco. 187.)

Post. 352. b.)

(f) W. 2. cap. 3. 20. E. 1.
Statute de defensione
Juris. 13. R. 2. cap. 16.

in him to whom the grant is made, the reversion to the other in fee.

If two joyntenants make a lease for life, the remainder to his companion in fee, this is a good remainder of his moitie to his companion.

Donques le feoffor serra de ceo solement receive, &c.

Receive, Receipt, Receptio, is in many cases where a person, partie to a writ, or an estranger thereunto, to whom a reversion or remainder appertaineth, shall in default of another person be received to defend his or her freehold or inheritance, the law saith, Admittatur, &c. And this admission or receipt is given by sundry statutes

(f) (and this is that which the civilians call, Admissio tertie persone pro interesse). Et in casibus prædictis due concurrunt actiones: una inter potentem & tenentem, & alia inter tenentem, ius suum ostendentem & potentem.

Pur ceo que un franktenement ne poet per nature de joynture, estre annexe a un reversion. And this is the principal reason, and of this sufficient hath beene said in the chapter of Joyntenants, Sect. 291.

&c. This &c. in the end of this section, implieth any other heir lineal or collateral.

*son compaignon en cest case en nul manner serroit receive, le quel prove * le reversion del moity d'estre tantsolement en le lessor: et sic per consequens, si le lessour morust vivant le lessee per terme de vie, le reversion descendra al heire de lessour, et nemy deviendra a l'auter joyntenant per le survivor, Ideo quare. Mes en cest case si celuy joynte-nant que ad le frank-tenement ad issue et devie, vivant le lessor & lessee, donques il semble, que mesme
l'issue avera cest moitie*

*en demesne, et en fee per discent, pur ceo que † un franktenement ne poet per nature de joynture
estre annexe a un reversion, &c. Et il est certaine, que celuy que lessa fait seisie de le moitie en son de-mesne come de fee, et nul avera ascun joynture en son franktenement, Ergo ceo discendra a son issue, &c.
Sed quare.*

his right, and his companion in this case in no manner shall be received, the which pro-veth the reversion of the moitie to be onely in the lessor: and so by consequent, if the les-sour dieth living the lessee for terme of life, the reversion shall descend to the heir of the lessour, and shall not come to the other joyntenant by the survivor, Ideo quare. But in this case if that join-tenant which hath the freehold hath issue, & dies living the lessor and the lessee, then it seemeth that the same issue shall have this moitie in demesne, and in fee by descent, for that a freehold cannot by nature of joynture bee annexed to a reversion, &c. And it is certaine, that hee which leaseth was seised of the moitie in his demesne as of fee, and none shall have any joynture in his freehold, therefore this shall descend to his issue, &c. Sed quare.

* que added in L. and M. and Roh.

† ne not in L. and M. or Roh.

Sect. 303.

MES si issint soit que la ley en cest cas est tiel, que si le lessor devie vivant le lessée, & vivant l'auter joyntenant que ad le franktenement de l'auter moitie, que le reversion descendra al issue del lessor, dunque est le joynture & title que aucun de eux poit aver per le survivor, & le droit de le joynture anient, et tout ousterment defeat a tous jours. En mesme le maner est, si celui joyntenant que ad le franktenement devie vivant le lessor & le lessée, si la ley soit tiel que son franktenement & fee que il ad en le moitie descendra a son issue, dunque le joynture serra defeat a tous jours.

BUT if it be so that the law in this case be such, that if the lessor die living the lessée, and living the other joyntenant which hath the freehold of the other moity, that the reversion shall descend to the issue of the lessor, then is the joynture and title which any of them may have by the survivor, and the right of the joynture taken away, and altogether defeated for ever. In the same manner it is, if that joyntenant which hath the freehold dye living the lessor and the lessée, if the law be so as his freehold and fee which he hath in the moity shall descend to his issue, then the joynture shall be defeated for ever.

DOnque est le joynture & title, &c. & le droit de le joynture anient, &c.

And the reason of this is, for if the joynture be severed at the time of the death of him that first deceased, the benefit of survivor is utterly destroyed for ever, as hath beene said (*) afore in the chapter of Joyntenants. But in the case aforesaid, if tenant for life dyeth in the life of both the joyntenants, they are joyntenants againe as they were before.

If two joyntenants be in fee, and the one letteth his part to another for the life of the lessor and the lessor dieth, some say that his part shall survive to his companion, for by his death the lease was determined. And others hold the contrary; and their reason is, first, for that at the time of his death the joynture was severed, for so long as he lived the lease continued. And secondly, that notwithstanding the act of any one of the joyntenants there must be equall benefit of survivor as to the freehold. But here if the other joyntenant had first died, there had been no benefit of survivor to the lessor without question.

Sect. 304.

ITEM, si trois joyntenants sont, & l'un releffa per son fait a un de ses companions tout le droit que il avoit en le terre, dunque ad celui a que le releas est fait le tierce part de les ter-

AND if three joyntenants be, & the one release by his deed to one of his companions all the right which he hath in the land, then hath he to whom the release is made the third part of

UPON this case these two things are to be observed (1). First, that in this case this release doth enure by way of mitten l'estate, and not (*) by way of extinguishment, for then the release should enure to his companion also, and he is in the per by him that maketh the release. [2] But if hee had released to the other two, then had it wrought no degree

(Post. 318. a. 6. Rep. 78. b. Ant. 185. a.)
(*) 9 Eliz. Dyer 263.
19. H. 6. 17.

[1] 40. E. 3. 41. 13. E. 3.
tit. Carr.

35. E. 3. release 43. 22 H. 6. 42.
24. E. 3. Briefe 28. 19. H. 6. 17.
37. H. 6. 5. 28. H. 6. 2. 37. H. 8.
Alienation 31. 8. H. 4. 8. 10. E.

but 4. 3.

(1) Some observations on Sir Edward Coke's commentary upon this and the four succeeding Sections will be offered in the chapter of Releases.

(Post. 385. a.)

[6] 9. Eliz. Dyer 263. 19. H. 6.

27.

(Ante 9. b.)

but in supposition of law, for many purposes they to whom the release is made (as hath beene said) shall bee supposed in from the first feoffor, as they shall deraigne the first warrantie for the whole. [6] The second thing to bee observed is, that he to whom the release is made hath a fee simple without these words (heires), as hath beene touched in the first chapter of the first booke; for that he to whom the release is, is seised per my, & per tout, of the fee and inheritance, as hath been said in the chapter of Joyntenants. And note, the like law is between coparceners: and further, if there be two coparceners, and the one hath issue twentie daughters and dieth, the other may release to any one of the daughters her whole part, albeit she to whom the release is, hath not an equall part; but for the privitie, and the individed estate, the release is good.

But if two joyntenants be of twenty acres, and the one maketh a feoffment of his part in eightene acres, the other cannot release his entire part; but only in two acres, for that the joynture is severed for the residue.

*res per force de le dit releas, & il & son companion teigneront les autres deux parts * en joynture. Et quant al tierce part, que il ad per force de releas, il tient cel tierce part oue luy mesme & son companion en commun.*

the lands by force of the said release, and he and his companion shall hold the other two parts in joynture. And as to the third part, which he hath by force of the release, he holdeth that third part with himselfe and his companion in common.

Sect. 305.

THIS is evident upon that which hath beene said before. [c] And it is to bee understood, that a release may enure foure manner of wayes. First, by way of mitter l'estate, as here it appeareth. Secondly, by way of mitter la droit. Thirdly, by way of extinguishment. Fourthly, by way of creation or enlargement of an estate, as hereafter in this chapter shall appeare. And it is to bee observed, that upon a release that creates or enlargeth an estate, or enures by way of mitter l'estate, a rent may bee reserved, but not upon a release that enureth by way of mitter la droit, or which enures by way of extinguishment.

The (Ec.) in the end of this section implieth a diversitie

ET est ascavoir, que aucun foits † un releas prendra effect, & urera par mitter l'estate de celui que fist le releas a celui a que le releas est fait, sicome en le cas avant dit, & auxy sicome joynt estate soit fait a le baron & sa feme, & a la tierce person ‡, & la tierce person releffa tout son droit que il ad || a le baron, adonque ad le baron la moitie que le tierce avoit, & la feme de ceo n'ad riens. Et si en tiel case le tierce releffa § a la feme nient noismant le baron en le releas, donques ad la feme le moitie que le tierce avoit, &c. & le baron n'ad riens de ceo forsque

AND it is to be observed, that sometimes a deed of release shal take effect, & enure to put the estate of him which makes the release to him to whom the release is made, as in the case afore-said, and also, as if a joynt estate bee made to the husband and wife, and to a third person, and the third person release all his right which hee hath to the husband, then hath the husband the moitie which the third had, and the wife hath nothing of this. And if in such case the third release to the wife not naming the husband in the release, then hath the wife the moitie which the en

* En jointure—jointment, in L. and M. and Roh. in L. and M. || &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† Un fait et, added in L. and M. and Roh. § &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ Que added

en droit sa feme, pur ceo que en tiel case le release vrera de faire estate a celuy a que le release est fait, de tout ceo que affiert a celuy que fait le release, &c.

that which belongeth to him which maketh the release, &c.

third had, &c. And the husband hath nothing of this but in right of his wife, because that in this case the release shal enure to make an estate to whom the release is made of all that which maketh

between a release which enures by way of mitter l'estate (whereof Littleton here speaketh) and a release that enures by way of extinguishment: for of a release enuring by way of extinguishment made to the husband, the wife shall take benefit, or to the wife, the husband shall take benefit, as hereafter shall more at large be said.

Sect. 306.

*ET en ascun cas un releas vrera de mitter tout le droit que il que fait le releas ad a celuy a que le release est fait. Sicome home seise de certain tenements est disseisee per deux disseisors, si le disseisee per son fait releas tout son droit, &c. a un des disseisors, donque celuy a que le releas est fait avera & tiendra tous les tenements a luy solement, et oustera son companion de chescun occupation de ceo. Et le cause est, pur ceo que les deux disseisors fueront eins * encounter la ley, et quant un de eux happe le releas de celuy que ad droit d'entre, &c. cest droit en tiel cas + vestera en celuy a que le releas est fait, et est en tiel plyte, sicome † il que avoit droit || avoit enter, et luy enseffia*

AND in some case a release shal enure to put all the right which he who maketh the release hath to him to whom the release is made. As if a man seised of certaine tenements is disseised by two disseisors, if the disseisee by his deed release all his right, &c. to one of the disseisors, then hee to whom the release is made shal have and hold al the tenements to him alone, and shal oust his companion of every occupation of this. And the reason is, for that the two disseisors were in against the law, and when one of them happeth the release of him which hath right of entry, &c. this right in such case shal vest in him to whom the release is made, and he is in like plite, as hee which

HERE Littleton pursueth the second part of his division, viz. where a release shall enure by way of mitter le droit.

Disseisee per deux disseisors, &c. The like law is, where there bee two joynt abators or intrudors which come in meere by wrong. But if two men doe usurpe by a wrongfull presentation to a church, and their clarke is admitted, instituted and inducted, and the rightfull patron releaseth to one of them, this shall enure to them both, for that the usurpers come not in meere by wrong, but their clarke is in by admission, and institution, which are judiciall acts. (d) And therefore an usurpation shal worke a remitter to one that hath a former right.

Donques celuy a que le release est fait avera & teignera tous les tenements, &c. Here by operation of law presently upon the deliverie of the release the whole freehold and inheritance is vested in him to whom the release is made, and al the state that the other disseisor had, wholly devested: for right and wrong cannot consist together, but the wrongfull estate giveth place to the rightfull. And the reason hereof is for that, as hath been said, the disseisor to whom the release was

(c. Roll. Abr. 409. 414. Post. 276. a.)

(d) Fitz. N. B. 35. in 11. R. 2. quare imp. 148. (1 Roll. Abr. 661. 662. Post. 368. a. Ant. 180. b. 181. a.)

* Ses tenements per tort, per eux fait, added in L. and M. and Roh. fil in L. and M. and Roh.

† Vesteri-vest in L. and M. and Roh. || &c. added, avoit enter, et, not in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ II

Lib. 3. Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 307, 308.

(c) Brit. fol. 116. 26. Aff. pl. 39.
39. E. 3. 29. 21. H. 6. 41. 22. H.
6. 22. 7. E. 4. 25. 9. E. 4. 6.
11. H. 7. 12. 20. H. 7. 5. 21.
H. 7. 18. 12. E. 4. tit. Discon-
tin. 1. 9. H. 6. 37. 21. H. 6.
82.

was made was seized per my Et per tout, whereunto when the right commeth it excludeth the wrong (c), for right which is lawfull, and wrong that is contrary to law, cannot stand together.

En tiel plite, sicome il que avoit droit, avoit entrer & luy enfeoffe, &c.

This (&c.) doth imple that this is true secundum quid, but not simpliciter; for as to the holding out of the joynt disseisor, it amounts to as much as if he had entred and infeoffed him to whom the release is made, but it doth not amount to an entrie and feoffment simpliciter to all purposes, as shall be said hereafter in his proper place in the chapter of Releases.

*Et la cause est, pur ceo que il que avoit adevant estate per tort, scilicet, per disseisin, &c. ad ore per le releas un estate droiturel. **

hath the right had en-tred & enfeoffed him, &c. And the reason is,
for that he which before had an estate by wrong, scilicet, by disseisin, &c. hath now by the release a rightful estate.

Sect. 307.

HERE Littleton speaketh of the third kind of releases. And the reason of this diversitie (implied in the (&c.) in the end of this section,) between the dissei-sors & their feoffees, is for that the feoffees comming in by title and purchase, are intended in law to have a warrantie (which is much esteemed in law); and therefore lest the warrantie should be avoided, the release shall ensure to both the feoffees in favour of purchasors, and so the right and benefit of every one saved. (f) And in ancient time if the disseisor had made a feoffment in fee, or a gift in taile, or a lease for life, and the feoffee, donee, or lessee had continued in seisin quietly a yeare and a day, the entrie of the disseisor had not been lawfull upon him; and the reason was, for the benefit and safeguard of the warranty (which was intended by law) should have bene destroyed by the entrie. But hereof also more shall be said in his proper place in the chapter of Releases.

(f) 2. H. 3. Aff. 432. 1. Aff.
13. 9. Aff. 15. 21. 21. Aff. 28.
17. Aff. 68. 32. 29. Aff. 54. 43.
Aff. 17. 40. E. 3. 24. 52. E. 3.
21. 3. R. 2. entry cong. 38.
13. E. 3. tit. Aff. 9. 12. Aff. 20.

*ET en ascun cas un releas vrera per voy d'extinguishment, et en tiel case tiel releas aydera le joyntenant a que le releas ne fuit fait, auxybien come † luy a que le releas fuit fait.
Sicome ‡ un home
soit disseise, & le dis-seisor fait feoffment a deux homes en fee, § si
|| le disseisee releassa per son fait a un de les feoffees, donques ¶ cel releas vrera a ambideux les feoffees, pur ceo que les feoffees ont estate per la ley, scilicet, per feoffment, et nemy per tort fait a nulluy, &c. (1)*

AND in some case
a release shall inure by way of extin-guishment, and in such case such release shall aide the joyntenant to whom the release was not made, as well as him to whom the release was made. As if a man be disseised, and the disseisor makes a feoffment to two men in fee, if the disseisee release by his deed to one of the feoffees,
this release shal enure
to both the feoffees, for that the feoffees have an estate by the law, scilicet, by feoff-ment, and not by wrong done to any, &c.

Sect. 308.

EN mesme le maner est, si le disseisor fait un lease a un home pur terme de sa vie, le remain-

IN the same manner it is, if the disseisor maketh a lease to a man for terme of his life, the re-der

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.
in Roh. § Si not in L. and M. or Roh.

† Luy a celuy in L. and M. and Roh.
|| Et added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ Si added in L. and M. but not ¶ Cel-tiel in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In the 42d and 44th chapters of Britton, is much curious learning on the estate of a disseisor, and his different situations previous and subsequent to his acquiring an established possession, and previous and subsequent to his acquiring a title to his estate, and on the consequential differences of the situation and remedies of the disseisee in these respects.—These chapters throw great light upon Sir Edward Coke's commentary on this section, and strongly confirm the observations made by Lord Mansfield, in the famous case of Taylor v. Horde, 1 Burr. 60.

der ouster a un auter en fee, si le disseisee releffa a le tenant a terme de vie tout son droit, &c. cel release vrera auxy bien a celuy en le remainder come a la tenant a terme de vie. Et la cause est, pur ceo que le tenant a terme de vie vient a son estate per course de ley, & pur ceo cel release vrera, et prent effect per voy d'extinguishment de droit de celuy que releffa, &c. Et per cel release le tenant a terme de vie n'ad plus ample ne greinder estate, que il avoit devant le release fait a luy, et le droit celuy que releffa est tout ousterment extinct. Et entant que cest release ne poit enlarge l'estate de le tenant a terme de vie, il est reason que cel release vrera a celuy en le remainder, &c.

Pluis serra dit de releases en le chapitre de Releases.

Cest release vrera auxy bien a celuy en le remainder, come a le tenant a terme de vie, &c.

Tout son droit, &c.

mainder over to another in fee, if the disseisee release to the tenant for terme of life all his right, &c. this release shall inure as well to him in the remainder, as to the tenant for terme of life. And the reason is, for that the tenant for life commeth to his estate by course of law, and therefore this release shall enure and take effect by way of extinguishment of the right of him which releaseth, &c. And by this release the tenant for life hath no ampler nor greater estate than hee had before the release made him, and the right of him which releaseth is altogether extinct. And inasmuch as this release cannot enlarge the estate of the tenant for life, it is reason that this release shal enure to him in the remainder, &c.

(2. Roll. Abr. 400.)

More shall be said of releases in the chapter of Releases.

Of this and the rest of this Section, for avoyding of repetition, more shall be said in his proper place in the chapter of Releases.

Here by this (&c.) is implied, title, demand, and other words which may transerre the right, &c. Also here is implied of in or to the land.

Sect. 309.

ITEM si soient deux parceners, & l'un alien ceo que a luy affiert a un auter, donques l'auter parcenier et l'alienee sont tenants en common.

ALSO if two parceners be, and the one alieneth that to her belongeth, to another, then the other parcenier and the alienee are tenants in common.

This is evident, and needeth no explication.

Sect. 310.

ITEM nota, que tenaunts en common soient estre per † title de prescription, sicome l'un et ses auncesors, ou ceux que estate il*

ALSO note, that tenants in common may bee by title of prescription, as if the one and his ancessors, or they whose ad

* Nota que not in L. and M. or Roh.

† Title de not in Roh.

ad en un moity ont tenus en common mesme le moitie, ove l'auter tenant que ad l'auter moitie & ove ses auncestors ou ove ceux que estate il ad pro indiviso, de temps dont memory ne curt, &c. Et divers auters manners poient faire et causer homes d'estre tenaunts en common, que ne sont icy expresses † &c.*

11. E. 3. Trans. 212. 13. E. 5.
Bribe 674. 8. H. 6. 16. b. lib.
Annot. 23.

Of this, besides Littleton, there is good authoritie in law, as there is for all his other cases throughout his three bookes; but joyntenants cannot be by prescription, because there is survivor betweene them, but not betweene tenants in common.

The two (&c.) in this section are evident.

estate hee hath in one moitie have holden in common the same moitie with the other tenant which hath the other moity, and with his ancestors, or with those whose state he hath undivided, time out of minde of man. And divers other manners may make and causemen to be tenants in common, which are not here exprest, &c. (1)

Sect. 311.

1. Post. 200. Cro. Jac. 231. Noy
23. Post. Litt. Sect. 314.

IN this section wee learne two things: first, that in reall actions, and in actions also that are mixt with the personalty, tenants in common shall sever in action, because they have severall freeholds, and claime in by severall titles; and therefore as they shall bee severally by others impleaded, so shall they severally implead others in al real and mixt actions, unless it be in case of necessity for a thing entire, as hereafter in this chapter shall appeare. And Littleton here putteth the case of the assise which is mixt with the personalty, and therefore hee needed not to put any case of any præcipe quod reddat; for if it bee so in case of assise, a fortiori in writs of higher nature, which is necessarily implied in the (&c.) Now of suits that found in the realty, and of personall actions, Littleton speaketh hereafter in this chapter.

4. E. 4. 18. b.
(Ant. 180. b.)

ITEM en ascun cas tenants en common voyent aver de leur possession severall actions, et en ascun cas ils joindront en un action. Car si sont deux tenants en common, et ils sont disseisies, ils doient aver † deux assises, et nemy un assise; car chescun de eux covient aver un assise de son moitie, &c. Et la cause est, pur ceo que tenants en common furent seises, &c. per severall titles. Mes autrement est de joyntenants; car si soyent vint joyntenants, et ils sont disseisies, ils averont en tous leur nesmes forsque un assise, pur ceo que ils n'ont forsque un joynt title.

ALSO in some case tenants in common ought to have of their possession severall actions, and in some cases they shall joyne in one action. For if two tenants in common be, and they be disseised, they must have two assises, and not one assise; for each of them ought to have one assise of his moity, &c. & the reason is, for that the tenants in common were seised, &c. by severall titles. But otherwise it is of jointenants; for if twenty jointenants be, and they bee disseised, they shall have in al their names but one assise, because they have not but one joynt title.

The second thing here to bee learned, is the diversitie betweene tenants in common and joyntenants, which both of it selfe, and upon that which hath been said, is apparant.

Sect.

* &c. added in Roh.

† &c. not in Roh.

‡ Envers le disseisor added in Roh.

(1) When lands are given in undivided shares to two or more for particular estates, so as that upon the determination of the particular estates, in any of those shares, they remain over to the other grantees, and the reversioner or remainder-man is not let in till the determination of all the particular estates, then the grantees take their original shares as tenants in common, and the remainders limited to them on the determination of the particular estates, are known by the appellation of cross remainders.—These remainders may be raised both by deed and will: in deeds they can only be created by expresse words, but in wills they may be raised by implication.—In the case of Gilbert v. Witty, Cro. Jac. 655, it was said by Justice Dodderidge, that cross remainders should never be raised by implication between more than two. This doctrine received some countenance from what was said by the courts in the cases of Cole v. Levingstone 1. Ventris 224. Holmes v. Mzyneil, Sir Thomas Raymond 452, and some other cases. But it seems entirely exploded by the cases of Burden v. Burville. B. R. East. Term. 23. Geo. 3. Duke of Richmond v. Earl of Cadogan, determined in the Court of Chancery in May 1773. Wright v. Lord Cadogan, Holford, and others, B. R. Easter Term 1773. Cowp. 31, and some other subsequent cases. It seems however to be admitted in these cases, that to raise cross remainders between more than two, stronger implication is required, than to raise them between two only.

(2) The reader will find what Littleton and his commentator say on this subject confirmed and exemplified by the cases cited in Viner and Bacon's Abridgments, and Comyns's Digest, under the title Conditions.

Sect. 312.

ITEM si soient trois joyntenants, & un release a un de ses companions tout le droit que il ad, &c. et puis les * auters deux sont disseises de l'entiertie, &c. en cest case les deux auters averont † severalx assises, &c. en cest forme, scilicet, ils averont en leur ambideux nosmes un assise de les deux parts, &c. pur ceo que les deux parts ils teignent jointment al temps de le disseisin. Et quant a le tierce part, celui a que le release fuit fait, covient aver de ceo un assise en son nosme demesne, pur ceo que ‡ il (quaunt a mesme le tierce part) est de ceo tenant in common, &c. pur ceo que il vient a cel || tierce part per force del release, et nemy tant solement per force del joyn-ture.

ALSO if three joyntenants bee, (Noy 13. Ant. 193.) and one release to one of his fellowes all the right which hee hath, &c. and after the other two be disseised of the whole, &c. in this case the two others shall have severall assises, &c. in this manner, viz. they shall have in both their names an assise of the two parts, &c. because the two parts they held joyntly at the time of the disseisin. And as to the third part, he to whom the release was made, ought to have of that an assise in his owne name, for that hee (as to the same third part) is thereof tenant in common, &c. because hee commeth to this third part by force of the release, and not only by force of the joyn-ture.

This is put for an example (which ever doth illustrate the rule) and is evident of it selfe: and the (&c.) in this section needeth no further explication.

Sect. 313.

ITEM quant a fuer des actions que touchant § le realtie, y sont diversities perenter parceners que sont eins per divers descents, & tenaunts en common. Car si ¶ home seise de certaine terre en fee ad issue deux  files †† et morust, et les files entrent, &c. et chescun de eux ad issue un fits, & devieront sauns partition fait enter eux, per que l'un moity descendist a le fits d'un parcener, & l'auter moitie descendist al fits d'auter parcener, et ils

ALSO to the suing of actions (Ant. 164. a.) which touch their realty, there bee diversities betweene parceners which are in by divers descents, and tenants in common: for if a man seised of certain land in fee, hath issue two daughters and dyeth, and the daughters enter, &c. and each of them hath issue a sonne, and die without partition made between them, by which the one moity descends to the sonne of the one parcener, and the other moity descends to the entrent

* Auters not in Roh. † &c. added in Roh.
‡ Home—deux parceners in Roh.
&c. et chescun de eux ad issue un fits, not in Roh.

† Il not in Roh.
 Files—fies in Roh.

|| Tierce not in Roh. § En ad-
†† Et morust et les files entrent,

Lib. 3.

(8. Rep. 86. b.)

Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 314.

*entront et occupient en common et sont disseises, en cest case ils averont en leur deux nosmes un assise, et nemy deux assises. Et la cause est, que coment que ils veignent eins per divers descents, &c. uncore ils sont parceners, et brieve de Partitione faciendâ gist enter eux. Et ils ne sont parceners, eyant regarde ou respect tant seulement a * le seisin et possession de leur meres, mes ils sont parceners pluis, eyant respect a l'estate que descendist de leur ayeul a leur meres, car ils ne poyent estre parceners si leur meres ne fueront parceners avant, † &c. Et issint a tiel respect et consideration, scilicet, quant a le primer descent que fuit a leur meres, ils ont un title en parcenarie, le quel fait eux parceners. Et auxy ils ne sont forsque come un heire a leur common auncestor, scilicet, a leur ayeul, de que la terre descendist a leur meres. Et pur ceus causes devant partition enter eux, &c. ils averont un assise, coment que ils veignent eins per severaux descents ‡.*

sonne of the other parcener, and they enter and occupie in common and bee disseised, in this case they shall have in their two names one assise, and not two assises. And the cause is, for that albeit they come in by divers descents, &c. yet they are parceners, and a writ of partition lieth betweene them. And they are not parceners, having regard or respect onely to the seisin and possession of their mothers, but they are parceners rather, having respect to the estate which descended from their grandfather to their mothers, for they cannot bee parceners if their mothers were not parceners before, &c. And so in this respect and consideration, viz. as to the first descent which was to their mothers, they have a title in parcenarie, the which makes them parceners. And also they are but as one heire to their common ancestor, viz. to their grandfather, from whom the land descended to their mothers. And for these causes, before partition between them, &c. they shall have an assise, although they come in by severall descents.

(Ant. 164. a.)
Vid. Sect. 241.

This, upon that which hath beene said in the chapter of Parceners, is evident: where you may see excellent points of learning, and diversities concerning this matter; all which are here either expressed or implied, as the studious and diligent reader will observe.

Sect. 314.

EN cest case quant a le rent et liver de pepper, ils averaunt deux assises, & quant a l'esperver ou le cheval forsque un assise.

But for the better understanding hereof it is to bee knowne, that if two te-

ITEM si sont deux tenants en common de certaine terre en fee, et ils donneront cel terre a un home en le taile, ou lefferont a un home pur terme

*ALSO if there bee two tenants in common of certaine lands in fee, and they give this land to a man in taile, or let it to one for terme of life, ren-
de*

* Le—leur in Roh.

† &c. not in Roh.

‡ &c. added in Roh.

de vie, rendant a eux annuellement un certaine rent, & un liver de pepper, & un espervier ou un cheval, & ils sont seizes de cest service, & puis tout le rent est a derere, & ils distreignent pur ceo, & le tenant a eux fait rescous. En cest cas quant a le rent & liver de pepper ils a-veront deux assises, & quant a l'espervier ou le cheval forsque un assise. Et la cause pur que ils a-veront deux assises, quant a le rent & liver de pepper, est ceo, en-tant que ils fueront te-nants en common en severall titles, et quant ils fieront un done en le tayle ou leas pur terme de vie, s'avant a eux le reversion, & rendant a eux certaine rent, &c. tiel reservation est inci-dent a leur reversion, & pur ceo que leur rever-sion est en common, & per severall titles, sicome leur possession fuit de-vant le rent & outers choses que poient estre severses, et fueront a eux reserves sur le done, ou sur le leas, queux sont incidents per le ley a leur reversion, tiels choses issint reserves fueront de la nature del reversion. Et entant que le reversion est a eux dring to them yearely a certaine rent, & a pound of pepper, and a hawke or a horse, and they bee seised of this service, and afterwards the whole rent is behind, and they distraine for this, and the tenant maketh rescouse. In this case as to the rent and pound of pepper they shall have two assises, and as to the hawke or the horse but one as-size. And the reason why then they shall have two assises as to the rent and pound of pepper is this, insomuch as they were tenants in common in severall titles, and when they made a gift in taile or lease for life, saving to them the reversion, and rendering to them a certaine rent, &c. such reservation is incident to their reversion, and for that their reversion is in common, and by severall titles, as their possession was before the rent and other things which may be severed, and were re-served unto them upon the gift, or upon the lease, which are incidents by the law to their rever-sion, such things so re-se-rved were of the nature of the reversion. And in as much as the reversion is to them in common by severall titles, it beho-nants in common (Ante 147. b.) bee, and they grant a Pl. Com. Hill & Granges case rent of 20 shillings 171. Vide Sect. 219. per annum out of (5. Rep. 7. b. Plow. 289. b.) their land, the grantee shall have two rents of 20 shillings, for that every man's grant shall bee taken most strongly against himselfe, & therefore they be severall grants in law.

But if they two make a gift in taile, a lease for life, &c. refer- (5. Rep. 111. Ant. 148. b.) ving twenty shillings rent to them and their heires, they shall have but one 20 shillings, for they shall have no more then themselves reserved: and the do-nee or lessee shal pay but 20 shillings according to their own expresse reservation:
and albeit the refervation of rents severable bee in joynt words, yet in respect of the severall rever-sions the law makes thereof a severance.
Now for the rent, as namely 20 shillings or a pound of pepper may bee severed, the one tenant in common may have an assise for the moiety of 20 shillings, and the moitie of a pound of pepper, de medietate unius libr' piperis, but he cannot have an assise of ten shillings, or de dimidio libræ piperis. But for the hawke or horse, albeit they be tenants in common, they shal joyne in an assise, for otherwise they should bee without remedie, for one of them cannot make his plaint in assise of the moiety of a hawke, or of a horse, for the law will never suffer any man to demand any thing against the order of nature

Vide 16. Ass. pl. 1. 16. E. 3.
Joyndre en action. 27.

Lib. 3.

Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 315.

Regula.
Vide Sect. 129.

[1] Lib. 5. fol. 21.
Regula.

Regula.

(2. Cro. 159. Ant. 137. 2. Hob.
43. 267.)

(*) 3. E. 3. 19. 2.
(1. Roll. Abr. 107. Noy 184.
Ant. 137. 2. Rep. 68.)

38. E. 3. 35.
Regula.

[m] 5. H. 7. 8. 13. E. 2. quare
imp. 170. 33. H. 6. 11. 6. E. 4.
10. 15. E. 3. darr. presentment.
10.
[n] 6. H. 4. 6. 7.
45. E. 3. 10. 30. H. 6. Aff. 39.
18. E. 3. 56.
(Moor 184. 1. Roll. Rep. 243.)

18. E. 3. 56.

29. E. 3. 51. 43. E. 3. 24.
46. E. 3. 27. 5. H. 4. 3.
34. H. 4. 31. 3. H. 6. 57.
12. H. 6. 22. 22. H. 6. 14.
18. E. 4. 30. 2. R. 3. 16.
10. H. 7. 27. 21. H. 7. 22.
37. H. 6. 35. 21. E. 4. 12.

ture or reason, as before it appeareth by Littleton, section 129.
Lex enim spectat naturæ ordinem. Also the law will never enforce a man to demand that which he cannot recover, and a man cannot recover [1] the moitie of a hawke, horse, or of any other entire thing:
Lex neminem cogit ad vana, seu inutilia. But in that case they shall joyne in assise, and the reason is, Ne cu- ria Domini Regis de-ficeret in justitiâ exhibendâ, or Lex non debet
deficere conquerentibus in justitiâ exhibendâ.
And if they should not joyne, they should have damnum & inju- riam, and yet should have no remedie (*) by law, which should be inconvenient, but the law will, that in every case where a man is wronged, and endammaged, that he shall have remedie.
Aliquid conceditur ne
injuria remaneret im-punita quæ aliâs non concederetur.

[m] And tenants in common shall joyne in a quare impedit, because the presentation to the advowson is entire.

[n] Also tenants in common of a feignory shall joyne in a writ of right of ward, and ravishment of ward for the bodie, because it is entire.

If two tenants in common be of the wardship of the bodie, and one doth ravish the ward, and the one tenant in common releases to the ravisher, this shall goe in benefit of the other tenant in common, and he shall recover the whole, and this release shall not be any barre to him. And so it is if two tenants in common be of an advowson, and they bring a quare impedit, and the one doth release, yet the other shall sue forth, and recover the whole presentment.

Two tenants in common shall joyne in a detinue of charters, and if the one be non-suit, the other shall recover.

It is said that tenants in common shall joyne in a Warrantia Chartæ, but sever in voucher.

Moitie de chival, &c. Here is implied or any other entire rent or service.

Per divers titles, &c. That is by severall titles, and not by one joynt title, as hath beene said.

en common per severall titles, il covient que le rent, et le liver de pepper, queux poient estre severs, soynt a eux en common, et per severall titles. Et de ceo ils averont deux assises, et chescun de eux en son assise ferra son plaint de le moitie de le rent, et de le moitie del liver de pepper. Mes de l'esper-ver ou de chival, que ne poient estre severs, ils averont forsque un assise, car home ne poit faire un plaint en assise de le moitie d'un esper-ver, ne de le moitie d'un chival, &c. En mesme le maner est d'auter rents & d'auter services que tenants en common ount en grosse per divers titles, &c.

veth that the rent & the pound of pepper which may be severed, be to them in common and by severall titles. And of this they shall have two assises, and each of them in his assise shall make his plaint of the moitie of the rent, & of the moitie of the pound of pepper. But of the hawke or of the horse, which cannot be severed, they shal have but one assise, for a man cannot make a plaint in an assise of the moitie of a hawke, nor of the moitie of a horse, &c. In the same manner it is of other rents and of other services which tenants in common have in grosse by divers titles, &c.

Sect. 315.

*A*Veront tiels ac- *I*TEM, quant al *A*LSO, as to actitions personells actions personnels ons personnels tejointment en tous lour tenants en common nants in common may nosmes, &c. By this averont tiels actions have such action per-per

*personals joyntment en tous leur nosmes, * sicome de trespass, ou † de offence que touche leur tenements en common, sicome de bruser ‡ leur measons, || de enfreindre de leur closes, de pasture, degaster, & de fouler § des herbes, de couper leur bois,  de pischer en leur pischarie, & hujusmodi. †† Et en cest cas tenants en common auront un action joyntment et recoveront jointement leur damages, pur ceo que l'action est en le personaltie, & nemy en le realtie, ‡‡ &c.*

sonals joyntly in all their names as of trespassse, or of offences which concerne their tenements in common, as for breaking their houses, breaking their closes, feeding, waisting, and defowling their grasse, cutting their woods, for fishing in their pischarie, and such like. In this case tenants in common shall have one action joyntly, & shall recover jointly their damages, because the action is in the personalty, and not in the realtie, &c.

it appeareth that tenants in (1. Sid. 157. Cro. Ja. 231. 1. Sid. common shall have personall 49. 2. Roll. Abr. 91. 10. Rep. actions joyntly. And it is 134. 2.) to be observed, that where damages are to be recovered for a wrong done to tenants in common, or parceners in a personall action, and one of them die, the survivor of them shall have the action, for albeit the property or estate be severall betweene them, yet (as it appeareth here by Littleton) the personall action is joynt.

Et hujusmodi. Here. Vide Sect. 319. 320. 321.

by is implied a diversity between a chattle in possession, and a personall chose in action belonging unto them. As if two tenants in common be of land, and one doth a trespassse therein, of this action they are jointenants, and the survivor shall hold place. So it is if two tenants in (2. Cro. 19.) 22. H. 6. 12. common be of a mannor, 38. E. 3. 7. 13. E. 3. account 126. and they make a bailife there- 45. E. 3. 13. 14. 37. H. 6. 32. 38. of, and one of them dieth, (1. Noy 135. 2. Roll. Abr. 90. Moor 40. 71. 667.) the survivor shall have the action of account, for the action given unto them for the arrerages upon the account was joint. So it is if two tenants in common sow their land, and one doth eat the same with his cattle, though they have the corne in common, yet the action given to them for trespassse in the same is joynt, and shall survive. For the trespassse and damage done to them was joynt, all which here is implied by Littleton, who saith, that they shall have an action joyntly, and the same law is of coparceners.

But if two tenants in common be of goods, as of an horse or of any other goods personall, there if one dye, his executors shall be tenant in common with the survivor. (Post. 200. 2. 7. Rep. Hall's case sub. fin. 10. Rep. 134. Ant. 185.)

Et nemy en le realtie, &c. If two tenants in common be of an advowson, and a stranger usurpe, so as the right is turned to an action, and they bring a writ of Quare impedit which concerne the realtie, the six months passe, and the one dyeth, the writ shall not abate, but the survivor shall recover, otherwise there should be no remedie to redresse this wrong. And so it is of coparceners, and this is one exception out of our author's rule. 38. E. 3. 5. 17. E. 3. 11. 3 H. 5. Quare Imp. 71. 14. H. 4. 12. 9. H. 6. 30. 22. H. 4. 14. 37. H. 6. 9. b. 10. Eliz. Dyer 279. F. N. B. 35. 9. E. 3. 36. 37. Pl. Com. Signior Barkley's case.

[a] But if three coparceners recover land and damages in an assise of Mordancester, albeit the judgement be joynt, that they shall recover the land and damages, yet the damages being accessory, though they bee personall, doe in judgement of law depend upon the freehold, being the principal which is severall. And though the words of the judgement be joint, yet shall it be taken for distributive. And therefore if two of them dye, the entire damages doe not survive, but the third shall have execution according to her portion, and this is another exception out of our author's rule. But if all three had sued execution by force of an Elegit, and two of them had dyed, the third should have had the whole by survivor, till the whole damages be paid. [a] 14. E. 3. Execution 75. 45. E. 1. 3. b. (5. Rep. 7. 2. Roll. Abr. 86. 3. Rep. 14. b. Ant. 154. b. 1. Roll. Abr. 838.)

If the aunt and niece joyne in an action of waste, for waste done in the life of the other sister, the aunt shall recover the damages onely, because the same belongs not by law to the niece. And some hold the damages in that case to be the principall. 45. E. 3. 3. b. 48. E. 3. 14. 11. H. 4. 16. b. 35. H. 6. 23. b. 11. E. 2. Wast. 115. 2. Cro. 19. Ant. 53. b.

Sect. 316.

ITEM si deux tenants en common font un lease de ALSO if two tenants in common make a lease of their tenement

* Sicome—est assavoir in Roh.
§ Des—de leur in Roh.

† De not in Roh.
 Et added in Roh.

‡ De added in Roh.
†† Et not in Roh.

|| De not in Roh.
‡‡ &c. not in Roh.

Lib. 3. Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 317, 318, 319.

(Cro. Jac. 231. 1. Sid. 49.)

*leur tenements a un autre pur terme des ans, rendant a eux certaine rent annualment durant le terme si le rent soit aderere, &c. les tenants en common averont un action de debt envers le lessee, et nemy divers actions, pur ceo que l'action est en * la personalty.*

nements to another for terme of yeares, rendring to them a certaine rent yearely during the terme if the rent bee behind, &c. the tenants in common shall have an action of debt against the lessee, and not divers actions, for that the action is in the personalty.

This upon that which hath been said is evident.

Sect. † 317.

MES en avowry pur le dit rent ils covient sever, car ceo est en le realtie, come le assise est supra.

BUT in an avowry for the said rent they ought to sever, for this is in the realty, as the assise is above.

Vid. 9. 3. 36. 87. Pl. Com. Seignior Barkley's case.

This being an addition to Littleton, albeit it be consonant to law yet I omit it.

Sect. 318.

(Stat. 32. H. 8. Ant. 167. a. 187. a.)

ITEM, tenants en common poyent bien faire partition enter eux s'ils voient, coment que ils ‡ ne seront compelles de faire partition per la ley; mes s'ils font enter eux partition per leur agreement et consent, tiel partition est assés bone, come est adjudge en le liver d'assises ||.

ALSO, tenants in common may well make partition between them if they will, but they shall not be compelled to make partition by the law; but if they make partition betweene themselves by their agreement and consent, such partition is good enough, as is adjudged in the booke of assises.

* Vid. Sect. 259. 290. 247. 264. 19. Ass. p. 1. 30. Ass. p. 8. 47. E. 3. 22.

Of this sufficient hath beene said in * the chapter of Parceners and Joyntenants.

In le liver d'assises.

This booke is of great authoritie in law, and is so called because it principally containeth the proceeding upon writs of assise of novel disseisin, which in those dayes was festinum & frequens remedium.

Sect. 319.

ITEM, si come y sont tenants en common de terres et tenements, &c. come est avantdit, en mesme le manner y sont § de chattels reals et personnels: Si come  lease soit fait de certaine terres a deux homes pur terme de 20 ans, et quant ils sont de

ALSO, as there bee tenants in common of lands and tenements, &c. as aforesaid, in the same manner there be of chattells reals and personnels. As if a lease bee made of certaine lands to two men for terme of 20 yeares, and when they be of this possessed, the ceo

* Is not in L. and M. or Roh. but in L. and M. Roh.

† No part of this section in L. and M. or Roh.

‡ Not in Roh.

|| &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

§ Possessions et proprietors added in L. and M. and Roh.

 si added in L. and M. and Roh.

ceo posses l'un de les leseees grant one of the leseees grant that which ceo que a luy affiert durant le to him belongeth to another du-terme a un auter, donque mesme ring the terme, then hee to whom celuy a que le grant est fait, et l'au- the grant is made and the other ter tiendront et occuperont en shall hold and occupie in com-common. mon.

Grant ceo que a luy affiert. The same law it is if the one lessee in this case make a lease of part of the terme, the second lessee and the other are tenants in common, as hath been said in the chapter of Joynttenants. The (&c.) in this section, implyeth other hereditaments whereof men may be tenants in common, whereof sufficient hath beene said before.

Vid. Sect. 315.
(Cro. Eliz. 33.
Ant. 192. a.)

Sect. 320.

ITEM *si deux * ont* ALso if two have + joyntment le garde joyntly the ward-de corps & deterré d'un ship of the body & land enfant deins age, et of an infant within l'un de eux granta a age, & the one of them un auter ceo que a luy grant to another that affiert de mesme le which to himsele be-garde, donque le gran- longeth of the same tee, et l'auter que ne ward, then the grangranta pas, averont tee, and the other et tiendront ceo en which did not grant, common, &c. shall have and hold this in common, &c.

Hereby it appeareth, that there may bee tenants in common as well of chattels reall entire, as ward-ship of the body, &c. as of chattels personal, as a hawke or a horse. If two tenants in common be of a seigniory, and a ward fall, they are tenants in common of the wardship af-wel of the body as land. And so it is if the land it selfe escheat to them, they shall be Tenants in common thereof, and so it is of parceners.

16. E. 3. tit. Aid.

En common, &c. Vid. devant. Sect. 315.
Here (&c.) implyeth any other entire chattell.

Sect. 321. (1)

EN mesme le maner est de cha- IN the same manner it is of chatteux personnels: Sicome deux tels personnels. As if two have ont † joyntment per done ou per joyntly by gift or by buying a achate un cheval ou boefe, &c. horse or an ox, &c. and the one et l'un grant ceo que a luy affiert grant that to him belongs of the || de mesme le cheval ou boefe a same horse or ox to another, the un auter: donques le grantee, & grantee, and the other which did l'auter que ne granta pas, averont not grant, shall have and possesse et possideront tiels chateux person- such chattels personnels in com-als en common. § Et en tiels mon. And in such cases where di-cases, ou divers persons ont cha- vers persons have chattels real or teux reals ou personnels en com- personall in common, and by dimon ¶, et per divers titles, si l'un vers titles, if the one of them dieth, de eux morust, les auters que the others which survive shal not jurvesquont, n'avera ceo per le sur- have this as survivor, but the exevivor,

* joynttenants added in L. and M. and Roh.
† state, in L. and M. and Roh.
and M. and Roh.

+ joyntment not in L. and M. and Roh.
|| de mesme le cheval ou boefe, not in L. and M. and Roh.
¶ &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† joyntment--joint-§ &c. added in L.

Lib. 3. Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 322, 323.

vivor, mes les executors celuy que morust tiendront et occuperont ceo overque eux que survesquont, si come leur testator fist ou devoit en sa vie, &c. pur ceo que leur titles & droits en ceo fueront severals, &c. cutors of him which dieth shall hold and occupie this with them which survive, as their testator did or ought to have done in his life time, &c. because that their titles and rights in this were severall, &c.

Vid. devant, Sect. 315.

This is evident enough, and hereof sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 322.

(Sid. 49.)

PUR terme de ans, &c. For one yeare, halfe a yeare, &c.

(Hob. 120. Pl. 247. Sid. 33. Mo. 123. 375.)

L'un occu pie tout & mist l'auter hors de possession. These are words materially added, for albeit one tenant in common take the whole profits, the other have no remedie by law against him, for the taking of the whole profits is no ejectment: (1) But if he drive out of the land any of the chattell of the other tenant in common, or not suffer him to enter or occupy the land, this is an ejectment or expulsion, whereupon he may have an ejectione firmæ, for the one moitie, and recover damages for the entrie, but not for the meane profits.

(1. Rol. Abr. 741. Noy. 14.)

(Cro. Jac. 611.)

Ejectione firmæ de la moity, &c. Here by this and the other (&c.) in these two sections, are to be understood divers diversities between actions which concerne right and interest, (as of ejectione firmæ, ejectment de gard, quare eject infra terminum of a chattell real upon an expulsion or ejectment) and actions concerning the bare taking of the profits rising of the land or doing of trespass upon the land, as here by the examples doe appeare, for the right is severall, and the taking of the profits in common. The second diversity is betweene

21. E. 4. 11. 22. 47. E. 3. 24. 45. E. 3. 13. 22. H. 6. 50. 58. 8. H. 6. 17. 19. H. 6. 57. 32. H. 6. 16. 2. E. 4. 23. 14. E. 4. 8. 18. E. 4. 30. 17. H. 6. 33. 21. E. 3. 29. 12. Aff. 28. 47. E. 3. 22. b. 19. H. 7. 16. F. N. B. 117. a. 17. E. 2. Account 122.

ITEM en le case avantdit, si come deux ont estate en common pur terme d'ans, &c. l'un occu pie tout, et mist l'auter hors de possession et occupation, &c. donques celuy que est mise hors de occupation avera envers l'auter brieve de ejectione firmæ de la moitie, &c.

ALSO in the case aforesayd, as if two have an estate in common for terme of yeares, &c. the one occupy all, and put the other out of possession and occupation, hee which is put out of occupation shall have against the other a writ of ejectione firmæ of the moitie, &c.

Sect. 323.

EN mesme le maner est, l'ou deux teignent le gard des terres ou tenements durant le nonage d'un enfant, si l'un ousta l'auter de son possession, il que est ouste avera brieve de ejectment de gard de le moitie, &c. pur ceoque ceux choses son chatteux realx, et poyent estre apportions et severs, &c. Mes nul action de trespas, cestascarvoir, Quare clausum suum fregit, &c. herbam suam, &c.

IN the same manner it is where two hold the wardship of lands or tenements during the nonage of an enfant, if the one oust the other of his possession, he which is ousted shall have a writ of ejectment de gard of the moitie, &c. because that these things are chattels reals, and may be apportioned and severed, &c. but no action of trespass (videlicet) Quare clausum suum fregit, & herbam suam

con-

* Tel added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) But now, by the stat. of the 4th of An. chap. 16. sect. 27. actions of account may be maintained by one jointenant and tenant in common, his executors and administrators, against the other, as bailiff, for receiving more than comes to his share and proportion, and against the executors and administrators of such jointenant or tenant in common; and the auditors appointed by the court, where such action shall be depending, are empowered to administer an oath, and examine the parties touching the matters in question, &c. See also 1. L. 20. 219.

conculcavit & consumpsit, &c. & hujusmodi actiones, &c. l'un ne poet aver envers l'auter, pur ceo que chescun de eux poet entrer et occuper en common, &c. per my et per tout, les terres & tenements * queux ils teignent en common. Mes si deux sont possesés de chattels personaux en common per divers titres, sicome d'un cheval, ou boef, ou vache, &c. si l'un prent ceo tout a luy hors de possession d'auter, l'auter n'ad nul auter remede mes de prender ceo de luy que ad fait luy le tort pur occuper en common, &c. quant † il poet veier son temps, &c. En mesme le maner est de chattels reaux, que ne poyent estre severes, sicome en le case avantdit, que deux sunt possesés d'un gard de corps d'un enfant deins age, si l'un prent l'enfant hors de possession d'auter, l'auter n'ad ascun remede per ascun action per la ley, mes de prendre l'enfant hors de le possession d'auter quaut il veit son temps ‡.

sumpsit, &c. & hujusmodi actiones, &c. the one cannot have against the other, for that each of them may enter & occupie in common, &c. per my & per tout, the lands and tenements which they hold in common. But if two be possessed of chattels personalls in common by divers titles, as of a horse, an ox, or a cowe, &c. if the one take the whole to himselfe out of the possession of the other, the other hath no other remede but to take this from him who hath done to him the wrong to occupie in common, &c. when he can see his time, &c. In the same manner it is of chattels realls, which cannot be severed, as in the case aforesaid, where two be possessed of the wardship of the bodie of an infant within age, if the one taketh the infant out of the possession of the other, the other hath no remede by an action by the law, but to take the infant out of the possession of the other when he sees his time.

chattels realls that are apportionable or severable, as leases for yeares, wardship of lands, interest of tenements by elegit, statute merchant, staple, &c. of lands and tenements, and chattels realls entire, as wardship of the body, a villeine for yeares, &c. for if one tenant in common take away the ward, or the villeine, &c. the other hath no remede by action, but he may take them againe. Another diversitie is betweene chattels realls and chattels personalls, for if one tenant in common take all the chattels personalls, the other hath no remede by action, but he may take them againe; and herein the like law is concerning chattels realls entire, and chattels personall for this purpose. But of chattels entire, as of a ship, horse, or any other entire chattell, reall or personall, no survivor shall be betweene them that hold them in common: and tenants in common shall not joyne in an ejectione firmæ, nor in a writ of ejectment de gard, or a quare ejecit infra terminum, &c. for that these actions concerne the right of lands which are severall.

If two tenants in common be of a mannor, to the which waite and stray doth belong, a stray doth happen, they are tenants in common of the same, and if the one doth take the stray, the other hath no remede by action, but to take him againe. But if by prescription the one is to have the first beast happening as a stray, and the other the second, there an action lieth if the one take that which pertaines to the other.

If two tenants in common be of a dove-house, and the one destroy the old doves whereby the flight is wholly lost, the other tenant in common shall have an action of trespass, quare vi & armis columbare le pl' fregit & decimas columbas pretij 40. s. interfecit per quod volatum and therefore hee cannot in barre

(Ant. 198. a.)

10. H. 4. Trespas. 178.

11. H. 4. 3.

(Sir Tho. Ray. 15. 1. Lev. 29.)

21. E. 4. 11. 12.

(Ant. Sec. 311. & fol. 197. b.)

13. E. 3. Briefe 674.

(2. Roll. Abr. 566.)

47. E. 3. 22. b.

columbaris sui totaliter amisit: for the whole flight is destroyed,

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† if not in L. and M. or Roh.

‡ &c. added in L. and M. but not in Roh.

Lib. 3.

Cap. 4. Of Tenants in Common. Sect. 324.

4. E. 2. Trespas 233.

[c] 1. H. 5. 1. 2. H. 5. 3.

[d] 13. E. 3. Trespas 212. 19.

R. 2. Br. 927. 11. E. 3. Trespas

212. Vi. 18. H. 6. 5.

[e] 13. H. 7. 26.

[f] F. N. B. 127. Reg. 163.

(Ant. 54. b.)

17. E. 2. tit. Account 22. 8. E.

2. Account 115. 30. E. 1. Account 127. 45. E. 3. 10. 47. E.

3. 22. b. 38. E. 3. 9. 22. E. 3.

60. 3. E. 3. 27. 39. E. 27. 82.

F. N. B. 118. i. 10. H. 7. 16.

2. E. 4. 25. (Ant. 172. a. F. N. B.

118. 1. Roll. Abr. 118. 2. Inlt.

379.)

W. 3. ca. 23.

[g] 27. H. 8. 13. 21. E. 3. 29.

29. E. 3. 39. 3. E. 2. Walt. 35.

F. N. B. 59. d. F. N. B. 49. 1.

* 47. E. 3. 22. 50. E. 3. 3.

10. E. 4. 3. b. 22. H. 6. 42. 21.

E. 3. 47. 17. E. 3. 47. 18. E. 4.

27. 28. E. 3. 4.

(2. Inlt. 423. 11. Rep. 49. Ant.

53. b. F. N. B. 59. d.

(2. Roll. Abr. 85. 403.

Ant. 186. b. Post. 335. a.)

barre plead tenancie in common. And so it is if two tenants in common bee of a parke, and one destroyeth all the deere, an action of trespasse lieth.

[c] If two tenants in common be of land, and of mere stones pro metis & bundis, and the one take them up and carrie them away, the other shall have an action of trespasse quare vi & armis against him, in like manner as he shall have for destruction of doves.

[d] If two tenants in common be of a folding, and the one of them disturbe the other to erect hurdles, he shall have an action of trespasse quare vi & armis for this disturbance.

[e] If two severall owners of houses have a river in common betweene them, if one of them corrupt the river, the other shall have an action upon his case.

[f] If two tenants in common, or jointenants, be of an house or mill, and it fall in decay, and the one is willing to repaire the same, and the other will not, he that is willing shall have a writ de reparatione faciendâ, and the writ saith, Ad reparationem & sustentationem ejusdem domus teneantur, whereby it appeareth, that owners are in that case bound pro bono publico to maintaine houses and mills which are for habitation and use of men.

If one jointenant or tenant in common of land maketh his companion his baylife of his part, he shall have an action of account against him, as hath bin said. But although one tenant in common or jointenant without being made baylife take the whole profits, no action of account lieth against him; for in an action of account he must charge him either as a guardian, baylife, or receiver, as hath beene said before, which he cannot doe in this case, unlesse his companion constitute him his bailife. And therefore all those bookes which affirme that an action of account lieth by one tenant in common, or jointenant, against another, must be intended when the one maketh the other his bailife, for otherwise never his baylife to render an account is a good plea.

If there be two tenants in common of a wood, turbarie, pischarie, or the like, and one of them doth wast against the will of his companion, his companion shall have an action of wast, and he that did the wast before judgement, hath election either to take his part in certaintie by the sherife and the oath of men, &c. or that he grant, that from thenceforth he shal not do wast but according to his portion, &c. and if he make choice of a certain place, then the place wasted shall be assigned to him. [g] But this extends not to coparceners, because they were compellable to make partition by the common law: and this, as it is said, doth extend as well to tenants in common and joyntenants for life, as to an estate of inheritance. But if one tenant in common, or joyntenant of a dove house destroy the whole flight of doves, no action of wast doth lie in that case upon the said statute, * as some doe hold.

If lands be given to two, and to the heires of one of them, and the tenant for life doth wast, he that hath the inheritance shall have no action of wast by the statute of Gloucester, but upon the statute of W. 2. he shall have an action of wast. And it is to be knowne, that one tenant in common may infeoffe his companion, but not release, because the freehold is severall. Jointenants may release, but not infeoffe, because the freehold is joynt, but coparceners may both infeoffe and release, because their feisin to some intents is joynt, and to some severall (1).

Sect. 324.

ITEM quant un home • voile monstrier un feoffement fait a luy, ou un done en le taile, ou un lease pur terme de vie d'ascun terres ou tenements, la il dirra, per force de quel feoffement, done ou leas il fuit seise, &c. mes l'ou un voile pleade un leas ou grant fait a luy de chattel real ou personal, la il dirra, per force de quel il fuit possesse, &c.

Pluis serra dit de tenants en common en le chapter de Releases † et Tenant per Elegit.

ALSO when a man will shew a feoffement made to him, or a gift in taile, or a lease for life of any lands or tenements, ther he shal say, by force of which feoffement, gift, or lease, he was seised, &c. but where one will plead a lease or grant made to him of a chattell real or personal, then he shal say, by force of which he was possessed, &c.

More shall be said of tenants in common in the chapters of Releases and Tenant by Elegit.

IL fuit seise, &c. Seise is a word of art, and in pleading is onely applied to a freehold at least, as posse for distinction sake is to a chattell real or personal.

As

* en pleadant added in L. and M. and Roh.

† et Confirmacions added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) M. 26. & 27. Eliz. per cur. If one coparcener in tail levies a fine to another sur conusans de droit, &c. it does not enure by way of release, but by way of grant, and it will be a discontinuance and alteration of the estate without execution, because one parcener may infeoff another, and this is a feoffment of record. But one may release to another, and it enures per mitter le droit.—Ld. Nottingham. MSS.

As if B. plead a feoffment in fee, he concludeth, Virtute cuius prædicti B. fuit seifitus, &c. (Plow. Com. 507. a. Post. 303. a. Plow. 149. b. Post. 310. b. Noy 26.) But if he plead a lease for yeares, he pleadeth, Virtute cuius prædictus B. intravit, et fuit inde possessionatus; and so of chattells personalls, Virtute cuius fuit inde possessionatus.

And this holdeth not only in case of lands or tenements which lie in liverie, but also of rents, advowsons, commons, &c. and other things that lie in grant, whereof a man hath an estate for life or inheritance.

Also when a man pleads a lease for life, or any higher estate which passeth by liverie, he is not to plead any entrie, for he is in actuall seisin by the liverie it selfe. Otherwise it is of a lease for yeares, because there he is not actually possessed untill an entrie.

CHAP. 5. Of Estates upon Condition. Sect. (1) 325.

ESTATES que homes ont en terres ou tenements * sur condition sont † de deux maners, scilicet, ‡ ou ils ont estate sur condition en fait, ou sur condition en ley, || &c. Sur condition en fait est, sicome un home per fait endent enfeoffa un autre en fee § simple, reservant a luy & a ses heires annualment certaine rent payable a un feast, ou a divers feasts per an, sur condition que si le rent soit aderere, &c. que bien list al feoffor & a ces heires en mesmes les terres ou tenements de entrer, &c. Ou si terre soit alien a un home en fee rendant a luy certaine rent, &c. & s'il happa que le rent soit aderere per un semaine apres ascun jour de payment de

ESTATES which men have in lands or tenements upon condition are of two forts, viz. either they have estate upon condition in deed, or upon condition in law, &c. Upon condition in deed is, as if a man by deed indented enfeoffes another in fee simple, reserving to him and his heires yearly a certaine rent payable at one feast or divers feasts per annum, on condition that if the rent be behind, &c. that it shall bee lawfull for the feoffor and his heires into the same lands or tenements to enter, &c. And if it happen the rent to be behind by a weeke after any day of payment of it, or by a moneth after any day of payment of it, or by halfe a yeare, &c. that then it shall be lawfull to the feof-

SUR Condition. Littleton having before spoken of estates absolute, now beginneth to intreate of estates upon condition. And a condition annexed to the realtie whereof Littleton here speaketh in the legall understanding, est modus, a qualitie annexed by him that hath estate, interest, or right, to the same, whereby an estate, &c. may either be defeated, or enlarged, or created upon an incertaine event. Conditio dicitur cum quid in casum incertum qui potest tendere ad esse aut non esse confertur.

Glanvill lib. 10. cap. 8. Braeton lib. 2. cap. 5. 6. 7. &c. lib. 4. fol. 213. Brit. cap. 36. & fol. 89. 99. 114. 130. 205. 206. 207. 249. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 9. & lib. 5. ca. 5. Mirr. cap. 2. sect. 15. & 17.

Sur condition en fait, que est facti, that is, upon a condition expressed by the partie in legall termes of law.

Ou sur condition en ley, &c. quæ est juris, that is, tacite created by law without any words used by the partie. Againe, Littleton subdivideth conditions in deed (though not in expresse words) into conditions precedent (of which it is said, Conditio adimpleri debet priusquam sequatur effectus) and conditions subsequent. Againe, of conditions in deed some be affirmative, and some in the negative; and some in the affirmative, which imply a negative: some make the estate, whereunto they are annexed, voydable by entrie or clayme, and some make the estate

(Plow. 27. a. 1. Roll. Abr. 420. 2. Rep. 79.)

* sur condition not in L. and M. or Roh.

|| &c. not in L. and M. or Roh.

† de-en in L. and M. or Roh.

§ simple not in L. and M. or Roh.

‡ ou not in L. and M. or Roh.

(1) The doctrine of conditions is derived to us from the feudal law. The rents and services of the feudatary were considered, and are mentioned by the feudal writers as conditions annexed to his fief. If he neglected to pay his rent, or perform his service, the lord might resume the fief. But the payment of rent and the performance of feudal service were, for a long period of time, the only conditions that could be annexed to a fief; and whether they were expressed or not, they were always presumed by the law;—being incident to, and inseparable from, the estate of the feudatary. — In this sense they are called conditions in law, or implied conditions. — Afterwards, when other conditions were introduced, the estates to which they were annexed were ranked among improper fiefs. — See Sir Thomas Craig De Jure Feudali, lib. 2. di. 4. sect. 1. 2. 3. Conditions of this last sort were called expresse, or conventional conditions. By an application, in some respects very much forced, of the original principle of conditions, that on the non-performance of them the lord might resume his fief, estates tail, (or rather conditional fees at common law), and some other modifications of landed property, were introduced as estates upon condition. These are often of such a nature, as to make it more natural that a stranger should have the estate on the non-performance of the condition, than the donor; — and that the lord, instead of being confined to his right of resumption, should have it in his power to compel the performance of the condition, or recover from the donee a compensation, or satisfaction, for the breach of it. But as all these estates were introduced as estates upon conditions, the law, where it still considers them as conditions, and except where it has been altered by act of parliament, confines the donor's remedy to the resumption of the estate, and gives that remedy only to the donor and his heirs. — Considered in this sense, the word Condition has, in our law, a much more contracted meaning than it has in the civil law; where it signifies, generally, all those pactions, or agreements, which regulate that which the contractors have a mind should be done, if a case, which they foresee, should come to pass. This is the definition of Domat, lib. 1. tit. 1. sect. 4. We shall afterwards have occasion to make some observations on the interference of courts of equity in cases of conditions.

Mir. cap. 2. sect. 13. & 17.

estate void ipso facto, without entrie or claime.

Also of conditions in deed, some bee annexed to the rent reserved out of the land, and some to collaterall acts, &c. some be single, some in the conjunctive, some in the disjunctive, as shall evidently appeare in this chapter, where the examples of these divisions shall be explained in their proper place.

En ley, &c. Of conditions in law more shall be said hereafter in this chapter.

Sur condition en fait est, sicome un home per fait indent, &c.

Here Littleton putteth one example of fixe severall kinds of conditions. That is, first, of a single condition in deed. Secondly, of a condition subsequent to the estate. Thirdly, a condition annexed to the rent, &c. Fourthly, a condition that defeateth the estate. Fifthly, A condition that defeateth not the estate before an entrie. And lastly, a condition in the affirmative, which implieth a negative, (as behind or unpaid implieth a negative) viz. not paid. All which doe appeare by the expresse words of Littleton.

Rend a luy certaine rent, &c. Here by this (&c.) is implied for life, in-taile, or in fee.

Et en cest case si le rent ne soit pay a tiel temps, &c. donques poet le feoffor ou ses beires entrer, &c. By this section, and by the (&c.) therein contained, fixe things are to be understood.

First, Where our author saith, si le rent soit arere, that though the rent be behind and not paid (b), yet if the feoffor doth not demand the same, &c. he shall never re-enter, because the land is the principall debtor; for the rent issueth out of the land, and in an assise for the rent the land shall be put in view; and if the land be evicted by a title paramount, the rent is avoyded, and after such eviction the person of the feoffee shall not be charged therewith, for the person of the feoffee was only charged with the rent in respect of the grant out of the land.

Secondly, The demand must be made upon the land, because the land is the debtor, and that is the place of demand appointed by law (1).

If the king maketh a lease for yeares, rendring a rent payable at his receipt at Westminster, and after the king granteth the reversion to another and his heires, the grantee shall demand the rent upon the land, and not at the king's receipt at Westminster; for as the law without expresse words doth appoint the lessee in the King's case to pay it at the King's Receipt, so in case of a subject, the law appoints the demand to be on the land.

If there be a house upon the same he must demand the rent at the house. And he cannot demand it at the backe doore of the house but at the fore doore, because the demand must ever be made at the most notorious place. And it is not material whether any person be ther or no.

Albeit the feoffee be in the hall or other part of the house, yet the feoffor neede not [c] but come to the fore doore, for that is the place appointed by law, albeit the doore be open.

[d] If

* un—demy not in L. and M. or Roh.

† Et added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) For the place of performing the condition, see Litt. sect. 340. and the commentary on that section.

[b] 40. Aff. 11. 20. H. 6. 30. 31. 6. H. 7. 7. 19. H. 6. 76. 20. H. 6. 32. 22. H. 6. 46. Pl. com. Kidwelly's case fo. 70. & Hill and Grange's case fol. 73. (Noy 23. 1. Roll. Abr. 459. 460.) (Perk. sect. 827. Noy 23.)

Lib. 4. fol. 72. 73. Boroughe's case.

49. Aff. 5. 15. Eliz. Di. 329.

[c] Bendloes en Tresp. 4. & 5. Pl. & Mar.

(d) If the feoffment were made of a wood only, the demand must be made at the gate of the wood, or at some high way leading through the wood or other most notorious place. And if one place be as notorious as another, the feoffor hath election to demand it at which hee will, and albeit the feoffee be in some other part of the wood redie to pay the rent, yet that shall not availe him. Et sic de similibus. [4] 15. Eliz. Dyer 329. (Ante 145 a.)

Thirdly, And if the feoffor demand it on the ground at a place which is not most notorious, as at the backe doore of a house, &c. and in pleading the feoffor alleadge a demand of the rent generally at the house, the feoffee may traverse the demand, and upon the evidence it shall bee found for him, for that it was a void demand.

Fourthly, If the rent be reserved to be paid at any place from the land, yet it is in law a rent, and the feoffor must demand it at the place appointed by the parties, observing that which hath bene said before concerning the most notorious place. Lib. 4. Boroughs case fol. 73. Pl. Com. 70.

Fifthly, And all this is to be understood when the feoffee is absent, for if the feoffee cometh to the feoffor at any place upon any part of the ground at the day of payment, and offer his rent, albeit they be not at the most notorious place, nor at the last instant, the feoffor is bound to receive it, or else he shall not take any advantage of any demand of the rent for that day. (1) (Post. 211. a.)

Sixthly, Therefore the place of demand being now known, it is further to be known what time the law hath appointed for the same. This partly appeareth by that which hath bene said. For albeit the last time of demand of the rent is such a convenient time before the sunne setting of the last day of payment as the money may be numbred and received, notwithstanding, if the tender be made to him that is to receive it upon any part of the land at any time of the last day of payment, and he refuseth, the condition is saved for that time, for by the expresse reservation the money is to be paid on the day indefinitely, and convenient time before the last instant, is the uttermost time appointed by law, to the intent (2) that then both parties should meet together, the one to demand and receive, and the other to pay it, so as the one should not prevent the other. But if the parties meet upon any part of the land whatsoever on the same day, the tender shall save the condition for ever for that time. (7. Rep. 28.) (5. Rep. 114. b.) (2. Cro. 423. 500.)

And if the reservation of the rent be (as here Littleton putteth the case, at certaine feasts, with condition that if it happen the rent to be behind by the space of a weeke after any day of payment, &c. in this case the feoffor needeth not demand it on the feast day, but the uttermost time for the demand is a convenient time (as hath bene said) before the last day of the weeke, unlesse before that the feoffee meet the feoffor upon the land and tender the rent as is aforesaid. (3) Lib. 5. fol. 114. Wade's case. Pl. Com. Hill. et Granges case 167. 172. 20. H. 6. 30. 31. 6. H. 7. 3.

If a rent be granted payable at a certaine day, and if it be behinde and demanded that the grantee shall distreine for it, in this case the grantee need not demand it at the day; but if he demand it at any time after he shall distreine for it, for the grantee hath election in this case to demand it when he will to inable him to distreine. Mich. 40. & 41. Eliz. inter Stanly & Read. Lib. 7. fo. 28. Maundes case.

Et eux en son primer estate aver, &c. Regularly it is true that he that entreteth for a condition broken shall be seised in his first estate, or of that estate which hee had at the time of the estate made upon condition, but yet this sayeth in many cases. 8. H. 7. 7. b.

1. In respect of impossibility. As if a man seised of lands in the right of his wife, maketh a feoffment in fee by deed indented, upon condition that the feoffee should demise the land to the feoffor for his life, &c. the husband dieth the condition is broken, in this case the heire of the husband shall enter for the condition broken, but it is impossible for him to have the estate that the feoffor had at the time of the condition made: for therein he had but an estate in the right of his wife, which by the coverture was dissolved. And therefore when the heire hath entred for the condition broken and defeated the feoffment, his estate doth vanish, and presently the state is vested in the wife. 4. H. 6. a. lib. 8. fo. 43. 44. Whittinghams case. 5. H. 7. 6. a. (Post. 297. b.)

2. In respect of necessity. If Cessy que use after the statute of R. 3. and before the statute of 27. H. 8. had made a feoffment in fee upon condition, and after had entred for the condition broken; in this case he had but an use when the feoffment was made, but now he shall be seised of the whole state of the land. So that as in the former case, the ancestor had somewhat at the making of the condition, and the heire shall have nothing when he hath entred for the condition broken, so in this case the feoffor had no estate or interest in the land at the time of the condition made, but a bare use; yet after his entrie for the condition broken he shall be seised of the whole state in the land, and that also for necessitie, for by the feoffment in fee of Cessy que use, the whole estate and right was devested out of the feoffees. And therefore of necessitie the feoffor must gaine the whole estate by his entrie for the condition broken.

Tenant in speciall taile hath issue, and his wife dieth, tenant in taile maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, the issue dieth, the condition is broken, the feoffor re-enters, she shall have

(1) For the difference of the demand to be made in case of a re-entry to avoid an estate, or the forfeiture of a sum nomine pence; and of the demand to be made in case of an entry to distrain; see before 144. 2.

(2) Yet the rent is not due till the last minute of the natural day; for if the lessor dies after sun-set and before midnight, the rent shall go to the heir and not to the executors. 1. Saund. 287. Salk. 576. (Note to the twelfth edition.)

(3) For there is a material difference between a reservation of a rent payable on a particular day, or within a certain time after, and a reservation of a rent payable at a certain day, with a condition, that if it be behind by the space of any given time, the lessor shall enter. In both cases, a tender on the first, or last, day of payment, or on any of the intermediate days, to the lessor himself, either upon, or out of the land, is good. But in the former case, it is sufficient if the lessee attends on the first day of payment, at the proper place; and if the lessor does not attend there to receive the rent, the condition is saved. In the latter case, to save the lease, it is not sufficient that the lessee attends on the first day of payment, for he must equally attend on the last day. 10. Rep. 129. a. Plow. 70. a. b. and the case of Cropp v. Hambleton Cro. Eliz. 48.—It is to be observed that it was once doubted, whether proof of actual entry and ouster was necessary in ejectment, brought on breach of a condition of re-entry.—It was afterwards settled that it was not, but that, notwithstanding the confession of the re-entry, the demand of the rent must be proved. Anon. 1. Vent. 248.—Little v. Heaton ad Lord Raym. 750. and 1st Salk. 259. and see Burr. 1896. 1897. But now, by the 4. Geo. 2. c. 28. sect. 2. landlords or lessors having a right by law to re-enter, for non-payment of rent, may, without any formal demand, or re-entry, serve a declaration in ejectment for the recovery of the demised premises; and shall recover judgment and execution, in the same manner as if the rent in arrear had been lawfully demanded, and re-entry made. And if the lessee or tenant permits execution to be executed on such judgment, without paying the rent and arrears, and full costs, and without filing any bill or bills for relief in equity, within six calendar months after such execution executed, he shall be barred and foreclosed from all relief in law or equity, except by writ of error for reversal of such judgment.—By the same statute, sect. 4th, if the tenant, at any time before the trial in ejectment, pays or tenders to the lessor or landlord the whole rent in arrear, with the costs, or pays such arrears and costs into court, the proceedings in ejectment shall cease, and the tenant shall be relieved in equity, and hold the lands demised according to the old lease without any new lease. In Archer v. Snapp, Andr. 341. lord chief justice Lee observes, that both the courts of law and the courts of equity had, previous to this statute, exercised a discretionary power of staying the lessor from proceeding at law, in cases of forfeiture for non-payment of rent, by compelling him to take the money really due to him. The same observation is made in Bull. Ni. Pri. 97. Sec 2. Salk. 397. 8. Mod. 345. 10. Mod. 383. and 2d Vern. 103. 1. Wilfon 75. 2. Stra. 900.

Lib. 3.

(8. Rep. 43. 41.)

(Ante 103. a.)

15. Aff. 12.

(4. Rep. 9. b.)

8. H. 7. 7.

(Post. 350. b.)

2. H. 6. 4.

(1. Roll. Abr. 412.)

43. Aff. 47. 13. E. 4. 4. 2. H.

5. 7. b. 39. Aff. 15. 11. H. 5.

25. 16. Aff. 47.

(1. Roll. Abr. 356. Post. 252. a.)

Cap. 5.

Of Estates

Sect. 326. 327.

have but an estate for life, as tenant in taile apres possibility of issue extinct by the re-entry, and yet he had an estate taile at the time of the feoffment, and that also for necessity.

3. In some cases the feoffor by his re-entry shall be in his former estate, but not in respect of some collateral qualities. As if tenant by homage ancestrell maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entreth upon the condition broken, it shall never be holden by homage ancestrell againe. And so it is if a copihold escheate and the lord make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entreth for the condition broken. And the reason in both these cases is, for that the custome or prescription for the time is interrupted.

(1) Lord and tenant by fealty and rent, the lord is in seisin of his rent, the lord granteth his feignory to another and to his heires upon condition, the tenant attorneth and payeth his rent to the grantee, the condition is broken, the lord distraineth for his rent, and rescous is made, he shall be in his former estate, and yet the former seisin shall not enable him to have an assise without a new seisin.

If tenant in taile make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and dieth, the issue in taile within age doth enter for the condition broken, he shall be first in as tenant in fee simple as heire to his father, and consequently and instantly he shall be remitted. But if the heire be of full age, he shal not be remitted, because he might have had his formdon against the feoffee, and the entrie for the condition is his owne act; but more shall be said hereof in his proper place in the chapter of Remitter.

If a man make a feoffment in fee of Blacke Acre and White Acre upon condition, &c. and for breach thereof that he shall enter into Blacke Acre, this is good.

If tenant for life make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entreth for the condition broken, he shall be tenant for life againe, but subject to a forfeiture, for the state is reduced, but the forfeiture is not purged. (2)

Sect. 326.

*EN mesme le manner est si terres sont dones en le taile, ou lesses a terme de vie ou * des ans, sur + condition, &c.* IN the same manner it is if lands be given in taile, or let for terme of life or of yeares upon condition, &c.

Sur condition, &c. This implyeth the severall kindes of conditions in deed before specified.

Sect. 327.

ET la terre tener tanque ils soyent satisfies ou paiés de le rent aderere, &c. By this it is implied, that if such a feoffment be made, reserving (b) (for example) 8 markes rent at the feast of Easter, with such a condition as is afore said, the feoffor at the feast day demands the rent, the feoffee paieth unto him 6 markes parcell of the rent, the feoffor entreth into the lands and taketh the profits towards satisfaction. Afterwards the feoffee doth tender the two markes residue of the rent to the feoffor upon the land, who refuseth it. It MES l'ou feoffment est fait de certaine terres reservant certain rent, + &c. sur tiel condition, que si le rent soit aderere, § que bien lirroit al feoffor, et || ses beires d'entrer,  et la terre tener tanque ils soient satisfies ou payes de le rent aderere, &c. en cest case si le rent soit aderere, & le feoffor ou ses beires enter, le BUT where a feoffment is made of certaine lands reserving a certaine rent, &c. upon such condition, that if the rent be behind, that it shall be lawfull for the feoffor & his heires to enter, and to hold the land untill he be satisfied or payed the rent behinde, &c. in this case if the rent be behind, and the feoffor or his feoffee

Vide Sect. 322.

19. E. tit. barre 280. 19. R. 2.

done rent 10.

Pl. com. 524.

[§] 20. E. 3. tit. covenant. 3.

* a terme added in L. and M. and Rob.

§ added in L. and M.

|| a added in L. and M.

+ tiel added in L. and M. and Rob.

 en la terre tenus de eux in L. and M.

+ &c. not in L. and M.

(1) This is seemingly contradicted by the authorities cited in the margin. In that taken from Lord Coke's Reports, it is said, that "If the lord grants his feignory on condition, and the tenant pays the rent to the grantee, and afterwards the condition is broken, and the lord distrains for the services upon rescous made, he shall have assise, for the seisin before is sufficient."—The case reported in the margin from the Book of Assizes is to the same effect.—But it is to be observed, that when the lord distrains, his distress amounts to a new entry. This may serve to reconcile the apparent contradiction, in this instance, between the Commentary and the authorities cited in the margin.

(2) It may be further observed, 1st, That as the entry of the feoffor on the feoffee for a condition broken defeats the estate to which the condition was annexed, so it defeats all rights and incidents annexed to that estate, as dower, &c. and all the mesne incumbrances of the feoffee. See 1. Roll. Abr. 474. 2dly, That every condition must defeat the entire estate, and that a condition cannot be so framed, as to make one and the same estate in any lands cease as to one person, and remain as to another, or cease for one time, and revive afterwards. 6 Rep. 40. b. 41. a. 3dly, That a condition annexed to land, cannot be apportioned by any of the parties themselves, so as to become void as to one part of the land, and to remain good as to the other. Thus in the case cited by lord Coke, 4 Rep. 120. a. b. a lease was made for twenty-one years, of three manors, rendering rent for manor A. 6l. for manor B. 5l. and for manor C. 10l. to be paid on a place out of the land, with a condition of re-entry into all the three manors for default of payment of the rents. The lessor granted the reversion of part of the manor A. to one and his heires: and afterwards granted the reversion of another part to another and his heires: it was adjudged that the second grantee should not enter for the condition broken, because the condition was entire, and by the severance of part of the reversion was destroyed in all. But a condition may be apportioned by act in law. See the instance put by lord Coke post. 215. a. 4thly, That part of a condition may be good and another part of it may be void in law: as if a person makes a gift in tail to the donor's eldest son, remainder to his youngest son in tail, with a condition that if the eldest son alien in fee, his estate should cease, and the lands should remain to the second son in tail; that part of the condition which prohibits the alienation made by tenant in tail is good in law, but that part of it which says that upon such alienation the lands shall remain over is void, and the donor may re-enter. See Litt. sections 720. 721. 722. 723. and the Commentary page 379. b. 5thly, That if A. be tenant for life, remainder in-contingency, remainder to B. in tail, and A. before the contingency happens surrenders his estate to B. his surrender bars the contingent remainder. But if he surrenders on condition, and before the contingency happens, the condition is broken, and A. enters on the estate, the contingent remainder is revived. See Thompson v. Leach. 1. Lord Raym. 313.

*feoffee n'est pas exclude de ceo tout * net, mes le feoffor avera & tien-dra la terre et prendra ent les profits tanque † il soit satisfe de le rent aderere; & quant il est satisfe, donque poit le feoffee ‡ re-entrer en meisme la terre, & ceo tener || come il tenoit adevant. Car en tiel cas le feoffor avera § la terre forsque en maner come pur un distres, tanque  il soit satisfe de le rent, &c. coment †† que il prendre les profits en le meane temps ‡‡ a son use demesne, &c.*

heires enter, the feoffee is not altogether excluded from this, but the feoffor shall have & hold the land, and thereof take the profits, until he be satisfied of the rent behinde; and when he is satisfied, then may the feoffee re-enter into the same land, and hold it as he held it before. For in this case the feoffor shall have the land but in maner as for a distres until he be satisfied of the rent, &c. though he take the profits in the meane time to his owne use, &c.

profits in nature of a distres. And therefore if a man maketh a lease for life with a reservation of a rent and such a condition, if he enter for the condition broken and take the profits of the land quousque, &c. he shall not have an action of debt for the rent arere, for that the freehold of the lessee doth continue, and therefore the booke [c] that seemeth to the contrary is false printed, and the true case was of a lease for yeares, as it appeareth afterwards in the same page of the lease.

But herein also a diversity worthy the observation is implied, viz. If a man make a lease for yeares reserving a rent with a condition that if the rent be behind, that the lessor shall re-enter and take the profits until thereof he be satisfied, there the profits shall be accounted as parcell of the satisfaction, and during the time that he so taketh the profits he shall not have an action of debt for the rent for the satisfaction whereof he taketh the profits. But if the condition be that he shall take the profits until the feoffor be satisfied or paid of the rent, without saying (thereof) or to the like effect, there the profits shall be accounted no part of the satisfaction but to hasten the lessee to pay it, and as Littleton here saith, that until he be satisfied he shall take the profits in the meane time to his owne use (3).

hath beene adjudged that the feoffee upon the refusal may enter into the land, (1) for when the feoffor is satisfied either by perception of the profits or by payment or tender and refusal, or partly by the one and partly by the other, the feoffee may re-enter into the land. And this is within the words of Littleton, viz. (until he be satisfied.) And albeit the feoffor had accepted part of his rent, yet he may enter for the condition broken and retaine the land until he be satisfied of the whole. All which is worthy of observation.

Et en tiel case le feoffor avera la terre forsque en maner come un distres tanque il soit satisfe de la rent, &c.

By this it appeareth that the feoffor by his re-entry gaineth no estate of freehold (2), but an interest by the agreement of the parties to take the

(Autrement in case de obligation ou debt sur contract. Doc. Pla. 109.)

(Sid. 223. 262. 344. Flow. 524. b.)

[c] 2. E. 3. fo. 7.

30. E. 3. 7. Vid. emblable.
27. H. 8. 4. 43. E. 3. 21. 31. Aff. Pl. 26.
Vid. le statute de Merton ca. 6. and observe these words, quod inde percipere possint duplicem valorem, &c.
Et c. 7. without this word (inde) (See Ant. 82. b.)

Sect. 328.

ITEM divers parolx (enter || auters) y sont, queux per vertue de eux mesmes font estates sur condition, un est le parol §§ sub conditione: si come A. enfeoffa B.

ALSO divers words (amongst others) there be which by vertue of themselves make estates upon condition, one is the word (sub condic.) as if A. inteoffe B. of cer-

HERE in this and the next two sections Littleton doth put four examples of words that make conditions in deed, and first sub conditione. This is the most expresse and proper condition in deed, and therefore our author beginneth with it.

Talem redditum, &c.

This.

* de added in L. and M. and Roh.
|| come—coment in L. and M. and Roh.
M. and Roh. †† que not in L. and M. or Roh.
added in L. and M. and Roh.

† que added in L. and M. and Roh.

§ avera la terre—ceo aver in L. and M. and Roh.

§§ sub conditione—de condition in L. and M. and Roh.

(Dyer 138. b.)

Sub conditione.

[c] Marie Dyer 138. 27. H. 8. 15. 13. 11. 4. entr. Cong. 57. 29. Aff. 7. 33. Aff. 11. 40. Aff. 13. Bracton ubi supra. Fleta lib. 4. ca. 9. Brit. cap. 36. & ubi supra.

(1) But there must be a previous actual demand, in the same manner as where the condition is general. Hob. 82. 133. Hobart was of opinion, that the feoffor, to entitle himself to enter by way of penalty, should demand the rent not only on the day when it became due, but on the day after. Hob. 208.

(2) This is so, tho' the condition be that the feoffor, his heirs and assigns, may enter; and his interest goes to his executor. But he may maintain an ejectment. 1. Saund. 112. 1. Sid. 344. 345. T. Raym. 135. 158.

(3) Care must be taken with respect to conditions, or powers of entry, to distinguish between, I. a general condition that the lessor shall re-enter; II. a special condition that he may enter and hold until payment or satisfaction; and III. a power of entry, limited by way of use. 1st, A general condition that the lessor shall re-enter is the subject of the foregoing section; 2d, a special condition that he may enter, is the subject of the present section. The distinction when the profits taken by the lessor after entry are, and when they are not, to be in satisfaction of the rent, is not admitted in equity, for the courts of equity will always make the lessor account to the lessee for the profits of the estate during the time of his being in possession of it, and decree him after he is satisfied the rent in arrear, and the costs, charges, and expences attending his entry and detention of the lands, to give up the possession to the lessee, and deliver and pay him the surplus of the profits of the estate and the money arising thereby. 3d, A power of entry limited by way of use. This takes its effect from the Statute of Uses; as if A. by feoffment, lease and release, fine, or common recovery, conveys an estate to B. and his heirs, to the use, intent, and purpose, that B. may receive, out of the lands so conveyed, a certain annual sum; and to this further intent and purpose, that if such annual sum, or any part of it, be unpaid by a certain time, it shall be lawful for B. and his assigns to enter upon, and hold possession of, the land, and receive the rents and profits of it, until the arrears are satisfied: here, as soon as the rent is in arrear, an use which is served out of the original feisin of the feoffee, releasee, confessor, or recoverer, springs up and vests in the person to whom the power is given. This use is immediately transferred into possession by the statute. He has consequently a right to take and keep that possession till the purpose for which it is executed is satisfied, and then the use determines. By virtue of this estate he may make a lease for years to try his title in ejectment, either to obtain the possession of the lands, if it be withheld from him, or to restore it, if it be disturbed or divested; and if he assigns the annual sum, this right of entry, and perception of the rents and profits of the lands charged with the payment of it, passes with it to the assignee. But a distinction must be made between this case and that of a grant of a rent to be issuing out of certain lands, with a proviso, declaration, or covenant, that if the rent be in arrear, the grantee may enter, &c. Here there is no feisin in any person, out of which an use can arise to the grantee on non-payment of the rent; and therefore possession is not in him till he makes an actual entry. But an interest vests in him when the rent becomes in arrear, and he may reduce it into possession by ejectment. See Haverhill v. Hare, Cro. Jac. 520. 2. Roll. Rep. 12. Poph. 126. 147. 3. Bulstr. 250. Jennett v. Cowley, Sid. 223. 262. 344. Raym. 135. 158. Saund. 112.

This (Ec.) implieth any other rent or sum in grosse, or any collateral condition whatsoever, either to be performed by the feoffee, (whereof our author here putteth his case) or by the feoffor, and extendeth to all kinds of conditions in deed, before specified.

de certaine terre, habendum & tenendum eidem B. & hæredibus suis, sub conditione, quòd idem B. & hæredes sui solvant seu solvi faciant præfat' A. & hæredibus suis annuatim talem redditum, &c. En cest case sans aucun plus dire le feoffee ad estate sur condition.*

taine land, to have and to hold to the said B. & his heires, upon condition that the said B. and his heires do pay or cause to be paid to the aforesaid A. & his heires, yearly such a rent, &c. In this case without any more saying the feoffee hath an estate upon condition.

Sect. 329.

Proviso. Vid. sect. 220. Dier. 28 H. 8. fol. 13. 27. H. 8. fol. 14. 15. 13. H. 4. Entre Cong. 57. Seignior Cromwell's case, lib. 2. fo. 71. 72. at large. 35. H. 8. tit. condition. Br. lib. 8. 89. Frances case.

PROVISO semper, quòd B. solvat, &c.

Our author putteth his case where a proviso cometh alone. And so it is if a man by indenture letteth lands for yeares, provided alwaies, and it is covenanted and agreed between the said parties, that the lessee should not alien, and it was adjudged that this was a condition by force of the proviso, and a covenant by force of the other words (1).

This word proviso shall be also taken as a limitation or qualification, as hereafter in his proper place shall be said. And sometime it shal amount to a covenant. All which do appeare by the authorities in the margin.*

For the (Ec.) in this section explanation is made in the section next before.

Ou fueront tiels,

Ita quod. This is the third condition in deed, whereof our author maketh mention.

AUXY si les parols fueront tiels, Proviso semper, quòd prædict' B. solvat, seu solvi faciat præfato A. talem redditum, &c. ou fueront tiels, Ita quod prædict' B. solvat seu solvi faciat præfato A. talem redditum, &c. en ceux cases sans plus dire, le feoffee § n'ad estate forsque sur condition; issint que s'il ne performast le condition, le feoffor et ses heires poyent entrer, &c.

ALSO if the words were such, provided alwaies that the aforesaid B. do pay or cause to be paid to the aforesaid A. such a rent, &c. or these, so that the said B. do pay or cause to be paid to the said A. such a rent, &c. in these cases without more saying, the feoffee hath but an estate upon condition; so as if he doth not performe the condition, the feoffor and his heires may enter, &c.

(. Rep. 70. b.)

(*) 27. H. 8. 15. &c. Ita quod. Fleta lib. 4. ca. 9. Bracton ubi supra. Britton ubi supra.

(Dyer 13. b.)

Sect. 330.

(Ant. 146. b.)

6. E. 2. Entre Cong. 65. 8. E. 2. Aff. 320. adjudged. Quod si contingat. Pasch. 37. Eliz. Rot. 254. inter Sayer et Hares in com. Banco.

QUOD si contingat, &c.

This is the fourth condition in deed set downe by our author.

D'entrer, &c. Hereby it is evident, that

ITEM auters parols sont en un fait queux causes les tenements estre conditionals. Si come sur tiel feoff-

ALSO there bee other words in a deede which cause the tenements to be conditionall: As if upon such feoffment

* issint added in L. and M. and Roh.

† parols—conditions in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ n'ad—ad in L. and M.

(1) Acc. 1. Roll. Abr. 410. L. 30. tho' it stands indifferent whether it be the speaking of the grantor or grantee; for in that case it shall be referred to the grantor, as no condition can be reserved or made, but on the part of the donor, lessor, or feoffor. Dyer 6. And it is immaterial in what part of the deed the word proviso stands, and tho' there be covenants before or after. 2. Rep. 70. 71. 1. Roll. Abr. 407. Dyer. 311. But when it does not introduce a new clause, and only serves to qualify or restrain the generality of a former clause, it is not a condition. Moore 367. 707.—We should carefully distinguish between a condition, a remainder, and a conditional limitation. We have seen that a condition defeats the whole estate; that none but the heir can take advantage, or enter for the breach of it; and that when he enters he is in as of his old estate. Such is the case put by Littleton of a feoffment in fee, reserving a yearly rent, with a condition that if the rent be behind, it shall be lawful for the feoffor and his heirs to enter. A remainder is defined by lord Coke, ant. 143. to be "a remnant of an estate in lands or tenements, existing on a particular estate, created together with the same, at the same time;" so that it waits for, and only takes effect in, possession, on the natural expiration or determination of the first estate: as if a man limits an estate to A. for life, and after his decease to be in fee, this is a remainder: it does not defeat, but it expects the natural end and expiration of the first estate limited to A. for his life; and when that event happens, not the heir, but a stranger has the advantage of it. A conditional limitation partakes of the nature both of a condition and a remainder. It is to be observed, that it was understood by the old lawyers, that whenever either the whole fee, or a particular estate, as an estate for life, or in tail, was first limited, no condition or other quality could be annexed to this prior estate to defeat it, and pass the estate to a stranger; for, as a remainder, it was void, being in abridgement or defeasance of the estate first limited; and as a condition, it was void, as no one but the donor or the heirs could take advantage of a condition broken, and the entry of the donor or his heirs unavoidably defeated the livery upon which the remainder depended. On these principles, it was impossible, by the old law, to limit, by deed, if not by will, an estate to a stranger upon any event which went to abridge or determine an estate previously limited. But the expediency and utility of such limitations, assisted by the revolution effected in our law by the statute of uses, at length forced them into use, in spite of the maxim of law, that a stranger cannot take advantage of a condition. These limitations are now become frequent, and their mixed nature has given them the appellation of conditional limitations: they so far partake of the nature of conditions, as they abridge or defeat the estates previously limited; and they are so far limitations, as upon the contingency taking place, the estate passes to a stranger. Such is the limitation to A. for life, in tail, or in fee, provided that when C. returns from Rome it shall from thenceforth remain to the use of B. in fee. Of late, however, it has been frequently argued, that the difference between a remainder, and what is generally understood by a conditional limitation, is merely verbal. See Lucas's Rep. 423. and Mr. Douglas's note to page 727. of his Reports.—In addition to what has been mentioned in the concluding note on 202. b. respecting the principle, that when a feoffor enters for a condition broken he is in as of his former estate: it may be observed, that when a tenant for life joins with a remainder man in suffering a common recovery, it is sometimes practised as a precaution against letting

*ment un rent est reserve al feoffor, &c. et puis soit mitte, en le fait * cest parol, Quod si contingat redditum prædictum a retro fore in parte vel in toto †, quod tunc benè licebit a le feoffor et a ses heires d'entrer, &c. Ceo est un fait sur condition.*

a rent be reserved to the feoffor, &c. and afterward this word is put into the deed, that if it happen the aforesaid rent to be behind in part or in all, that then it shall be lawful for the feoffor & his heires to enter, &c. this is a deed upon condition.

some words of themselves do make a condition, and some other (whereof our authour here and in the next section * putteth an example) do not of themselves make a condition without a conclusion and clause of re-entrie: and manie times (si) makes a condition, and sometimes a limitation, as hereafter shall be said in this chapter.

*Inesse potest donationi modus, conditio, sive causa. * Sci to quod (ut) modus est (si) conditio (quia) causa.*

Conditio is explained before.

Modus is at this day properly taken for a modification, limitation, or qualification, for the which also the law hath appointed apt words; and because Littleton speaketh of this also in the end of this chapter, I will reserve this matter to his proper place, where the reader shall perceive excellent matter of learning touching this point.

Causa, the cause or consideration of the grant. And herein there is a diversitie betwene a gift of lands, and a gift of an annuitie or such like. For example, if a man grant an annuitie pro una acra terræ, in this case this word pro sheweth the cause of the grant, and therefore amounteth to a condition; for if the acre of land be evicted by an elder title, the annuitie shall cease, for cessante causâ cessat effectus.

And so if an annuitie be granted pro decimis, &c. if the grantee be unjustly disturbed of the tithes the annuitie ceaseth. And so it is if an annuitie be granted pro consilio, and the grantee refuse to give counsell, the annuitie ceaseth. So if an annuitie be granted quod præstaret consilium, this makes the grant conditionall.

But if A. pro consilio impenso, &c. make a feoffment, or a lease for life, of an acre, or pro una acra terræ, &c. albeit he denieth counsell, or that the acre be evicted, yet A. shall not re-enter, for in this case there ought to be legall words of condition or qualification, for the cause or consideration shall not avoyd the state of the feoffee; and the reason of this diversitie is, for that the state of the land is executed, and the annuitie executorial.

And yet sometime in case of lands or tenements (causa) shall make a condition. As if a woman give lands to a man and his heires, causâ matrimonii prælocuti, in this case if shee either marrie the man, or the man refuse to marrie her, she shall have the land againe to her and to her heires. [c] But of the other side, if a man give land to a woman and to her heires, causâ matrimonii prælocuti, though he marrie her, or the woman refuse, he shall not have the lands againe, for it stands not with the modestie of women in this kind, to aske advise of learned counsell, as the man may and ought: * and the rather for that in the case of the woman shee may averre the cause, (for the reason aforesaid) although it be not contained in the deed, yea though the feoffment be made without deed.

If a man maketh a feoffment in fee, ad faciendum, or faciendo, or ad intentionem, or ad effectum, or ad propositum, that the feoffee shall doe or not do such an act, none of these words make the state in the land conditionall, for in judgement of law they are no words of condition; and so was it resolved, Hil. 18. Eliz. in Com. Banco, in the case of a common person; but in the case of the king the said or the like words doe create a condition, and so it is in the case of a will of a common person, which case I my selfe heard and observed.

But for the avoyding of a lease for yeares, such precise words of condition are not so strictly required as in case of freehold and inheritance. [f] For if a man by deed make a lease of a manor for yeares, in which there is a clause (and the said lessee shall continually dwell upon the capitall messuage of the said manor, upon paine of forfeiture of the said terme) these words amount to a condition.

And so it is if such a clause be in such a lease, Quod non licebit, to the lessee, dare, vendere, vel concedere statum, & sub pænâ forisfacturæ, this amounts to make the lease for yeares defeasible, and so was it adjudged in the court of common pleas [g] in queene Elizabeth's time; and the reason of the court was, that a lease for yeares was but a contract, which may begin by word, and by word may be dissolved.

* Vid. Sect. 331.

3. H. 6. 7. Si Flet. li. 4. ca. 9. Brañ. lib. 4. fo. 213. b. (5. Rep. 9.)

* 4. Mar. Dyer 138. b.

Brañ. ubi supra.

Pro. 24. E. 3. 34. (Hob. 41. 42. 10. Rep. 42. Flo. 141. a. 7. Rep. 9. b. 10. 28. b. Ant. 141. a. 9. Rep. 50. a. Post. 237. a.) 9. E. 4. 20. 32. E. 3. Annu. 30. 14. E. 4. 15. E. 4. 2. b. 8. H. 6. 23. 5. E. 2. tit. an. 44. 41. E. 3. 19. 32. E. 1. Avowrie. 242. 21. E. 4. 49. 22. E. 4. 28. 35. H. 6. 2. 10. E. 3. 44. 5. E. 2. 9. E. 4. 20. 15. E. 4. 3.

Flet. li. 5. ca. 31. 34. Aff. 1. 40. Aff. 13.

[c] 5. E. 2. cui in vita 34. tit. Condition Br. 5. H. 4. 1.

* 12. E. 1. 1. feoffments & saits 114. F. N. B. 205. L. vid. sect. 365. Ad faciend' ca intentione &c. Dyer 138. 7. H. 4. 22. 31. H. 8. tit. condition 19. Br. Pl. Com. 142. 38. H. 6. 33. 36. 37. Doct. & Stud. li. 2. ca. 34. 27. H. 8. 18. a. 32. E. 3. Breve. 291. (1. Roll. Abr. 407. 408. 409. 410. Moore 57. 2. Leo. 33. 3. Rep. 64. 2. 10. Rep. 42. a.)

[f] 7. E. 6. Dier. 79. 28. H. 8. Dier. 27. a. Sub pænâ forisfacturæ.

Quod non licebit. 3. E. 6. Dy. 65. 66. 4. Mar. 138.

[g] Hil. 40. Eliz. Rot. 1610. inter Browne and Ayer. Vid. Pl. Com. 142. Br. and Bessone's case.

Sect.

* cest parol not in L. and M. nor in Roh.

† &c. added in L. and M. and in Roh.

in the incumbrances of the remainder man, to annex a condition to the estate of the bargainee or releasee, who is made tenant to the præcipe, on the non-performance of which his estate is to become void. For if A. be tenant for life, with remainder in tail to B. and B. executes leases, confesses judgments, or otherwise incumbers his estates; and afterwards A. and B. join in suffering a common recovery, all the incumbrances of B. are immediately let in upon the fee gained by the recovery; and that fee, and every estate derived out of it, are subject to them. To avoid which, A. the tenant for life, by lease and release, or by bargain and sale enrolled, conveys the estate to the intended tenant to the præcipe, to hold to him and his assigns during the joint lives of him and the grantor or bargainor; with a declaration, that such grant and release, or bargain and sale, is made to enable the grantee or bargainee to be tenant of the freehold in the proposed recovery; and a declaration of the uses to which it is intended the recovery shall enure. Then a proviso is inserted, that if the bargainee or releasee do not, within six months, pay the tenant for life 100,000l. or some other very large sum of money, the bargain and sale, or grant and release, shall be void; and that it shall be lawful for the bargainor or grantor to enter as in his former estate. The money is not paid at the day appointed; and thereupon the bargain and sale, or grant and release, is void, and the bargainor or grantor becomes seised of his ancient life-estate. But though the bargain and sale becomes void, yet, as at the time of suing the original writ and the præcipe the bargainee or releasee was tenant of the freehold, the subsequent cesser or determination of his estate does not impeach the recovery. For if the person against whom the præcipe is brought, be at the time when the præcipe is sued, or at any time before judgment, actual tenant of the freehold, it is immaterial what becomes of it afterwards. This doctrine has been carried so far, that where a tenant to the freehold was made by a fine, and the fine has been reversed, yet the recovery was held good. (See Lloyd v. Evelyn. 1 Salk. 368. and see 1. Shower's Rep. 347. Hob. 262. Noy 126. 1. Mod. 218.) The recovery therefore in this case is good; the freehold upon which it was suffered is determined; and the bargainor or grantor comes in of his original estate, and of course avoids all the leases, judgments, and other incumbrances of the tenant in tail. The reason why the conveyance is made to the bargainee or releasee during the joint lives of him and the grantor or bargainor, is to preserve his powers by leaving the reversion in him. — For supposing

Sect. 331.

*MES il est diversity perenter cest parol (si contingat, &c.) et les parols procheine avantdits. Car ceux parolx (si contingat, &c.) ne valent riens a tiel condition, sinon que il ad ceux parolx subsequents, que bien list al feoffor et a ses heires d'entrer, &c. Mes en les casés avantdits, il ne besoigne per la ley de mitter tiel clause, (scilicet) que le feoffor et ses heires poyent entrer, &c. pur ceo que ils poyent faire ceo per force des parols avantdits, pur ceo que ils impreignont * a eux mesmes en ley un condition, scilicet, que le feoffor et ses heires poyent entrer, &c. Uncore il est communement use en tous tiels casés avantdits de mitter † les clausés en les faits, scilicet, si le rent soit aderere, &c. que bien lirroit a le feoffor et a ses heires d'entrer, &c. Et ceo est bien fait, a cel intent, pur declarer et expresse a les lays gents, que ne sont apprises ‡ en la ley, ¶ de le manner et le condition de le feoffement, &c. Sicome home seisie de terre, § lessa mesme la terre a un auter per fait indent pur terme des ans, rendant a luy certain rent, il est use de mitter en le fait, que si le rent soit arere al jour de payment, ou per un semaine ou per un mois, &c. que adonque bien lirroit al lessor a distreyner, &c.  uncore le lessor soit destreiner de common droit per le rent arere, &c. coment que tiels parols ne unque fueront misés en le fait, &c.*

BUT there is a diversitie between this word si contingat, &c. and the words next aforesaid, &c. for these words, si contingat, &c. are nought worth to such a condition, unlesse it hath these words following, That it shall be lawfull for the feoffor and his heires to enter, &c. But in the casés aforesaid, it is not necessarie by the law to put such clause, scilicet, that the feoffor and his heires may enter, &c. because they may doe this by force of the words aforesaid, for that they containe in themselves a condition, scilicet, that the feoffor and his heires may enter, &c. Yet it is commonly used in all such casés aforesaid, to put the clauses in the deeds, scilicet, if the rent be behind, &c. that it shall be lawfull to the feoffor and his heires to enter, &c. And this is well done, for this intent, to declare and expresse to the common people, who are not learned in the law, of the manner and condition of the feoffement, &c. As if a man seised of land letteth the same land to another by deede indented for terme of yeares, rendering to him a certaine rent, it is used to be put into the deed, that if the rent be behind at the day of payment, or by the space of a weeke or a moneth, &c. that then it shall be lawfull to the lessor to distreine, &c. yet the lessor may distreine of common right for the rent behind, &c. though such words were not put into the deed, &c.

Its

* a—en in L. and M. and Roh.

† les tiels in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ en la — de in L. and M. de la in Roh.

¶ de la manner — le matere in L. and M. and Roh.

§ come de franktenement added in L. and M. and Roh.

 Et

posing A. to be tenant for life, with the usual powers of leasing, jointuring, and charging; remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to A.'s first and other sons in tail male; remainder to his daughters as tenants in common in tail, with cross remainders in tail between them if more than one, with remainders over; A. and his daughters may suffer a common recovery; and it will be good against A. and his daughters, and their issues in tail, and the remainders over. But the estates tail of the sons being prior to the estates of the daughters, and being supported by the estate of the trustees for preserving contingent remainders, are not, whether vested or contingent, at the time of the recovery affected by it. — But if A. granted his whole life estate to the tenant to the præcipe, it might be apprehended, that the powers relating to his estate, whether appendant or in gross, would be extinguished thereby (See Edwards v. Slater and Hardress, 410. King v. Melling, 1 Ventris 226.), and a limitation or grant of new powers would be void against the sons and the heirs male of their bodies. To prevent this question being made, A. the tenant for life, conveys an estate to the intended tenant to the præcipe, only during his (the tenant) and the grantor or bargainor's joint lives. This continues the old reversion in the grantor or bargainor, and preserves the powers relating to his original estate. — It is customary in these cases to declare, that the recovery shall enure in the first place for corroborating, strengthening, and confirming the estate for life of the grantor or bargainor, and all other estates precedent to the estate in tail meant to be destroyed, and all powers and privileges annexed to such estate for life, and other precedent estates. — The mode of suffering recoveries on a conditional estate of freehold, was in use so early as the end of the last century.

Ilz ne besoigne per la ley de mitter tiel clause, &c. Quæ dubitationis causâ tollendæ inferuntur, communem legem non lædunt. Et expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt, nihil operatur.

Per un moys, &c. Here albeit the clause of distress bee added, that if the rent be behind by the space of a weeke or a moneth, that the lessor may distraine, yet he may distraine within the weeke or moneth, because a distress is incident of common right to every rent service. And the words be in the affirmative, and therefore cannot restrain that which is incident of common right.

The other (&c.) in this section upon that which hath beene said are evident.

Sect. 332.

*ITEM, si * feoffment soit fait + sur tiel condition, que si le feoffor paya al feoffee a certaine jour, &c. 40 li. d'argent, que adonque le feoffor soit reentrer, &c. en ceo cas le feoffee est appell tenant en morgage, que est autant a dire en Francois come mort-gage, & en Latin, mortuum vadum. Et il semble que le cause pur que il est appelle mort-gage, est, pur ceo que il estoit en averroust si le feoffor † voyt payer al jour limitee tiel somme ou non: & s'il ne paya pas, donque le terre que il mitter en gage sur condition de payment de le money, est ale de luy a tous jours, & issint mort || a luy sur condition, &c. Et s'il paya le money, donques est le gage mort quant a le tenant, &c.*

ITEM, if a feoffment be made upon such condition, that if the feoffor pay to the feoffee at a certain day, &c. 40 pounds of money, that then the feoffor may reenter, &c. in this case the feoffee is called tenant in morgage, which is as much to say in French as mort-gage, and in Latine mortuum vadum (1.) And it seemeth that the cause why it is called mort-gage is, for that it is doubtful whether the feoffor will pay at the day limited such summe or not: and if he doth not pay, then the land which is put in pledge upon condition for the payment of the money, is taken from him for ever, and so dead to him upon condition, &c. And if he doth pay the money, then the pledge is dead as to the tenant, &c.

Mortgage is derived [c] of two French words, vis. mort, that is mortuum, and gage, that is vadium, or pignus. And it is called in Latine mortuum vadium, or morgagium. Now it is called here mortgage, or mortuum vadium, both for the reason here expressed by Littleton, as also to distinguish it from that which is called vadium vadium. Vadium autem dicitur vadium, quia nunquam moritur ex aliquâ parte quod ex suis proventibus acquiritur. As if a man borrow a hundred pounds of another, and maketh an estate of lands unto him, untill he hath received the said summe of the issues and the profits of the land, so as in this case neither money nor land dieth, or is lost, (whereof Littleton hath spoken [d] before in this chapter) and therefore it is called vadium vadium. [c] Glanvil. lib. 10. cap. 68. & lib. 13. cap. 26. 27. [d] Vid. Sect. 317.

Sect. 333.

* asum added in Roh. but not in L. and M. † a sum bone added in Roh. but not in L. and M. ‡ 2097— poet, in L. and M. and Roh. || a lay sur condition, &c. Et s'il paya le money dont est le gage mort, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Few parts of the law lead to the discussion of more extensive or useful learning than the law of mortgages. The nature of these notes neither requires nor admits more than some few general observations upon the origin of mortgages;—what constitutes a mortgage;—the different estates of the mortgagor and mortgagee, and the nature of an equity of redemption.—As to the origin of mortgages;—from what is said of them in this chapter, it appears, that they were introduced less upon the model of the Roman pignus, or hypotheca, than upon the common law doctrine of conditions. As to what constitutes a mortgage;—no particular words, or form of conveyance, are necessary for this purpose. It may be laid down as a general rule, and subject to very few exceptions, that wherever a conveyance or assignment of an estate, is originally intended as a security for money, whether this intention appears from the deed itself, or by any other instrument, it is always considered in equity as a mortgage, and redeemable; even though there is an express agreement of the parties, that it shall not be redeemable, or that the right of redemption shall be confined to a particular time, or to a particular description of persons. See Newcomb v. Bonham, 1. Vern. 7. 214. 2. Ca. in Chan. 58. 159. Howard v. Harris, 1. Vern. 33. 190. 2. Ca. in Chan. 147. Talbot v. Braddyl, 1. Vern. 183. 394. Barrel v. Sabine, 1. Vern. 268. Manlove v. Bell, 2. Vern. 84. Jennings v. Ward, ibid. 520. Price v. Perrie, 2. Freeman 258. Franchlyn v. Fern, Barnard. Cha. 30. Clinch v. Wetherby, Cal. temp. Finch, 376. Cooke v. Cooke, 2. Atk. 67. Mellor v. Lees, 2. Atk. 494. Cottrell v. Purchase, Cal. temp. Talbot, 61. As to the nature of the estates of the mortgagor and mortgagee, it was not, till lately, accurately settled. It was formerly contended, that the mortgagor, after forfeiture of the condition, had but a mere right to reduce the estate back to his own possession, by payment of the money. It is now established, that the mortgagor has an actual estate in equity, which may be devised, granted, and entailed; that the entails of it may be barred by fine and recovery; but that he only holds the possession of the land, and receives the rents of it, by the will or permission of the mortgagee, who may by ejectment, without giving any notice, recover against him or his tenant. In this respect the estate of a mortgagee is inferior to that of a tenant at will. In equity, the mortgagee is considered as holding the lands only as a pledge or security for payment of his money. Hence a mortgage in fee is considered only as personal estate in equity, though the legal estate vests in the heir in point of law. Hence also a mortgagee, though in possession, will, in case of a living vacant, be compelled in equity to present the nominee of the mortgagor to it,—even though nothing but the advowson is mortgaged to him. On the same principle there is a possessio fratris; and tenancy by the curtesy, of an equity of redemption. Casborne v. Scarfe, 1. Atk. 603. Keeche v. Narne, Doug.

Sect. 333.

*ITEM, sicome home poit faire feoffment en fee en mortgage, * issint home poit faire done en taile en mortgage, & un leas pur terme de vie, ou pur terme des ans en mortgage. † Et tous tiels tenants sont appels tenants en mortgage, solonque les estates que ils ont en la terre, &c.*

A L S O, as a man may make a feoffment in fee in mortgage, so a man may make a gift in taile in mortgage, and a lease for terme of life, or for terme of yeares in mortgage. And all such tenants are called tenants in mortgage, according to the estates which they have in the land, &c.

This section upon that which hath beene said needeth no further explication.

Sect. 334.

27. H. 8. 19. b.

Lib. 8. fol. 91. Frances' case.
(1. Roll. 426.)

(Post. 219. b.)

QUE le feoffor payera a tiel jour, &c.

Albeit conditions bee not favoured, yet they are not alwayes taken literally, but in this case the law enableth the heire that was not named to performe the condition for foure causes. (1)

First, Because there is a day limited, so as the heire commeth within the time limited by the condition, for otherwise he could not doe it, as shall be said hereafter in this chapter.

Secondly, For that the condition descends unto the heire, and therefore the law that giveth him an interest in the condition, giveth him an abilitie to performe it.

Thirdly, For that the feoffee doth receive no damage or prejudice therby (all these reasons are expressely to be collected out of the words of Littleton). And these things being observed,

Fourthly, The intent and true meaning of the condition shall be performed. And where it is here said, that the heire may tender a jour assesse, &c. herein is implied, that

ITEM, si feoffment soit fait en mortgage sur condition, que le feoffor payera tiel somme a tiel jour, &c. come est ‡ enter eux per leur fait endent accorde & limit, coment que le feoffor morust devant le jour de payment, &c. uncore si le heire || le feoffor paya mesme le somme § de money a mesme le jour a le feoffee, ou tender a luy les deniers, et le feoffee ceo refusa de recevoir, donque poit l'heire entrer en le terre; et uncore le condition est, que si le feoffour payera tiel somme a tiel jour, &c. nient feasant mention en le condition

A L S O, if a feoffment be made in mortgage upon condition, that the feoffor shall pay such a summe at such a day, &c. as is betweene them by their deed indented agreed and limited, although the feoffor dyeth before the day of payment, &c. yet if the heire of the feoffor pay the same summe of money at the same day to the feoffee, or tender to him the money, and the feoffee refuse to receive it, then may the heire enter into the land; and yet the condition is, that if the feoffor shall pay such a summe at such a day, &c. not making mend'ascun

* issint home poit faire done en taile en mortgage, not in L. and M. or Roh.

† enter—perenter, L. and M. and Roh.
M. nor Roh.

‡ de added in L. and M. and Roh.

† Et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ de money not in L. and

Doug. 21. Mofs v. Gallimore, ibid. 266. Amherst v. Dawling, 2. Vern. 401. Gally v. Selby, Stran. 403. Gardner v. Griffith, 2. P. Will. 404. Mackenzie v. Robinson, 2. Atk. 559. — In this light the legislature has viewed the different estates of mortgagor and mortgagee in the statutes of the 7th of Will. and M. c. 25. and 9. Ann. c. 5. — As to the nature of an equity of redemption: — originally there was no right of redemption in the mortgagor. Lord Hale, in the case of Rose Carrick v. Barton, 1. Chan. Ca. 219. says, that in the 14th year of Richard II. the parliament would not admit of redemption. See the printed Rolls, vol. 3. p. 259. It was, however, admitted not long after. But after its admission, if the money was not paid at the time appointed, the estate became liable, in the hands of the mortgagee, to his legal charges, to the dower of his wife, and to escheat; and it was an opinion, that there was no redemption against those who came in by the post. This introduced mortgages for long terms of years. These are attended with this particular advantage, that on the death of the mortgagee, the term and the right in equity to receive the mortgage debt vest in the same person: whereas, in cases of mortgages in fee, the estate, on the death of the mortgagee, goes to his heir, or devisee, and the money is payable to his executor or administrator. This produces a separation of rights, that is often attended with great inconvenience, both to the mortgagor and mortgagee. On the other hand, in case of mortgages for years, there is this defect, that if the estate is foreclosed, the mortgagee will be only intitled for his term. — To guard against which, it has been thought advisable to make the mortgagor covenant, that, on nonpayment of the money, he will not only confirm the term, but convey the freehold and inheritance to the mortgagee, or as he shall appoint, discharged of all equity of redemption. The difference between a trust and an equity of redemption, is observed by lord Hale in the case of Powlett and the Attorney-general, Hard. 465.

(1) V. T. 15. Jac. After covenant to stand seized to the use of B. and his heirs, with proviso of revocation on payment to B. and his assigns; B. dies; he may tender to the heir, and revoke. Allen's case, Ley. 55. b. Hal. MSS.

*d'ascun payment d'estre fait per son heire, mes pur ceo que le heire ad interesse de droit en le condition, &c. et l'entent fuit forsque que les deniers serront paies al jour assesse, &c. & le feoffee n'ad plus damage, si il soit pay per l'heire, que s'il fuit pay per le pier, &c. et pur cest cause, si le heire paya les deniers, ou tendra les deniers a le jour assesse, &c. et l'auter ceo refusa, il poet entrer, &c. Mes si un estranger de sa teste demesne, que n'ad ascun interesse, &c. voile tender les * avantdits deniers al feoffee a le jour assesse, le feoffee n'est † pas tenu de ceo recevoir.*

tion in the condition of any payment to be made by his heire, but for that the heire hath interest of right in the condition, &c. and the intent was but that the mony should be payed at the day assessed, &c. and the feoffee hath no more losse, if it be paid by the heir, then if it were paid by the father, &c. therefore if the heire pay the money or tender the money at the day limited, &c. and the other refuse it, he may enter, &c. But if a stranger of his own head, who hath not any interest, &c. will tender the aforesaid money to the feoffee at the day appointed, the feoffee is not bound to receive it.

keth a feoffment in fee upon condition, that the feoffor shall within one yeare goe to the cite of Paris about the affaires of the feoffee, and presently after the feoffor dyeth, so as it is impossible by the act of God that the condition should be performed, yet the estate of the feoffee is become absolute; for though the condition be subsequent to the state, yet there is a precedency before the re-entry, viz. the performance of the condition. And if the land should by construction of law be taken from the feoffee, this should work a damage to the feoffee, for that the condition is not performed which was made for his benefit. And it appeareth by Littleton, that it must not be to the damage of the feoffee; and so it is if the feoffor shall appear in such a court the next tearme, and before the day the feoffor dyeth, the estate of the feoffee is absolute. [b] But if a man be bound by recognizance or bond with condition that he shall appear the next tearme in such a court, and before the day the conferee or obligor dyeth, the recognizance or obligation is saved; and the reason of the diversitie is, because the state of the land is executed and settled in the feoffee, and cannot be redeemed back againe but by matter subsequent, viz. the performance of the condition. But the bond or recognizance is a thing in action, and executory, whereof no advantage can be taken untill there be a default in the obligor; and therefore in all cases where a condition of a bond, recognizance, &c. is possible at the time of the making of the condition, and before the same can be performed, the condition becomes impossible by the act of God, or of the law, or of the obligee, &c. there the obligation, &c. is saved. But if the condition of a bond, &c. be impossible at the time of the making of the condition, the obligation, &c. is single. And so it is in case of a feoffment in fee with a condition subsequent that is impossible, the state of the feoffee is absolute; but if the condition precedent be impossible, no state the executors or administrators of the mortgageor, or in default of them the ordinary may also tender, as shall be said [f] hereafter in this chapter. But what if the condition had beene, if the mortgageor or his heires did pay, &c. and hee dyed before the day without heire, so as the condition became impossible, here it is to be observed, that where the condition becometh impossible to be performed by the act of God, as by death, &c. the state of the feoffee shall not be avoyded, as shall be said hereafter in this chapter. And therefore the law here inablen the heire (of whom no mention was made in the condition) to performe the condition, least the inheritance should be lost, wherein divers diversities are worthy of observation. (1)

First, betweene a condition annexed to a state in lands or tenements upon a feoffment, gift in taile, &c. and a condition of an obligation, recognizance, or such like. [g] For if a condition annexed to lands be possible at the making of the condition, and become impossible by the act of God, yet the state of the feoffee, &c. shall not be avoyded. As if a man ma-

[f] Vid. Sect. 337.

[g] Pl. Com. 456. Wrothe's case, 14 H. 7. 3. 15. H. 7. 1. 14. E. 4. 3. 38. H. 6. 2. 3]

[h] 15. H. 7. 18. 31. H. 6. barre 60. 18. E. 4. 17. 9. Eliz. 262. Dyer lib. 5. 23. Laughter's case, 38. H. 6. 2.

Fleta lib. 4. cap. 9. & Bracton & Britton ubi supra.

* avantdits not in L. and M. but in Roh.

† pas not in L. and M. but in Roh.

(1) Lord Coke here considers the effect of impossible conditions. 1st. Where they are possible at the time of their creation, but afterwards become impossible; and he distinguishes that impossibility which is produced by the act of God, and that which is produced by the act of the party. 2dly. When they are impossible at the time of their creation. 3dly. When they are against law, either as mala prohibita, or mala in se.—4thly. When they are repugnant to the grant by which they are created, or to the estate to which they are annexed. It should be observed, that a condition is then only considered in the eye of the law as impossible at the time of the creation, if it cannot by any means take effect. Such is the case put by lord Coke, that the obligee shall go from the church of St. Peter at Westminster to the church of St. Peter at Rome, within three hours. But if it only be in an high degree improbable, and such as is beyond the power of the obligee to effect, it is not then considered as impossible. See the cases of this nature in 1. Roll. Abr. 419. 420.—It is said, that if the condition of a bond be to pay a certain sum, or to do any other act, out of his Majesty's dominions, the condition is void, and the bond is single, because the performance of it cannot be tried. See 21. Edw. 4. 10.—It was upon a similar principle, that if a man professed himself a monk in a religious house beyond seas, it was no disability, because the fact could not be tried. For the only method which the law had to know if a man was professed, was to issue a writ in the king's name to the bishop of the diocese, commanding him to certify if such a monk was professed in such a house in such a place within his diocese. But this method could not be used with respect to foreign professions, as the bishop was not bound to obey the king's writ, and might certify either true or false, without subjecting himself to punishment. For this reason no notice was taken in our law of foreign profession.—Thus L. Rolle, 2. Abr. 43. says, "If an Englishman goes into France, and there becomes a monk, he is, notwithstanding, capable of a grant in England; for that such profession is not triable; and also, for that all profession is taken away by the statute; and, by our religion, now received, such vows and profession are held void. I have heard," continues he, "that this was in 44. Eliz. in one Ley's case, resolved accordingly by all the justices in Chancery-lane."

(1. Leo. 229. 1. Roll. Abr. 420. Cro. El. 291. 864.)
 14. H. 8. 28. 10. H. 7. 22. 4. H. 7. 4. 8. E. 4. 1. 28. H. 8. 25. lib. 5. fo. 22. Laughter's case. & 75. 39. H. 3. 5. 17. H. 6. Obligation. 18. 5. El. Dier 222.

* Pl. Com. Fuller's case, 279.
 (1. Roll. Abr. 418. Poll. 217. b. 218.)

25. H. 6. tit. barre 262. 17. H. 6. barre 60. 2. E. 2. 9. 9. Eliz. Dyer 262. 28. H. 8. 30.
 (8th Rep. 83. a. 92. a. Hob. 24.)

[i] 4. H. 7. 4. 30. H. 8. Dyer 42. 11. H. 4. 57. in protection. 10. H. 7. 18.
 (Doc. Pla. 230.)

[k] Vid. Bracon, Britton, Fleta ubi supra.

Bracton lib. 3. fol. 100. 2. H. 4. 9. 8. E. 4. 12. b. 2. E. 4. 2. & 3. 4. H. 7. 4. b. 10. H. 7. 22. 14. H. 8. 28. 43. E. 3. 6. 13. (1. Roll. Abr. 418. Flo. 64. b.)
 2. H. 4. 9.
 (2. Ven. 109.)

(Pl. Com. Browning's case 133.)

Poll. Sect. 360. 10. Rep. 38. Hob. 170. 1. Roll. Abr. 419.)

7. H. 6. 43. b. 21. H. 6. 32. 21. H. 7. 11. 21. H. 7. 30. 20. E. 4. 8.
 (Moore 810. Poll. 225.)
 Pl. Com. in Browning's case 133. a. 27. H. 8.

Vide sect. 325.
 (5. Rep. 114.)

Vide sect. 401. Hill. 28. Eliz. in Banco Regis inter Watkins & Atwick pro tenetis in Com. Devon. 45. E. 3. tit. Release 28. 32. E. 1. tit. Annuity 51. 33. H. 6. 13.
 (1. Leo. 34. Moore 222. Poll. 225. b. 225. a.)

36. H. 6. tit. barre 166. 33. E. 1. tit. Annuity 51. 33. E. 3. judgement. 254.

state or interest shall grow thereupon. And to illustrate these by examples you shall understand. If a man be bound in an obligation, &c. with condition that if the obligor doe goe from the church of St. Peter in Westminster to the church of St. Peter in Rome within three hours, that then the obligation shall be voyd. The condition is voyde and impossible, and the obligation standeth good.

And so it is if a feoffment be made upon condition that the feoffee shall goe as is aforesaid, the state of the feoffee is absolute, and the condition impossible and voyde.

* If a man make a lease for life upon condition that if the lessee goe to Rome, as is aforesaid, that then he shall have a fee, the condition precedent is impossible and voyde, and therefore no fee simple can grow to the lessee.

If a man make a feoffment in fee upon condition that the feoffee shall re-entfeoff him before such a day, and before the day the feoffor disseite the feoffee and hold him out by force untill the day be past, the state of the feoffee is absolute, for "the feoffor is the cause wherefore the condition cannot be performed, and therefore shall never take advantage for non-performance thereof. [i]" And so it is if A. be bound to B. that I. S. shall marry Jane G. before such a day, and before the day B. marry with Jane, he shall never take advantage of the bond, for that he himselfe is the meane that the condition could not be performed. And this is regularly true in all cases.

But it is commonly holden [k] that if the condition of a bond, &c. be against law, that the bond itselfe is voyd.

But herein the law distinguisheth between a condition against law for the doing of any act that is malum in se, and a condition against law (that concerneth not any thing that is malum in se) but therefore is against law, because it is either repugnant to the state, or against some maxime or rule in law. And therefore the common opinion is to bee understood of conditions against law for the doing of some act that is malum in se, and yet therein alse the law distinguisheth. As if a man be bound upon condition that he shall kill I. S. the bond is voyde.

But if a man make a feoffment upon condition that the feoffee shall kill I. S. the estate is absolute, and the condition voyd.

If a man make a feoffment in fee upon condition that he shall not alien, this condition is repugnant and against law, and the state of the feoffee is absolute (whereof more shall bee said in his proper place). But if the feoffee be bound in a bond, that the feoffee or his heires shall not alien, this is good, for he may notwithstanding alien if he will forfeit his bond that he himselfe hath made.

So it is if a man make a feoffment in fee upon condition that the feoffee shall not take the profits of the land, this condition is repugnant and against law, and the state is absolute.

But a bond with a condition that the feoffee shall not take the profits is good. If a man be bound with a condition to entfeoff his wife, the condition is voyde and against law, because it is against the maxime in law, and yet the bond is good; but if he be bound to pay his wife money, that is good. Et sic de similibus, whereof there bee plentifull authorities in our bookes (1).

Tender les deniers al jour assesse, &c. Note, hereby is implied, that albeit a convenient time before sun set be the last time given to the feoffor to tender, yet if he tender it to the person of the mortgagee at any time of the day of payment, and hee refuseth it, the condition is saved for that time.

Il poet enter, &c. And so may his heire after his death.

Mes si estranger de sa teste demefne, que n'ad ascun interesse, &c. voile tender les avantdits deniers al feoffee al jour assesse, le feoffee n'est pas tenu de ceo receiver. Note, by this period and the (&c.) it is implied, that if the mortgager dye, his heire within age of 14 yeares (the land being holden in focage), the next of kinne to whom the land cannot descend being his gardian in focage may tender in the name of the heir, because he hath an interest as gardian in focage. Also if the heire be within age of 21 yeares, and the land is holden by knights service, the lord of whom the land is holden may make the tender for his interest which hee shall have when the condition is performed, for these in respect of their interest are not accounted estrangers.

But if the heire be an idiot, of what age soever, any mar may make the tender for him in respect of his absolute disability, and the law in this case is grounded upon charity, and so in like cases.

Le feoffee n'est pas tenu de ceo receiver. And note that Littleton saith, that hee is not bound to receive it at a stranger's hand. But if any stranger in the name of

(1) It is observed in 1. P. W. 189, that "all instances of conditions against law, in a legal sense, are reducible under one of these three heads; either, to do malum in se, or malum prohibitum; 2dly, to omit the doing of something that is a duty; 3dly, to encourage such crimes and omissions. And such conditions as these, the law will always, and without any regard to circumstances, defeat." It is not within the plan of these notes to enumerate, or discuss, the various instances in which the conditions of bonds have been held unlawful at law, or in equity. Those which chiefly deserve consideration are such as relate to, 1st, Bonds given for procuring marriages, or what is usually called marriage brokerage. See Hall v. Potten, 3. Levinz. 411. Shower's Par. Cas. 76. Brown's Par. Cas. 60. Scribblehill v. Brett, Brown's Par. Cas. 57. Heat v. Allen, 2. Vern. 533. Cole v. Gibson, 1. Vez. 503. 2dly, Bonds restraining the obligor from a free exercise of a trade. Here, if the restraint be qualified, so as only to take in a particular place, and the breach of the condition tends apparently to the detriment of the obligee, and a consideration is given by the obligee to the obligor for executing the bond, the condition will not be impeached either at law or in equity. See 1. P. W. 190. 191. 10th Mod. 133. 3dly, Bonds of resignation. The validity of these bonds, and the propriety of their being supported, considered as a matter of policy, was most elaborately and ably discussed in the great cause of the bishop of London and Fytche, heard on appeal in the House of Lords in May 1783. A state of this case, and of the arguments and speeches of the lords, prelates, and judges who spoke when it was heard before the Lords, is to be found in Mr. Cunningham's Law of Simony. —It seems to be settled, that if a bond is given with a condition to do several things, and only some of them are against law, the bond shall be good as to the doing the things agreeable to law, and only void as to those which are against law. Norton v. Sims, Hob. 14. Mosdell v. Middleton 237. Pearson v. Humes, 229. Chefman v. Nainby, lord Raymond 145.

of the mortgageor or his heire (without his consent or privity) tender the money, and the mortgagee accepteth it, this is a good satisfaction, and the mortgageor or his heire agreeing thereunto may re-enter into the land. omnis ratibabitio retrò trahitur & mandato æquiparatur. But the mortgageor or his heire may disagree thereunto if he will. (Ant. 186. b. Post. 245. a. 258. a.)

Sect. 335.

ET memorandum que en tiel cas, l'ou tiel tender de le money est fait, &c. Et le feoffee de recevoir ceo refusa, per que le feoffor ou ses heires entront, &c. donque le feoffee n'ad aucun remedy d'aver le money per le common ley, pur ceo que il serra rette sa follie que il refusa le money quant un loyal tendre de ceo fuit fait a luy.

AND be it remembered that in such case, where such tender of the money is made, &c. and the feoffee refuse to receive it, by which the feoffor or his heires enter, &c. then the feoffee hath no remedy by the common law to have this money, because it shall be accounted his owne folly that he refused the money, when a lawful tender of it was made unto him. (1)

TENDER de le money est fait, &c.

Here is implied at the due time and place according to the condition.

Entront, &c. viz.

into the lands or tenements.

Donque le feoffee n'ad aucun remedy d'aver le money per le common ley, &c.

And the reason is, because the money is collateral to the land, and the feoffee hath no remedy therefore.

If an obligation of an hundred pound be made with condition for the payment of fifty pound at a day, and at the day the obligor tender the money, and the obligee refuse the same, yet in action of debt upon the obligation

8. E. 2. tit. Aff. 389. 31. Aff. 32.

(2. Roll. Abr. 523. 524. Sid. 13. 364. 365.)

22. H. 6. 39. 21. E. 4. 25.

22. E. 3. 5.

Lib. 9. fo. 79. H. Pevtoe's case. (2. Roll. Abr. 523. Dyer 24. b. 25. a. cont.)

8. E. 2. tit. Aff. 389.

(2. Saun. 48.)

7. H. 4. 18. 5. Mar. Dier. 150.

21. E. 4. 25. 22. E. 3. 5. 33. H. 6.

2. b. 17. Aff. pl. 2. 20. E. 4. 1.

b. 9. H. 6. 16. 36. H. 6. 26. 15.

E. 4. 1. 16. H. 7. 13. 18. E. 3. 53.

7. E. 4. 4. b. 19. H. 8. 12.

27. H. 8. 1. a.

22. H. 6. 39. tit. Abatement 11.

49. E. 3. 3. 19. H. 6. 12.

[e] Henry Pevtoe's case, ubi supra.

31. Aff. 25. 11. H. 4. 33. 1. H. 6.

8. 1. E. 4. 17. E. 4. 3. Pl. Com.

Fogasse's case, fo. 6.

(Moore 36. 37. Post. 236. b.)

if the defendant plead the tender and refusal, he must also plead that he is yet ready to pay the money, and tender the same in court. But if the plaintiff will not then receive it, but take issue upon the tender, and the same be found against him, he hath lost the money for ever.

If a man be bound in 200 quarters of wheat for deliverie of a 100 quarters, if the obligor tender at the day the 100 quarters, &c. he shall not plead uncore priff, because albeit it be the parcell of the condition, yet they be bona peritura, and it is a charge for the obligor to keep them. And the reason wherefore in the case of the obligation the summe mentioned in the condition is not lost by the tender and refusal, is not only for that it is a duty and parcel of the obligation, and therefore is not lost by the tender and refusal, but also for that the obligee hath remedy by law for the same. And in this case, liberata pecunia non liberat offerentem.

But if a man make a single bond, or knowledge a statute or recognizance, and afterwards made a defeasance for the payment of a lesser sum at a day, if the obligor or consor tender the lesser summe at the day, and the obligee or consor refuse it, he shall never have any remedy by law to recover it, because it is no parcell of the sum contained in the obligation, statute or recognizance, being contained in the defeasance made at the time or after the obligation, statute, or recognizance. And in this case in pleading of the tender and refusal the partie shall not be driven to plead, that he is yet ready to pay the same or to tender it in court: neither hath the obligee or consor any remedy by law to recover the summe contained in the defeasance. [e] And so it is if a man make an obligation of 100 pound with condition for the deliverie of corne or timber, &c. or for the performance of an arbitrement, or the doing of any act, &c. This is collateral to the obligation, that is to say, is not parcell of it, and therefore a tender and refusal is a perpetuall barre (2).

But if a man be bound to make a feoffment in fee to the obligee, and he make a lease and a release to him and his heires, albeit this be a collateral condition, yet is it well performed, because this amounts in law to a feoffment (3).

Money, moneta, legalis moneta Angliæ, lawfull money of England, either in gold or silver, is of two sorts, viz. the English money coyned by the king's authority,

Lib. 5. fo. 114. 115.

Wade's case, lib. 9. fo. 78.

(1) Here the performance of the condition is excused by the default of the feoffee or obligee, viz. by tender and refusal. It is also excused, 1. By his absence in those cases where his presence is necessary for the performance of the condition. 2. By his obstructing or preventing the performance. And 3. By his neglecting to do the first act, if it is incumbent on him to perform it. See the cases in 1. Roll. Abr. 457. 458. It is also excused, in some cases, by his not giving notice to the feoffee or obligee. See 1. Roll. Abr. 463. 467. 468.

(2) In the 10th, 11th, and 12th editions, there is in the margin a reference to 3. Cro. 755.; but there is no such page in that volume of Croke. Most probably it is misprinted for 1. Cro. 755. Cotton v. Clifton, where it was held, "that where an obligation is made, and afterwards a defeasance is made thereof, if he pays a less sum; there, if he pleads the defeasance and the tender of the lesser sum, he need not to say tout temps priff; for, by the tender, he was discharged of all: but otherwise it is of an obligation with a condition to pay a lesser sum."

(3) None of the authorities in the margin go to this point. In Plo. 156. it is laid down that a lease and release may be pleaded as a feoffment; and 1. Finch. 48. and 2. Finch. 68. it is said that a lease and release amounts to a feoffment. But this must be understood with some qualifications, as the operation of a feoffment is, in some instances, much more forcible, and of course may be much more beneficial to the person entitled to the benefit of the condition, than the operation of a lease and release. The nature of a feoffment will be fully considered in one of the notes to the chapter of Releases.

(5. Rep. 114. Wade's case 2 Inf. 379. 742. 3. Inf. 93.)

Aristotle, lib. 5. cap. 8.
(Cro. Car. 89. Trover and Conversion lies for money out of a bag.)
(*) 2. H. 5. stat. 2. cap. 7.
(Cro. El. 841.)

authority, or forraïne coyne by proclamation made currant within the realme. Coyne, cuna dicitur à cudendo, of coyning of money. In French, coine signifieth a corner, because in ancient time money was square with corners, as it is in some countries at this day. Some say that coine dicitur à coire, id est communis, quod fit omnibus rebus communis. Moneta dicitur à monendo, not only because he that hath it, is to be warned providently to use it, but also because nota illa de auctore & valore admonet. Pecunia dicitur à pecu, beasts, omnes enim veterum divitiæ in animalibus consistebant; and it appeareth that in Homer's time, there was no money but exchange of cattell, &c. (1)

Nummus, a quo nomen, quia lege fit non natura. Vide the statute of 9. H. 5. of the noble, halfe noble, and farthing of gold, which is the fourth part of a noble, and that is twenty pence.

Sect. 336.

12. E. 3. Condic. 8. 13. Ed. 3. ibid. 10. 12. Aff. 5.
Flo. 461.

ET s'il faile de pair les deniers, &c.

If a man make a feoffment of lands, to have and to hold to him and his heires, upon condition, that if the feoffee pay to the feoffor at such a day twenty pounds, that then the feoffee shall have the lands to him and his heires, if the condition had not proceeded further, it had been void, for that the feoffee had a fee simple by the first words, and therefore the words subsequent are materially added, (and if he faile to pay the money, &c.)

(5. Rep. 117.)

Li. 5. fo. 96. 97. Goodale's case.

Le second feoffee voile tender le summe des de-
niers, &c.

Albeit the second feoffee bee not named in the condition, yet shall hee tender the summe because he is privie in estate, and in judgment of law hath an estate and interest in the condition, (as Littleton here saith) for the salvation of his tenancy. Vid. Sect. 334. And note, he that hath interest in the condition on the one side, or in the land on the other, may tender.

(8. Rep. 45. b.)

(a. Cro. 9. 245.)

Li. 5. fo. 114. 115. Wade's case

And it is to bee ob-

ITEM si feoffment
soit fait sur tiel condition, que si le feoffee paya al feof-for a tiel jour inter eux limit xxl.* adonques le feoffee avera la terre a luy et a ses beires; et s'il faile de payer les deniers a le jour + assesse, † que adonque bien list a le feoffor ou a ses beires d'entrer, &c. et puis devant le jour assesse, le feoffee verra la terre a un auter, et de ceo fait feoffment a luy, en c'est case si le second feoffee voile tender le summe de les deniers a le jour assesse a le feoffor, et le feoffor ceo refusa, &c. donque le second feoffee ad estate en la terre clerement sans condition.
Et la cause est, pur ceo que le second feoffee avoit interest en le condition pur salvation de || son tenancie. Et en cest case il semble que si le primer feoffee apres tiel vender de la terre, voile tender le money a

ALSO if a feoffment be made on this condition, that if the feoffee pay to the feoffor at such a day between them limited, twenty pounds, then the feoffee shall have the land to him and to his heires; and if he faile to pay the money at the day appointed, that then it shall be lawfull for the feoffor or his heires to enter, &c. and afterwards before the day appointed the feoffee sel the land to another, and of this maketh a feoffe-ment to him, in this case if the second feoffee wil tender the sum of money at the day appointed to the feoffor, and the feof-for refuseth the same, &c.
then the second feoffee hath an estate in the land cleerely without condition. And the reason is, for that the second feoffee hath an interest in the condition for the safeguard of his tenancy. And in this case it seemes that if the first feoffee after such sale of the land, will tender the

le

* que added in L. and M. and Roh. L. and M. and Roh.

† assesse—&c. L. and M.

‡ que added in Roh. but not in L. and M.

|| son—ie

(1) See the account given in Bla. Com. vol. I. ch. 7. of his majesty's prerogative respecting the coin of the kingdom; and see 5. Mod. 7. 2. Sal. 446. For the etymology of the word Sterling, see Du Cange and Spelman's Glossaries, under the word Esterlingus; and Mr. Leake's Historical Account of English Money, page 20. Guineas took their name from the gold brought from Guinea by the African Company, who, as an encouragement to bring over gold to be coined, were permitted, by their charter, to have their stamp of an elephant upon the coin made of the African gold.—By a proclamation of the 22d of December, 1717, the guinea, which till then had been current for 21 shillings and sixpence, was reduced to 20 shillings, and half-guineas, double-guineas, and five pound pieces in proportion.

(2) See note 1. fol. 216.

(3) And if at the time of the feoffment a purer or more weighty money were current, and before the day of payment coin of a baser alloy is established by proclamation, a tender of the sum in that coin is good. Dav. Rep. 18. Note to the 11th edition.

le jour assesse, &c. a le feoffor, ceo serra assets bone pur salvation d'estate de le second feoffee, pur ceo que le primer feoffee fuit privie a le condition, et issint le tender de ascun de eux deux est assets bone, &c.

or telling the same, for he doth that which he ought, viz. to bring the money in purses or bagges, which is the usuall manner to carry money in, and then it is the part of the party that is to receive it to put it out and tell it.

A primer feoffee. Here it appeareth, that the first feoffee may, notwithstanding his feoffment, pay the money to the feoffor, because he is partie and privie to the condition, and by his tender may save the estate of his feoffee, which in all good dealing he ought to doe.

money at the day appointed, &c. to the feoffor, this shall be good enough for the safeguard of the estate of the second feoffee, because the first feoffee was privie to the condition, and so the tender of either of them two is good enough, &c. (1) served also, that the feoffee may tender any money that is currant within the realme, albeit it be forreine coine, so as it be currant by act of parliament, or by the king's proclamation, as hath beene said.

Tender le summe.

The feoffee may tender the money in purses or bagges, without shewing the money in purses or bagges, without shewing

Sect. 337.

ITEM si feoffement soit fait sur condition, Que si le feoffor paya certaine summe d'argent al feoffee, adonques bien virroit a feoffor et a ses heires d'entrer: en cest case si le feoffor devie devant le payment fait, et l'heire voile tender al feoffee les deniers, tiel tender est voyd, pur ceo que le temps deins quel ceo doit estre fait est passe. Car quaut le condition est, que si le feoffor paya les deniers al feoffee, &c. ceo est tant a dire, que si le feoffor durant sa vie paya les deniers al feoffee, &c. et quant le feoffor morust, don-*

ALSO if a feoffment be made upon condition, that if the feoffor pay a certaine summe of money to the feoffee, then it shal be lawfull to the feoffor and his heires to enter: in this case if the feoffor die before the payment made, and the heire wil tender to the feoffee the money, such tender is void, because the time within which this ought to be done is past. For when the condition is, that if the feoffor pay the money to the feoffee, &c. this is as much to say, as if the feoffor during his life pay the money to the feoffee, &c. and when the feof-

THIS diversitie is plaine and evident, and agreeth with our (a) books, and yet somewhat shal be observed hereupon: for here it appeareth, that seeing no time is limited, the law doth appoint the time, and that is, during the life of the feoffor. Wherein divers diversities are worthy the observation:

First, Betweene this case that Littleton here putteth of the condition of a feoffment in fee, for the payment of money where no time is limited, and the condition of a bond for the payment of a summe of money where no time is limited: for in such a condition of a bond the money is to be paid presently, that is, in convenient time. (b) And yet in case of a condition of a bond there is a diversitie betweene a condition of an obligation, which concernes the doing of a transitorie act without limitation of any time, as payment of money, delivery of charters, or the like, for there the condition is to be performed presently, that is, in convenient time; and when by the condition of the obligation the act that is to be done

(a) 14. H. 7. 31. 15. H. 7. 1. (Ant. 47. Post. 219. a. 2. Cro. 244.)

(2. Co. 70.)

44. E. 3. 9. 33. H. 6. 43. & 48. b. 4. E. 4. 29. 9. E. 4. 22. 15. E. 4. 30. 21. E. 4. 38. b. 9. H. 7. 17. b. 10. H. 7. 15. 14. H. 8. 21. a. & 23. b.

(b) Lib. 6. fol. 30. 31. Boothie's case. 33. H. 6. 47. 48.

(1. Roll. Abr. 436.)

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In the same manner equity permits all persons to redeem, who have any estate or interest in the equity of redemption of the mortgagor; as tenant for life, remainder-man or reversioner, jointress, tenant by the curtesy, by elegit, statute merchant, or staple, &c. All these may redeem; and volunteers are equally admitted to redeem, as purchasers for a valuable consideration. Howard v. Harris, 1 Vern. 193. 2. Eq. Cas. Abr. 594. The tenant for life and jointress contribute, in the proportion of one-third, towards the redemption of the mortgage debt; the remainder-man or reversioner in the first case, and the owner of the fee in the other, contribute the other two-thirds. But the remainder-man or owner of the inheritance must come in to redeem in the life of the tenant for life, or jointress; for he cannot after their decease compel a contribution from their assets. 1. P. Williams 650. Cornish v. Mew, 1. Cha. Ca. 271. Prece. Cha. 62. Howel v. Price, 424. —In what cases the doweress will be permitted to redeem, is a question which involves in it many points of great nicety. The law requires a legal seisin in the husband; and it is a settled point, that the wife cannot be endowed of a trust estate. Upon this principle, it was generally understood that the wife was not intitled to her dower out of an estate, which, at the time of her marriage, was subject to a mortgage in fee. But this, perhaps, was never formally determined, till the case of Dixon v. Onslow, decreed by lord Loughborough, and the other lords commissioners, on the 13th of November 1783, against the wife, without hearing the counsel for the heir. But the case is different with respect to mortgages for terms of years. It may be observed here, 1st. that at common law, if a lease be made for a term of years rendering rent, the wife is intitled to her dower of a third part of the reversion by metes and bounds, and to a third part of the rent; and execution will not cease during the term. 2dly. If the husband makes a gift in tail, as the rent is payable out of, or in respect of, an estate of inheritance, the wife will be endowed of a third part of the rent. 3dly. If the husband makes a lease for life, rendering rent, the wife is not intitled to her dower of the rent, because it is not payable, in this case, out of, or in respect of, an

(6. Rep. 31. Boothie's case.
Post. 210. b.)

3

(2. Roll. Abr. 436. 437.)

(*) Boothie's case, ubi supra.
(Doc. Pla. 269. 457.)

4

5

(Vide ant. sect. 324.)
Boothie's case. li. 6. fo. 31. lib. 2.
fo. 79. b. Seignior Cromwell's case. 44. E. 2. 9. 21. E. 4. 41.
2. E. 4. 3. 4. 19. H. 6. 67. 73.
76. 4. E. 4. 4. b. 26. H. 8. 9. b.
(2. Rep. 59. 219. b.)

6

(Vide post. sect. 352. 353. 354.)

7

24. E. 3. Det. 138. li. 2. fo. 80.
Seignior Cromwell's case.

(*) Vid. Dyer. 14. El. 511.
(6 Rep. Boothie's case)

8

done to the obligee is of his owne nature locall, for there the obligor (no time being limited) hath time during his life, to performe it, as to make a feoffment, &c. if the obligee doth not hasten the same by request. In case where the condition of the obligation is locall, there is also a diversitie, when the concurrence of the obligor and the obligee is requisite, (as in the said case of the feoffment) and when the obligor may performe it in the absence of the obligee, as to knowledge satisfaction in the court of Kings Bench, (*) although the knowledge of satisfaction is locall, yet because he may doe it in the absence of the obligee, he must doe it in convenient time, and hath not time during his life.

Another diversitie is, where the condition concerneth a transitory or locall act, and is to be performed to the feoffee or obligee, and where it is to be performed to a stranger: as if A. be bound to B. to pay ten pounds to C. A. tender to C. and he refuseth, the bond is forfeited, as in this feoffment shall bee said more at large.

Another diversitie is betweene a condition of an obligation, and a condition upon a feoffment, where the act that is locall is to be done to a stranger, and where to the obligee or feoffor himselfe. As if one make a feoffment in fee, upon condition that the feoffee shall infeoffe a stranger, and no time limited, the feoffee shall not have time during his life to make the feoffment, for then he should take the profits in the meane time to his owne use, which the estranger ought to have, and therefore hee ought to make the feoffment as soone as conveniently he may, and so it is of the condition of an obligation. But if the condition be, that the feoffee shall re-infeoffe the feoffor, there the feoffee hath time during his life, for the privitie of the condition between them, unlesse he be hastened by request, as shall bee said hereafter.

Another diversitie is, when the obligor or feoffee is to infeoffe a stranger, as hath been said, and when a stranger is to infeoffe the feoffee or obligee: as if A. infeoffe B. of Black Acre, upon condition that if C. infeoffe B. of White Acre A. shall re-enter, C. hath time during his life, if B. doth not hasten it by request, and so of an obligation.

But in some cases albeit the condition be collateral, and is to be performed to the obligee, and no time limited, yet in respect of the nature of the thing, the obligor shall not have time during his life to performe it. As if the condition of an obligation bee, to grant an annuities or yeerely rent to the obligee during his life, payable yeerely at the feast of Easter, this annuity or yeerely rent must be granted before Easter, or else the obligee shall not have it at that feast during his life, & sic de similibus, and so was it resolved by the Judges (*) of the Common Pleas in the argument of Andrews case, which I my selfe heard.

Lastly, When the obligor, feoffor, or feoffee is to doe a sole act or labour, as to goe to Rome,

* que not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† donques added in L. and M. and Roh.

ques le temps de le tender est passé. Mes autrement est l'ou un jour de payment est limit, et le feoffor devie devant le jour, donque poet le beire tender les deniers come est avantdit, pur ceo que le temps de le tender ne fuyt passé per le mort del feoffor. Auxy il semble que en tiel case l'ou le feoffor devy devant le jour de payment, si les executors de le feoffor tendront les deniers al feoffee al jour de payment, cel tender est assés bone; et si le feoffee ceo refuse, † les beires de feoffor poient entrer, &c. Et le cause est, pur ceo que les executors representont le person leur testator, &c.

for dyeth, then the time of the tender is past. But otherwise it is where a day of payment is limited, and the feoffor die before the day, then may the heire tender the money as is aforesaid, for that the time of the tender was not past by the death of the feoffor. Also it seemeth, that in such case where the feoffor dieth before the day of payment, if the executors of the feoffor tender the money to the feoffee at the day of payment, this tender is good enough; and if the feoffee refuse it, the heires of the feoffor may enter, &c. And the reason is, for that the executors represent the person of their testator, &c. (1)

an estate of inheritance. 4thly. If the husband makes a lease for years, reserving no rent, then judgment will be given for the wife, with a cesset executio during the term. This, if the term be of long duration, deprives her, virtually, of her dower. 5thly. If a person purchases an estate of inheritance which is in mortgage for a term of years, whether he only purchases the equity of redemption, or discharges the mortgage, the wife of the vendor will not be entitled to her dower in equity. 6thly. If a person dies seised in fee, subject to a term of years, if the term be a term in gross, for securing the payment of a sum of money, the widow by discharging the money secured by it, or paying one third of the interest, will be intitled to dower. 7thly. If the term be an outstanding satisfied term, she will also be intitled to her dower against the heir. Ante. 22. a. Bro. Abr. Dower 44. 60. 89. 1. Roll. Abr. 678. Bodmin and Vandebendy, Shower's Cases in Parliament, 69. Brown v. Gibbs, Precedents in Chancery, 97. Wray v. Williams, ibid. 151. Dudley v. Dudley, ibid. 201. Banks v. Sutton, 2. P. Williams 700. Hill v. Adams, 2. Atkins, 208.—But there is a manuscript report of this last case, under the names of Swannock v. Lifford, where the argument of lord Hardwicke is stated much more at large than it is in Mr. Atkins's Report of it.—The editor begs to observe, that there are manuscript reports of many cases of the highest importance which either are not reported at all, or the printed reports of which are very short or inaccurate; and that it would be rendering a most essential service to the profession to collect and publish the manuscript reports of them.

(1) It has long been settled in equity, that mortgage money is to be paid, not to the heir but to the executor. And this holds tho' the mortgage be in fee; tho' the condition be for payment to the mortgagee, his heirs or executors; tho' there is no want of assets; and tho' there be no bond given, or covenant entered into by the mortgagor for payment of the money; and whether the mortgage be forfeited or not, at the death of the mortgagee; for equity considers a mortgage as part of the mortgagee's personality. See the argument of lord keeper Finch in Thornbrough v. Baker, 1. Cha. Ca. 285. and see 2. Cha. Ca. 50. 51. 187. 224. 2. Vent. 348. 351.—This follows from the principle, that in equity the lands are

Rome, Jerusalem, &c. in such and the like cases, the obligor, feoffor, or feoffee, hath time during his life, and cannot be hastened by request. And so it is if a stranger to the obligation or feoffment were to doe such an act, he hath time to doe it at any time during his life.

Si les executors del feoffor tendront, &c. So as now it appeareth that either the heire of the feoffor, or his executors, may (when a day is limited) pay the money; and so also may the administrator of the feoffor doe, if the feoffor dye intestate [f]; and this may the ordinarie doe if there bee neither executor nor administrator, as hath bene said. (Ant. 206. a.) Lib. 5. fol. 96. 97. Goodale's case. [f] Vid. Sect. 334. (See Henflor's case 9. Rep. 36. b.)

Et le feoffee refuse, les heires del feoffor poient entrer, &c. Nota, a tender by the executors or administrators, and a refusall, doth give the heire of the feoffor a title of entrie. And here by this (&c.) is a diversitie implied, when a tender and refusall shall give a third person title of entrie.

If a man be bound to A. in an obligation with condition to enfeoffe B. (who is a mere stranger) before a day, the obligor doth offer to enfeoffe B. and he refuseth, the obligation is forfeit, for the obligor hath taken upon him to infeoff him, and his refusall cannot satisfie the condition, because no feoffment is made; but if the feoffment had bene by the condition to be made to the obligee, or to any other for his benefit or behoofe, a tender and refusall shall save the bond, because he himselfe upon the matter is the cause wherefore the condition could not be performed, and therefore shall not give himselfe cause of action. But if A. be bound to B. with condition that C. shall enfeoffe D. in this case if C. tender, and D. refuse, the obligation is saved, for the obligor himselfe undertaketh to doe no act, but that a stranger shall infeoffe a stranger. And it is holden in bookes, [h] that in this case it shall be intended, that the feoffment should be made for the benefit of the obligee. Some to reconcile the bookes seeme to make a difference between an expresse refusall of the stranger, and a readinesse of the obligor at the day and place to make performance, and the absence of the stranger: but that can make no difference. I take it rather to be the error of the reporter, and the records themselves are necessary to be seene, for the law herein is, as it hath bene before declared.

If I enfeoffe one in fee upon condition to enfeoffe I. S. and his heires, the feoffee tenders the feoffment to I. S. and he refuseth it, the feoffor may re-enter, for by the expresse intent of the condition, the feoffee should not have and retaine any benefit or estate in the land, but as it were an instrument to convey over the land. 10. H. 6. 34. (2. Rep. 59. 1. Roll. Abr. 452. 1. Rep. 133. b.)

But in that case if the condition were to make a gift in taylor to I. S. and he refuseth it, and a tender and refusall is made, there the feoffor shall not re-enter, for that it was intended that the feoffee should have an estate in the land. And so it is if a feoffment bee made upon condition that the feoffee shall grant a rent charge to a stranger, if the feoffee tender the grant and he refuseth, the feoffor shall not re-enter, because the feoffee was to retaine the land, which points are worthy of due observation.

Here in the case of Littleton, when the executors make the tender, and the feoffee refuseth, albeit the heire be a third person, yet is he no stranger, but he and the executors also are privies in law.

Le person del testator, &c. This is to bee understood concerning goods and chattels either in possession or in action, and the executor doth more actually represent the person of the testator, than the heire doth the person of the ancestor. For if a man bindeth himselfe, his executors are bound though they bee not named, but so it is not of the heire: furthermore, here the administrators and the ordinarie also are implied, as before hath bene said. (Post. 209. b.) (2. Saun. 136.)

Sect. 338.

ET nota, que en tous cas de condition de payment de certaine somme en grosse touchant terres ou tenements, si loyall tender soit un

AND note, that in all cases of condition for payment of a certaine somme in grosse touching lands or tenements, if lawfull tender be once re-

THIS is to be understood, that he that ought to tender the money is of this discharged forever to make any other tender; but if it were a dutie before, though the feoffor enter by force of the condition, yet the debt or dutie remaineth. As if A. borroweth a hundred

Vide Sect. sequen.

are only considered as a pledge or security for the money lent, and the money is the principal, if not the sole object. Still however the mortgage is considered as forfeited in law, and the mortgagor can only recover the mortgaged lands back, by the aid of equity.—Now, as it is among the maxims of equity, that whoever claims equity must do equity; and that in payment of debts, equality is the highest equity; it has been settled, that if the equity of redemption of lands of a mortgagor in fee descends upon the heir, it is equitable assets in his hands; and debts by specialty and simple contract are paid in equal proportion. But if the equity of redemption of lands of a mortgagor for years descends upon the heir, it is legal assets, and the debts are then paid according to their legal priority: yet, in this latter case, if the creditor is obliged to pray the aid of equity, the court will direct simple contract and specialty creditors, notwithstanding the assets are legal, to come in proportionably; and if there is not sufficient to pay all, the loss to fall equally on all.—See 29. C. 2. §. 10. and 11. 3. & 4. W. & M. c. 14. Bennet v. Box, 1. Cha. Cases, 12. Wollenshott v. Croft and Long, ib. 32. Trevor v. Perryor, ib. 148. Hexon v. Wythan, ib. 248. Anonymous, 2. Cha. Ca. 54. Girling v. Lee, 1. Vern. 63. Child v. Stephens, ib. 101. Morgan v. lord Sherrard, ib. 293. Cole v. Warden, ib. 410. Plunkett v. Kirk, ib. 411. Sawley v. Gower, 2. Vern. 61. Anonymous, ib. 405. Willson v. Fielding, ib. 763. Car v. countess of Burlington, 1. P. W. 228. The creditors of sir Charles Cox, 3. P. W. 341. and see 1. Roll. Abr. 920. Hob. 265. It also follows from the above circumstance of the mortgaged lands being considered in equity as a security or pledge for the mortgage debt, that after the legal forfeiture it continues as much a debt as before: Hence, in general, the personal estate of the mortgagor is, upon his decease, to be applied in discharge of the mortgage: and this holds equally in favour of the heir; of a general devisee, or heires fallus; and of a devisee of particular lands; and whether there

Lib. 3.

(9. Rep. 79. a.)

Cap. 5.

Of Estates

Seet. 339.

hundred pound of B. and after morgageth land to B. upon condition for payment thereof; if A. tender the money to B. and hee refuseth it, A. may enter into the land, and the land is freed for ever of the condition, but yet the debt remaineth, and may bee recovered by action of debt. But if A. without any loane, debt, or dutie preceding infeoffe B. of land upon condition for the payment of a hundred pounds to B. in nature of a gratuite or gift; in that case if he tender the hundred pound to him according to the condition and he refuseth it, B. hath no remedie therefore; and so is our author in this and his other cases of like nature to be understood.

foits refuse, celuy que fufed, he which ought duiffoit tender le mo- to tender the money ney est de ceo affouth, is of this quite and Et pleinment discharge fully discharged for per tous temps a- ever afterwards.
pres.

Seet. 339.

PAIERA tiel
summe a tiel

ITEM si le feoffee en mortgage devant le

ALSO if the feoffee in mortgage before the 18. E. 4. fol. 18. lib. 5. fol. 98.

Goodale's case.
19. H. 6. 54. 20. E. 3. Account
Pl. 70.
(5. Rep. 117.)

jour, &c. Here is implied, that this payment ought to bee reall, and not in shew or appearance. For if it be agreed betweene the feoffor and the executors of the feoffee that the feoffor shall pay to the executors but part of the money, and that yet in appearance the whole summe shall be paid, and that the residue shall bee repaid, and accordingly at the day and place the whole summe is paid, and after the residue is repaid, this is no performance of the condition, for the state shall not be devesed out of the heire, which is a third person, without a true and effectuall payment, and not by a shadow or colour of payment, and the agreement precedent doth guide the payment subsequent.

jour de payment que day of payment which ferroit fait a luy, face should be made to him, ses executors et devie, makes his executors and et son heire enter en le die, and his heire entreth terre come il devoit, &c. into the land as he ought, il semble en cest cas que &c. it seemeth in this le feoffor doit payer le case that the feoffour money al jour assesse al ought to pay the money executors, et nemy al at the day appointed to beire le feoffee, pur ceo the executors, and not to que le money al com- the heire of the feoffee, mencement trenchast al because the money at the feoffee en maner come beginning trenched to un dutie, et serra en- the feoffee in manner as tendue que l'estate fuit a dutie, and shall be inten-fait per cause de le ded that the estate was prompter de le money made by reason of the per le feoffee, ou pur lending of the money by cause d'auter dutie; et the feoffee, or for some pur ceo le payment ne other dutie; and therefore serra fait al beire, come* the payment shall not be il semble, mes les pa- made to the heire, as it rols del condition soy- seemeth, but the words ent estre tiels, que le of the condition may be payment serra fait al such, as the payment shall beire. Come si le condi- be made to the heire. As tion fuit, que si le feof- if the condition were, for paya al feoffee, ou a that if the feoffor pay to ses beires, tiel summe the feoffee or to his a tiell jour, &c. la apres heires such a summe at la

la

(5. Rep. 96.)

(Ant. 209. a. 9. Rep. 39.)

* come il semble, mes les parols del condition poyent estre tiels, que le payment serra fait al beire, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

is, or is not, a bond or covenant for payment of the money. Cope v. Cope, 1. Salk. 450. Howell v. Price, in Cha. 433. Pockley v. Pockley, 1. Vern. 36. Lord Winchelsea v. Norcliffe, 1. Vern. 485. Bartholomew v. May, 1. Atk. 489. Galton v. Hancock, 2. Atk. 530. This doctrine has been frequently extended to the case of a devise of lands in trust, to pay off debts; where (particularly if the personalty is bequeathed to the executor) the courts, notwithstanding an express devise of a real estate for the payment of debts, have directed the personalty to be first applied in payment of them. See Gower v. Mead, Prec. in Cha. 2. Dolman v. Smith, ibid. 256. 2. Vern. 117. Hall v. Brooker, Gilb. Rep. 70. See also Bamfield v. Wyndham, Prec. in Cha. 101. Wainwright v. Bendloe, Gilb. Rep. 12. Stapleton v. Colville, Ca. temp. Talbot, 202.—It does not appear, that the courts of equity have fixed any determinate period of time to be such a length of possession as to bar the mortgagor's right of redemption: but as, in the courts of law, twenty years is a bar to an entry or ejectment; the courts of equity (consistently with their general system, that the rules and practice of their courts should bear an analogy to the rules and practice of the courts of law) have inclined to allow the same period of time to be a bar to a redemption.—See Cook v. Arnham, 3. P. W. 283, and the note of the editor at the end of that case.

la mort le feoffee such a day, &c. there s'il morust devant after the death of the le jour limit, le* feoffee, if he dieth be-payment doit estre fore the day limited, fait al heir al jour the payment ought to asseffe, &c. be made to the heir at the day appointed, &c.

law appoints him to receive the money, but so doth not the law appoint the heir to receive the money unless he be named.

Doit estre fait al
heire al jour asseffe, &c.
 And here it also appeareth, that if the condition upon the morgage be to pay to the mortgagee or his heirs the money, &c. and before the day of payment the mortgagee dieth, the feoffor cannot pay the money to the executors of the mortgagee: for Littleton saith that in this case the payment ought to be made to the heir. Et in hoc casu designatio unius persone est exclusio alterius, & expressum facit cessare tacitum; and the law shall never seeke out a person, when the parties themselves have appointed one. But if the condition be to pay the money to the feoffee his heirs or executors, then the feoffor hath election to pay it either [m] to the heir or executors.

Vid. lib. 5. fo. 96. Goodale's case
 Dier. 2. Eliz. 181. 44. E. 3. 1. b.
 (Ant. 47. 2.)

[m] 12. E. 3. Condition 8. & 10.
 (8. Rep. 73.)

If a man make a feoffment in fee upon condition that the feoffee shall pay to the feoffor his heirs or assigns 20 pound at such a day, and before the day the feoffor make his executors and dieth, the feoffee may pay the same either to the heir or to the executors, for they are his assigns in law to this intent. But if a man make a feoffment in fee upon condition that if the feoffor pay to the feoffee his heirs or assigns 20 pound before such a feast, and before the feast the feoffee maketh his executors and dyeth, the feoffor ought to pay the money to the heir, and not to the executors, for the executors in this case are no assigns in law; and the reason of this diversitie is this, for that in the first case the law must of necessity finde out assigns, because there cannot be any assigns in deed, for the feoffor hath but a bare condition and no estate in the land which he can assigne over. But in the other case the feoffee hath an estate in the land which he may assigne over, and where there may bee assigns in deed, the law shall never seeke out or appoint any assigns in law. And albeit the feoffee made no assignment of the estate, yet the executors cannot be assigns, because assigns were only intended by the condition to be assigns of the estate; and so was it resolved (*) Micb. 23. & 24. Eliz. by the two chiefe justices in the court of wards betwene Raxdall and Browne, which I observed.

(1. Roll. Abr. 421.)

(Hob. 9.)

27. H. 8. 2. 3. & 4. Ph. & Mar.
 140. a.

(*) Micb. 23. & 24. Eliz. in curia Wardorum. Inter Randel &
Browne. Vid. 2. Eliz. Dier. 181.
 Pl. Com. Chapman's case 186.
 288. Vid. Goodale's case lib. 5.
 fo. 96. 97. 17. Ad. pl. 2. Good- ale's case ubi supra.
 (Mo. 243. Ant. 268. a.)

But if the condition be to pay the money to the feoffee his heirs or assigns, and the feoffee make a feoffment over, it is in the election of the feoffor to pay the money to the first feoffee or to the second feoffee; and so if the first feoffee dyeth, the feoffor may either pay the money to the heir of the first feoffee or to the second feoffee, for the law will not enforce the feoffor to take knowledge of the second feoffment, nor of the validity thereof, whether the same be effectually or not, but at his pleasure, and the first feoffee and his heirs are expressly named in the condition (1).

Sect. 340.

ITEM † sur tiel case ALSO upon such case de feoffment en mort- of feoffment in gage, question ad este mortgage, a question demaunde en quel lieu hath been demanded in le feoffour est tenu what place the feoffor ‡ de tender les deniers is bound to tender the a le feoffee al jour as- money to the feoffee at seffe, &c. Et ascuns the day appointed, &c. ont dit, que sur la terre And some have said, issint § tenu en mor- upon the land so holden gage, pur ceo que le con- in mortgage, because the dition est dependant sur condition is depending le terre. Et ont dit || que upon the land. And they

Item sur tiel case
de feoffment en morgage, question ad
este demande, &c.

Here and in other places, that I may say once for all, where Littleton ma-keth a doubt, and setteth downe severall opinions and the reasons, he ever setteth downe (*) the better opinion and his owne last, and so he doth here. [n] For at this day this doubt is settled, having bene oftentimes resolved, that seeing the money

(*) Vid. Sect. 170. 302. 375.

[n] 8. E. 4. 4. & 14. 11. H. 4.
 62. 17. Aff. p. 2. 17. E. 3. 2.
 21. H. 7. Keylway 74. 16. Eliz.
 Dier. 327. lib. 4. fo. 71. in Borough's case 21. E. 4. 6.

* donques added in L. and M. and Roh.
 § tenu, not in L. and M.

† sur—en, L. and M. and Roh.
 || que not in L. and M. but in Roh.

‡ de—a, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Hob. 9. Pease and Styleman.—A man was bound to pay 20l. to such a person as he (the obligee) should by his will appoint. The obligee made J. S. his executor, but made no other appointment. It was resolved, upon demurrer, that the executor should not have the 20l. for he is only an assignee in law, who takes to the use of the testator: but here the condition is in favour of an actual assignee, who takes to his own use. The devise of a fine leases to the devisee for 99 years, with condition, if the lessee pays to the lessor, his heirs and assigns, that the uses limited to the devisee and his heirs, by an indenture, should cease: the lessor dies. Lord Nottingham was of opinion, that the uses should not cease by payment to the administrator of the lessor, because he may be an assignee in deed, as here. 11. May, 1659, Sir Andrew Young.—Lord Nott. MSS. notes.—Howe v. Whitebank. Upon a fine, the use of land was limited to A. for 80 years, with a power to A. and his assigns to make leases for three lives, to commence after the determination of that term. A. assigned over to B. B. died, having made his will, and appointed C. his executor. C. assigned over to D.: D. in pursuance of the power, made a lease for life. The question was, whether D. was such an assignee of A. as to have a power to make this lease; or whether it should extend only to the immediate assignees of A.? The doubt in this case was the greater, as there had been a descent upon an executor. The case of Pease and Styleman was cited, where it was said, that an executor or administrator should not in some cases be said to be a special assignee. But all the court seemed to incline to the contrary, and that D. should be called an assignee, well enough for the purpose of making the leases in question, and that so should any person that came to the estate under the first lessee, though there should be twenty mesne assignments. And afterwards, in the Michaelmas term following, judgment was given accordingly.—1. Freem. 476.

(5. Rep. 95. 2. Cro. 423. 3. Cro. 689)

B. E. 4. 2. 19. R. 2. Det. 178.

(Ant. 206. b. 207. a.)

(1. Roll. 453.)

(Ant. 208.)

(1) 2. E. 4. 3.

money is a summe in grosse and collaterall to the title of the land, that the feoffor must tender the money to the person of the feoffee according to the latter opinion, and it is not sufficient for him to tender it upon the land; otherwise it is of a rent that issueth out of the land. But if the condition of a bond or feoffment be to deliver twenty quarters of wheat or twenty load of timber or such like, the obligor or feoffor is not bound to carry the same about and seeke the feoffee, but the obligor or feoffor before the day must goe to the feoffee, and know where he will appoint to receive it, and there it must bee delivered. And so note a diversitie betweene money, and things ponderous, or of great waight. If the condition of a bond or feoffment be to make a feoffment, there it is sufficient [b] for him to tender it upon the land, because the state must passe by live-ric.

Deins le roialm d'Engleterre (1). For if he be out of the realme of England, hee is not bound to seeke him, or to goe out of the realme unto him. And for that the feoffee is the cause that the feoffor cannot tender the money, the feoffor shall enter into the land, as if he had duly tendered it according to the condition.

Un especiall corporall service al feoffee. This is a diversitie betweene a rent issuing out of land, and a corporall service issuing out of land, for it sufficeth (as hath beene

*si le feoffor soit * sur le terre la prest a paier la money al feoffee a le jour assesse, & le feoffee adonque ne soit pas la, + adonque le feoffor est assouth & excuse de payment de le mony, pur ceo que nul default est en luy. Mes il semble a ascuns que la ley est contrary, & que default est en luy; car il est tenu de querer le feoffee s'il soit adonque en ‡ ascun autre lieu deins le roialme de Engleterre. Come si home soit obligé en un obligation de 20 li. sur condition endorce sur mesme l'obligation, que s'il paya a celuy a que l'obligation est fait a tiel jour 10 li. § adonque l'obligation de 20 li. perdra sa force, & serra tenu pur nul; cest en cas il covient a celuy que fist obligation de querer celuy a que l'obligation est fait, s'il soit deins Engleterre, & al jour assesse de tender a luy les dits 10 li. autrement il forfeitera la summe de 20 li. comprise deins l'obligation, || &c. Et issint il semble en l'auter cas, &c. Et coment que ascuns ont dit, que le condition est dependant sur la terre, uncore ceo ne prove que* have said that if the feoffor be upon the land there ready to pay the money to the feoffee at the day set, and the feoffee bee not then there, then the feoffor is quit and excused of the payment of the money, for that no default is in him. But it seemeth to some that the law is contrary, and that default is in him; for he is bound to seeke the feoffee if hee bee then in any other place within the realm of England. As if a man be bound in an obligation of 20 pound upon condition endorsed upon the same obligation, that if he pay to him to whom the obligation is made at such a day 10 pound, then the obligation of 20 pound shall lose his force, and bee holden for nothing. In this case it behooveth him that made the obligation to seek him to whom the obligation is made if he be in England, & at the day set to tender unto him the said 10 pound, otherwise he shall forfeit the summe of 20 pound comprised within the obligation, &c. And so it seemeth in the other case, &c. And albeit that some have

* sur le terre la, not in L. and M. nor Roh. and Roh.

§ que added L. and M. and Roh.

+ que added in L. and M. and Roh.

|| &c. not in L. and M. but in Roh.

‡ ascun—um, L. and M.

(1) If A. recites by his deed, that whereas he is indebted to B. in 100l. and he covenants with B. that the 100l. shall be paid and delivered to B. or his assigns, at Rotterdam, in Holland, by C. without any suit at law, upon the first requisition which shall be made of it; in this case, the demand may be in any other place besides Rotterdam: for though payment is to be made at Rotterdam, yet the demand may be made in any place; and if the demand be made in England, or at Dort, which is 10 miles from Rotterdam, it is good, for he ought to have reasonable time to pay it after the demand, having respect to the distance of the place. But if the demand should be limited to Rotterdam, perhaps he would never come there, and so the covenant would be of no effect.—Mich. 1650. between Halsted and Vanieyden, adjudged upon a special verdict.—1 Roll. Abr.

*le feafans de le condition d'estre performe, convient estre fait sur la terre, &c. nient plus que si le condition fuit que le feoffor ferra a tiel jour, &c. un especial corporall service al feoffee, nient nosmant le lieu ou tiel corporall service ferra fait. En tiel cas le feoffor doit faire tiel corporall service al jour limite al feoffee, en quecunque lieu d'Engleterre que le feoffee est, s'il voile aver advantage de le condition, &c. Isint il semble en l'auter cas. Et il semble a eux que il serroit plus proprement dit, que l'estate de la terre est dependant sur la condition, * que † a dire, que le condition est dependant sur la terre, &c. Sed quære, &c.*

tion, then to say that the condition is depending upon the land, &c. Sed quære, &c.

give notice to the feoffee when he will pay it, for without such notice as is aforesaid, the tender will not be sufficient. But in both these cases if at any time the obligor or feoffor meete the obligee or feoffee at the place, he may tender the money.

If A. be bound to B. with condition that C. shall enfeoffe D. on such a day, C. must give notice to D. thereof, and request him to be on the land at the day to receive the feoffment, and in that case he is bound to seeke D. and to give him notice.

De tender, or tendre, is a word common both to the English and French, in Latine offerre, and in that sense, and with that Latyn word it is alwayes used in the common law. Vide sect. 514. the tender of the halfe marke. And before, sect. 333. 334. 337.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† est a tant, added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Oth advise when thy lease is void; for there no acceptance of rent afterwards can make it have continuance. Post. 215. 2. Lord Not. MS.

saïd that the condition is depending upon the land, yet this proves not that the making of the condition to bee performed, ought to be made upon the land, &c. no more then if the condition were that the feoffor at such a day shall do some speciall corporall service to the feoffee, not naming the place where such corporall service shall be done. In this case the feoffor ought to do such corporall service at the day limited to the feoffee, in what place soever of England that the feoffee bee, if he will have advantage of the condition, &c. So it seemeth in the other case. And it seemes to them that it shall bee more properly said, that the estate of the land is depending upon the condition, then to say that the condition is depending upon the land, yet this proves not that the making of the condition to bee performed, ought to be made upon the land, &c. no more then if the condition were that the feoffor at such a day shall do some speciall corporall service to the feoffee, not naming the place where such corporall service shall be done. In this case the feoffor ought to do such corporall service at the day limited to the feoffee, in what place soever of England that the feoffee bee, if he will have advantage of the condition, &c. So it seemeth in the other case. And it seemes to them that it shall bee more properly said, that the estate of the land is depending upon the condition, then to say that the condition is depending upon the land, yet this proves not that the making of the condition to bee performed, ought to be made upon the land, &c. no more then if the condition were that the feoffor at such a day shall do some speciall corporall service to the feoffee, not naming the place where such corporall service shall be done. In this case the feoffor ought to do such corporall service at the day limited to the feoffee, in what place soever of England that the feoffee bee, if he will have advantage of the condition, &c. So it seemeth in the other case. And it seemes to them that it shall bee more properly said, that the estate of the land is depending upon the condition, then to say that the condition is depending upon the land, yet this proves not that the making of the condition to bee performed, ought to be made upon the land, &c. no more then if the condition were that the feoffor at such a day shall do some speciall corporall service to the feoffee, not naming the place where such corporall service shall be done. In this case the feoffor ought to do such corporall service at the day limited to the feoffee, in what place soever of England that the feoffee bee, if he will have advantage of the condition, &c. So it seemeth in the other case. And it seemes to them that it shall bee more properly said, that the estate of the land is depending upon the condi-

21. E. 3. 10. 20. H. 6. 31. 27. E. 3. 34. 21. Aff. 13. 7. E. 4. 4. 21. E. 4. 17. 20. E. Avowrie 113. 45. E. 5. 9. 46. E. 3. Barre. 216.

Mich. 22. & 23. Eliz. in Banke le Roy, which I myselfe heard and observed. 19. Eliz. Dier. 354. Lib. 8. fol. 92. in France's case. (Cro. Jac. 9.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 453. Ant. 206. 210.)

18. Eliz. Dyer 354.

(2. Rep. 59. 3. Rep. 64.)

(8. Rep. 92. Post. sect. 353. 2. Cro. 9. 10.)

(Hob. 51. 1. Roll. Abr. 463. 2. Cro. 9.)

(2. E. 4. 3. & 4.)

Sect. 341.

HERE the diversitie appeareth betwene a summe in grosse, and a rent issuing out of the land, as hath beene touched before.

Uncore il poet eslier, scilicet, derelinquisher son entry, ou de aver un assise.

Here it appeareth, that if the condition be broken for non payment of the rent, yet if the feoffor bringeth an assise for the rent due at that time, he shal never enter for the condition broken, because hee affirmeth the rent to have a continuance, and thereby wayveth the condition. And so it is if the rent had had a clause of distresse annexed unto it, if the feoffor had distrained for the rent, for non payment whereof the condition was broken, he should never enter for the condition broken, but he may receive that rent and acquite the same, and yet enter for the condition broken. But if he accept a rent due at a day after, hee shall not enter for the condition broken, because he thereby affirmeth the lease to have a continuance.

*MES si feoffment en fee soit fait, reservant al feoffor un anual rent, et pur default de payment unre-entrie, &c. en cest case il ne besoigne * le tenant a tender le rent, quant il est arere, forsque sur le terre, pur ceo que ceo est rent issuant hors de la terre, que † est rent secke. Car si le feoffor soit seise un foits de cest rent, et puis il vient sur la terre, &c. et le rent luy soit denie, il poet aver assise de Novel Disseisin. Car coment que il poet entrer per cause de le condition enfreint, &c. uncore il poet eslier, scilicet, de relinquisher son entrie, ou d'aver un assise, &c. Et issint est diversitie, quant al tender de le rent que est issuant hors de la terre, et del tender d'auter summe en grosse, que ne passe issuant hors d'ascun terre.*

BUT if a feoffment in fee bee made, reserving to the feoffor a yearly rent, & for default of payment a re-entrie, &c. in this case the tenant needeth not to tender the rent, when it is behind, but upon the land, because this is a rent issuing out of the land, which is a rent secke. For if the feoffor bee seised once of this rent, and after hee commeth upon the land, &c. and the rent is denied him, he may have an assise of Novel Disseisin. For albeit he may enter by reason of the condition broken, &c. yet hee may choose either to relinquishe his entrie, or to have an assise, &c. And so there is a diversitie as to the tender of a rent which is issuing out of the land, & of the tender of another summe in grosse, which is not issuing out of any land.

Sect. 342.

ET pur ceo il serra bone et sure chose pur celuy que voet faire tiel feoffment en mortgage, de mitter un especial lieu l'ou les deniers seront payes, et le plus especiall que est mis,

AND therefore it wil be a good & sure thing for him that will make such feoffment in mortgage, to appoint an especial place (1) where the money shall be payd, and the more speciall that it bee put, the

* a added L. and M. and Roh.

† ceo added L. and M. and Roh.

(1). Upon the marriage of lord Anglesea with a daughter of lady Dorchester, a term of years was limited in his lordship's Irish estates, for raising 12000l. for the portions of the daughters. There was but one daughter of the marriage. It was made a question, whether the portion was to be paid in England, without any deduction or allowance for the exchange from Ireland to England? It was determined in Chancery, that the portion ought to be paid in England, where the contract was made and the parties resided, and not in Ireland; because it was a sum in gross, and not a rent issuing out of land. Vin. Abr. vol. 5. 209.

*le melior est pur le feoffor. Si come A. infeoffe B. a aver a luy et a ses heires, sur tiel condition, que si A. paya a B. en le Feast de Saint Michael L'Archangell procheine a vener, en esglise cathedrall de Paules en Londres, deins quater heures procheine devant le heure de noone de mesme le Feast, a le Rood loft de * le Rood de le North doore deins mesme le esglise, ou le tombe de S. Erkenwald, ou al huis de tiel chappell, ou a tiel piller, deins mesme l'esglise, que adonque bien list al avantdit A. et a ses heires d'entrer, &c. en tiel case il ne besoigne de querer le feoffee en auter lieu, ne d'estre en auter lieu, forsque en le lieu comprise en l'indenture, ne d'estre la plus longe temps que le temps specife en mesme l'indenture, pur tender ou payer le money a le feoffee, &c.*

better it is for the feoffor. As if A. infeoffe B. to have to him and to his heires, upon such condition, that if A. pay to B. on the Feast of Saint Michael the Arch-Angell next comming, in the cathedrall church of Saint Paul's in London, within foure houres next before the heure of noone of the same Feast, at the Rood loft of the Rood of the North doore within the same church, or at the tombe of Saint Erkenwald, or at the doore of such a chappell, or at such a pillar, within the same church, that then it shal be lawfull to the aforesaid A. and his heires to enter, &c. in this case he needeth not to seek the feoffee in an other place, nor to bee in any other place, but in the place comprised in the indenture, nor to bee there longer than the time specified in the same indenture, to tender or pay the money to the feoffee, &c.

(1. Roll. Abr. 445. 446.)

(2. Cro. 13. 14.)

HERE is good counsell and advice given, to set downe in conveyances every thing in certaintie and particularitie, for certaintie is the mother of quietnesse and repose, and incertaintie the cause of variance and contentions: and for obtaining of the one, and avoyding of the other, the best meane is, in all assurances, to take counsell of learned and well-experienced men, and not to trust onely without advice to a president. For as the rule is concerning the state of a man's bodie, Nullum medicamentum est idem omnibus, so in the state and assurance of a man's lands, Nullum exemplum est idem omnibus.

Al tombe de Saint Erkenwald, &c. This Erkenwald was a younger sonne of Anna, king of the East Saxons, and was first abbot of Chersey in Surrey which he had founded, and after bishop of London, a holy and devout man, and lieth buried in the fourth isle, above the quire in Saint Paul's church, where the tombe yet remaineth, that Littleton speaketh of in this place: he flourished about the yeare of our Lord 680.

The residue of this section and the (&c.) are evident.

Sect. 343.

ITEM en tiel case ou le lieu † de payment est limitte, le feoffee n'est † obligé de recevoir le payment en nul auter lieu forsque en mesme le lieu issint

ALSO in such case, where the place of payment is limited, the feoffee is not bound to receive the payment in any other place but in the same place so limited.

HEREBY it appeareth that the place is but a circumstance; and therefore if the obligee receiveth it at any other place, it is sufficient, though he be not bound to receive it at any other place. And

(6. Rep. 46. b. 47. Plo. 69. b. 5. Rep. 117.)

* le rood de le, not in L. and M. nor Roh. L. and M. and Roh.

† de payment, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ pas added in

And so it is if the money be to be paid on such a feast, yet if the money be tendred and received at any time before the day, it is sufficient. (1) limit. Mes uncore si il receivst le payment en auter lieu, ceo est assés bone, et auxy fort pur le feoffor sicome le receipt ust este en mesme le lieu issint limit, &c.

But yet if he doe receive the payment in another place, this is good enough & as strong for the feoffor as if the receipt had beene in the same place so limited, &c.

Sect. 344.

(Dyer 1.)

3. H. 4. b. 9. H. 7. 16. 11. H. 7. 20. 21. 19. E. 4. 1. b. 47. E. 3. 24. 22. E. 4. 37. H. 6. 26. Li. 9. to. 78. Peytoe's case.

(1. Roll. Rep. 296.)

22. H. 4. 22.

* Peytoe's case ubi supra.

(Ant. 207.)

4. H. 7. 4. Dy. 35. H. 8. 56. 27. H. 8. 1. (Ant. 208. b.)

Lib. 5. fo. 117. Pinnel's case.

26. H. 6. tit. Barre 37. (Sid. 44. Post. 373. a. Mo. 47.)

30. E. 3. 23. (Hob. 68. 69.)

11. R. 2. tit. Barre 3. 43. (1. Roll. Abr. 470. 604.)

HEREUPON are many diversities worthie of observation.

First, there is a diversitie, when the condition is for payment of money: and when for the deliverie of a horse, a robe, a ring, or the like: for where it is for payment of money, there if the feoffee or obligee accept an horse, &c. in satisfaction, this is good: but if the condition were for the deliverie of a horse, or robe, there albeit the obligee or feoffee accept money or any other thing for the horse, &c. it is no performance of the condition. The like law is, if the condition bee to acknowledge a recognizance of twentie pounds, &c. if the obligee or feoffee accept twenty pounds in satisfaction of the condition, it is not sufficient in law, * but notwithstanding such acceptance, the condition is broken. And so it is of all other collateral conditions, though the obligee or feoffee himselfe accept it.

Secondly, in case when the condition is for payment of money, there is a diversitie when the money is to be paid to the partie, and when to an estranger: for when it is to bee paid to an estranger, there if the stranger accept an horse or any collateral thing in satisfaction of the money, it is no performance of the condition, because the condition in that case is strictly to be performed. But if the condition be, that a stranger shal pay to the obligee or feoffee a sum of money, there the obligee or feoffee may receive a horse, &c. in satisfaction.

Thirdly, where the condition is for payment of twentie pounds, the obligor or feoffor cannot at the time appointed pay a lesser summe in satisfaction of the whole, because it is apparant that a lesser summe of money cannot be a satisfaction of a greater. But if the obligee or feoffee doe at the day receive part, and thereof make an acquittance under his seale in full satisfaction of the whole, it is sufficient, by reason the deed amounteth to an acquittance of the whole. If the obligor or lessor pay a lesser summe either before the day, or at another place than is limited by the condition, and the obligee or feoffee receiveth it, this is a good satisfaction.

Fourthly, not onely things in possession may be given in satisfaction, (whereof Littleton putteth his case,) but also if the obligee or feoffee accept a statute or a bond in satisfaction of the money, it is a good satisfaction.

If the obligor or feoffor be bound by condition to pay an hundred markes at a certaine day.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It hath been formerly doubted, Whether the defendant, in such a case, ought not to plead specially? See 1. Cro. 242. S. C. 1. Ander. 198. S. C. Mo. 267. S. C. Ow. 45. Savil 96. 1. Leon. 311. But now this point is settled; for, per 4. Annæ, cap. 16. sect. 12. if the obligor, his heirs, executors, and administrators, have, before the action brought, paid to the obligee, his executors or administrators, the principal and interest due by the condition of the bond, though such payment was not strictly made according to the condition, yet it may be pleaded in bar of such action, and shall be as effectual a bar thereof as if the money had been paid at the day and place, according to the condition, and had been so pleaded. Note to the 11th edition.

day, and at the day the parties doe account together, and for that the feoffee or obligee did (Noy. 110. 5. Rep. 117.) owe twentie pound to the obligor or feoffor, that summe is allowed, and the residue of the hundred markes paid, this is a good satisfaction, and yet the twenty pound was a chose in action, 37. H. 6. 26. 46. E. 3. 39. and no payment was made thereof, but by way of retainer or discharge (1). 34. H. 6. 17. 12. H. 8. 1. b.

En pleine satisfaction. Nota, in satisfaction and in full satisfaction is all one.

Sect. 345.

ITEM si home enfeoffa un autre* sur condition, que il et ses heires rendront a un estrange home & a ses heires un annuel rent de 20s. &c. et si il ou ses heires failont de payment de ceo, que adonques bien lirroit al feoffor et a ses heires de entrer, ceo est bon condition: et uncore en cest cas, coment que tiel annuall payment est appelle en l'indenture un annuall rent, ceo n'est pas properment rent. Car s'il serroit rent, il covient estre rent service, ou rent charge, ou rent secke, et † il n'est ascun de eux. Car si l'estrange fuit seise de ceo, et puis il fuit a luy denie, il n'avera unque assise de ceo, pur ceo que il n'est ‡ pas issuant || hors d'ascun tenements; et if sint l'estrange n'ad ascun remedie, si tiel annuall rent soit aderere en cest cas, mes que le feoffor ou ses heires poient entrer, &c. Et uncore si le feoffor ou ses

ALSO if a man infeoffe an other upon condition, that hee and his heires shall render to a stranger and to his heires a yearely rent of 20 shillings, &c. and if hee or his heires faile of payment thereof, that then it shall bee lawfull to the feoffor and his heires to enter, this is a good condition: and yet in this case, albeit such annuall payment be called in the indenture a yearely rent, this is not properly a rent. For if it should bee a rent, it must bee rent service, rent charge, or a rent secke, and it is not any of these. For if the stranger were seised of this, and after it were denied him, hee shall never have an assise of this, because that it is not issuing out of any tenements; and so the stranger hath not any remedy, if such yearely rent be behind in this case, but that the feoffor or his heires may enter, &c. And yet if the feoffor or his heires enter for default of pay-

REndront a un estrange home un annuel rent, &c. (Dr. and Stud. cap. 20.)

This reservation is meere void [a] for the reasons hereafter in this section alleadged by Littleton, and also for that no estate moveth from the stranger, and that he is not partie to the deed.

And albeit it bee a voyde reservation, and can be no rent, and the words of the condition be, that if the feoffee or his heires faile of payment of it, (that is, of the annuall rent) that then, &c. yet it appeareth that the condition is good, and annuall rent shall bee taken for an annuall summe of money in grosse, and not in the proper signification thereof, viz. to bee a rent issuing out of land, which is to bee observed, that words in a condition shall bee taken out of their proper sense, ut res magis valeat quam pereat, and so in like cases it is holden [b] in our bookes.

But if A. bee seised of certaine lands, and A. and B. joyne in a feoffment in fee reserving a rent to them both and their heires, and the feoffee grant that it shall be lawfull for them and their heires to distreine for the

[a] Lib. 8. fol. 70. 71. (Flo. 243. sera bon in case le Roy. Aut. 47. a. Cro. Car. 288. Aut. 143. b.)

[b] 6. E. 2. entr. cong. 55. recit per.

8. Aff. 34. revertere. (1. Rep. 76. Godbolt 448.)

* en fee added L. and M. and Roh. not in L. and M.

† que added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ pas not in L. and M.

§ hors

(1) In Roll. Rep. 296. it is said, that the reason why a collateral thing cannot be satisfied with money, or other collateral thing, is, because the collateral thing is not due, and so no contract can be made of it till the day of payment; and that the reason why money may be satisfied by a collateral thing is, because it is of certain value.

(Ant. 148. a. Sect. 221.)

[c] 18. E. 2. Aff. 381. 26. H. 8.
2. 13. E. 2. feoffments & lites
108. 31. Aff. pl. 31.

the rent, this is a good grant of a rent to them both, because hee is partie to the deed, and the clause of distress is a grant of the rent to A. and B. as it appeareth before in the chapter of rents. But if B. had beene a stranger to the deed, then B. had taken nothing. And upon this diversitie are all the bookes [c], which prima facie seeme to vary, reconciled.

Car s'il serra rent, il covient estre rent service, rent charge, ou rent secke, et il n'est nul de eux.

This is a good logical argument à divisione, & argumentum à divisione est fortissimum in lege. [d] Littleton useth this argument elsewhere, where see more of this matter.

[d] Vide Sect. 381.

*beires entrent pur default de payment, adonque tiel rent est ale a tous jours. Et issint tiel rent * n'est forsque un peine assesse a le tenant et ses beires, que s'ils ne voient payer ceo selonque la forme del indenture, ils perdront leur terre per l'entrie del feoffor ou ses beires pur default de paiement. Et en cest cas il semble que le feoffee et ses beires doient querer le estranger et beires s'ils sont deins Engleterre, † pur ceo que nul lieu est limit l'ou le payment serra fait, et pur ceo que tiel rent n'est pas issuant ‡ hors d'ascun terre, &c.*

ment, then such rent is taken away for ever. And so such a rent is but as a paine set upon the tenant and his heires, that if they will not pay this according to the forme of the indenture, they shall lose their land by the entrie of the feoffor or his heires for default of payment. And in this case it seemeth that the feoffee and his heires ought to seeke the stranger and his heires if they bee within England, because there is no place limited where the payment shall bee made, and for that such rent is not issuing out of any land, &c.

Pur default de payment. Note here, seeing it is but a summe in grosse, there need no demand of the rent; for Littleton here saith, that the feoffee ought to seeke the person of the stranger to pay him the summe of money, because it is a summe in grosse and not issuing out of the land.

Sect. 346.

(Hob. 130. 2. Roll. Abr. 447.
Poll. 386. 8. Rep. 71. Ant. 39. b.)

A Le feoffor, donor, &c. ou a leur beires. Hereby it may seem that if a man make a feoffment, gift, or lease, that (omitting himselfe) he may reserve a rent to his heires (1). But Littleton is not so to be understood; his meaning is, that either the feoffor, &c. may reserve the rent to himselfe only, or to himselfe and his heires. And yet it is holden [e] in our bookes, that a man may make a feoffment in fee reserving a rent of forty shillings to the feoffor for tearme of his life, and

[e] 5. E. 3. 27. 28.

(Ant. 164. a.)

ET hic nota duas cosas: un est, que nul rent (que properment est dit rent) poit estre reserve sur ascun feoffment, done, ou leas, forsque tantselement al feoffor, ou al donor, ou al lessor, ou a leur beires, & en nul || maner § il poit estre reserve a ascun estrange

AND here note two things: one is, that no rent (which is properly said a rent) may be reserved upon any feoffment, gift, or lease, but onely to the feoffor, or to the donor, or to the lessor, or to their heires, and in no manner it may bee reserved to any strange person. But if

* n'est—est, L. and M. and Roh.
‡ hors not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† pur ceo que nul lieu est limit l'ou le payment serra fait, et, not in L. and M. nor Roh.
|| auter added in L. and M. and Roh.
§ il not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Plo. 107. If a man leases, rendering rent to the heir, it is void; for the heir takes as purchaser, and is quasi a stranger. Hob. 130. Oats v. Frith. Father seized in fee and son join in a lease to commence after the death of the father, rendering rent to the son, and dies, the reservation was adjudged void; for tho' the son proves heir by the event, that does not mend the case: but if the reservation had been to the heir of the lessor, omitting the lessor, it would have been good; for tho' the rent never was in the father to demand, yet the son would take it; not as a purchaser, but as a rent inherent in the root of the reversion, which he has by descent from his father; and in this sense the rent itself was in the father, viz. to release (by the word rent, but not action) tho' not to ask. So note the difference, (says Hobart) when in such a lease the rent is reserved to the heir first, omitting the ancestor, which is good, and where an annuity or warranty is granted against the heir, omitting the ancestor, which is not good. It appears in the case of Littleton, that tho' the reservation to a stranger be had to carry any rent to the stranger, yet it will be good to the lessor, and that not only during his life, but generally during all the term; for when it is said, rendering to I. S. the words I. S. shall be void, in the same manner as if he had said, rendering rent generally: because, 1st. If a man leases, rendering rent to him and a stranger, it is good to him clearly, and void to the stranger. 31. Aff. 30. 2dly, When a man leases, rendering rent to him and his heirs general, yet the law will direct it to an issue who is not his heir general, merely for congruity's sake. Dyer 115. b. Sir Thomas Wyatt's case, and before 12. b. Difference between a lease reserving rent to I. S. and a lease upon condition, that I. S. shall re-enter if the rent be in arrear, for there neither shall enter; not I. S. because he cannot by law; not the lessor, because there are no words to give re-entry to any beside I. S. But in the case of Doctor and Student, feoffment upon condition, that he shall pay 2cl. to I. S. and that otherwise I. S. shall re-enter; there, tho' I. S. cannot re-enter, the feoffor can, for there the condition was created by the first words: and tho' he intends the advantage of this to I. S. it does not signify. 28. H. 8. Dyer 33. Devise to the prior of St. B. so that he pays to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and that if he does not so, the Dean and Chapter shall have it, that is a void condition to make it a remainder, but it is good for the deviser to re-enter. Difference between a rent upon a lease and a rent upon a feoffment: in the last case rent would be void to a stranger, and yet not good to the feoffor, because the law does not create it, and it is not so reserved; but the case of a feoffment is like to a grant of rent to I. S. and that if it be in arrear that I. D. shall distrain, there person. Mes si deux joyntenants font un leas per fait endent, reservant a un de eux un certaine annuall rent, ceo est assés bon a luy a que le rent est reserve, pur ceoque il est privy a le lease & nemy estrange a le leas, &c.

two jointenants make a lease by deed indented, reserving to one of them a certain yearely rent, this is good enough to him to whom the rent is reserved, for that hee is privie to the lease and not a stranger to the lease, &c. (1) after his decease, a pound of (10. Rep. 106. Hob. 230.) comyne to his heires, that this is good.

If a man make a feoffment in fee, reserving a rent to him or his heires, it is good [f] to him for tearme of his life, and void to his heire. (Ant. 47. a.)

[f] Lib. 5. fol. 111. Mallorie's case.

Mes si 2. joyntenants font un lease per fait indent, &c.

This case being by deed indented, is evident, and it hath been touched before; but

5. E. 4. 4. a. 27. H. 8. 16. Vide Sect. 58. (Post. 318. a. Ant. 47. a.)

if that two joyntenants without a deed indented make a lease for life, reserving a rent to one of them, it shall enure to them both in respect of the joynt reversion. And so it is of a surrender to one of them, it shall enure to them both.

If two joyntenants, the one for life, and the other in fee, joyne in a lease for life, or a gift in taile, reserving a rent, the rent shall enure to them both; for if the particular estate determine, they shall be jointenants againe in possession. But if tenant for life, and he in the reversion joyne in a lease for life, or a gift in taile by deed, reserving a rent, this shall enure to the tenant for life onely, during his life, and after to him in the reversion, for every one grants that which he may lawfully grant; and if at the common law they had made a feoffment in fee generally, the feoffee should have holden of the tenant for life during his life, and after of him in reversion, and so it was holden [g] in the King's Bench.

(Ant. 192. a. 6. Rep. 15. a. Ant. 42. a. 45. a. 53. b. 193. a.)

Vide Sect. 58.

[g] Mich. 36. & 37. Eliz.

Sect. 347.

*LE second chose * est, que nul entrie ou re-entrie (que est tout un)† poit estre reserve ne done a aucun person, forsque tantselement al feoffor, ou al donor, ou al lessor, ou a lour heires: & tiel ‡ reenter ne poyt estre grant a un auter person. Car si home lessa || terre a un auter pur terme de vie per indenture, rendant al lessor et a ses heires certaine rent, & pur default de payment un reentry, &c. si apres le lessor per un fait granta le reversion de la terre a un auter en fee, et le tenant a terme de vie atturna, &c. si le rent a-*

THE second thing is, that no entry nor re-entry (which is all one) may be reserved or given to any person, but only to the feoffor, or to the donor, or to the lessor, or to their heires: and such reentry cannot be given to any other person. For if a man letteth land to another for tearme of life by indenture, rendring to the lessor and to his heires a certaine rent, and for default of payment a reentry, &c. if afterward the lessor by a deed granteth the reversion of the land to another in fee, and the tenant for terme of life

QUE nul entrie, &c.

(1. Roll. Abr. 473.)

Here Littleton reciteth one of the maxims of the common law; and the reason hereof is, for avoyding of maintenance, suppression of right, and stirring up of suites: and therefore nothing in action, entrie, or reentry, can bee granted over; for so under colour thereof pretended titles might bee granted to great men, wherby right might bee trodden downe, and the weake oppressed, which the common law forbidde, as men to grant before they be in possession.

Pur default de payment un reentry,

* est not in Roh. but in L. and M. and Roh.

† ne added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ reenter—rent in L. and M.

|| certaine added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The principle which gave rise to this rule is, that rent is considered as a retribution for the land, and is therefore payable to those who would otherwise have had the land.—It is to be observed, that remainder-men in a settlement, being, at first view, neither feoffors, donors, lessors, nor the heirs of feoffors, donors, or lessors, there seems to have been, for some time after the statute of Uses, a doubt, whether the rents of leases made by virtue of powers contained in settlements, could be reserved to them. In Chudleigh's case, 1. Rep. 139. it is positively said, that if a feoffment in fee be made to the use of one for life, remainder to another in tail, with several remainders over, with a power to the tenant for life to make leases, reserving the rent to the reversioners, and the tenant for life accordingly makes leases, neither his heirs nor any of the remainder-men shall have the rent. But in Harcourt v. Pole, 1. Anders. 273. it was adjudged, that the remainder-men might distrain in these cases. And in Sir Thomas Jones, 35. the dictum in Chudleigh's case is denied to be law. The determination in Harcourt v. Pole will appear incontrovertibly right, if we consider that both the lessees and remainder-men derive their estate out of the reversion, or original inheritance of the settlor; and therefore the law, to use Sir Edward Coke's expression in Whitlocke's case, 8. Rep. 71. will distribute the rent to every one to whom any limitation of the use is made.

the distress is of no value. 40. Aff. 26. But here the words are sufficient to create a rent, and in an entire clause, part may be void. 4. E. 4. Obligation to I. S. payable to I. D. it is good to I. S. Difference where the repugnancy of words appears, as here, and where it does not: as a release of all actions which I have as executor, and I have none as executor; this is void, because it does not appear. 22. H. 7. Kel. 88. b. Cestuy que use leases, rendering rent to himself, and dies; the heir shall have the rent. Yet in 5. H. 7. 5. b. the rent, with the reversion, goes to the feoffees, tho' reserved to the cestuy que use; yet in law the feoffees are donors; so it is, in effect, the feoffees lease, rendering rent to the cestuy que use, it is good for themselves, which is stronger. Sir Geo. makes a feoffment to the use of himself for life; remainder to William Huntley his son and heir apparent and his heirs: Sir Geo. and William join in a lease for years, rendering rent to Sir Geo. his heirs and assigns: Sir Geo. dies. Resolved, that the reservation and the rent are determined; for William is not in as heir, and therefore he cannot have the rent. Huntley's case, Palm. 485. Lord Nott. MSS.

Lib. 3.

(10. Rep. 42.)

Cap. 5.

Of Estates

Sect. 347.

(Flo. 242. 2. 1. Roll. Abr. 411.
PoR. 379. a.)

Register 246. Pl. Com. 27. 34.
B. 3. Formedon 68. F. N. B.
201. Lib. 10. fo. 36. Mary Por-ington's case.

(Flo. 242. 2.)
Brooke tit. Condition in Abr.
11. H. 7. L'opinion de Broun-
ley. 10. E. 52. 10. Aff. Pl. 24. Pl.
Com. 36. 11. H. 7. 17. 19. R. 2.
Done 10.
(1. Roll. Abr. 475. Nov 7.
3. Rep. 64. b. 65. 8. Rep. 95.
Poll. 215. b.)

Pl. Com. 313. 314. in Scolasticae's cas.
(Hob. 130.)
15. E. 4. 14. a.

21. H. 7. 18. 2.
(Aut. 46. b.)

reentrie, &c. Hereupon is to bee collected divers diversities. First, betweene a condition that requireth a re-entrie, and a limitation that ipso facto determineth the estate without any entry. Of this first sort no stranger, as Littleton saith, shall take any advantage, as hath beene said. But of limitations it is otherwise. As if a man make a lease quousque, that is, untill I. S. come from Rome, the lessor grant the reversion over to a stranger, I. S. comes from Rome, the grantee shall take advantage of it and enter, because the estate by the expresse limitation was determined.

So it is if a man make a lease to a woman quamdiu castavixerit, or if a man make a lease for life to a widow, si tamdiu in purâ viduitate viveret. So it is if a man make a lease for a 100 yeares if the lessee live so long, the lessor grants over the reversion, the lessee dies, the grantee may enter, causâ quâ suprà.

2. Another diversitie is betweene a condition annexed to a freehold, and a condition annexed to a lease for yeares.

For if a man make a gift in taile or a lease for life upon condition, that if the donee or lessee goeth not to Rome before such a day the gift or lease shall cease or be void, the grantee of the reversion shall never take advantage of this condition, because the estate cannot cease before an entrie; but if the lease had beene but for yeares, there the grantee should have taken advantage of the like condition, because the lease for yeares ipso facto by the breach of the condition without any entry was void; for a lease for yeares may begin without ceremony, and so may end without ceremony; but an estate of freehold cannot begin nor end without ceremony. And of a void thing an estranger may take benefit, but not of a voidable estate by entry.

Alfeoffor, ou al donor, &c. ou a lour heires, &c. Here is to be observed a diversitie betweene a reservation of a rent and a re-entry; for (as it hath beene said) a rent cannot be reserved to the heire of the feoffor, but the heire may take advantage of a condition, which the feoffor could never doe. As if I infeoffee another of an acre of ground upon condition that if mine heire pay to the feoffee, &c. 20 shillings, that he and his heires shall re-enter, this condition is good; and if after my decease my heire pay the 20 shillings, hee shall re-enter, for he is privy in blood, and enjoy the land as heire to me.

Porsque tantselement al feoffor, &c. ou a lour heires. Our author speaketh here of naturall persons for an example, for if a bishop, archdeacon, parson, prebend, or any other body politique or corporate, ecclesiastical or temporal, make a lease, &c. upon condition, his successor may enter for the condition broken, for they are privy in right.

And so if a man have a lease for yeares and demise or grant the same upon condition, &c. and die, his executors or administrators shall enter for the condition broken, for they are privy in right, and represent the person of the dead.

*pres soit aderere, le grantee de le reversi- on poit distreiner pur le rent, pur ceo que le rent est incident a le reversion; mes il ne poit entrer en la terre, & ouste le tenant, si come le lessor puissoit ou ses heires, si le reversion ust este continue en eux, &c. Et en cest case l'entrie est tolle a tous temps; car le grantee de le reversion ne poit entrer, causâ quâ suprà. Et le lessor ne ses heires ne poyent enter; car si le lessor puissoit entrer, donques il covient que il serroit * en son premier estate, &c. et ceo ne poit estre, pur ceo que il ad alien de luy le reversion.*

after behind, the grantee of a reversion may distreine for the rent, because that the rent is incident to the reversion; but he may not enter into the land, and ouste the tenant, as the lessor might have done or his heires, if the reversion had beene continued in them, &c. And in this case the entrie is taken away for ever; for the grantee of the reversion cannot enter, causâ quâ suprà. And the lessor nor his heires cannot enter; for if the lessor might enter, then hee ought to be in his former state, &c. and this may not bee, because hee hath aliened from him the reversion.

[J] If

* en-a in L. and M. and Rob.

(y) If cessuy que use had made a lease for yeares, &c. upon condition, the feoffees should not enter for the condition broken, for they are privie in estate, but not privie in blood. (y) 27. H. 8. 1.

Another diversitie is in case of a lease for yeares, where the condition is that the lease shall cease, or be void, as is aforesaid, and where the condition is, that the lessor shall re-enter, for there the grantee, as Littleton saith, shall never take benefit of the condition. (4. Rep. 52. Ant. 211. b. 1. Roll. Abr. 475. 3. Rep. 64.)

And it is to be observed, that where the estate or lease is ipso facto void by the condition or limitation, no acceptance of the rent after can make it to have a continuance: otherwise it is of an estate or lease voidable by entrie. (1) Pl. Com. Browning's case. 136.

Another diversitie is betweene conditions in deed, whereof sufficient hath beene said before, and conditions in law. As if a man make a lease for life, there is a condition in law annexed unto it, that if the lessee doth make a greater estate, &c. that then the lessor may enter. Of this and the like conditions in law, which doe give an entrie to the lessor, the lessor himselfe and his heires shall not onely take benefit of it, but also his assignee and the lord by escheat, every one for the condition in law broken in their owne time. Another diversitie there is betweene the judgement of the common law, whereof Littleton wrote, and the law at this day by force of the statute (*) of 32. H. 8. cap. 34. (a) For by the common law no grantee or assignee of the reversion could (as hath been said) take advantage of a re-entrie by force of any condition. For at the common law, if a man had made a lease for life reserving a rent, &c. and if the rent be behind a re-entrie, and the lessor grant the reversion over, the grantee should take no benefit of the condition, for the cause before rehearsed. But now by the said statute of 32. H. 8. the grantee may take advantage thereof, and upon demand of the rent, and non-payment, he may re-enter. By which act it is provided, that as well every person which shall have any grant of the king of any reversion, &c. of any lands, &c. which pertained to monasteries, &c. as also all other persons being grantees or assignees, &c. to or by any other person or persons, and their heires, executors, successors, and assignees shall have like advantage against the lessees, &c. by entrie for non-payment of the rent, or for doing of waste or other forfeiture, &c. as the said lessors or grantors themselves ought or might have had. Upon this act divers resolutions and judgements have beene given, which are necessary to be knowne.

1. That the said statute is generall, viz. (b) that the grantee of the reversion of every common person as well as of the king shall take advantage of conditions. (b) Pl. Com. Hill and Garge's case 175. 176. M. 10. & 11. Eliz. 180. Dier. ibid.

2. That the statute doth extend to grants made by the successors of the king, albeit the king be only named in the act. 14. Eliz. Dyer 309. Wynter's case.

3. That where the statute speaketh of lessees, that the same doth not extend to gifts in taile. (d) Pl. Com. Kidwellye's case 69. Vid. Dyer Mich. 14. & 15. Eliz. 309.

4. That where the statute speakes of grantees and assignees of the reversion, (d) that an assignee of part of the state of the reversion may take advantage of the condition. As if lessee for life be, &c. and the reversion is granted for life, &c. So if lessee for yeares, &c. be, and the reversion is granted for yeares, the grantee for yeares shall take benefit of the condition in respect of this word (executors) in the act. (1. Roll. Abr. 472. Post. 385. 2. Ante 148. a. 1. Roll. Abr. 471. Mo. 93.)

5. That a grantee of part of the reversion shall not (c) take advantage of the condition; as if the lease be of three acres, reserving a rent upon condition, and the reversion is granted of two acres, the rent shall be apportioned by the act of the parties, but the condition is destroyed, for that it is entire and against common right. Vide 7. E. 3. 54. Simile adjudged in Communi Banco in the Lord Dyer's time. P. 17. Eliz. Mich. 14. & 15. Eliz. Dyer 309. adjudge Winter's case.

6. That in the king's case, the condition in that case is not destroyed, but remaines still in the king. (c) Lib. 5. fo. 54. Knight's case. Winter's case ubi supra. Knight's case ubi supra.

7. By act in law a condition may be apportioned in the case of a common person; as if a lease for yeares be made of two acres, one of the nature of Burrough English, the other at the common law, and the lessor having issue two sonnes, dieth, each of them shall enter for the condition broken, and likewise a condition shall be apportioned by the act and wrong of the lessee, as hath been said in the chapter of Rents. Lib. 4. fo. 120. Dumper's case. (4. Leo. 27. 28. 29. 30. Mo. 202. 203.)

8. If a lease for life be made, reserving a rent upon condition, &c. the lessor levies a fine of the reversion, he is grantee or assignee of the reversion; but without attornment hee shall not take advantage of the condition, for the makers of the statute intended to have all necessary incidents observed, otherwise it might be mischievous to the lessee. (2) Resolved in Duke's case. Pasch. 20. Eliz. in Communi Banco. Mallorie's case lib. 5. 112. b.

9. There is a diversitie betweene a condition that is compulsory, and a power of revocation that is voluntary: for a man that hath a power of revocation, may by his owne act extinguish his power of revocation in part, as by levying of a fine of part; and yet the power shall remaine for the residue, because it is in nature of a limitation, and not of a condition; and so it was resolved (b) in the case of Shrewsburie's case in the court of wards, Pasch. 39. Eliz. and Mich. 40 & 41. Eliz. (1. Roll. 472. Hob. 213. Post. 237. 265. b. 1. Rep. 112. 113.)

10. If the lessor bargain and sell the reversion by deed indented and inrolled, the bargainee is not in the per by the bargainor, and yet hee is an assignee within the statute. (b) 14. Eliz. Dyer 39. (1. Rep. 173. b. 4. Rep. 115. b. 1. Roll. Abr. 429.)

So

(1) Because the acceptance of rent cannot make a new lease, and the old one was determined; but the acceptance of the rent is a sufficient declaration, that it is the lessor's will to continue the lease, for he is not entitled to the rent but by the lease. Note to the 11th edition. And see Symfon v. Butcher, Doug. Rep. 51; and the case of Wynn v. Humphreys; and Carter v. Butcher, reported in the notes of that case.

(2) Attornment being taken away per 4. & 5. Ann. c. 16, the law seems to be otherwise now. Note to the 11th edit.

(3. Rep. 62. b.)

Lib 5. fo. 113. Mallorie's case.
Lib. 8. fol. 92. France's case.
(Cro. Jac. 9. 1. Roll. 46.)

And so was it resolved in Wynter's case, Mich. 14. & 15. Eliz.
in Communi Banco, and oftentimes since. Vide Dyer 309.
(Flo. 242. 1. Saun. 240. 1. Leo.
62.)

So if the lessor grant the reversion in fee to the use of A. and his heirs, A. is a sufficient assignee within the statute, because he comes in by the act and limitation of the parties, albeit he is in the possession, and the words of the statute be, to or by, and they be assignees to him, although they be not by him: but such as come in merely by act in law, as the lord of the villeine, the lord by escheat, the lord that entreth or claimeth for mortmaine, or the like, shall not take benefit of this statute.

11. If the lessor in the case before bargain and sell the reversion by deed indented and inrolled, or if the lessor make a feoffment in fee, and the lessee re-enter, the grantee or feoffee shall not take any advantage of any condition, without making notice to the lessee.

12. Albeit the whole words of the statute be, for non-payment of the rent, or for doing of waste or other forfeiture, yet the grantees or assignees shall not take benefit of every forfeiture, by force of a condition, but only of such conditions as either are incident to the reversion, as rent, or for the benefit of the state, as for not doing of waste, for keeping the houses in reparations, for making of fences, scouring of ditches, for preserving of woods, or such like, and not for the payment of any summe in grosse, delivery of corne, wood, or the like, so as other forfeiture shall be taken for other forfeitures like to those examples which were there put, (videlicet) of payment of rent, and not doing of waste, which are for the benefit of the reversion. (1)

Sect. 348.

(F. N. B. 144. b.)

39. E. 3. Resceit 14.

(Ant. 1. b. 47. a.)

*AL seignior per voy
de escheat, &c.*

Note, here it appeareth, that the lord by escheat shall distrein for the rent, and yet the rent was reserved to the lessor and his heirs; but both assignees in deed and assignees in law shall have the rent, because the rent being reserved of inheritance to him and his heirs, is incident to the reversion, and goeth with the same. But if the rent were reserved to him and his assigns, and the lessor assigned over the reversion, and dyeth, the assignee shall not have the rent after his decease, because the rent determined by his death, for that it was not reserved to him, his heirs, and assigns.

Mes il ne poet entrer en la terre per force del condition, &c.

Hereby it appeareth, that at the common law neither assigns in deed nor assignees in law could have taken the benefit of either entrie or re-entrie, by force of a condition.

Pur ceo que il n'est pas beire al lessor, &c.

(f) 21. H. 7. 18. 17. Aff. 20.
39. E. 3. Gard. 113. 114. 18.
Aff. pl. 18. lib. 7. fol. 7. The earl of Bedford's case.

The guardian in chivalrie (f) or in socage shall in the right of the heir take benefit of a condition by entrie or re-entrie, by the common law, and so it is here implied.

ITEM si soyt seig-nior et tenant, et

*le tenant fait un tiel lease pur terme de vie, rendant a lessor et a ses beires tiel annual rent, et pur default de payment un re-en-trie, &c. si apres le lessor morust sans beire durant la vie le te-naunt a terme de vie, per que le reversion devient al
seignior per voy d'escheat, et puis le rent
de le tenaunt a terme de vie soit aderere, le seignior poet destreiner le tenant pur le rent arere; mes il ne poet entrer en la terre per force del condition, &c. pur ceo que il n'est pas beire al * lessor, &c.*

ALSO if lord and *tenant bee, and the tenant make a lease for terme of life, rendering to the lessor and his heyres

such an annuall rent, and for default of payment a re-entrie, &c.
if after the lessor dyeth without heir during the life of the tenant for life, whereby the reversion commeth to the lord by way of escheat, and after the rent of the tenant for life is behind, the lord may distrein
the tenant for the rent behind; but he may not enter into the land by force of the condition &c. because that hee is not heir to the lessor, &c.*

Sect.

* lessor—feoffor, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It has also been held upon this statute, that if a man makes a lease for years upon condition that if the rent should be in arrear, it should be lawful to the lessor and his assigns to re-enter, and then the lessor assigns the reversion over, and the lessee attorns, and the lessor dies, the grantee shall not take advantage of the condition for want of these words, his heirs, in the reservation of the condition; the condition being that he and his assigns shall enter. By Brown, serj. who moved the case in C. B. ex relatione T. Hu. It appears therefore, that this reservation of condition is to be resembled to such a reservation of rent as is mentioned before, in page 47. a. which determined by the death of the lessor; but that nevertheless the grantee shall have advantage of the condition, during the life of the grantor, by the 32. H. 8. Infra 215. b. So note, the grantee of part of the reversion in the whole shall take advantage of a condition; for to this purpose the grantee of a reversion for life or years is an assignee within the 32. Henry 8, who may enter; which nevertheless is very different in the case of a warranty; for a lessee for life, who has but part of the estate in the whole, is not assignee for voucher. Infra 385. b. On the other hand, the grantee of the whole estate in reversion in part is not an assignee within the 32. Henry 8.; as if the reversioner in fee of 4 acres grants 2 acres in fee, the grantee cannot enter; which also is very different in the case of warranty, for the feoffee of 2 acres is an assignee for voucher. Infra 315. a.—Lord Nott. MS.

Sect. 349.

*ITEM si terre soit graunt a un * home pur terme de deux ans sur tiel condition, que s'il payeroit al grantor deins les dits deux ans 40 markes, † adonques il averoit la terre a luy et a ses heires, &c. en cest case si le grantee enter per force de le grant, sans ascun liverie de seisin fait a luy per le grantor, et puis il paya al grantor les 40 markes deins les deux ans, uncore il n'ad riens en la terre forsque pur terme de deux ans, pur ceo que nul liverie de seisin a luy fuit fait al commencement. Car s'il averoit franktenement et fee en cest case, pur ceo que il ad performe le condition, donque il averoit franktenement per force del prime graunt, l'ou nul liverie de seisin de ceo fuit fait, que serroit ‡ inconvenient, &c. Mes si le grantor ust fait liverie de seisin al grantee per force de la grant, donque averoit le grantee le franktenement et le fee sur mesme le condition.*

A L S O if land be granted to a man for terme of two yeares upon such condition, that if hee shall pay to the grantor within the said two yeares fortie marks, then he shal have the land to him and to his heyres, &c. in this case if the grantee enter by force of the grant, without any liverie of seisin made unto him by the grantor, and after he payeth the grantor the forty markes within the two yeares, yet he hath nothing in the land but for terme of two yeares, because no liverie of seisin was made unto him at the beginning. For if he should have a freehold and fee in this case, because he hath performed the condition, then he should have a freehold by force of the first grant, where no liverie of seisin was made of this, which would be inconvenient, &c. But if the grantor had made liverie of seisin to the grantee by force of the grant, then should the grantee have the freehold and the fee upon the same condition.

H E R E fixe things are to be observed. First, Littleton here putteth an example of a condition precedent (1). Secondly, that such a condition which createth an estate may be made by paroll without deed. Thirdly, that liverie of seisin in this case must bee made before the lessee enter, (as Littleton here saith at the beginning) for after his entrie livery made to him that is in possession is void, as hath been said. Fourthly, that if no liverie of seisin be made, that no fee simple doth passe, although the money be paid. Fifthly, that it is inconvenient that the fee simple should passe in this case without livery of seisin. Sixthly, that argumentum ab inconvenienti, is forcible in law, as often hath beene and shall be observed. See more of this kind of condition in the section next following (2).

Et a ses heires, &c. Here (&c.) implyeth an estate in taile, or a lease for life.

Sect.

* home not in L. and M. nor Roh. reason in L. and M. and Roh.

† que added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ inconvenient, &c.—encontre

(1) See some observations on conditions precedent, and conditions subsequent, in the last note upon this chapter.

(2) The necessity which there was in the old law, that there should always be some person to do the feudal duties, to fill the possession, and to answer the actions which might be brought for the sief, introduced the maxim, that the freehold could never be in abeyance. See 2. Wilson, Bond v. West, 165. But it was admitted, that there were some cases in which the inheritance, when separated from the freehold, might be so. The question agitated in the commentary upon this and the following section, arises from the difficulty of ascertaining where the freehold, in the case mentioned by Littleton, is to be. By the livery, it is taken out of the grantor; it must therefore vest in the feoffee. Yet it seems difficult to conceive how it could be in the grantee, consistently with the term of years. The opinion adopted by Littleton and Sir Edward Coke is conformable to what is said in Lord Strafford's case, 8. Rep. 73. b.—It is to be observed, that tho' by conveyances at common law the freehold necessarily passes out of the grantor; and that if there is not some person in being in whom it can immediately vest, the conveyance is void; that

Sect. 350.

(5. Rep. 9^o.)

ORE il ad fee simple conditionall, &c.

The like is of an estate in taile, or for life. Many are of opinion against Littleton in this case, and their reason is, because the fee simple is to commence upon a condition precedent, and therefore cannot passe until the condition be performed; and that here Littleton of a condition precedent doth (before the performance thereof) make it subsequent: and for proove of their opinion they avouch many successions of authorities that no fee simple should passe before the condition performed.

31. E. 1. tit. feoffments & faits
119.

31. E. 1. tit. feoffments & faits 119. A. letteth a mannor to B. for term of twenty years, and the deed would, that after the terme of twenty yeares that B. and his heirs should hold the said mannor for ever by twelve pounds rent, A. taketh a wife and dyeth before the term be past, the wife of A. demands dower. And there Wayland chiefe justice saith, that the fee and the franktenement doth repose in the person of the lessor untill the terme be past, for before that the condition is not performed; for if the lessor had aliened the land before the end of the terme, B. should not recover by a writ of assise, and by the death of the lessor the chiefe lord should have had the wardship

ITEM si terre soyt grant a un home
pur terme de 5 ans,

sur condition, que s'il pay al grantor deins les deux primer ans 40
markes, que adonque il
averoit fee, ou autrement forsque pur terme
de les 5 ans, et liverie de seisin est fait a luy per force de le graunt, ore il ad fee simple conditionell, &c. Et si en ceo case le grauntee ne paia my al grantor les 40 markes deins les primers deux ans, don-ques immediate apres mesmes les deux ans passés, le fee et le frank-tenement est et serra adjudge en le grantor, pur ceo que le grantor
ne poet apres les dits deux ans maintenant enter sur le grauntee, pur ceo que le grauntee ad uncore title per trois ans d'aver et occuper la terre per force de mesme le grant. Et issint pur ceo que le condition del part le grauntee est enfreint, et le grauntor ne poet entrer, la ley mittera le fee et le franktenement en le grantor. Car si le grauntee en cest case fait waist, donques apres le enfrenider de le condition, &c. et apres les

ALSO if land be granted to a man for term of five yeares, upon condition, that if he pay to the grantor within the two first yeares forty markes, that then he shal have fee, or otherwise but for terme of the five yeares, and livery of sei-sin is made to him by force of the grant, now he hath a fee simple conditionall, &c. And if in this case the grauntee doe not pay to the grantor the fortie markes within the first two yeares, then immediately after the said two yeares past, the fee & the freehold is and shall be adjudged in the grantor, because that the grantor cannot after the said two yeares presently enter upon the grauntee, for that the grauntee hath yet title by three yeares to have and occupie the land by force of the same grant.
And so because that the condition of the part of the grauntee is broken, and the grantor cannot enter, the law will put the fee and the freehold in the grantor. For if the grauntee in this case makes waist, then after the breach of the condition, &c. and after the two deux

is not the case with respect to wills, conveyances under the statute of uses, trusts in equity, or grants of rents de novo. For as to wills;—there is no immediate transfer of the freehold, as upon the death of the testator it vests in the heir to answer the lord's services and the stranger's writs. As to conveyances under the statute of uses;—till there is some person in being in whom the use can vest, the possession is not altered, but continues in the feoffor and his heirs. See 1. Inst. 23. As to executory trusts, the legal estate immediately vests and continues in the trustee: and as to rents de novo, the tenant continues in possession of the land out of which they issue. However, it is to be observed, that in cases of wills, uses, and trusts, if it be inconsistent with the estates expressly declared, that the freehold should remain with the party (as if he has a term of years expressly given him), the law will not give him, by implication, an estate of freehold. See Pybus v. Mitford, 1. Vent. 352. Adams v. Savage, 2. Salk. 679. Penhay v. Hurrell, 2. Vern. 370. Speed v. Davis, 2. Salk. 675. In the same manner, if a person limits his estate to such uses as he shall appoint; and in the mean time, and until he makes an appointment, to the use of himself and his heirs; or if he limits it to the use of himself for life, and after his deux ans, le grantor yeares, the grantor avera son brieve de shall have his writ of wast. Et ceo est bone waste. And this is a prosse adonque, que good proffe then, that le reversion est en luy, the reversion is in him, &c. &c.

of the heire of the lessor, and by judgement the wife recovered dower, for the termor could not have fee, all which be the words of that booke.

12. E. 2. tit. voucher 265. 12. E. 2. tit. voucher 265. 9
 I. letteth lands to B. for eight (8. Rep. 73. Plow. 481)

lessee at the end of the tearme, that then he shall have fee: by the non-payment of the mony, the fee and franktenement accrueth to him, and before, the lessee cannot be impleaded in a præcipe, neither shall he vouch.

[x] 7. E. 3. 10. I. letteth certaine lands to N. for the tearme of ten yeares, rendring a hundred shillings by the yeare to him and his heires, and granted by deed, that if he held the lands over to him and his heires, that he should render by the yeare twenty pounds: the lessor during the tearme brought an action of debt for the rent. And there Herle chiefe justice of the Common Pleas giveth the rule, that during the tearme the lessee had but for yeares, and therefore the action of debt maintainable.

[x] 7. E. 3. 10. Pl. Com. Saye's case 272.

[y] 44. E. 3. tit. attain. 22. and 43. Aff. p. 41. D. and A. infeoffe the two plaintifes in the assise, they let those lands to S. for tearme of nine yeares upon condition, that if the plaintife in the assise pay a hundred shillings to S. during the tearme, that S. shall have it but for nine yeares, and if they pay it not, that S. shall have fee. S. continueth his estate by one yeare, and after granteth his estate to one H. which H. continueth his estate by two yeares, and granted the residue of the tearme to R. and within the tearme of nine yeares the plaintifes in the assise pay the hundred shillings to S. R. continueth his possession after the tearme, and infeoffeth D. which infeoffeth the lord Furnivall, against whom and others without any claim or entry made by the plaintifes, after the nine yeares ended he brought his assise, and after adjournment recovered.

[y] 44. E. 3. tit. attain. 22. 43. Aff. p. 41.

[z] 10. E. 3. 39. & 40. R. doth let certaine lands to I. for tearme of twelve yeares, and in suretie of his tearme he maketh a charter of the fee upon condition, that if he be disturbed within the tearme, that he cannot hold the lands untill the end of the tearme, that then he shall hold the lands to him and his heires for ever, and seisin was delivered upon the one charter and the other. R. within the tearme plowed and sowed the land, and tooke the profits against the will of I. and I. upon this disturbance had fee and recovered in assise.

[z] 10. E. 3. 39. 40. 10. Aff. 15. tit. Aff. 161. Pl. Com. Brown- ing's case 135.

6. R. 2. tit. Quid juris clamat 20. If a lease be made for a tearme upon condition, if the lessee pay a certain summe within the tearme, that then he shall have fee, if he pay the money he shall have the fee, but if before the day of payment the lessor levieth a fine to another, the lessee ought to attorn by protestation, and if he pay the money, the conusee shall have it, and the conusee shall have the rent reserved untill the day of payment; and if land be letten for tearme of yeares upon condition, that if the lessee be ousted within the tearme by the lessor, that he shall have fee, if he be ousted, he shall have fee by the condition, and notwithstanding he shall not have any assise, but he must hap possession after the ouster, and of this he shall have an assise.

6. R. 2. tit. quid juris clamat. 20.

And generally the bookes (*) are cited that make a diversitie between a condition precedent and a condition subsequent.

(*) 15. H. 7. 1. a. 14. H. 8. 18. 20. 3. H. 6. 6. b.

And lastly, they cite Dier, [a] 10. Eliz. 281. and in Say and Fuller's case, Pl. Com. 272. the opinions of Dyer and Brown.

[a] Dyer 10. Eliz. 281. Pl. Com. 272.

Notwithstanding al this there are those that defend the opinion of Littleton, both by reason and authority. By reason, for that by the rule of law a liverie of seisin must passe a present freehold to some person, and cannot give a freehold in futuro, as it must doe in this case, if after liverie of seisin made the freehold and inheritance should not passe presently, but expect untill the condition be performed; and therefore if a lease for yeares be made to begin at Michaelmas, the remainder over to another in fee, if the lessor make liverie of seisin before Michaelmas, the liverie is void, because if it should worke at all it must take effect presently, and cannot expect.

Vide Litt. in the chapter of tenants for yeares.

Secondly, they say that when the lessor makes liverie to the lessee, it cannot stand with any reason that against his owne liverie of seisin, a freehold should remaine in the lessor, seeing there is a person able to take it. But if a man by deed make a lease for yeares the remainder to the right heires of I. S. and the lessor make liverie to the lessee secundum formam chartæ, this liverie is voyd, because during the life of I. S. his right heire cannot take (for nemo est hæres viventis), and in that case the freehold shall not remaine in the lessor, and expect the death of I. S. during the tearme; for albeit I. S. die during the tearme, yet the remainder is void, because a liverie of seisin cannot expect.

(1. Rep. 139. 2. Rep. 67. a. Post. 378. a.)

And

his decease, to such uses as he shall appoint, and for want of appointment, to the use of his right heires;—in both of these cases, the settlor and his heires have a qualified and determinable fee, until by an exercise of the power of appointment, an use vests in the person to whom it is appointed; or till by the death of the settlor, without exercising his power, the exercise of it becomes impossible. To this fee dower is clearly incident. If the settlor makes an appointment, a new use springs up and vests in the appointee; and the fee originally limited to the settlor ceases; and with it the right of the wife to her dower out of it: and from that time, the use appointed under the power takes effect, in the same manner as if it had been inserted in the original deed, in the place of the power. But if no appointment is made, the fee, from being qualified and determinable, becomes simple and absolute. It may be objected, that in the second of these cases, an estate for life is expressly limited to the settlor, and that the fee is therefore put in abeyance. But in the case of Leonard Lovie, 8. Rep. 78. where the estate was devised to Leonard Lovie expressly for his life, without impeachment of waste, and afterwards to such uses as he should appoint, and after several intermediate remainders to the use of his right heires, it was resolved, that the fee vested in him till the appointment

(2. Rep. 55.)

And they say further, that seeing all the bookes afore said prove that such a condition is good, and that the livery made to the lessee is effectually, by consequence the freehold and inheritance must passe presently or not at all.

[b] Hill & Grange's Pl. Com. 171.

And it is not rare, say they, in our bookes that words shall be transposed and marshalled so as the feoffment or grant may take effect. [b] As if a man in the moneth of February make a lease for yeares reserving a yearly rent payable at the feasts of Saint Michael the Archangel, and the Annuntiation of our Lady, during the tearme, the law (in this case of reservation) shall make transposition of the feasts, viz. at the feasts of the Annuntiation, and of Saint Michael the Archangel, that the rent may be paid yearly during the tearme. And so it is [c] in case of a grant of an annuitie. And further they take a divoritie in this case betwene a lease for life and a lease for yeares. For in case of a lease for life with such a condition to have fee, they agree that the fee simple passeth not before the performance of the condition, for that the livery may presently worke upon the freehold; but otherwise it is in the case of a lease for years. Also they take a divoritie between inheritances that lie in grant and inheritances that lie in livery. For they agree that if a man grant an advowson for yeares upon condition, that if the grantee pay twenty shillings, &c. within the tearme, that then he shall have fee, the grantee shall not have fee untill the condition be performed, Et sic de similibus. But otherwise it is where livery of seisin is requisite, and therefore if the king make such a lease for yeares upon such a condition, the fee simple shall not passe presently, because in that case no livery is made.

[c] 10. E. 3. Seignior Stafford's case, lib. 8. fol. 74. Pl. Com. Nichol's case 487.

They also make severall answers to the authorities before cited. For as to the case in 31. E. 1. they say that either the case is misreported, or else the law is against the judgement. For the case is but this, that a man make a lease of a manor to B. for twenty yeares, and that after the twentie yeares B. shall hold the manor to him and his heires by 12 pound rent and (as it must be intended) maketh livery of seisin, in this case it is cleere (say they) that B. hath a fee simple maintenant, for there is no condition precedent in the case.

Seignior Stafford's case ubi supra.

As for the case in 12. E. 2. the case (as it is put in the booke) is, that John de Marre made a charter to John de Burford of fee simple, and the same day it was covenanted betwene them that John de Burford should hold the same tenements for eight years, and if he did not pay a hundred markes at the end of the tearme that the land shall remaine to John de Burford and his heires. In which case, say they, there is direct repugnancy; for, first, the charter of the fee simple was absolute, and after the same day it was covenanted between them, &c. this covenant being made after the charter, could neither alter the absolute charter, nor upon a condition precedent give him a fee simple that had a fee simple before.

To all the other bookes, viz. 7. E. 3. 10. E. 3. 10. Aff. 44. E. 3. 43. Aff. and 6. R. 2. they say, that being rightly understood they are good law; for in some of these bookes, as namely in 10. E. 3. 10. Aff. &c. it appeareth that there was a charter made in surety of the tearme, which, say they, must be intended thus, viz. a man maketh a lease for yeares, the lessee enters and the lessor makes a charter to the lessee, and thereby doth grant unto him, that if he pay unto the lessor a hundred markes during the tearme, that then he shall have and hold the lands to him and to his heires.

Pl. Com. in Nichol's case 487.

In this case, say they, there need no livery of seisin, but doth enure as an executory grant by increasing of the state, and in that case, without question, the fee simple passeth not before the condition performed.

And therefore Littleton warily putteth his case of an estate made all at one time by one conveyance, and a livery made thereupon.

For Littleton himselfe in the Section before saith, that in that case without a livery nothing passeth of the freehold and inheritance.

[d] 10. E. 3. 54.

And this diversity (say they) is proved by books; and thereupon they cite [d] 10. E. 3. 54. In a writ of dower, the tenant vouched to warranty; the vouchee as to part pleaded that the husband was never seised of any estate whereof she might be endowed; as to the residue the tenant pleaded that he lesseed to the husband in gage upon condition that if the lessor paid ten markes at a certaine day, that he should re-enter, and if he failed of payment, that the land should remaine to the husband and his heires, which must be intended to be done by one entire act, and pleaded that he paid the money at the day, which is allowed to be a good plea: Ergo, the fee simple passed by the livery, otherwise the plea had amounted that the husband was never seised, &c. And say they, that it cannot be intended that the judges should be of one opinion in Trinitie tearme, and of another opinion in Michaelmasse tearme in the same yeare, and therefore (they hold) their severall opinions are in respect of the said diversity of the cases.

[e] 32. E. 3. tit. garr. 30.

[e] 32. E. 3. tit. garr. 30. a tenant by the curtesie made a lease for yeares, and in surety of the tearme, &c. made a charter in fee simple, and made livery according to the charter (note a speciall mention made of livery in this case); and issue being taken in an assise, whether the tenant

ment was made. See also Sir Edward Cleere's case, 6. Rep. 18. It may also be objected, that a limitation to such uses as a person shall appoint, is incompatible with, or rendered void by, the subsequent limitation of the fee to him, as the ownership of the fee carries with it every power of appointment. But it is to be observed, that the owner of the fee cannot convey the inheritance, but by deed sealed and delivered. Now he may limit a fee, under a power, by a mere instrument in writing, and without any of these forms or ceremonies which the law requires for passing real property; which, clearly, is a power not included in the ownership of the fee. It must, however, be noticed, that as a power of appointment is liable to be suspended and destroyed, and as the existence of the power is the only circumstance which precludes the wife from her dower, in the case I have mentioned there always must be a possibility of danger in taking a title which depends upon it. Yet in some cases the possibility is so small as not to deserve attention. Some remarks on the mode generally used for barring the wife's dower will be offered in the course of these annotations.

tenant by the courtſie demifed in fee, upon the ſpeciall matter found, it was adjudged that a fee ſimple paſſed, and that the heire might enter for a forfeiture, which, ſay they, in caſe of livery is an expreſſe judgement in the point agreeing with the opinion of Littleton.

(f) 43. E. 3. 35. In an action of waſt againſt one in lands which hee held for tearme of yeares, Belknap pleaded thus for the defendant: that the defendant was ſeiſed in fee, and infeoffed the plaintife, &c. and after the plaintife demifed the land back againe to the defendant for yeares upon condition, that if the defendant paid certaine money, &c. that then the defendant might retaine the land to him and to his heires, and if not, the plaintife might enter, &c. and pleaded that the tearme endured, and that the day of payment was not come, and demanded judgement, if the plaintife may maintaine an action of waſte, inasmuch as the defendant had now a fee ſimple, and ſhewed forth the indenture of leaſe with the condition (which agreeth with Littleton's caſe) all being done at one time, and by one deed, and a livery intended, and with Littleton's opinion alſo. It is true, ſay they, that Cavendiſh accouſſell with the plaintife offered to demurre, but never proceeded. (g) Vide 20. Aff. pl. 20. (f) 43. E. 3. 36.

Other authorities they cite, but theſe (as I take it) are the principall, and therefore for avoyding of tediousneſſe, having I feare bene too long upon this point, the others I omit. Only this they adde, that Littleton had ſeene and conſidered of the ſaid bookes, and have ſet downe his opinion where livery of ſeiſin is made upon a conveyance made at one time, as hath bene ſaid, that he hath fee ſimple conditional.

Benigne leſſor, utere tuo iudicio, nihil enim impedit. Conditio beneficiæ quæ ſtatim conſtruitur benigne ſecundum verborum intentionem eſt interpretanda, odioſa autem quæ ſtatim deſtruit ſtrictè ſecundum verborum proprietatem eſt accipienda. Lib. 8. fo. 90. France's caſe. (Dyer 45. Plow. 7. a.)

A leaſe is made to a man and a woman for their lives upon condition, that which of them two ſhall firſt marry, that one ſhall have fee, they entermarry, neither of them ſhall have fee, for the incertainty.

Note, If the condition be to increaſe an eſtate (that is to ſay) to have fee upon payment of money to the leſſor or his heires at a certaine day, before the day the leſſor is attainted of treaſon or felony, and alſo before the day is executed, now is the condition become impoſſible by the act and offence of the leſſor, and yet the leſſee ſhall not have fee, becauſe a precedent condition to increaſe an eſtate muſt be performed, and if it become impoſſible, no eſtate ſhall riſe. (Flo. 48t. a. Ant. 206. a. b.)

Pur ceo que le grantor ne poeſt entrer, &c. Regularly when any man will take advantage of a condition, if hee may enter hee muſt enter, and when he cannot enter he muſt make a claime, and the reaſon is, for that a free-hold and inheritance ſhall not ceaſe without entry or clayme, and alſo the feoffor or grantor may waive the condition at his pleaſure.

Pl. Com. Browning & Beſton's caſe 133. b. (2. Rep. 53. b.)

As if a man grant an advowſon to a man and to his heires upon condition, that if the grantor, &c. pay 20 pound on ſuch a day, &c. the ſtate of the grantee ſhall ceaſe or be utterly void, (1) the grantor payeth the money, yet the ſtate is not reſtored in the grantor before a claime, and that claime muſt be made at the church. (d) And ſo it is of a reversion or remainder of a rent, or common, or the like, there muſt be a claime before the ſtate be reſtored in the grantor by force of the condition, and that claime muſt be made upon the land.

Vi. Littleton cap. Villein.

(d) Pl. Com. Browning's caſe 133. b.

A fortiori, in caſe of a feoffment which paſſeth by livery of ſeiſin, there muſt be a re-entry by force of the condition before the ſtate be voyd.

42. E. 3. 1.

If a man bargaineth and ſelleth land by deed indented and inrolled with a proviſo, that if the bargainer pay, &c. that then the ſtate ſhall ceaſe and be void, he payeth the money, the ſtate is not reſtored in the bargainer before a re-entry, (2) and ſo it is if a bargain and ſale be made of a reversion, remainder, advowſon, rent, common, &c. And ſo it is if lands be deviſed to a man and to his heirs upon condition, that if the deviſee pay not 20 pound at ſuch a day, that his eſtate ſhall ceaſe and be void, the money is not paid, the ſtate ſhall not be veſted in the heir before an entry. And ſo it is of the reversion or remainder, an advowſon, rent, common, or the like. (3)

Lib. 2. fo. 30. Sir Hugh Cholmeley's caſe.

(5. Rep. 34. a. b. Flo. 242. a.)

But the ſaid rule hath divers exceptions. Firſt, in this preſent caſe of Littleton, for that he can make no entry, he ſhall not be driven to make any claime to the reversion: for ſeeing by conſtruction of law the freehold and inheritance paſſeth maintenant out of the leſſor; by the like conſtruction, the freehold and inheritance by the default of the leſſee ſhall be reſtored in the leſſor without entrie or claime.

Vid. lib. 1. fo. 174. Dig's caſe. 20. E. 4. 18. 19.

2. If I grant a rent charge in fee out of my land upon condition, there if the condition be broken, the rent ſhall be extinct in my land, becauſe I (that am in poſſeſſion of the land) need make no claime upon the land, and therefore the law ſhall adjudge the rent voide without any claime.

Pl. Com. Browning's caſe 133. b. 20. E. 4. 19.

3. If a man make a feoffment unto me in fee upon condition that I ſhall pay unto him 20 pound at a day, &c. before the day I let unto him the land for yeares reſerving a rent, and after

20. E. 4. 19. 20. H. 7. 4. b. (4. Rep. 53.)

(1) Acc. 2. And. 8.

(2) Acc. 1. Rep. 174. a. as to the general principle; but the particular caſe there was, that A. covenanted to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, with ſeveral remainders over; with a power of revocation.—By an exerciſe of this power, he revoked the uſes; and it was held, that the antient uſes were determined, without entry or claim, becauſe he himſelf was tenant for life of the land, and he could not enter upon himſelf; and no claim was neceſſary, as an expreſs revocation was as ſtrong as any claim could be.—See the following page.

(3) The entry, or claim, may be made either by the party himſelf, or by a ſtranger, by his order. 2. Cro. 57.

Lib. 3.

(1. Rep. 97.)

Lib. 1. 174. Digge's case.
(Parl. Rot. 227. a. 265. b. Ant.
215. a.)

Pl. Com. in Fulmerstone's case.
207. b.
(2. Roll. Abr. 494. 495. 497.
498. 499.)
(5. Rep. 11. a. 1. Roll. Abr.
412.)

7. E. 4. 29. 14. E. 4. 6. 45. E. 3.

8. E. 2. Aff. 395.

50. E. 3. 27.

Cap. 5.

Of Estates

Sect. 351, 352.

after faile of payment, the feoffee shall retaine the land to him and to his heirs, and the rent is determined and extinct, for that the feoffor could not enter, nor need not claime upon the land, for that he himselfe was in possession, and the condition being collateral is not suspended by the lease, otherwise it is of rent reserved.

4. If a man by his deed in consideration of fatherly love, &c. covenant to stand seised to the use of himselfe for life, and after his decease to the use of his eldest sonne in taile, the remainder to his second sonne in taile, the remainder to his third sonne in fee with a proviso of revocation, &c. the father doth make a revocation according to the proviso, the whole estate is maintenant revested in him without entry or claime for the cause aforesaid.

Le grantee ad uncore title pur 3 ans. By this it appeareth that albeit the lessee had pro tempore a fee simple, yet after that fee simple is devested out of him, and vested in the lessor, he shall hold the lands for three yeares by the expresse limitation of the parties.

If a man make a lease for 40 yeares, the lessee afterwards taketh a lease for 20 yeares upon condition that if he doth such an act, that then the lease for 20 yeares shall be void, and after the lessee breake the condition, by force whereof the second lease is void, notwithstanding the lease for 40 yeares is surrendered, for the condition was annexed to the lease for 20 yeares, but the surrender was absolute. So it is if a man make a lease for 40 yeares, and the lessor grant the reversion to the lessee upon condition, and after the condition is broken, the tearme was absolutely surrendered. And the diversitie is when the lessor grants the reversion to the lessee upon condition, and when the lessee grants or surrenders his estate to the lessor; for a condition annexed to a surrender may revert the particular estate, because the surrender is conditionall. But when the lessor grants the reversion to the lessee upon condition, there the condition is annexed to the reversion and the surrender absolute. (1)

A gardian in chivalrie took a feoffment of the infant within age that was in his ward, and the infant brought an assise, and the gardian shall be adjudged a disseisor, which proveth that the feoffment as against the infant was voyd, and yet by acceptance thereof the interest of the gardian was surrendered.

A man maketh a lease for tearme of life by deed, reserving the first seven yeares a rose, and if the lessee will hold the land after the seven yeares, to pay a rent in money; the lessee will not hold over, but surrender his tearme: in this case in judgement of law he had but a tearme for seven yeares. And so it is if a man make a lease for life, and if the lessee within one yeare pay not 20 shillings, that he shall have but a tearme for two yeares, if hee pay not the money the estate for life is determined, and he shall have the land but for two yeares.

Ceo est bone proosse adonques, que le reversion est in luy, &c. Here is implied that no man can have an action of waste, unlesse the reversion be in him, and by the authoritie of our author the reason of a case, and well applyed, is a good proosse in law. (2)

Sect. 351.

*MES en tiels cafes de feoffment sur condition, l'ou le feoffor poit loyamment entrer pur le condition enfreint, &c. * la le feoffor n'ad le franktenement devant son entrie, &c.* BUT in such cases of feoffment upon condition, where the feoffor may lawfully enter for the condition broken, &c. there the feoffor hath not the freehold before his entrie, &c. (3)

This upon that which hath beene said is evident, and needeth no further explanation.

Sect. 352.

2. Mar. 134. Dyer 14. Eliz. Dyer.
311. b. 2. H. 4. 5. 44. E. 3. 9.
Lib. 2. fo. 79. 83. 81. in Seignior Cromwel's case.
(Ant. 208. b. 1. Roll. Abr.
429. 1. Roll. Abr. 614. 615. a.)

QUE le feoffee donera, &c.

Here is no time limited, therefore the feoffee by the law hath time du-

ITEM si feoffment soit fait sur tiel condition, que le feoffee donera le terre al feoff-

ALSO if a feoffment be made upon such condition, that the feoffee shall give the land to
for,

* la—lon in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) See also Dyer 143. 2. Roll. Abr. 495.

(2) No person is entitled to an action of waste against a tenant for life, but he who has the immediate estate of inheritance in remainder or reversion, expectant upon the estate for life. If between the estate of the tenant for life who commits waste, and the subsequent estate of inheritance, there is interposed an estate of freehold, to any person in esse, then during the continuance of such interposed estate, the action of waste is suspended; and if the first tenant for life dies during the continuance of such interposed estate, the action is gone for ever. But though, while there is an estate for life interposed between the estate of the person committing waste, and that of the reversioner or remainder-man in fee; the remainder-man cannot bring his action of waste: yet, if the waste be done by cutting down trees, &c. such remainder-man in fee may seize them; and if they are taken away, or made use of, before he seizes them, he may bring an action of trover. For, in the eye of the law, a remainder-man for life has not the property of the thing wasted; and even a tenant for life in possession has not the absolute property of it, but merely a right to the enjoyment or benefit of it, as long as it is annexed to the inheritance, of which it is considered a part, and therefore it belongs to the owner of the fee. See Ant. 53. b. 5th Rep. Pagett's case. Udal v. Udal, Alleyne 81. 3. P. W. 267. Bewick v. Whitehead, 22. Vin. Abr. 523. 2. Eq. Ca. Abr. 727. Rolt v. Somerville, 3. Atk. 757.

(3) For till entry it doth not appear; the feoffor having power at his election to void or continue the estate of the feoffee, which he will do. Note to the 11th edit.

for, et a la feme del feoffor, a aver et tener a eux, et a les heires de lour deux corps engendres, et pur default de tiel issue, le remainder al droit heires le feoffor. En ceo cas si le baron devy, vivant la feme, devant aucun estate en le taile fait a eux, * &c. donques doit le feoffee per la ley faire estate a la feme cy pres le condition, et auxy cy pres l'entent de le condition que il poit faire, cest a savoir, de leffer la terre a femme pur terme de vie sans impeachment de waste, le remainder apres son decease a les heires de + corps sa baron de luy engendres, et pur default de tiel issue, le remainder as droit heires le baron. Et la cause pur que le lease serra en cest cas a la feme sole sans impeachment de waste, est pur ceo que le condition est, que l'estate serra fait al baron et a sa feme en ‡ taile. Et si tiel estate ust este fait en le vie le baron, donques apres le mort le baron el || ust ewe estate ent en le taile; quel estate est sans impeachment de waste. Et issint il est reason, que cy pres que

the feoffor, and to the wife of the feoffor, to have and to hold to them and to the heires of their two bodies engendred, and for default of such issue, the remainder to the right heires of the feoffor. In this case if the husband dyeth, living the wife, before any estate in taile made unto them, &c. then ought the feoffee by the law to make an estate to the wife as near the condition, and also as neere to the entent of the condition as he may make it, (1) that is to say, to let the land to the wife for terme of life without impeachment of waste, (2) the remainder after his decease to the heires of the body of her husband on her begotten, (3) and for default of such issue, the remainder to the right heires of the husband. And the cause why the lease shall bee in this case to the wife alone without impeachment of waste is, for that the condition is, that the estate shal be made to the husband and to his wife in taile. And if such estate had been made in the life of the husband, then after the death of the husband shee should have ring his life, unlesse he be harrassed by the request (a. Rep. 59.) of the feoffor or the heires of his body, as Littleton saith in the next section.

Si le baron devie,
 &c. But in this case, (Sect. 337.) if the feoffee dyeth before any feoffment made, then is the condition broken, because he made not the estates, &c. within the time prescribed by the law. But if the feoffment bee made upon condition that the feoffee before the feast of St. Michael the Archangel next following give the land to the feoffor and to his wife in taile, ut supra, and before the day the feoffee dieth, the state of the heire of the feoffee shall be absolute, because a certaine time is limited by the mutual agreement of the parties, within which time the condition becommeth impossible by the act of God, as hath been said before, and therefore it is necessary when a day is limited, to adde to the condition, that the feoffee or his heires doe performe the condition; but when no time is limited, then the feoffee at his perill must performe the condition during his life (although there be no request made) or else the feoffor or his heires may re-enter.

15. H. 7. 13. 21. H. 6. 26. 27.
 9. Eliz. Dyer 262. Pl. Com. 456.
 Lib. 2. fo. 79. Signior Cromwell's case.
 (Sect. 334.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 449. Ant. 206. a.)

(2. Rep. 79. a. 6. Rep. 30. b.)

Fait a eux, &c.

Here the (&c.) implyeth according to the condition with the remainder over.

Al feoffor & a la feme, &c.

Here it appeareth that albeit the feme bee a stranger, yet the feoffee is not bound to make it within convenient time, because the feoffor who is privy to the condition is to take joyntly

27. E. 3. Dower 125.
 Signior Cromwell's case ubi supra.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ le added in L. and M. and Roh.

+ les corps de son baron et de luy engendres, in L. and M. and Roh.

|| ust ewe—ad ewe, in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) So where a feoffment was made on condition that the feoffees re-into the feoffor and his wife in tail, the remainder to the right heirs of the husband; the husband died; the wife married a second husband; the feoffees enfeoffed the second husband and his wife, for her life;—the remainder to the right heirs of the first husband; it was held that the condition was well performed. Br. Abr. tit. Cond. pl. 33. And see ibid. 70. Pl. 291.

(2) Note, if land be given to the wife, and the heirs of the husband of his body begotten, the wife shall have the estate for life, subject to waste.—Sup. 26. b.; therefore such conveyance is not by force. Lord Nott. MS.

(3) It is with great pleasure we present the reader with the following observations on this passage. Lord Chief-justice Wilmore, in his argument in the giving judgment in the case of Frogmorton, on demise of Robinson v. Wharrey. 2. Blackst. 728. remarks: "When an estate is limited to a husband and wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; the word Heirs is a word of limitation, because an estate is given to both the persons, from whose bodies the heirs are to issue. But when it is given to one only, and the heirs of two, (as to the wife and the heirs of her and A. B.) there the word Heirs is a word of purchase; for no estate tail can be made to one only, and the heirs of the body of that person and another. This appears from Litt. sect. 352. according to the true reading collected from the original editions. The common editions make the estate cy pres, therein mentioned, to be, to the widow and les heirs d. corps sa baron de luy engendres; which is not as near as might be to the original estate intended, if the husband had lived; viz. to the husband and wife, and the heirs of their

6. Rep. 30. b.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 452.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 428.)

Seignior Cromwel's case ubi supra.
(2. Rep. 79. Ant. 208. b.)

(Ant. 21. b.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 436. Plow. 7. a.
Dyer 45. 4.)30. H. 8. tit. Condit. Br. 190.
V. 33. H. 8. tit. Joint. Br. 62.Lib. 2. fo. 79. 80. 81. Seignior Cromwel's case. 2. H. 4. 5.2. H. 4. 5. Seignior Cromwel's case ubi supra.
(1. Sid. 268. 303. 304. 442. Ant.
207. a. Cro. El. 45.

joynedly with her. And so it is if the condition be to enfeoffe the feoffor and an estranger, the feoffee hath time during his life unlesse he be halted by request. Otherwise it is (as hath beene said) where the condition is to enfeoffe a stranger or strangers onely.

If a man make a feoffment in fee, upon condition that the feoffee shall make a gift in taile to the feoffor, the remainder to a stranger in fee, there the feoffee hath time during his life, as is afore said, because the feoffor who is *home poit faire estate a l'entent de condition, &c. que il serroit * fait, &c. comment que † et ne poit aver estate en ‡ taile sicome el § puissoit aver si le done en le taile ust eslre fait a § sa baron et ¶ a luy en le vie † sa baron.*

the gift in taile had been made to her husband and to her in the life of her husband, &c.

partie, and privy to the condition, is to take the first estate. But if the condition were to make a gift in taile to a stranger, the remainder to the feoffor in fee, there the feoffee ought to doe it in convenient time, for that the stranger is not privy to the condition, and he ought to have the profits presently, as before hath beene said.

De faire estate al feme cy pres le condition, et auxy cy pres l'entent del condition que il poit faire, &c.

A. infeoffe B. upon condition that B. shall make an estate in frankmarriage to C. with one such as is the daughter of the feoffor; in this case he cannot make an estate in frankmarriage, because the estate must move from the feoffee, and the daughter is not of his blood, but yet he must make an estate to them for their lives, for this is as neer the condition as he can. And so it is if the condition be, to make to A. (which is a meer layman) an estate in frankalmoigne, yet must he make an estate to him for his life, for the reason here yeccied by Littleton.

A diversitie is to be understood between conditions that are to create an estate, and conditions that are to destroy an estate: for here it appeareth, that a condition that is to create an estate, is to be performed by construction of law, as neere the condition as may be, and according to the entent and meaning of the condition, albeit the letter and words of the condition cannot be performed: but otherwise it is of a condition that destroyeth an estate, for that is to be taken strictly, unlesse it be in certaine speciall cases: and of this somewhat hath beene said before in this chapter.

As if a man mortgage his land to W. upon condition, that if the mortgagee and I. S. pay twenty shillings at such a day to the mortgagee, that then he shall re-enter, the mortgagee dieth before the day, I. S. payes the money to the mortgagee, this is a good performance of the condition, and yet the letter of the condition is not performed. But if the mortgagee had been alive at the day, and he would not pay the money, but refused to pay the same, and I. S. alone had tendred the money, the mortgagee might have refused it. But if a man make a lease to two for yeares, with a proviso, if the lessees dye during the term, the lessor shall re-enter, one lessee alien his part and dye, the other lessee cannot re-enter, but the assignee shall enjoy the term so long as the survivor liveth, and the reason is, because the lease by the proviso is not to cease til both be dead. But in the former case, albeit the mortgagee be dead, yet the act of God shall not disable I. S. to pay the money, for thereby the mortgagee receives no prejudice. And so it is that case, if I. S. had died before the day, the mortgagee might have paid it.

And here is to be observed a diversitie when the feoffee dyeth, for then (as hath been said) the condition is broken, and when the feoffor dyeth, for then the estate is to be made as neer the intent of the condition as may be.

Al feme pur terme de sa vie sans impeachment de wast.

Here it appeareth, that this estate for life ought to be without impeachment of wast, and yet if the wife doth accept of any estate for life without this clause, without impeachment of wast, it is good, because the state for life is the substance of the grant, and the privilege to be without impeachment of wast is collateral, and onely for the benefit of the wife, and the omission of it onely for the benefit of the heire. (1)

Also if the wife take husband before request made, and then they make request, and the state is

* fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.
‡ el—il in L. and M. and Roh.
† sa—su in L. and M. and Roh.

† el—il in L. and M. and Roh.
§ sa—su in L. and M. and Roh.

† le added in L. and M. and Roh.
¶ a not in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Mr. Serj. Hawkins observes here, that the omission of the privilege of being without impeachment of waste, shall not give the heir of the feoffor, for whose benefit it was omitted, a re-entry, which would defeat the estate of the wife. P. 307. 2. Rep. 82. a.

“ their two bodies. But the original edition by Letton and Macklinia, in Littleton's life-time, and the Rohan edition, which is the next (both which my brother Blackstone has) read it thus: les heirs de les corps de son baron et luy engendres: which is quite consonant to the original estate; and this estate, to the widow for life, and the heirs of the body of her husband and herself begotten, Littleton, in the same section, declares not to be an estate tail. The same is held in Dyer 99.—in Lane and Pannel, 1. Roll. Rep. 438. and in Goffage and Taylor, Style, 325. which, from a manuscript of lord Hale, in possession of my brother Bathurst, appears to have been first determined in Hil. 1651; which accounts for some expressions of chief-justice Rolle, in Style's case, which was in T. Pasch. 1652.”

is made to the husband and wife, during the life of the wife, this is a good performance of the condition, albeit the estate be made to the husband and wife, where Littleton saith it is to be made to the wife, but it is all one in substance, seeing that the limitation is during the life of the wife.

Sauns impeachment de wast, Absque impetitione wasti, (that is) without any challenge or impeachment of waste, and by force hereof the lessee may cut downe the trees and convert them to his owne use. Otherwise it is if the words were sauns impeachment per usum action de wast, for then the discharge extends but to the action, and not to the trees themselves, and in that case the lessor shall have them (1).

And it is to be observed, that after the decease of the husband the state is not to be made to the wife and the heires of her body by her late husband ingendred, and so to have an estate of inheritance as she should have had by survivor, if the estate had bin made according to the condition, but only an estate for life without impeachment of wast, &c. for that by the authority of Littleton is not so neere the intent of the condition as the case that Littleton putteth. But I will search no further into this case, but leave it to the learned and judicious reader.

Et apres son decease a les heires del corps le baron de luy engendres.

Note here, admit that there were two issues in taile, the remainder shal presently vest only in the eldest, and yet if he dieth without issue, it shall per formam doni vest in the youngest, as hath beene said in the chapter of Estate taile: (2) and so it is tacite proved here, for otherwise the condition (if there were two issues) could not be performed.

(Cro. Car. 242.)
(Cro. Jac. 216.)
See in my Reports lib. 11. fo. 83.
lib. 9. fo. 9. li. 2. 23.

(4. Rep. 63. a.)

(Ant. 20. b. 26. b. 27. a.)

Sect. 353.

ITEM en cest case si le baron et la feme ont issue, et devont devant le done en le taile fait a eux, &c. donques le feoffee doit faire estate al issue et a les heires de corps son pere et son mere engendres, et pur default de tiel issue, le remainder a les droit heires le baron, &c. Et mesme la ley est en auters cases semblables. Et si tiel feoffee ne voet faire tiel estate, &c. quant il est raisonnablement requise per eux que devoyent aver estate per force de le condition, &c. donque poet le feoffor ou ses heires entrer.*

ALSO in this case if the husband and wife have issue, and die before the gift in taile made to them, &c. then the feoffee ought to make an estate to the issue, and to the heires of the body of his father and his mother begotten, and for default of such issue, &c. the remainder to the right heires of the husband, &c. And the same law is in other like cases: and if such a feoffee will not take such estate, &c. when he is reasonably required by them which ought to have the state by force of the condition, &c. then may the feoffor or his heires enter.

QUANT il est raisonnablement requise per eux queux devoyent aver estate per force de le condition.

Note here it appeareth, that the feoffee hath time during his life to make the estate, unless he be reasonably required by them that are to take the estate. This is to be intended of parties or privies, and not of meere strangers, for there (as hath beene said) the state must be made in convenient time.

And concerning the request it is to be knowne, that when the request is made, the party or privy must request the feoffee at a time certain to be upon the land, and to make the state according to the condition, for seeing no time certain is prescribed for the making of the state, and it is incertain when the request shall be made, such request and notice must be made as hath bin said before in this chapter. And of this section, with the (&c.) there needeth not, upon that which hath beene said, any farther explication.

(2. Rep. 78. b. 79.)

(Ant. 222. b. 214. b. 268. b.)

(8. Rep. 89. b.)

Sect.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The privilege given by the words without impeachment of waste, is annexed to the privy of estate;—so that if the person to whom that privilege is given, changes his estate, he loses the privilege. 11. Rep. 83. b. Latch. 270.—It has been held that the intent of this clause is only to enable the tenant to cut down timber and open new mines, and that it does not extend to allow destructive or malicious waste; such as cutting down timber which serves for the shelter or ornament of the estate. See Vane v. Lord Bernard, 2. Vern. 738. Packington v. Packington, 5. Bac. Abr. 491. Roit v. Lord Sommerville, 2. Ab. Eq. 759. Alton v. Alton, 1. Vin. 264. Peers v. Peers, 1. Vin. 521. 2. Atk. 283.

(2) See 1. Rep. 95. 3. Rep. 61. 11. Rep. 80. and the note page 488. in Mr. Douglas's Reports.

Sect. 354.

(2. Rep. 70.)

QUE le feoffee re-infeoffera plusieurs homes. By the re-feoffment it is implied to be made to the feoffors, for a feoffment over to strangers cannot be said a re-feoffment, and if the feoffment should be made over to strangers only, then, as hath been often said, it must be made in convenient time.

Al heire celuy que survesquist, a aver & tener a luy & a les heires celuy que survesquist. Hereupon questions have been made, wherefore the habendum is not to the heires of the heire, and for what reason it is by Littleton limited to the heires of the survivor. And the cause is, for that if it were made to the heires of the heire, then some persons by possibility should be inheritable to the land, which should not have inherited if the estate had been made to the survivor and his heires, and consequently the condition broken.

(Ant. 12. a.)

Vide Sect. 49

For example, if the survivor took to wife Alice Fairfield, in this case if the limitation were to the sonne and his heires, then if the sonne should dye without heires of his father, the blood of the Fairfields (being the blood of his mother) should inherit. But if the limitation be to the right heires of the father, then should not the blood of the Fairfields by any possibility inherit, for then it is as much as if the state had been made to the survivor and his heires: and therefore these words (et a les heires celuy que survesquist), which many have thought superfluous, are verie materiall. Note well this kind of fee simple, for it is worthy the observation: but sufficient hath been said to open the meaning of Littleton, and therefore I will dive no deeper into this point, but leave it to the further consideration of the learned reader. (1)

Sect. 355.

LITTLETON having spoken of defaults of performance, or expresse breaches of conditions, speaketh now in what cases the feoffee in judgement of law doth disable himselfe to perform the condition: and of disabilities some be by act of the party, and some by act in law.

Ou a doner en taile a un auter, &c. Here is implied an estate for life, or for yeares, &c.

ITEM si feoffment soit fait sur condition d'enseoffier un auter, ou ‡ de doner en || taile a un auter, &c. si le feoffee devant le performance del condition enseoffia un e-stranger, ou fait un lease pur terme de vie, donques poct le feof-

ALSO if a feoffment be made upon condition to enseoffe another, or to make a gift in taile to another, &c. if the feoffee before the performance of the condition enseoffe a stranger, or make a lease for life, then

for

* re-infeoffera—infeoffera, L. and M. and Rob. nor Rob. || le added in L. and M. and Rob.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Rob.

‡ de not in L. and M.

(1) See whether there is a difference between an obligation and feoffment with condition to re-enseoff.—Obligation on condition to give to the baron and feme and the heirs of the body of the feme before a certain day; and before the day the feme dies. The court was divided whether he ought to make it cy pres, in 8. Jac. B. R. Rot. 303. Roger and Scudamore, T. 37—P. 4. E. 6. Bendt. n. 56. Obligation on condition to enseoff B. and C. and their heirs before such a day, and before the day B. dies, the obligation is discharged. Sir Ant. Brown's case. But this case was denied by the whole court. T. 40. E. C. B. C. n. 16. Obligation with condition that the obligor or his heirs should enseoff the obligee and his heirs before a certain day;—before the day the obligee dies: it was ruled that he should enseoff the heir. T. 40. El. C. B. Hone v. May, C. n. 16.—Ld. Hale's MSS.

(2) See the note 2. on page 12. b.

for & ses heires enter, &c. pur ceo que il ad luy mesme disable de performer le condition, entant que il ad fait estate a un autre, &c.

may the feoffor and his heirs enter, &c. because he hath disabled (1) himselfe to performe the condition, inasmuch as he hath made an estate to another, &c.

Enfeoffe un estranger ou fait un lease pur terme de vie. This is a disability by the act of the partie, for herein the feoffee hath disabled himself to make the feoffment or other estate according to the condition.

And to speake once for all, the feoffee is disabled when he cannot convey the land over according to the condition in the same plight, qualitie and freedome as the land was conveyed to him, for so the law requireth the same, as shall manifestly appeare hereafter. And here where our Author speaketh of a feoffment, he includeth an estate taile as well as the fee simple.

(2. Rep. 59. 1. Roll. Abr. 447.)

Sect. 356.

EN mesme le manner est, si le feoffee, devant le condition performe, lessa mesme la terre a un estranger pur terme des ans; en cest case le feoffor et ses heires poyent entrer, &c. pur ceo que le feoffee ad luy disable de faire estate de les tenements accordant a ceo que estoit en les tenements, quant estate ent fait a luy. Car s'il voile faire estate de les tenements accordant a le condition, &c. donques poit le lessée pur terme d'ans enter & ouste mesme celuy a que l'estate est fait, &c. et occuper ceo durant sont terme †.

IN the same manner it is, if the feoffee, before the condition performed, letteth the same land to a stranger for tearme of yeares; in this case the feoffor and his heires may enter, &c. because the feoffee hath disabled him to make an estate of the tenements according to that which was in the tenements, when the state thereof was made unto him. For if hee will make an estate of the tenements according to the condition, &c. then may the lessée for yeares enter and oust him to whom the estate is made, &c. and occupy this during his tearme.

(4. Rep. 52.)

(5. Rep. 95.)

SI le feoffee devant le condition performe lessa mesme la terre a un estranger pur terme des ans, &c. Here the &c. implyeth a lease to take effect in futuro as well as in presenti, also a lease for one yeare or halfe a yeare, &c.

The reason of this is evidently set downe before. And againe, of disabilities some be by act in presenti, whereof Littleton hath put two examples, and some in futuro, whereof now hee will speake in the next section.

Sect. 357.

ET plusors ont dit, que si tiel feoffment soit fait a un home sole sur mesme condition, & devant que il ad per-

AND many have said, that if such feoffment be made to a single man upon the same condition, and before hee hath per-

FIRST, here is an example of a disability both by act in law, and in futuro, for by marriage the wife is entitled by law to dower, after the death of her husband.

Secondly, it [a] appeareth that albeit the wife by the marriage is but intituled to have dower,

[a] 13. H. 7. 23. b. 34. E. 3. dower. 127. M. 27. E. 3. tit. dower. 135. 28. Alf. Pl. 4. 11. H. 7. 7. 6. lib. 2. fol. 59. b.

* de les tenements, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Upon the doctrine of this and the three following sections, see Vin. Abr. vol. 5. p. 221. 225.

(5. Rep. 20. b. 21. a.)
Julius Winnington's case, lib. 2.
fol. 59. 60.

dower, and the estate which she is to have in futuro, viz. after the decease of her husband, yet it is a present cause of entrie. As a lease for yeares to begin at a day to come is a present disability and cause of re-entrie, for that the land is not in that freedom and plight as it was conveyed to the feoffee, and after the state made over according to the condition the land shall be charged therewith.

En un auter plight.

Plight is an old English word, and here signifieth not onely the estate but the habit and qualitie of the land, and extendeth to rent charges, and to a possibility of dower. Vide Sect. 289. where plight is taken for an estate or interest of and in the land it selfe, and extendeth not to a rent charge out of the land.

A un home sole.

For if the feoffee were married at the time of the feoffment, then the dower can bee no disability, because the land shall remaine in such plight as it was at the time of the feoffment made unto him.

Donques le feoffor & ses heires maintenant poient entrer.

Here it appeareth, that seeing that for this title or possibility the feoffor may presently enter, that albeit the wife happen to dye before the husband, so as this title or possibility tooke no effect, yet the feoffor may re-enter, for the feoffee being disabled at any time though the same continue not, yet the feoffor may re-enter, for in that case he that is once disabled is ever disabled. And herein a diversitie is to be observed betweene a disability for a time on the part of the feoffee, and a disability for a time of the part of the feoffor. For if a man maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition that the feoffee before such a day shall re-entfeoff the feoffor, the feoffee taketh wife, and the wife dyeth before the day, yet may the feoffor re-enter.

So it is if the feoffee before the day entreth into religion, and is professed, and before the day is deraigned, yet the feoffor may re-enter.

So it is if the feoffee before the day make a feoffment in fee, and before the day take back an estate to him and his heires, yet the feoffor may re-enter.

Albeit in these cases a certaine day be limited, yet the feoffee being once disabled is ever disabled. And so it is when no time is limited by the parties, but the time is appointed by the law.

But if a man make a feoffment in fee upon condition, that if the feoffor or his heirs pay a certaine sum of money before such a day, the feoffor commit treason, is attainted and executed, now is there a disability on the part of the feoffor, for he hath no heir; but if the heir be restored before the day he may performe the condition, as it was resolved * Trin. 18. Eliz. in Communi Banco in Sir Thomas Wiat's case, which I heard and observed. Otherwise it is if such a disability had growne on the part of the feoffee; and the reason of the diversitie is, for that, as Littleton saith, maintenant by the disability of the feoffee, the condition is broken, and the feoffor may enter, but so it is not by the disability of the feoffor, or his heires, for if they performe the condition within the time, it is sufficient, for that they may at any time performe the condition before the day. And so it is if the feoffor enter into religion, and before *forme mesme la condition il prent feme, * donques le feoffor et ses heires maintenant poient entrer, pur ceo que s'il fesoit estate accordant a la condition, et puis morust, donques † la feme serra endowe, et poit recover sa dower per brieve de dower, &c. et issint per le prisel del feme les tenements sont mis en un auter plite que ne fueront al temps de feoffment sur condition, pur ceo que adonques nul tiel ‡ feme fuit dowable, ne serroit dowe per la ley, &c. &c.*

formed the same condition he taketh wife, then the feoffor and his heires maintenant may enter, because, if he hath made an estate according to the condition, and after dieth, then the wife shall be endowed, and may recover her dower by a writ of dower, &c. and so by the taking of a wife, the tenements bee put in another plight then they were at the time of the feoffment upon condition, for that then no such wife was dowable, nor should bee endowed by the law, &c.

(1. Roll. Abr. 447.)

(5. Rep. 21. a.)

21. E. 4. 55.

(2. Rep. 79. a.)
* Trin. 18. Eliz. in Communi Banco in Sir Thomas Wiat's case.

(Plow. 553. a. 554. Cro. Cax. 427. Hob. 334.)

* donques—que in L. and M. and Roh.

† la—sa in L. and M. and Rob.

‡ feme not in L. and M. nor Roh.

the day is deraigned, he may performe the condition for the cause aforesaid, et sic de similibus. The (Señ.) in this section are sufficiently explained.

Señ. 358.

*EN mesme le manner est, si le fe-offee charge la terre per son fait d'un rent charge devant le performance del condition, ou soit oblige en un estatute de le staple,
ou statute merchant,
en tielx casés le feoffor et ses heires poy-ent entrer, &c. causâ quâ suprâ. Car quecunque que venust a les tenements per le feoffment de le feoffee,
* eux covient estre liables, et estre mis en execution per force
de l'estatute merchant, ou de statute
del staple. † Quere.
Mes quant le feoffor ou ses heires, pur les causes avant dits, averont entrer, come ils devoient, come il semble, &c. don-ques tous tiels choses que devant tiel en-trie puissent troubler ou encumber
les tenements issint
dones sur condition,
&c. quant a mesmes les tenements sont ousterment defeats.*

The Lord Clifford did hold his barony and the sherswick of Wissmerland of the king by grand serjanty in capite, and the king gave him licence that he might infeoffe thereof divers chaplains in fee, so that they should give the same to the Lord Clifford and the heires males

IN the same manner it is, if the fe-offee charge the land by his deed with a rent charge before the performance of the condition, or be bound in a statute staple, or statute merchant, in these cases the feoffor and his heires may enter, &c. causâ quâ suprâ. For whosoever commeth to the lands by the feoffment of the feoffee, they ought to be lyable, and put in execution by force of the statute merchant, or of the statute staple.
Quere. But when the feoffor or his heires, for the causes aforesaid, shal have entred, as it seemes they ought, &c. then all such things which before such entry might trouble or incumber
the land so given upon condition, &c.
as to the same land,
are altogether defeated.

Poyent entrer, &c.

And here it is to be understood, that the grant of the rent charge is a present disability of the feoffee, and therefore albeit the grantee doth bring a writ of annuitie, and discharge the land of it, ab initio, yet the cause of entrie being once given by the act of the feoffee,
the feoffor may re-enter.
And so it is if the grant of the rent charge were made for life, and the grantee died before any day of payment, yet
the feoffor may re-enter.

The like law is of any judgement given against the feoffee wherein debt or damages are recovered.

Ou soit oblige in un statute de la staple,

&c. If the feoffee be dis-seised, and after bind himself in a statute staple, or merchant, or in a recognizance, or take wife, this is no disability in him, for that during the disseisin the land is not charged therewith, neither is the land in the hands of the disseisor liable there-unto. And in that case if the wife die or the conusee release the statute or recognizance, and after the disseisee doth enter, there is no disability at all, because the land was never charged therewith, and therefore in that case the feoffee may enter and performe the condition in the same plight and free-dome as it was conveyed unto him.

And it is to be observed, that Littleton putteth these cases as examples, for there are some other disabilities implied, that are not here exprest.

13. H. 7. 23. b. 44. E. 3. 9. b. 20.
E. 3. 73. 20. H. 6. 34. Julius Wynnington's case ubi supra.
(1. Roll. Abr. 447.)

(5. Rep. 20. b.)

Lib. 2. fol. 59. 60. Julius Wyn- nington's case.

(2. Rep. 79. a. 10. Rep. 49. b.)

18. Aff. Pl. ultimo. 19. E. 3.
39. Lib. 2. fol. 80. b. Sir Crom- wel's case.
(4. Rep. 119.)

* Eux—donques les tenements, L. and M. and Roh.

† Quere—&c. L. and M. and Roh.

(Ant. sect. 354. 1. Roll. Abr. 454.)

males of his body, the remainder over, &c. the Lord Clifford according to the licence infeoffed the chaplains, and before they made the reconveyance the Lord Clifford dyed, and it was adjudged that the heir might enter for the condition broken. For in this case the feoffees were bound by law to have made the gift in taile to the Lord Clifford himselfe, albeit hee never made any request, for otherwise they pursued not the licence, and if they should make the state to the issue of the Lord Clifford, then might the king seise the barony, &c. for default of a licence, and that in default of the feoffees. And then the same should not be in the same plight and freedome as it was at the time of the feoffment made upon condition, which is worthy of observation.

(1. Rep. 79. 1. Leo. 167.)

If a man grant an advowson upon condition that the grantee shall regrant the same to the grantor in taile; in this case, if the church become void before the regrant or before any request made by the grantor, he may take advantage of the condition, because the advowson is not in the same plight as it was at the time of the grant upon condition. And so was it resolved, (*) Pasch. 14. Eliz. in Communi Banco, betweene Andreeves and Blunt, which I heard and observed, and which my Lord Dier hath omitted out of his report of that case, and therefore the grantee in that case at his perill must regrant it before the church become voide, or else he is disabled, otherwise he hath time during his life if he be not hastened by request.

44. E. 3. 9.

If the feoffee suffer a recovery by default upon a fained title, before execution sued the feoffor may re-enter for this disability, et sic de similibus.

Sect. 359.

ET en le fait est nul condition, &c.

either in deed or in law.

(4. Rep. 25. 2.)

Et le feoffment est en tiel force sicome nul tiel fait ust este fait.

18. E. 3. 19. 36. 17. Ass. p. 20.
8. H. 6. 8. 27. H. 6.

And the reason hereof is, for that the estate passeth by the livery of seisin (1). And in this case the feoffor upon the deliverie of seisin must expresse the state to him and his heirs, or to the heirs of his body, &c.

34. Ass. pl. 1.

If an agreement bee made betweene two, that the one shall enfeoffe the other upon condition in surety of the payment of certaine money, and after the livery is made to him and his heirs generally, the state is holden by some to be upon condition, inasmuch as the intent of the parties was not changed at any time, but continued at the time of the livery.

ITEM, si un home fait un fait de feoffment a un autre,

*& en le fait est nul condition, &c. et quant le feoffor a luy voyle faire livery de seisin per force de mesme le fait, il fait a luy le livery de seisin sur certaine condition ;

en cest cas rien de les tenements passa per le fait, pur ceo que le condition n'est comprise deins le fait,

& le feoffment est en tiel force sicome nul tiel fait ust este fait.

*certaine condition ;

en cest cas rien de les tenements passa per le fait, pur ceo que le condition n'est comprise deins le fait,

& le feoffment est en tiel force sicome nul tiel fait ust este fait.

ALSO, if a man make a deed of feoffment to another, and in the deed there is no condition, &c. and when the feoffor will make livery of seisin unto him by force of the same deed, hee makes livery of seisin unto him upon certain condition; in this case nothing of the tenements passeth by the deed, for that the condition is not comprised within the deed, and the feoffment is in like force as if no such deed had beene made.

ment to another, and in the deed there is no condition, &c. and when the feoffor will make livery of seisin unto him by force of the same deed, hee makes livery of seisin unto him upon certain condition; in this case nothing of the tenements passeth by the deed, for that the condition is not comprised within the deed, and the feoffment is in like force as if no such deed had beene made.

the feoffor will make livery of seisin unto him by force of the same deed, hee makes livery of seisin unto him upon certain condition; in this case nothing of the tenements passeth by the deed, for that the condition is not comprised within the deed, and the feoffment is in like force as if no such deed had beene made.

livery of seisin unto him by force of the same deed, hee makes livery of seisin unto him upon certain condition; in this case nothing of the tenements passeth by the deed, for that the condition is not comprised within the deed, and the feoffment is in like force as if no such deed had beene made.

nothing of the tenements passeth by the deed, for that the condition is not comprised within the deed, and the feoffment is in like force as if no such deed had beene made.

the deed, and the feoffment is in like force as if no such deed had beene made.

if no such deed had beene made.

43. E. 3. tit. Estoppel 177.
19. E. 3. ibid. 184.

If a man make a charter of feoffment in fee, and the feoffor deliver seisin for life, the feoffee shall hold it but for life; but if the livery be expressely for life, and also according to the deed, the whole fee simple shall passe, because it hath a reference to the deed.

Sect. 360.

ITEM si feoffment soit fait, &c. And

ITEM si feoffment soit fait sur tiel

ALSO if a feoffment be made
con-

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Vid. ant. 48.

condition, que le feoffee ne alienera la terre a nulluy, cest condition est voide, pur ceo que quant home est enseoffe * de terres ou tenements, il ad power de eux aliener a ascun person per la ley. Car si tiel condition serroit bone, dunque la condition luy ousteroit de tout le power que la ley luy dona, le quel serroit enconter reason, & pur ceo tiel condition est voyde.

upon this condition, that the feoffee shall not alien the land to any, this condition is void, because when a man is infeoffed of lands or tenements, he hath power to alien them to any person by the law. For if such a condition should bee good, then the condition should oust him of all the power which the law gives him, which should bee against reason, and therefore such a condition is voide.

the like law is of a devise in fee upon condition that the devisee shall not alien (1), the condition is voide, and so it is of a grant, release, confirmation, or any other conveyance whereby a fee simple doth passe. For it is absurd and repugnant to reason that he, that hath no possibility to have the land revert to him, should restrain his feoffee in fee simple of all his power to alien. And so it is if a man bee possessed of a lease for yeares, or of a horse, or of any other chattell reall or personall, and give or sell his whole interest or propertie therein upon condition that the donee or vendee shal not alien the same, the same is void, because his whole interest and propertie is out of him, so as he hath no possibility of a reverter, and it is against trade and traffique, and bargaining and contract-

(Ant. 206. 1. Rep. 85.
21. H. 6. 34. a. 8. H. 7. 10. b.
33. Aff. 11. 24. Doct. and Stud.
39. 124. 13. H. 7. 23.
(5. Rep. 56. a.)

Argumentum ex absurdo.
Vid. Sect. 722.

ing betweene man and man: and it is within the reason of our author that it should ouster him of all power given to him. Iniquum est ingenuis hominibus non esse liberam rerum suarum alienationem; and rerum suarum quilibet est moderator, & arbiter. And againe, regulariter non valet pactum de re mea non alienanda. But these are to be understood of conditions annexed to the grant or sale it selfe in respect of the repugnancy, and not to any other collateral thing, as hereafter shall appeare. Where our author putteth his case of a feoffment of land, that is put but for an example: for if a man be seised of a seigniorie, or a rent, or an advowson, or common, or any other inheritance that lyeth in grant, and by his deed granteth the same to a man and to his heirs upon condition that he shall not alien, this condition is voide. But some have said that a man may grant a rent charge newly created out of lands to a man and to his heirs upon condition that he shall not alien that, that is good, because the rent is of his owne creation; but this is against the reason and opinion of our author, and against the height and purtie of a fee simple.

(10. Rep. 39. Hob. 170.)

A man before the statute of quia emptores terrarum might have made a feoffment in fee, and added further, that if he or his heirs did alien without licence, that he should pay a fine, then this had been good. And so it is said, that when the lord might have restrained the alienation of his tenant by condition, because the lord had a possibility of reverter; and so it is in the king's case at this day, because he may reserve a tenure to himselfe.

14. H. 4. 13. H. 7. 23.

If A. be seised of Black Acre in fee, and B. infeoffeth him of White Acre upon condition that A. shall not alien Black Acre, the condition is good, for the condition is annexed to other land, and ousteth not the feoffee of his power to alien the land whereof the feoffment is made, and so no repugnancy to the state passed by the feoffment; and so it is of gifts, or sales of chattels reals or personals.

21. H. 7. 8. lib. 5. 56. Knight's case.

Sect. 361.

MES si le condition soit tiel, que le feoffee ne alienera a un tiel, noshant son noshme, ou

BUT if the condition be such, that the feoffee shal not alien to such a one, naming his name, or to any of his

IF a feoffment in fee bee made upon condition that the feoffee shall not infeoffe I. S. or any of his heirs or issues, &c. this is good, for he doth not restraine the feoffee of all his power: the reason here yeilded by our author

Pl. Com. 77. a. 8. H. 7. 10. b.
21. E. 4. 47. a.

* de—en, L. and M.

(1) A devise in fee, on condition not to alien but to I. S. whether void? See Muschamp's case, Bridg. 132.—Lord Nott. MSS.

(Dyer 45. 2. 11. Rep. 74. a.)

30. H. 7. 11. Doct. and Stud. 124.
13. H. 7. 23.

Brafton lib. 1. fol. 13. a.

author is worthy of observation. And in this case if the feoffee enfeoffe I. N. of entent and purpose that hee shall enfeoffe I. S. some hold that this is a breach of the condition, for quando aliquid prohibetur fieri, ex directo prohibetur & per obliquum.

If a feoffment bee made upon condition that the feoffee shall not alien in mortmaine, this is good, because such alienation is prohibited by law, and regularly whatsoever is prohibited by the law, may be prohibited by condition, be it malum prohibitum, or malum in se. In ancient deeds of feoffment in fee there was most commonly a clause, quod licitum sit donatori rem datam dare vel vendere cui voluerit, exceptis viris religiosis & Judæis.

*a ascun de * ses heires, ou de issues d'un tiel, &c. ou hujusmodi, les queux conditions ne tollent tout la power d'alienation del feoffee, &c. doncque tiel condition est bone.*

heires, or of the issues of such a one, &c. or the like, which conditions doe not take away all power of alienation from the feoffee, &c. then such condition is good.

Sect. 362.

33. Aff. 11. 24. lib. 6. 40. 41.
Mildmay's case. 21. H. 6. 33.
13. H. 7. 23. 21. H. 7. 11.
Vid. Sect. 220. acc.(Cro. Car. 555. Hob. 191. Cro.
Jac. 307. Ant. 146. b. 10. Rep.
230. 4. Rep. 14.)

(6. Rep. 43. a. contra.)

21. H. 6. 33. 13. H. 7. 23. 24.
27. H. 8. 17. 19. 31. H. 8.
Dyer 45.
(3. Rep. 64.)(*) Dier 33. H. 8. fo. 48. 49.
(10. Rep. 38. 39. 1. Roll. Abr.
418.)Vid. lib. 6. 40. 41. Sir Anth.
Mildmaic's case.
(1. Rep. 84. 1. Roll. Abr. 418.)

NOTE here, the double negative in legall construction shall not hinder the negative, viz. sub conditione quod ipse nec heredes sui non alienarent. And therefore the grammaticall construction is not alwayes in judgment of law to be followed.

Forsque pur lour vies demesne, &c. And yet if a man make a gift in taile upon condition that he shall not make a lease for his owne life, albeit the state be lawfull, yet the condition is good, because the reversion is in the donor. As if a man make a lease for life or years upon condition, that they shall not grant over their estate or let the land to others, this is good, and yet the grant or lease should bee lawfull. (*) If a man make a gift in taile upon condition that he shall not make a lease for three lives or 21 years according to the statute of 32. H. 8. the condition is good, for the statute doth give him power to make such leases, which may be restrained by condition, and by his owne agreement; for this power is not incident to the estate, but given to him collaterally by the act, according to that rule of law, quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se introducto.

Quant il fist tiel alienation & discontinuance del state taile. And therefore if a gift in taile be made upon condition, that the donee, &c. shall not alien, this condition is good to some intents, and void to some; for, as to all those alienations which amount to any discontinuance of the state taile (as Littleton here speaketh,) or is against the statute of Westminster 2. the condition is good without question. But as to a common recovery the condition is voyd, because this is no discontinuance, but a barre, and this common recovery

ITEM, si tenements soient donnees en le taile sur tiel condition, que le tenant en le taile ne ses heires + ne alieneront en fee, ‡ ne en le taile, ne pur terme d'auter vie, lorsque pur lour vies demesne, &c. tiel condition est bone. Et la cause est, pur ceo que quant il fist tiel alienation et discontinuance de le taile, il fait le contraire a l'entent le donor, pur que l'estatute de W. 2. || cap. 1. fuit fait, per que l'estatute les estates en le taile sont ordeines.

ALSO, if lands bee given in taile upon condition, that the tenant in taile nor his heires shall not alien in fee, nor in taile, nor for terme of another's life, but only for their owne lives, &c. such condition is good. And the reason is, for that when hee maketh such alienation and discontinuance of the entaile, hee doth contrary to the intent of the donor, for which the statute of W. 2. cap. 1. was made, by which statute the estates in taile are ordained (1).

* ses not in L. and M.

† &c. added in L. and M.

‡ ne—on in L. and M.

|| cap. 1. added in L. and M.

(1) A power of suffering a common recovery, and of levying a fine within the statutes of 4. Hen. 7. and 32. Hen. 8. is so inseparably inherent to the estate of a tenant in tail, that any condition or proviso restraining or prohibiting it, is held to be repugnant to the nature of the estate, and therefore void. But it does not vitiate the grant of the estate tail to which it is annexed; because (to use an expression of lord Hobart) a condition annexed to an estate given is a divided clause from the grant, and therefore cannot frustrate the grant preceding it, neither in any thing expressed, nor in any thing implied, which is, of its nature, incident to and inseparable from the thing granted. Hob. 170. But this doctrine does not extend to a feoffment, a fine at common law, or any other alienation which works a discontinuance, and is therefore considered in the law as tortious. A proviso restrictive of an alienation of this nature may be annexed to an estate in tail, either as a condition to determine the estate, and give the donor and his heirs a right of re-entry, or by way of limitation, to make the estate of the tenant in tail cease, and the lands remain over to a third person. But in these cases the estate in tail must be made to cease absolutely; for a proviso to make it void only during the life of the tenant in tail is void. See Litt. Sect. 720, 721, 722, 723. Scholastica's case, Plow. 403. Corbett's case, 1. Rep. 83. b. Jermyn v. Arscot, cited in 1. Rep. 85. Mildmay's case, 6. Rep. 40. Mary Portington's case, 10. Rep. 37. b.

recovery is not restrained by the said statute of W. 2. And therefore such a condition is repugnant to the estate taile; for it is to be observed, that to this estate taile there be divers incidents. First, to be disinherited of waite. Secondly, that the wife of the donee in taile shall be endowed. Thirdly, that the husband of a feme donee after issue shall be tenant by the curtesie. Fourthly, that tenant in taile may suffer a common recoverie (1): and therefore if a man make a gift in taile, upon condition to restraîne him of any of these incidents, the condition is repugnant and void in law. And it is to be observed, (*) that a collateral warranty or a lineal with assets in respect of the recompence, is not restrained by the statute of Donis conditionalibus, no more is the common recovery in respect of the intended recompence. And Littleton, to the intent to exclude the common recovery, saith, tiel alienation et discontinuance, joyning them together.

If a man before the statute of Donis conditionalibus had made a gift to a man and to the heirs of his body, upon condition, that after issue he should not have power to sell, this condition should have bin repugnant and void (2). Pari ratione, after the statute a man makes a gift in taile, the law tacite gives him power to suffer a common recovery; therefore to add a condition, that he shall have no power to suffer a common recovery, is repugnant and voyd.

If a man make a feoffment to a baron and feme in fee, upon condition, that they shall not alien, to some intent this is good, and to some intent it is void: for to restrain an alienation by feoffment, or alienation by deed, it is good, because such an alienation is tortious and voidable: but to restrain their alienation by fine is repugnant and void, because it is lawfull and unavoydable.

It is said, that if a man infeoffe an infant in fee, upon condition, that hee shall not alien, this is good to restrain alienations during his minoritie, but not after his full age.

It is likewise said, that a man by licence may give land to a bishop and his successors, or to an abbot and his successors, and add a condition to it, that they shall not without the consent of their chapter or convent, alien, because it was intended a mortmain, that is, that it should for ever continue in that see or house, for that they had it en auter droit, for religious and good uses.

Le statute de W. 2. cap. 1. Hereby it appeareth, that whatsoever is prohibited by the intent of any act of parliament, may be prohibited by condition, as hath beene said.

(1. Roll. Abr. 412. 418. 10. Rep. 35. b.)

22. E. 3. 9. 17. El. 343. Dyer.

(*) 13. H. 7. 24. b.

10. H. 7. 11. 13. H. 7. 23. Lib. 6. 41. b. in Sir Anthony Mildmay's case, ubi supra. (Hob. 261. 1. Roll. Abr. 421.)

Doctor & Student. 124.

10. H. 7. 11. Doct. & Stud. 124. 13. H. 7. 23.

Sect. 363.

CAR il est prove per les parols comprises en mesme l'estatute, que la volunt del donor en tiels cases serroit observee, et quant le tenant en le taile fait † tiel discontinuance, il fait le contrarie a ceo, &c. Et auxy en estates en le taile d'ascun tenements, quant le reversion de fee simple, ‡ ou remainder en fee simple est en auters persons, quant tiel discontinuance est fait, donques le fee simple*

FOR it is proved by the words comprised in the same statute, that the will of the donor in such cases shall be observed, and when the tenant in taile maketh such discontinuance, hee doth contrary to that, &c. And also in estates in taile of any tenements, when the reversion of the fee simple, or the remainder of the fee simple is in other persons, when such discontinuance is made, then the fee simple

QUANT le reversion ou remainder en fee est en auters persons.

Put the case that a man make a gift in taile to A. the remainder to him and to his heirs, upon condition that he shall not alien; as to the state taile the condition is good, for such alienation is prohibited, as hath been said, by the said statute. But as to the fee simple, some say it is repugnant and voyd, for the reason that Littleton hath yielded: and therefore some are of opinion, that this is a good condition, and shall defeat the alienation for the estate taile onely, and leave the fee simple in the alienee, for that the condition did in law extend onely to the state taile, and not to the remainder.

Encounter le profit

(Poft. 298. 333. 338.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 407. 472. 474. Cro. Eliz. 360.)

11. H. 7. 6. 13. H. 7. 23. 24. Dyer 2. & 3. Phil. & Ma. 127. b.

* que fuit al intent de le fefance de mesme l'estatute, added in L. and M. and Roh.

† ou remainder en fee simple, not in L. and M. and Roh.

† tiel—un, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) But this is altered by the 4. and 5. Ann. c. 16. whereby all collateral warranties by ancestors, who have no estate of inheritance in possession in the lands warranted, are made void against their heirs. The restraints which at different times have been laid on the free alienation of property, and the methods used to fet them aside, form one of the most interesting parts of the history of every nation in which the feudal institutions have prevailed. So far as the history of England is concerned in them, they have been discussed with great accuracy by Sir William Blackstone, vol. 2. chap. 7. and Sir John Dalrymple, in his History of the Feudal Law, chap. 3. and 4. The introduction of recoveries, and the circumstances which led the way to them, are accurately stated and explained by Mr. Cruise, in his most excellent Essay on the Law of Recoveries. The restraints on the alienation of property are much greater in Scotland than they are in England. There, if a tailzie is guarded with irritant and resolutive clauses, the estate intailed cannot be carried off by the debt or deed of any of the heirs succeeding to it, in prejudice of the substitutes. This degree of tailzie differs from that of a tailzie with prohibitory clauses. The proprietor of an estate of this nature, cannot convey it gratuitously, but he may dispose of it for onerous causes, and it may be attached by his creditors; yet the substitutes, as creditors by virtue of the prohibitory clause, may by a process, called in the law of Scotland an Inhibition, secure themselves against future debts or contracts. A third degree of tailzie used in Scotland is called a simple Disposition. This amounts to no more than a designation who is to succeed to the estate, in case the temporary proprietors of it make no disposition of it; for it is defeasible, and attachable by creditors. See Ersk. Inst. 238. 360.

(2) Britton, in his chapter on Conditional Purchases, observes, that "if any purchase to him and his wife, and to the heirs of their lawfully begotten, the donees have presently but an estate of franchhold for the term of their lives, and the fee accrue to their fit de ses issues. Hereby it appeareth, that to restrain tenant in taile from alienation against the profit of his issues, is good, for that agreeth with the will of the donor, and the intent of the statute *.

But a gift in taile may be made upon condition, that tenant in taile, &c. may alien for the profit of his issues, and that hath been holden to be good, and not restrained by the said statute, and seemeth to agree with the reason of Littleton, because in that case, Voluntas donatoris observetur, &c. and it must be for the profit of the issues.

* en le remainder est discontinue. Et pur ceo que le tenant en taile ne ferratiel chose encounter le profit de ses issues, & bone droit, tiel condition est bone, come est avaut-dit, § &c.

ple in the remainder is discontinued. And because tenant in taile shall doe no such thing against the profit of his issues, and good right, such condition is good, as is afore-said, &c.

(*) 46. E. 3. 4.
(1. Roll. Abr. 418.)

Sect. 364.

ALienont, &c.

et auxy si tous les issues soient morts, &c.

Note, Littleton purposely made parcell of the condition in the copulative, that the tenant in taile should alien, &c. For if a gift in taile be made to a man and to the heirs of his body, and if he die without heirs of his body, that then the donor and his heirs shall re-enter, this is a voyd condition; for when the issues faile, the estate determineth by the expresse limitation, and consequently the adding of the condition to defeat that which is determined by the limitation of the estate, is void, (1) and in that case the wife of the donee shall be endowed, &c. And therefore Littleton, to make the condition good, added an alienation, which amounted to a wrong, and hee restrained not the alienation onely, (for then presently upon the alienation the donor, &c. might re-enter and defeat the estate taile)

IT E M home poit donner terres en taile sur tiel condition, que si le tenant en le taile ou ses beires alienont en fee ou en taile, ou pur terme d'auter vie, &c. et auxy que si tous l'issues veignants del tenant en le taile soient morts sans issue, que adonques bien lirroit al donor et a ses beires de entrer, &c. Et per tiel voy le droit de le taile poet estre salve apres ¶ discontinuance, al issue en le taile, si ascun y soit; issint que per voy d'entre del donor ou de ses beires, le taile ne ferramy defeat per tiel condition: ¶ Quare hoc. Et uncore si le tenant en le taile en ceo case, ou ses beires, font ascun discontinuance, celuy en le reversion ou ses beires, apres ceo que le taile est determine pur default de issue, &c. poyent entrer

ALSO a man may give lands in taile upon such condition, that if the tenant in taile or his heirs alien in fee or in taile, or for terme of another man's life, &c. and also that if all the issue comming of the tenant in taile be dead without issue, that then it shall be lawfull for the donor and for his heirs to enter, &c. And by this way the right of the taile may be saved after discontinuance, to the issue in taile, if there bee any; so as by way of entry of the donor or of his heirs, the taile shall not be defeated by such condition: Quare hoc. And yet if the tenant in taile in this case, or his heirs, make any discontinuance, he in the reversion or his heirs, after that the taile is determined for default of issue, &c. may enter into

21. H. 7. 21.

(1. Rep. 16. 84.)

(Dyer 345. b.)

* en la reversion ou le fee simple, added in L. and M. and Roh.
issues, not in L. and M. nor Roh.
added in L. and M. and Roh.

§ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ issue added in L. and M. and Roh.

† ceo—ouster in L. and M. and Roh.

|| de—en in L. and M. and Roh.

+ Quare hoc, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ de ses

§ tiel

(1) See Boraston's case, 3. Rep. 19. Webb v. Herring, Cro. Ja. 416. King v. Rumball, Cro. Ja. 448. Chadock v. Cowley, ibid. 693. Fortescue v. Abbott, Poll. 479. and Sir Thomas Jones, 79. ; and Goodtitle v. Whitby, 1. Burr. 228. See also 1. P. W. 170 ;—and Mr. Fearn's Essay on Contingent Remainders, p. 167.

"their issue, if they had not issue before; and if they had no issue, then the fee remains on the person of the donor until they have issue, and the purchase returns to the donor, if the purchaser has no off-spring, or if they have issue and that issue fails." But lord Coke in his 2d Inst. 333. observes, that Britton takes the condition to be precedent, but that the donees had, at the common law, a fee simple conditional immediately by the gift. As a proof of this, he mentions, that if a gift was made to a man and the heirs of his body, and before issue, he had before the stat. de donis made a feoffment in fee, the donor could not enter for the forfeiture, but that the feoffment would have barred the issue had afterwards.

*en le terre per force de mesme le condition, et ne ferront my * cobert de fuer briefe de formdon en le re-verter.*

the land by force of the same condition, and shall not be compelled to sue a writ of formedon in the reverter.

but added, and die without issue, to the end that the right of the estate in tail might be preserved, and not defeated by the condition, but might be recovered againe by the issue in tail in a formedon.

And Littleton expressly saith, that the donor and his heirs (Mo. 39.)

after the discontinuance, and after that the estate tail is determined, may re-enter, which is the intention and true meaning of Littleton in this place. And where it is said in this section (quare hoc), this is added by some that understood not this case, and is not in the originall.

Note, that in a condition consisting of divers parts in the conjunctive, as here in the case of Littleton, both parts must be performed, according to the old rule, [a] Si plures conditiones ascriptae fuerunt donationi conjunctim, omnibus est parendum et ad veritatem copulativè requiritur quod utraque pars sit vera. But otherwise it is when the condition is in the disjunctive, (1) for the same Author in that case saith, Si divisim cuilibet, vel alteri eorum satis est obtemperare. Et in disjunctivis sufficit alteram partem esse veram. What then if the condition or limitation be both in the conjunctive and disjunctive: As if a man make a lease to the husband and wife for the tearme of one and twenty yeares, if the husband and wife or any child beweeene them so long shall live, and then the wife dyeth without issue; shall the lease determine, or continue during the life of the husband? And the answer is, that it shall continue, for the disjunctive referreth to the whole, and disjoyneth not only the latter part, as to the child, but also to the baron and fem, so as the sense is, if the baron, fem, or any child shall so long live.

[b] And so it is if an use be limited to certaine persons, untill A. shall come from beyond sea, and attain unto his full age, or dye, if he doth come from beyond sea, or attaine to his full age, the use doth cease.

(Sid. 437. 8. Rep. 85. b.)

[a] Bracton lib. 2. fo. 19. Vide Pl. Com. 76. in Wimbeshe's case, & fol. 107. in Fulmerston's case. Bracton ubi supra. (4. Rep. 52. b.)

So it was adjudged in Communi Banco pasch. 30. Eliz. inter Baldwyn & Cocke, commonly called Trupennie's case.

(5. Rep. 112.)

[b] Hill 35. Eliz. entrespasse per le Seignior Mordant vers George Vaux so adjudged in the King's Bench.

Sect. 365.

ITEM, home ne poit pleder en ascun action, que estate fuit fait en fee, ou en fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, sur condition, † s'il ne voucha un record de ceo, ou monstra un escript south seale, provant mesme la condition. Car il est un common erudition, que home per plee ne defeatera ascun estate de franktenement per force d'ascun tiel condition, sinon que il monstra le proosse de condition en escript, &c. si-

ALSO a man cannot plead in any action, that an estate was made in fee, or in fee tail, or for terme of life, upon condition, if he doth not vouch a record of this, or shew a writing under seale, proving the same condition. For it is a common learning, that a man by plea shal not defeat any estate of freehold by force of any such condition, unlesse he sheweth the proosse of the condition in writing, &c. unlesse it bee

EN ascun action. Bee the action reall, personall, or mixt, if a condition be pleaded to defeat a freehold, it is regularly true, that a deed must bee shewed forth [a] in court (2). And the reason why the deed shall bee shewed forth to the court is, for that to every deed there be two things requisite: the one, that it be sufficient in law, and this is called the Legall Part, and therefore the judgment of that belongeth to the Judges of the Law: the other concernes matter of fact, as sealing and delivery, and this belongs to the Jurors. And because every deed ought to approve itselfe, and be proved by others too; it must approve it selfe upon the shewing of it forth in court in two manners.

First, as to the composition of the words, that it bee sufficient in law, and that the court shall adjudge.

Secondly,

39. E. 3. 22. 4. E. 4. 35. a. 9. E. 4. 25. b. 26. a. 6. H. 7. 8. b. 11. H. 7. 22. b. 7. H. 6. 7. 14. H. 8. 22. b. 28. Alf. p. 1. (1. Sid. 50.) [a] Lib. 10. fol. 92. Doctor Layfield's case. 7. E. 3. 57. 25. E. 3. 41. 41. E. 3. 10. acc.

(Ant. 6. a.)

(10. Rep. 92.)

* cobert—arte in L. and M. and Roh.

† que added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) If the condition of the obligation be in the disjunctive, and gives the obligor liberty to do one thing or another, at his election, and one of the things becomes impossible, the obligation, in some cases, will be saved. See the distinctions taken in Laughter's case, Cro. Eliz. 398. Baker v. Moisecomb, ibid. 864. Baskett v. Baskett, 2. Mod. 200.—Ant. 145.

(2) See 2. Bull. 259. 260. 6. Mod. 237. 2. Salk. 498.

(11. Rep. 26. b. Dyer 261. b.
1. Roll. Abr. 208. Cro. Car. 399.
Doct. Pla. 260.)

(Poit. 227. 2. Cro. 217.)

(45. E. 3. 21. a.
Poit. 308. b. 338. a. sect. 214.)

Lib. 5. fol. 52. 53. &c. Page's case. 6. Rep. 2. cap. 4.

(5. Rep. 74. 76. 10. Rep. 92.)

[b] Vide 32. H. 8. in Patents Br.
12. H. 7. 12. b.

(2. Inst. 672. 5. Rep. 52. 53.)

[c] 3. & 4. E. 6. cap. 4. and 13.
Eliz. cap. 6.

[d] Dyer 1. Eliz. 167.

(Hard. 118.)

(2. Sid. 145.)
(1. Mod. 117.)

[e] Lib. 8. fol. 8. in the Prince's case. Vide Page's case ubi supra.

33. E. 3. gard. 162. 20. H. 3. darrein present. 13. 35. H. 6.
tit. montrans des faits 118.

[f] 20. H. 7. 5.

(5. Rep. 75. 2.)

(2. Cro. 217.)

(10. Rep. 93. 94.)

35. H. 6. tit. montrans des faits

11. b. 7. H. 6. 17. H. 5. 5.

3. H. 6. 21. 33. H. 6. 1. 14. H.

8. 8.

Secondly, of ancient time if the deed appeared to be rased or interlined in places materiall, the judges adjudged upon their view, the deed to be voyd (1). But of latter time, the judges have left that to the jurors to try whether the rasing or interlining were before the delivery.

And there is a difference betweene a rent, and a re-entry; for upon a gift in taile, or a lease for life, a rent may be reserved without deed, but a condition with a re-entry cannot be reserved in those cases without deed.

Escript south seale.
Which Littleton intendeth to be a deed under seale.

And well said Littleton, a deed under seale. For though the deed be inrolled, yet hee cannot plead the inrolment thereof, though it be of record.

And though it be exemplified under the great seale, [b] yet must he shew forth the deed it selfe under seale, as Littleton here saith, and not the exemplification (2). And so when Littleton wrote, no conflat, or inspeximus, of the king's letters patents were available to be shewed forth in court, but the letters patents themselves under seale. For both the conflat and inspeximus are but exemplifications of the inrolment of the charters, or letters patents: and this appeareth by the resolution of two severall [c] parliaments, one holden in the third and fourth yeare of king Edward the sixth, and the other in the thirteenth yeare of queene Elizabeth. But now by those statutes the exemplification or conflat under the great seale of the inrolment of any letters patents made since the fourth day of February anno 27. H. 8. or after to be made, shal be sufficient to be pleaded and shewed forth in court, aswel against the king, as any other person by the patentees themselves (whereof there was some doubt [d] conceived upon the said statute of E. 6.) and by all and every other person and persons clayming by, from, or under them. Which statutes are general and beneficiall, and especially the act of 13. Eliz. for that extends not only to lands, tenements, and hereditaments, but to every other thing whatsoever, and ought to be favourably construed for advancement of the remedie and right of the subject (3).

The difference betweene a conflat, inspeximus, and a vidimus, you may reade [e] at large in Page's case. But none of them by law ought to be had, but only of the inrolment of record, and not of a deed or any other writing that is not of record, and no deed, &c. can be inrolled, unlesse it be duely and lawfully acknowledged.

Si non que soit en ascun especiall cases, &c. Hereby is implied, that if a gardian in chivalrie in the right of the heire entred for a condition broken, hee shall plead the state upon condition without shewing of any deed, because his interest is created by the law. And so it is [f] of a tenant by statute merchant or staple, or tenant by elegit.

Likewise tenant in dower shall plead a condition, &c. without shewing of the deed. And the reason of these and the like cases, is, for that the law doth create these estates, and they come not in by him that entred for the condition broken, so as they might provide for the shewing of the deed, but they come to the land by authoritie of law, and therefore the law will allow them to plead the condition without shewing of it.

[f] But

(1) 'Tis to be presumed, that an interlining, if the contrary is not proved, was made at the time of making the deed. 1. Keb. 21. Note to the 11th edit. On the rasure, or interlining, of deeds, breaking or defacing the seals of deeds, and cancelling deeds, see 1. Wood's Conv. 808. 809. Com. Dig. Faits, T. 1. 2.—and Vin. Abr. Faits, T. U. U. 2. X. X. 2. It is to be observed, that the cancelling of a deed does not divest the estate from the persons in whom it is vested by the deed. 1. Rep. in Cha. 100. and Gilb. Rep. 236.

(2) On giving deeds of bargain and sale in evidence, see Bull. Ni. Pri. 255. 3. 10. Ann. c. 18. 3. and 8. G. 2. c. 6. sec. 21.

(3) See also 27. Eliz. 9. and Bull. Ni. Pri. 226.

non que ceo soit en ascuns especiall cases, &c. Mes de chat-tels reals, sicome de leas fait a terme d'ans, ou de grants de gards fait per gardeins in chivalrie, & hujusmodi, &c. home poit pleder que tiels leases ou grants fueront faits sur condition, &c. sans monstre aseun escript de le condition. Issint en mesme le maner home poit faire de dones & grants de chattels personnels, & de contractes personnels, &c.

in some speciall cases, &c. But of chattels reals, as of a lease for yeares, or of grants of wards made by gardians in chivalrie, and such like, &c. a man may plead that such leases or grants were made upon condition, &c. without shewing any writing of the condition. So in the same manner a man may doe of gifts and grants of chattels personnels, and of contracts personnels, &c.

[f] But the lord by escheat, albeit his estate be created by law, shall not plead a condition to defeat a freehold without shewing of it, because the deed doth belong unto him. [f] 35. H. 6. ubi supra.

A tenant by the curtelie shall not [g] plead a condition made by his wife, and a re-entry for the condition broken without shewing the deed; for albeit his estate be created by law, yet the law presumeth that he had the possession of the deedes and evidences belonging to his wife. [g] 35. H. 6. ubi supra.

[h] But lessees for yeares, and all others that claime by any conveyance from the party or justifie as servant by commandement, &c. must shew the deed. [h] 14. H. 8. 8. Pl. com. 149. (10. Rep. 92. 93.)

[i] R. brought an ejectione firmæ against E. for ejecting him out of the manor of D. which he held for terme of yeares of the demise of C. E. the defendant pleaded that B. gave the said manor to P. and Katherine his wife in taile, who had issue E. the defendant, and after the donees infeoffed C. of the manor, upon condition that hee should demise the manor for yeares to R. the plaintife, the remainder to the husband and to the wife, &c. C. did demise the land to R. the plaintife for yeares, but kept the reversion to himselfe, wherefore Katherine after the decease of her husband entred upon the plaintife, &c. for the condition broken, and died; after whose decease the land descended to E. the issue in taile, &c. now defendant, judgement upon action, exception was taken against this plea, because E. the defendant maintained his entry by force of a condition broken, and shewed forth no deed, and the plea was ruled to be good, because the thing was executed, and therefore hee need not shew forth the deed. Nota, the defendant being issue in taile was remitted to the estate taile. (1) [i] 44. E. 3. 22. (6. Rep. 38.) (Cro. Car. 442.) See after this chapter, sect. 366. 7. Rep. Ughtred's case.

In a præcipe quid reddat against S. who pleaded that R. was seised, and infeoffed him in mortgage upon condition of payment of certaine money at a day, and said that R. paid the money at the day, and entred judgement of the writ: exception was taken to this plea, for that he shewed forth no deed of the condition, and it was ruled that hee need not shew forth the deed for two causes. 1. That he ought not to shew any deed to the demandant, because the demandant is a stranger. 2. It might be when R. paid the money, and the condition performed, that the deed was rebailed to R. and thereupon the plea was adjudged good, and the writ abated. 11. Ed. 3. tit. Mns des faits. 175. 45. E. 3. 8. (Cro. Car. 372.)

If land be mortgaged upon condition, and the mortgagee letteth the lands for yeares, reserving a rent, the condition is performed, the mortgagor re-enters, in an action of debt brought for the rent the lessee shall plead the condition and the re-entry without shewing forth any deed. 45. E. 3. 8. b. Finch.

In an assise the tenant pleads a feoffment of the ancestor of the plaintife unto him, &c. the plaintife saith that the feoffment was upon condition, &c. and that the condition was broken, and pleades a re-entry, and that the tenant entred and tooke away the chest in which the deed was and yet detaineth the same, the plaintife shall not in this case be enforced to shew the deed. 10. H. 4. 9. b. 43. E. 3. Vide 10. E. 3. 41. Simile in dower.

If a woman give lands to a man and his heires by deed or without generally, she may in pleading averre the same to be causâ matrimonii prælocuti, albeit she hath nothing in writing to prove the same, the reason whereof see Sect. 330. 12. E. 1. Feoffments & Faits 114. F. N. B. 105. b. 13. R. 2. Montraus des faits 165. 4. E. 4. 35. &c. 11. H. 7. 22. b. 6. H. 7. 8. 9. E. 4. 25. 26. 14. H. 8. 22. b. (Doc. Pla. 51.) (See Flo. 23. a.) (1. Roll. Abr. 413.)

Mes des chattels realls, sicome lease fait a volunt a terme des ans, &c.
This is apparant.

Sect. 366.

ITEM, coment que home en ascun action ne poit pleder un condition que toucha & concerna franktenement, sauns monstrier escript de ceo, come est avantdit, uncore home poit estre aide sur tiel condition per verdict de xii. homes

ALSO, albeit a man cannot in any action pleade a condition which toucheth & concernes a freehold, without shewing writing of this, as is aforesaid, yet a man may be aided upon such a condition by the verdict of 12 men taken at large in an assise

VERDIT, or verdict de 12 homes.

(2) Verdictum, quasi dictum veritatis, as judicium est quasi juris dictum. Et sicut ad questionem juris, non respondent iuratores sed iudices: sic ad questionem facti non respondent iudices sed iuratores. For jurors are to try the fact, and the judges ought to judge according to the law that riseth upon the fact, for
Lib. 8. fo. 155. Lib. 9. fo. 13. Lib. 11. fo. 10. (Flo. 93. 2. Infl. 425. 2. Roll. Abr. 693. 694. 698. 699. 700. 711. 717. 725. Hob. 117. 4. Rep. 65. b. Cro. El. 699. 1. Sid. 27. 191. 194. 203. 9. Rep. 67. b.)

(1) This is the reason of this case, for now he claims above the condition, and therefore need not shew the deed. Infra, 227. b.— Lord Nott. MSS.

(2) See Bacon Abr. vol. 5. 281. Vin. vol. 21. 373. Com. Dig. Abatement, (I. 34.) Amendment, (P.) Appeals, (G. 14.) Estoppel, (E. 10.) Evidence, (A. 5.) Pleader, (C. 27. E. 38. R. 13. S. 1.) Prerogative (D. 76.)

ex facto jus oritur.

Prise a large.

There be two kindes of verdicts; viz. one generall, and another at large or especiall. As in an assise of novel disseisin, brought by A. against B. the plaintife makes his plaint, Quod B. disseisivit eum de 20 acris terræ cum pertinentiis; the tenant pleades, Quod ipse nullam injuriam seu disseisinam præfato A. inde fecit, &c. The recognitors of the assise doe finde, Quod prædict. A. injuste & sine judicio disseisivit prædict. B. de prædict. 20 acris terræ cum pertinentiis &c. This is a generall verdict. The like law is if they finde it negatively. And Littleton here putteth a case of a verdict at large, or a speciall verdict; and it is therefore called a speciall verdict, or a verdict at large, because they finde the speciall matter at large, and leave the judgement of law thereupon to the court, of which kinde of verdict it is said, [1] Omnis conclusio boni & veri judicii sequitur ex bonis & veris præmissis et dictis juratorum.

And though Littleton here puts his case of a verdict at large upon a generall issue (which in the case hee putteth it was necessary for the tenant to pleade) yet when issue is joyned upon some speciall point, the jury, as shall be said hereafter in this section, may finde the speciall matter if it be doubtfull in law, for as much doubt may arise upon one point upon the speciall issue as upon the generall issue. And as a speciall verdict may be found in Common prise a large en assise de novel disseisin, ou en aucun autre action, l'ou les justices voient prendre le verdict de xii. jurors a large. Sicome mittomus, que home seisie de certaine terre en fee lessa mesme la terre a un autre pur terme de vie sans fait, sur condition de rendre al lessor un certaine rent, & pur default de paiement un re-entrie, &c. per force de quel le lessée est seisie come de franktenement, et puis le rent est aderece, per que le lessor enter en la terre, et puis le lessée arraigne un assise de novel disseisin de la terre envers le lessor, le quel plead que il fist nul tort ne nul disseisin, et sur ceo l'assise soit prise; en cest case les recognitors de l'assise foyent dire et rendre a les justices leur verdict a large sur tout le matter, come a dire, que le defendant fuit seisie de la terre en son demesne come de fee, et issint seisie, mesme la terre lessée al plaintife pur terme de sa vie, rendant al lessor tiel annuel rent payable a tiel feast, &c. sur tiel condition, que si le rent fuit aderece a aucun tiel feast † a que of novel disseisin, or in any other action where the justices will take the verdict of 12 jurors at large. As put the case, a man seised of certaine land in fee letteth the same land to another for terme of life without deed, upon condition to render to the lessor a certaine rent, and for default of payment a re-entrie, &c. by force whereof the lessee is seised as of freehold, and after the rent is behinde, by which the lessor entereth into the land, and after the lessee arraigne an assise of novel disseisin of the land against the lessor, who pleads that he did no wrong nor disseisin, and upon this the assise is taken; in this case the recognitors of the assise may say and render to the justices their verdict at large upon the whole matter, as to say, that the defendant was seised of the land in his demesne as of fee, and so seised, let the same land to the plaintife for terme of his life, rendering to the lessor such a yearly rent payable at such a feast, &c. upon such condition, that if the rent were behinde at any such feast at which doit

(9. Rep. 12. 13.)

(Plow. 93. 2.)

(Post. 227. 228.)

[1] Trin. 33. E. 1. Coram Rege Nott. in thesaur.

43. Ass. 31. Stanf. pl. cor. 161.
105. 3. E. 3. coron. 284. 286.
287. 44. E. 3. 44. 41. E. 3. Co-ron. 451.

* le—per in L. and M. and Roh.

† a not in L. and M. nor Roh.

*doit estre pay, donques bien lirroit al lessor d'entrer, &c. per force de quel lease le plaintife fuit seisie en son demesne come de frank-tenement; et que puis apres le rent fuit aderer a tiel feast, * &c. per que le lessor entra en le terre sur le possession le lessee, et prieroit le discretion de les justices, si ceo soit un disseisin fait al plaintife ou nemy; † donque per ceo que appiert a les justices, que ceo fuit nul disseisin fait al plaintife, entant que l'entrie de le lessor fuit congeable sur luy; les justices doyent doner judgement que le plaintife ne prendra riens per son briefe d'assise. Et issint en tiel cas le lessor serra aide, et uncore nul escripture unques fuit fait del condition. Car cibien que les jurors poient aver conusance de le ‡ lease, auxy bien ils poient aver conusance de le condition que fuit declare & rehearse sur le leas.*

it ought to bee paid, then it should bee lawfull for the lessor to enter, &c. by force of which lease the plaintife was seised in his demesne as of freehold, and that afterwards the rent was behinde at such a feast, &c. by which the lessor entred into the land upon the possession of the lessee, and prayed the discretion of the justices, if this bee a disseisin done to the plaintife or not; then for that it appeareth to the justices, that this was no disseisin to the plaintife, insomuch as the entrie of the lessor was congeable on him; the justices ought to give judgement that the plaintife shall not take any thing by his writ of assise. And so in such case the lessor shall bee aided, and yet no writing was ever made of the condition. For as well as the jurors may have conusance of the lease, they also as well may have conusance of the condition which was declared and rehearsed upon the lease.

Pleas, so may it also (Cro. Eliz. 474. Ib. 471. 113. bee found in Pleas of 114. 653. 6. Rep. 46. b.) the Crowne, or criminal causes that concerne life or member.

A verdict finding matter incertainly or ambiguously is insufficient, and no judgement shall be given thereupon; as if an executor plead pleinment administrare, and issue is joyned thereupon, and the jury finde that the defendant have goods within his hands to be administred, but finde not to what value, this is incertain, and therefore insufficient.

(8. Rep. 65.)

A verdict that finds part of the issue, and finding nothing for the residue, this is insufficient for the whole, because they have not tried the whole issue wherewith they are charged. As if an information of intrusion bee brought against one for intruding into a mesuage, and 100 acres of land, upon the generall issue the jury finde against the defendant for the land, but saith nothing for the house, this is insufficient for the whole, and so was it twice adjudged. (m) But if the jury give a verdict of the whole issue, and of more &c. that which is more is surplusage, and shall not (a) stay judgement; for Utile per inutile non vitiatur, but necessarie incidents required by law the jury may finde.

17. E. 3. 47. 18. E. 3. 48. 22. E. 3. 1. 18. E. 3. 56. 15. E. 3. Judgement. 58. 2. H. 5. 3. 7. H. 6. 5. 7. E. 4. 24. 28. H. 6. 10. (Cro. Jac. 31. 2. Roll. Abr. 722. 10. Rep. 119. Hob. 64. 6. Rep. 47. 2. Roll. Abr. 702. 706. Dyer 346. b. 300. b. Post. 303. 2. b. Doctr. Pla. 288. 289. Hob. 54. Cro. El. 174. 2. Roll. Abr. 708. Hob. 18. 9. Rep. 67. b. 112. 4. Rep. 65. Ant. 114. b. Cro. El. 110. 10. Rep. 97. b.)

(m) Hil. 25. Eliz. in a writ of error betweene Brace and the Queene in the Exchequer chamber. Mich. 28. & 29. Eliz. inter Gomerfal & Gomerfal in account in the King's bench.

(a) 32. E. 3. Cessavit. 25.

Vid. sect. 484. 485.

(Post. 282.)

Vid. sect. 58. 13. E. 3. garr. 26. 15. E. 3. Als. 322. 17. E. 3. 6. 18. Als. 2. 35. Als. 8.

(b) 1. H. 4. 6. b. 27. H. 8. 22. b. Pl. Com. 515.

Lib. 4. fo. 53. Rawlins' case, & ibid. Pledol's case.

Hil. 31. Eliz. betweene Sutton and Dicons in the Common Place, the case of the lease for yeares by deed indented.

34. E. 3. Droit. 29.

(Post. 352. Ant. 47. b. Doc. Pla. 164. Post. 283. Cro. El.

(c) After 141.)

* An added L. and M. and Roh. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† Et added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ lease, auxy bien ils poient aver conusance de le

(c) 7. R. 2. Corone. 108. Plo.
Com. Freman's case 211. 11. H.
4. 2. 20. Aff. 12. 16. Aff. 16.
22. Aff. 23. 5. H. 7. 22.

Pafch. 24. H. 8. of the report of Justice Spilman in the King's Bench. 21. H. 4. 17. 35. H. 6.
Examin. 17. 29. H. 8. 37. Dier.
(1. Vent. 125.)
25. H. 8. 55. 4. et. 5. Eliz. 218.
14. H. 7. 1. 20. H. 7. 3.
(d) Pafch. 6. E. 6. in the Common Place.

(e) 11. H. 4. 16. 17. 3. Mar.
Jurors Br. 8. Vide Dier ubi supra.
(2. Roll. Abr. 713. 814. 1. Leo.
18. Cro. Jac. 121. Sid. 225.)
Pafch. 6. E. 6. ubi supra.
(Mo. 432. 2. Roll. Abr. 714.
715. 716.)

(f) 24. E. 3. 75.
(1. Cro. Jac. 141. 616.)

21. E. 3. 18.
(Ant. 139. b. 9. Rep. 13.)

W. 2. cap. 30. 7. H. 4. 11.
8. E. 4. 29. 9. H. 7. 13. 23. H.
8. tit. verdict. Br. 85. 11. Eliz.
Dier 283. 284. 3. E. 3. Itinere
North 284. 286. 43. Aff. 31.
26. H. 8. 5. 44. E. 3. 41. E. tit.
Coron. 94. 44. Aff. 17. 45. E.
3. 20. Pl. Com. 92. 9. H. 7. 3.
Vide lib. 9. 12. 13. Downman's case. And see there many other authorities
31. Aff. pl. 21. 10. H. 4. 9.
(m) See more before in this chapter, sect. 365.
(Sid. 369. 6. Rep. 38.)

10. Aff. p. 9. 21. Affs. 28. 17.
Affs. 20. 31. Affs. 21. 13. Affs. 2.
39. E. 3. 28. 41. E. 3. 22. 10. H.
4. 9. 7. H. 5. 5. 9. E. 4. 26. 18.
E. 4. 12. 15. E. 4. 16. 17. 11. H.
7. 22.
(Ant. 225. Cro. Jac. 335.)

Lib. 10. fo. 4. case de Sewers.

(c) After the verdict recorded, the jury cannot vary from it, but before it be recorded they may vary from the first offer of their verdict, and that verdict which is recorded shall stand: also they may vary from a privy verdict.

An issue found by verdict shall alwayes be intended true untill it be reversed by attain, and thereupon upon the attain no superfedeas is grantable by law.

If the jurie after their evidence given unto them at the barre, doe at their owne charges eat or drinke either before or after they be agreed on their verdict, it is finable, but it shall not avoid the verdict: but if before they be agreed on their verdict, they eat or drinke at the charge of the plaintife, if the verdict be given for him, it shall avoid the verdict: but if it be given for the defendant, it shall not avoid it, Et sic è converso. (d) But if after they be agreed on their verdict they eat or drinke at the charge of him for whom they doe passe, it shall not avoid the verdict.

(e) If the plaintife after evidence given, and the jury departed from the barre, or any for him, doe deliver any letter from the plaintife to any of the jury concerning the matter in issue, or any evidence, or any escrowle touching the matter in issue, which was not given in evidence, it shall avoid the verdict, if it be found for the plaintife, but not if it be found for the defendant, Et sic è converso. But if the jury carry away any writing unsealed, which was given in evidence in open court, this shall not avoid their verdict, albeit they should not have carried it with them.

By the law of England a jury after their evidence given upon the issue, ought to be kept together in some convenient place, without meat or drinke, fire or candle, which some bookes call an imprisonment, and without speech with any, unlesse it be the bailife, and with him onely if they be agreed. After they be agreed they may in causes between party and party give a verdict, and if the court be risen, give a privy verdict before any of the judges of the court, and then they may eat and drinke, and the next morning in open court they may either affirme or alter their privy verdict, and that which is given in court shall stand. But in criminall cases of life or member, the jury can give no privy verdict, but they must give it openly in court. And hereby appeareth another division of verdicts, viz. a publique verdict openly given in court, and a privy verdict given out of the court before any of the judges, as is aforesaid.

A jury sworne and charged in case of life or member, cannot be discharged by the court or any other, but they ought to give a verdict. And the king cannot be non-suit, for he is in judgement of law ever present in court: but a common person may be nonsuit.

En assise de novel disseisin, ou en ascun autre action, &c. Here it is to be observed, that a speciall verdict, or at large, may be given in any action, and upon any issue, be the issue generall or speciall: and albeit there be some contrary opinions in our bookes, yet the law is now settled in this point.

Per que le lessor entra. Here it appeareth that the condition is executed by re-entry, and yet the lessor after his re-entry shall not, by the opinion of Littleton, plead the condition without shewing the deed, because he was partie and privie to the condition, for the parties must shew forth the deed, unlesse it be by the act and wrong of his adversary, as hath beene said; (m) but an estranger which is not privie to the condition, nor claimeth under the fame, as in the cases above said appeareth, shall not after the condition is executed in pleading be enforced to shew forth the deed: and by this diversitie all the bookes and authorities in law which seeme to be at variance are reconciled. See also for this matter the section next following.

Les recognitors del assise poient dire, &c. Here it appeareth that the jurors may finde the fact, albeit the deed be not shewed in evidence, and the rather for that the condition upon the livery (as hath beene said) is good, albeit there be no deed at all.

Et prieront le discretion des justices. That is to say, they (having declared the speciall matter) pray the discretion of the justices; which is as much to say, as, that they would discern what the law adjudgeth thereupon, whether for the demandant, or for the tenant: for as by the authoritie of Littleton, discretio est discernere per legem, quid sit justum, that is, to discern by the right line of law, and not by the crooked cord of private opinion, which the vulgar call discretion: Si à jure discedas, vagus eris, Et erunt omnia omnibus incerta: and therefore commissions that authorise any to proceed, secundum sanas discretiones vestras, is as much to say, as, secundum legem & consuetudinem Angliæ.

Car cibien come les jurors poient aver conufance, &c. Hereby it appeareth that they that have conufance of any thing, are to have conufance also of all incidents and dependants thereupon, for an incident is a thing necessarily depending upon another.

If a deed be made and dated in a forraigne kingdome, of lands within England, yet if livery and seisin be made, secundum formam cartæ, the land shall passe, for it passeth by the livery. 1. E. 3. 17. in Gracye's case.

Sect. 367.

EN mesme le man- IN the same manner ner est de feof- it is of a feoffement fement en fee, ou in fee, or a gift in done en le taile, sur taile, upon condition, condition, coment que although no writing
nul escripture un- were ever made of it.
que fuet fait de ceo*. And as it is sayd of a Et sicome est dit de verdict at large in an verdict a large en assise, &c. in the same assise, &c. en mes- manner it is of a writ me le manner est en of entrie founded upon briefe d'entre foun- a disseisin; and in all due sur disseisin; et en other actions where touts auters actions the justices will take ou les justices voy- the verdict at large, lent prendre le verdict there where such vera large, y† la ou tiel dict at large is made, verdict a large est the manner of the fait, la manner del whole entrie is put in entrie entiere est mis en the issue, &c. l'issue, &c.

judges of the court, so called because it ought to bee kept secret and privie from each of the parties, before it be affirmed in court.

AND it is to be ob- served, that the court cannot refuse a speciall verdict, if it bee pertinent to the matter put in issue. See the section next preceding.

Verdict a large.

It is called a verdict at large (9. Rep. 13.) because it findeth the matter at large, and leaves it to the judgement of the court: or it is called a special verdict, be- See the section next following.

cause it findeth the speciall matter, &c. So as hereby it appeareth, that a verdict (as hath beene said) is two fold, viz. a verdict at large, or a speciall verdict, (which is all one) whereof Littleton here speaketh; and a generall verdict that is generally found according to the issue, as if the issue be not guilty, to finde the partie guiltie or not guiltie generally, & sic de cæteris. There is also a verdict given in open court, and a privy verdict given out of court before any of the

(10. Rep. 118. Ant. 226.)

See the next preceding section.

Sect. 368.

ITEM en tiel case ALSO in such case l'ou l'enquest poit dire where the enquest leur verdict a large, may give their verdict s'ils voient prendre sur at large, if they will take eux le conissance de la upon them the know-ley sur le matter, ils ledge of the law upon poient dire leur verdict the matter, they may give generalment, come est their verdict generally, as mis en leur charge; come is put in their charge; as in en le case avantdit ils the case aforefaid they poient bien dire, que le may well say, that the lessor ne disseisa pas le lessor did not disseise the lessee, s'ils voient, &c. lessee, if they will, &c.

ALTHOUGH (8. Rep. 65.) the jurie if they will take upon them (as Littleton here saith) the knowledge of the law, may give a generall verdict, yet it is dangerous for them so to doe, for if they doe mistake the law, they runne into the danger of an attain- (4. Rep. 53.) therefore to find the speciall matter is the safest way where the case is doubtful.

Sect.

* &c. L. and M. and Roh.

† par la ou tiel verdict a large fait la nature de master mys en l'issue, L. and M. and Roh.

Sect. 369.

PUR ceo que il n'ad ascun escrip-ture de ceo.

Hereby it also ap-peareth, that albeit the condition was executed by re-entrie, yet the lessor cannot plead it without shew-
ing of a deed.
But of this matter sufficient hath beene said before in the two next preceding sections.

Quel est bone plea en barre.

In a case where there have beene some varietie of opinions in our books,
Littleton here clec-reth the doubt, and that upon a good ground. For hee himselfe reporteth
in our bookes, that it was holden by all the justices of England, that a lease for life, the reversion to the plaintife, was a good barre in an assise, and also that a lease for yeares,
the reversion to the plaintife, might bee pleaded in an assise: and so of a feoffment in fee
with warrantie.
And herein the diversitie of pleading is to be observed; for in the case here put by Littleton of a lease for life, the tenant shall pleade it in barre: but in a case of a lease for

ITEM en mesme le case,
si le case fuit tiel, que apres ceo, que le lessor avoit enter pur default de payment, &c. que le lessee ust enter sur le lessor, et luy disseisist, en cest case si le lessor ar-raigne un assise envers le lessee, le lessee luy puit barre de l'assise; car il poit pleader envers luy en bar, coment le lessor que est
plaintife fist un lease al defendant pur terme de sa vie, savant le reversion al plaintife, quel est bone plea en barre, entant que il conust le reversion estre al plaintife. * En cest case le plaintife n'ad + ascun matter de luy ayder, forsque le condition fait sur le leas, et ceo il ne poet pleader, pur ceo que il n'ad ascun escripture de ceo:
et entant que il ne poet responder al barre, il serra barre. Et issint en cest case poyes veier que home est † disseisist, et uncore il n'a-vera assise. Et uncore si le lessee soit plaintife, et le lessor defendant, il barrera le lessee per verdict d'assise, &c. Mes en cest case l'ou le lessee est defendant, si il ne voile plead le dit plea en barre, mes plead nul tort, nul disseisin, donques le lessor recovers per assise, causâ quâ suprà.

ALSO in the same case,
if the case were such,
that after that, that the lessor had entred for default of payment, &c. that the lessee had entered upon the lessor, and him disseised, in this case if the lessor arraigne an assise against the lessee, the lessee may barre him of the assise; for hee may pleade against him in bar, how the lessor who is pl.
made a lease to the defendor for term of his life, saving the reversion to the pl.
which is a good plea in bar, insomuch as hee acknowledges the reversion to be to the pl. In this case the plaintif hath no matter to ayd himselfe, but the condition made upon the lease, & this he cannot plead, because he hath not any writing of this: and inasmuch as he cannot answer the bar, he shal be barred. And so in this case you may see that a man is disseised, & yet he shal not have assise.
And yet if the lessee be pl.
and the lessor def. he shall bar the lessee by verdict of the assise, &c. But in this case where the lessee is def.
if he wil not plead the said plea in bar, but plead nul tort, nul diff. then the lessor shal recover by assise, causâ quâ suprà.

yeares,

18. E. 4. 10. 12. Aff. 38.
10. Aff. 16. 26. H. 6. Bar. 9.
38. Aff. 26. 4. 31. Aff. 26.
39. Aff. 3. 43. Aff. 18.
44. Aff. 3. 18. E. 3. Aff. 77.
31. E. 3. ibid. 97. 18. Aff. 22.

4. Eliz. Dyer 207.
8. Eliz. Dyer 246.

* Et added in L. and M. 2nd Roh.

† ascun not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ disseisist—seisist, L. and M. and Roh.

yeares, or an estate of tenant by statute or elegit, the defendant shall not plead in bar, (Ant. 201. a.) as to say, assisa non, &c. but justifie by force of the lease, &c. and conclude, Et issint sans tort. And if the tenant of the freehold be not named, he shall pleade nul tenant de franktenement nosme en le briefe: and in the case of the feoffment with warranty, he must relie upon the warrantie.

Sect. 370.

ITEM pur ceo que tielx conditions sont plus communement mis & especifies en faits endentes, ascun petit chose serra icy dit (a toy, mon firs) de endenture, et de fait poll concernants conditions. Et est asavoir, que si l'indenture soit bipartite, ou tripartite, ou quadripartite, tous les parties de l'indenture ne sont que un fait en ley, & chescun part de l'indenture est de auxi grande force et effect, sicome tous les parts ensemble.

AND for that such conditions are most commonly put and specified in deeds indented, somewhat shall bee here said (to thee, my sonne) of an indenture, (1) and of a deed pol (2) concerning conditions. And it is to bee understood, that if the indenture be bipartite, or tripartite, or quadripartite, all the parts of the indenture are but one deed in law, and every part of the indenture is of as great force and effect, as all the parts together be. (3)

EN faits endentes. Vid. sect. 217.

Those are called by severall names, as scriptum indentatum, carta indentata, scriptura indentata, indentura, literæ indentatæ. An indenture is a writing containing a conveyance, bargain, contract, covenants, or agreements between two or more, and is indented in the top (Ant. 143. b.) or side answerable to another that likewise comprehendeth the self same matter, and is called an indenture, for that it is so indented, and is called in Greeke συμγραφον.

If a deed beginneth, hæc indentura, &c. and in troth the parchment or paper is not indented, this is no indenture, because words cannot make it indented. But if the deed be actually indented, and there be no words of indenture in the deed, yet it is an indenture in law; for it may be an indenture without words, but not by words without indenting. (1. Rep. 173. b.)

En faits indent. And here it is to be understood, that it ought to be in parchment or in paper. For if a writing be made upon a peece of wood, or upon a peece of linen, or in the barke of a tree, or on a stone, or the like, &c. and the same be sealed or delivered, yet is it no deed, for a deed must be written either in parchment or paper, as before is said, for the writing upon these is least subject to alteration or corruption.

Si l'indenture soit bipartite, ou tripartite, ou quadripartite, &c. Bipartite is, when there be two parts and two parties to the deed. Tripartite, when there are three parts and three parties; and so of quadripartite, quinquartite, &c.

Et de fait poll. A deed poll is that which is plaine without any indenting, so called because it is cut even, or polled. Every deed that is pleaded shall be intended to be a deed poll, unless it be alleaged to be indented.

Touts les parts del endenture ne sont que un en ley. If a man by deed indented make a gift in taile, and the donee dyeth without issue, that part of the indenture which belonged to the donee doth now belong to the donor, for both parts doe make but one deed in law.

Et chescun part del indenture est de auxy grand force, &c. This is manifest of it selfe, and is proved by the bookes afore said.

It is to be observed, that if the feoffor, donor, or lessor seale the part of the indenture belonging to the feoffee, &c. the indenture is good, albeit the feoffee never sealeth the counterpart belonging to the feoffor, &c.

Sect.

(1) In addition to what has been observed in note 4, to page 143. b. it may be remarked, that all deeds were formerly called charters.—Before the indenting of them came into use, when there were more parties than one interested in them, there were as many parts of them taken as there were parties interested, and one part was delivered to each of the parties: these multiplied parts were called Chartæ paricæ, or paricolæ. The Chartæ paricæ, or paricolæ, were superseded, in a great measure, by the Chartæ partite. One part of the Chartæ partite was written on a piece of vellum or parchment, beginning about the middle and continuing to the end of each side. This prevailed as early as the times of the Saxons, as appears by the will of Æthelwulf, a nobleman of Kent, dated in 958; by that of prince Æthelstan, eldest son of king Ethelred the 2d; by a charter of archbishop Eadsi, made about the year 1045; and by other Saxon documents preserved in the library of Mr. Astle; in all which the parchments are cut in straight lines. Straight lines continued to be generally used till the latter end of the reign of king Henry the 3d. Afterwards the cut through the parchment was made in a waiving or undulating line; and the practice of writing an intermediate sentence, or drawing an intermediate figure, was generally disused, and the word Cyregraphum adopted. In process of time it became the practice to indent this line in small notches or angles. This practice begun with the lawyers, as early as the reign of king John; but was not adopted by the ecclesiastics till a much later period. This made the intermediate writing or drawing unnecessary; and it seems to have been abandoned about the reign of Edward the 3d. But the practice of indenting deeds in the intermediate line, remained in use till the close of the 14th century; it then seems to have declined; yet the practice of cutting a waiving or undulating line at the top of the parchment, on which every deed that is not a deed poll is written, has ever since continued. If the deed contains more than one skin of parchment, only the first skin of parchment is indented. Foreign diplomatists contend, that when the parchment on which a deed is written, is cut through the intermediate word or figure in a straight line, it is properly called Charta undulatoria; and that it is then only properly called Charta indenta, or indentura, when it is cut through the intermediate word or figure in a waiving line, and that waiving line is indented or notched in the manner I have mentioned. But with us, every deed the top of which is cut in the undulating or waiving manner I have mentioned, is called an indenture. See Mr. Madox's preface to his Formulare, and the Nouveau Traité de Diplomatique, Vol. I. 351.

(2) This was called charta de unâ parte. Some deeds must be indented to be valid for the purposes for which they are used, as bargains and sales by the stat. 27. H. 8. c. 16. leases by persons seised in tail in right of their wives, or ecclesiastical persons, by 32. H. 8. c. 28. a bargain and sale of a bankrupt's estate by the 13. El. c. 7.—and see 43. El. c. 18.

(3) When the several parts of an indenture are interchangeably executed by the several parties, that part or copy which is executed by the grantor, is usually called the original, and the rest are called counterparts; tho' of late it is most frequent for all the parties to execute every part, which renders them all originals. 2. Bla. Com. ch. 20. f. 1.

Sect. 371.

ET feafance de indenture eft en deux maners. Un eft de faire eux en le tierce perfon. Un autre eft de faire eux en le primer perfon. Le feafance en le tierce perfon eft come en tiel forme.

Hæc indentura facta inter R. de P. ex unâ parte, & V. de D. ex alterâ parte, testatur, quod prædictus R. de P. dedit & concessit, & hæc præfenti cartâ indentatâ confirmavit præfato V. de D. talem terram, &c. Habendum & tenendum, * &c. sub conditione, † &c. In cujus rei testimonium partes prædictæ figilla sua ‡ præfentibus alternatim apposuerunt. Velfic: In cujus rei testimonium uni parti hujus indenturæ penes præfatum V. de D. remanenti, prædict' R. de P. figillum suum apposuit, alteri verò parti ejusdem indenturæ penes R. de P. remanenti, idem V. de D. figillum suum apposuit. Dat' &c.

Tiel endenture est appel endenture fait en le tierce perfon, pur ceo que les verbes, &c. sont en la tierce perfon. Et tiel forme d'indentures est de plus sure feafance, pur ceo que est plus communement use, &c.

AND the making of an indenture is in two manners. One is to make them in the third person. Another is to make them in the first person. The making in the third person is in this forme.

This indenture made between R. of P. of the one part, and V. of D. of the other part, witnesseth, that the said R. of P. hath granted, and by this present charter indented confirmed to the aforesaid V. of D. such land, &c. To have and to hold, &c. upon condition, &c. In witness whereof the parties aforesaid to these presents interchangeably have put their seales. Or thus: In witness whereof to the one part of this indenture remaining with the said V. of D. the said R. of P. hath put his seale, and to the other part of the same indenture remaining with the said R. of P. the said V. of D. hath put his seale. Dated, &c.

Such an indenture is called an indenture made in the third person, because the verbes, &c. are in the third person. And this forme of indentures is the most sure making, because it is most commonly used, &c.

9. E. 3. 18. Vide the books afore rehearsed.

Vide 40. E. 3. 2. 7. H. 7. 11. Dier 28. H. 8. 19. lib. 2. fol 4. & 5. Coddard's case. (Ant. 6. 2.)

17. Eliz. Dier 342. 1. R. 3. 14. H. 6. 28. Bab. 12. H. 4. 12. 30. Aff. 31.

ET le feafance del indenture est en deux maners, &c. Here is another of our author's perfect divisions. In this and the next section following Littleton doth illustrate his meaning, by setting downe formes and examples which do effectually teach.

In these two formes there are to be observed (amongst other) three generall parts of the same, viz. the premises, the habendum, and the in-cujus rei testimonium. But hereof hath been spoken at large, Sect. 1. 4. & 40. for Littleton speaketh not here of the deliverie, but onely of the context or words of the deed.

Pur ceo que est le plus communement use. Here it appeareth that which is most commonly used in conveyances is the surest way. A communi observantia non est recedendum, & minime mutanda sunt quæ certam habuerunt interpretationem. Magister rerum usus. It is provided by the statute of 38. E. 3. cap. 4. that all penal bonds in the third person

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ præfentibus not in L. and M. nor Roh.

person be void and holden for none, wherein some of our bookes [d] seem to differ, but they being rightly understood, there is no difference at all. For the statute is to be intended of bonds taken in other courts out of the realme, and so it appeareth by the preamble of that act. And it was principally intended of the courts of Rome, and so it appeareth by justice Hankford, in 2. H. 4. in which courts bonds were taken in the third person, so as such bonds made out of the realm are void; but other bonds, in the third person, are resolved to be good, as wel as indentures in the third person, by the opinion of the whole court in 8. E. 4. (1)

Sect. 372.

LE *feasance de indenture en le primer person est * come en tiel forme.* THE making of an indenture in the first person is as in this forme. To all Christian people fidelibus ad quos præsentes literæ to whom these presents indented shall indentatæ pervenerint, A. de B. come, A. of B. sends greeting in our salutem in domino sempiternam. Lord God everlasting. Know ye mee Sciatis me dedisse, concessisse, & to have given, granted, and by this hâc præsenti cartâ meâ indentatâ my present deed indented confirmed confirmâsse C. de D. talem terram, to C. of D. such land, &c. Or thus: &c. Vel sic: Sciant præsentes & futuri, quod ego A. de B. dedi, concessi, & hâc præsenti cartâ meâ indentatâ confirmavi C. de D. talem terram, &c. Habendum † & tenendum, &c. sub conditione sequenti, &c. In cuius rei testimonium tam ego prædictus A. de B. quàm prædictus C. de D. his indenturis figilla nostra alternatim apposuimus. Vel changeably put our seales. Or thus: sic: In cuius rei testimonium ‡ ego præfatus A. uni parti hujus indenturæ figillum meum apposui, alteri verò parti ejusdem indenturæ prædictæ C. de D. figillum suum apposuit, &c.

HERE Littleton sets down three formes of deeds indented in the first person, brevi via per exempla, longa per præcepta. It is requisite for everie student to get presidents and approved formes not onely of deeds according to the example of Littleton, but of fines, and other conveyances, and assurances, and specially of good and perfect pleading, and of the right entries, and formes of judgements, which will stand him in great stead, both while he studies, and after when he shall give counsell. It is a safe thing to follow approved presidents, for nihil simul inventum est, & perfectum.

Vid. Sect. 371.

Sect. 373.

AND it seemeth that such indenture which is made in the first person is as good in law, as the ET il semble que tiel endenture || que est fait en le primer person est auxy bone en la ley,

* come not in L. and M. nor Roh. † et tenendum, not in L. and M. nor Roh. ‡ ego præfatus et, not in L. and M. nor Roh. || que est not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) See Mr. Reeves's accurate and learned History of the English Law, vol. 2. p. 67.

*ley, sicome l'indenture fait en le tierce person, quant ambideux parties ont a ceo mise leur seals; car * si en l'indenture fait en le tierce person, ou en le primer person, † mention soit fait que le grantor avoit mise solement son seale, & nemy le grauntee, donques est l'indenture tant solement le fait le grantor. Mes l'ou mention est fait que le grauntee ad mis ‡ son seale a l'indenture, &c. donques est l'indenture auxy bien le fait le grauntee come le fait le grantor. Issint il est le fait d'ambideux, & auxy chescun part de l'indenture est le fait d'ambideux parties en tiel case.*

indenture made in the third person, when both parties have put to this their seals; for if in the indenture made in the third person, or in the first person, mention be made that the grantor onely hath put his seale, and not the grantee, then is the indenture onely the deed of the grantor. But where mention is made that the grantee hath put to his seale to the indenture, &c. then is the indenture as well the deed of the grantee as the deed of the grantor. So is it the deed of them both, and also each part of the indenture is the deed of both parties in this case.

(2. Inst. 673. Ant. 58. b. 2. Roll. Abr. 22.)

HERE is to be observed, that albeit the words in this indenture be onely the words of the feoffor, yet if the feoffor put his seale to the one part of the indenture, it is the deed of them both. And in this speciall case to make it the deed of the feoffee, it appeareth by Littleton, that mention must be made in the deed, that hee hath put to his seale, for that he is no way made partie to make it, being made in the first person, but only by the clause of putting his seale thereunto. Otherwise it is of a deed indented in the third person, as before it appeareth, for there hee is made partie to the deed in the beginning. And Littleton's rule is true, that every part of an indenture is the dede of both parties; for, as it hath beene said, both parts make but one deed in law in that case.

Sect. 374.

(1. Roll. Abr. 422. 474.)

SUR certaine condition, &c. Here by this (&c.) is implied, that the condition in this case doth extend both to the estate for life, and to the remainder, but by speciall limitation it may extend to any one of them, and not to the other. And albeit he in the remainder be no party to the indenture (the parties thereunto only being the lessor and the tenant for life) yet when hee in the remainder entred and agreeth to have the lands by force of the (1) indenture, he is bound to performe the conditions contained in the in-

(10. Rep. Doct. Ball's case cited in Portington's case.)

2. Cro. 240. 399. 522.)

ITEM si estate soit fait per indenture

a un home pur terme de sa vie, le remainder a un auter en fee sur certaine condition, &c. & si le tenant a terme de vie avoit mis son seale al part de l'indenture, & puis morust, & il que est en le remainder entre en la terre per force de son remainder, &c. en cest cas il est tenu de performer tous les conditions comprise en

ALSO if an estate bee made by indenture to one for terme of his life, the remainder to another in fee upon a certaine condition, &c. and if the tenant for life have put his seale to the part of the indenture, and after dieth, and he in the remainder entred into the land by force of his remainder, &c. in this case hee is tied to performe all the conditions comprised l'en-

* si not in L. and M. nor Roh.
‡ son seale added in L. and M. and Roh.

† si added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ son seale not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) So where three were infeoffed by deed, and there were several covenants in the deed on the part of the feoffees, and only two of the feoffees sealed the deed, the third entered and agreed to the estate conveyed by the deed, he was bound in a writ of covenant by the sealing of his companions. 2. Roll. Rep. 63.—In 38. Ed. 3. p. 9. it is said, that if land is leased to two for years, and only one puts his seal, but the other agrees to the lease, and enters, and takes the profits with him, he shall be charged to pay the rent, though he has not put his seal to the deed; but if there is a condition comprised in the deed which is not parcel of the lease, but a condition in gross, if he does not put his seal to the deed, tho' he is party to the lease, he is not party to the condition.

l'indenture, sicome le tenant a terme de vie devoit faire en sa vie, et uncore cestuy en le remainder ne unques en seale ascun part del indenture. Mes la cause est, que entant que il enter et agreea d'aver les terres per force del indenture, il est tenu de performer les conditions deins mesme l'indenture, s'il voile aver la terre, &c.

in the indenture, as the tenant for life ought to have done in his lifetime, and yet he in the remainder never sealed any part of the indenture. But the cause is, for that inasmuch as hee entered and agreed to have the lands by force of the indenture, hee is bound to performe the conditions within the same indenture, if he will have the land, &c.

indenture. And here is also a diversitie to be understood, that any estranger to the indenture may take by way of remainder, but he cannot in this case take any present estate in possession, because he is an estranger to the deed. (1)

If A. by deed indentured betweene him and B. letteth lands to B. for life, the remainder to C. in fee reserving a rent, tenant for life dieth, he in the remainder entreth into the lands, he shal be bound to pay the rent, for the cause and reason before yeelded by Littleton. An indenture of

(2. Inst. 673.)
(2. Roll. Abr. 22.)

50. E. 3. 22. 3. H. 6. 26. b.
(1. Roll. 474.)
(5. Rep. 16.)

lease is engrossed betweene A. of the one part, and D. and R. of the other part, which purporteth a demise for yeares by A. to D. and R. A. sealeth and delivereth the indenture to D. and D. sealeth the counterpane to A. but R. did not seale and deliver it. And by the same indenture it is mentioned, that D. and R. did grant to be bound to the plaintife in 20 pound in case that certaine conditions comprised in the indenture were not performed. And for this 20 pound A. brought an action against D. onely, and shewed forth the indenture. The defendant pleaded, that it is proved by the indenture that the demise by indenture was made to D. and R. which R. is in full life and not named in the writ, judgment of the writ. The plaintife replied, that R. did never seale and deliver the indenture, and so his writ was good against D. sole. And there the counsell of the plaintife tooke a diversitie betweene a rent reserved which is parcell of the lease, and the land charged therewith, and a summe in grosse, as here the twenty pound is; for as to the rent they agreed that by the agreement of R. to the lease, he was bound to pay it, but for the 20 pound that is a summe in grosse, and collateral to the lease, and not annexed to the land, and groweth due onely by the deed, and therefore R. said hee was not chargeable therewith, for that he had not sealed and delivered the deed. But inasmuch as hee had agreed to the lease which was made by indenture, he was chargeable by the indenture for the same summe in grosse; and for that R. was not named in the writ, it was adjudged that the writ did abate.

38. E. 3. 8. a. 3. H. 6. 26. b.
Vide 45. E. 3. 11. 12.

Aver la terre, &c. Here is implied an ancient maxime of the law, viz. Qui sentit commodum sentire debet et onus, et transit terra cum onere.

Sect. 375.

*ITEM si feoffment soit fait per fait poll sur condition, * et pur ceo que le condition n'est pas performe le feoffor entra et happa la possession de le fait poll, si le feoffee port un action de cel entrie envers le feoffor, il ad este question si le feoffor poit pleder le condition per le dit fait poll eucounter le feoffee. Et ascuns ont dit que non, entant que il*

ALSO if a feoffment bee made by deed poll upon condition, and for that the condition is not performed the feoffor entreth and getteth the possession of the deed poll, if the feoffee brings an action for this entrie against the feoffor, it hath beene a question if the feoffor may plead the condition by the said deed poll against the feoffee. And some have said semble

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In Salter v. Hedgely, Carth. 76. lord chief-justice Holt held, that a party to a deed cannot covenant with one who is no party to it; — but that one who is no party to a deed may covenant with one who is a party, and oblige himself by sealing of the deed.

*semble a eux que un fait poll, et le proprietie de mesme le fait appartient a celui a que le fait est fait, et nemy a celui que fist le fait. Et entant que tiel fait ne attient al feoffor, il semble a eux que il ne poit pas ceo pleder. * Et auters ont dit le contrarie, et ont monstre divers causes. Un est, si le case fuit tiel, que en action perenter eux, si le feoffee pleder mesme le fait, et monstre † est ‡ al court, en cest cas entant que le fait est en court, le feoffor poit monstre al court coment en le fait sont divers conditions d'estre performes || de le part le feoffee, &c. et pur ceo que ils ne fueront performes, il enter, &c. et a ceo il jerra rescieve. Per mesme le reason quant le feoffor ad le fait en poigne, et ceo monstra a le court, il jerra § bien rescieve de ceo pleder, &c. et nosment quant le feoffor est privie al fait, car † convient esire privie al fait quant il fist le fait, &c.*

(5. Rep. 76.)

(1. Rep. 38.)

hee cannot, inasmuch as it seemes unto them that a deed poll, and the proprietie of the same deed belongeth to him to whom the deed is made, and not to him which maketh the deed. And inasmuch as such a deed doth not appertaine to the feoffor, it seemes unto them that he cannot plead it. And others have said the contrary, and have shewed divers reasons. One is, If the case were such, that in an action betweene them, if the feoffee pleade the same deed, and shew it to the court, in this case inasmuch as the deed is in court, the feoffor may shew to the court how in the deed there are divers conditions to be performed of the part of the feoffee, &c. and because they were not performed he entred, &c. and to this he shall be received. By the same reason when the feoffor hath the deed in hand, and shew this to the court, he shall well be received to pleade it, &c. and namely when the feoffor is privy to the fait, for hee must be privy to the deed when he makes the deed, &c.

[1] Vid. sect. 270. 302. 340.

HERE the latter opinion is cleere law at this day, and is Littleton's owne opinion [a], as before hath beene observed.

Ont monstre divers causes.

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas.
Et ratio melior semper praevallet.

24. E. 3. 73. 45. E. 3. Monstrans des faits. 55.
[b] 40. Aff. 34. lib. 5. 75. b. Wymark's case.
[c] 12. H. 4. 8. 42. E. 3. 27. Wymark's case, ubi supra, 38. H. 6. 2. 41. Aff. 29. 12. H. 4. 8. 7. H. 4. 39. 11. H. 4. 73. 45. E. 3. 11. F. N. B. 243.

(5. Rep. 75. 76.)

Entant que le fait est en court, &c. And herewith doe agree [b] many authorities in law. [c] And if the deed remaine in one court, it may be pleaded in another court, without shewing forth; quia lex non cogit ad impossibilia.

De part le feoffee, &c. Here also is implied if the condition be to be performed on the part of the feoffor or by a stranger; and it is to be understood that when a deed is shewed forth to the court, the deed shall remaine in court all that tearme in the custody of the custos brevium, but at the end of the tearme (if the deed be not denied) then the law adjudgeth the deed in the custody of the party to whom it belongeth, for a man's evidences are as it were the finewes of his land. But if the deed be denied, then the deed in judgment of law remaineth in court untill the plea be determined (1). The residue of this section needeth no explication.

Sect.

* &c. added in L. and M.

† ceo, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ est not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| de le part de feoffee, &c. et pur ceo que ils ne fueront performes, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ de ceo added in L. and M.

† il added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) But after, though the jury find the deed not to be the deed of the party, yet will not the court on motion detain the same, but will order it to be delivered to the party that brought it into court. 2. Sid. 131. Vid. Salk. 215. Note to the 5th edition.

Sect. 376.

AUXY si deux homes font un trespas a un auter, le quel release a un d'eux per son fait tous actions personals, & nient obstant il fust action de trespasse envers l'auter, le defendant bien poit monstrer que le trespasse fuit fait per luy, et per un auter son companion, et que le plaintife per son fait que il monstre avant releff a son companion tous actions personals, judgment si action, &c. et uncore tiel fait appertient a son companion, & nemy a luy. Mes pur ceo que il poit aver advantage per le fait, si voil monstrer le fait al court, il poit + ceo bien pleder, &c. Per mesme le reason + poit le feoffor en l'auter cas, quant § il doit aver advantage per le condition || compris deins le fait poll¶.

ALSO if two men doea trespasse to another, who releases to one of them by his deed all actions personals, and notwithstanding sueth an action of trespasse against the other, the defendant may wel shew that the trespasse was done by him, and by another his fellow, and that the plaintife by his deed (which he sheweth forth) released to his fellow all actions personals, and demand the judgement, &c. and yet such deed belongeth to his fellow, and not to him. But because hee may have advantage by the deed, if hee will shew the deed to the court, he may well plead this, &c. By the same reason may the feoffor in the other case, when he ought to have advantage by the condition comprised within the deed poll.

SI deux homes font un trespasse a un auter, &c.

Here by this section it is to bee understood, that when divers doe a trespasse, the same is joynt or severall at the wil of him to whom the wrong is done, yet if he releale to one of them, all are discharged, because his own deed shall be taken most strongly against himselfe, but otherwise it is in case of appeale of death, &c. As if two men bee joyntly and severally bounden in an obligation, if the obligee release to one of them, both are discharged; and seeing the trespassers are parties and privies in wrong, the one shall not plead a release to the other without shewing of it forth, albeit the deede appertaine to the other. (1)

If an action of debt upon an obligation bee brought against an heire, he may pleade in barre a release made by the obligee to the executors. But albeit the deed belong to another, yet must he shew it forth, for both of them are privie to the testator.

Per mesme le reason. Ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus.

27. E. 3. 83. 13. E. 4. 2. 15. E. 4. 26. 21. E. 4. 72. 22. E. 4. 7. 8. H. 6. 15. 20. H. 6. 41. 21. H. 6. Arbitrement 41. a. R. 3. 9. a. 14. H. 8. 10. 34. H. 8. tit. Estrange al fait 21. 3. H. 6. 18. 26. (11. Rep. 5. 2. Roll. Abr. 412. Hob. 66. 2. Sid. 41. Ant. 125. b.)

13. E. 2. tit. Monstrans des faits. 42.

(Flo. 439. b. Dyer 344. 6. Rep. 7. 10. Rep. 93. b.)

Sect. 377.

AUXY si le feoffee donast ou grantast le fait poll al feoffor, tiel grant serra bone, et donques le fait & le proprietie del

ALSO if the feoffee granteth the deed to the feoffor, such grant shall bee good, and then the deed and the proprietie therof belongeth

LE proprietie del fait appertient al feoffor.

Hereby it (1. Rep. 1.) appeareth that a man may give or grant his deed to another, and such a grant by paroll is good.

* son—le, L. and M. and Roh.
§ le feoffor, L. and M. and Roh.

+ pur added L. and M.
|| compris not in L and M. nor Roh.

† poit le feoffor not in L. and M. nor Roh.
¶ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) 26. H. 6. T. Barre 37. Obligee made an acquittance to one obligor, which was dated before the obligation, but was delivered afterwards; the other obligor pleads this in bar, and it was adjudged a good plea in bar. Nota, each was bound in the entirety, therefore it was joint and severall. 34. H. 6. So in the case of the king, if he releases to one of the obligors, the other shall take advantage. 5. Rep. 56. contra.—And as a release in deed to one obligor discharges the other, so of a release in law, as 8. Rep. 136, Needham's case. A woman obligee marries the obligor, that is another sort of discharge. 264. b.—But 17. Car. B. R. Two were bound jointly and severally. The plaintiff sued both, and afterwards entered a retraxit against one; whether that discharged the other was the question. Berkley said it was, for it amounts to a release in law, as the plaintiff confesses thereby that he had not cause of action, and therefore he cannot have judgment, as in Hickmot's case, 9. Rep. and retraxit is a bar to an action; and the plaintiff by his own act has altered the deed from joint to severall, and therefore the other shall have advantage of it. Cro. Inst. contra; for a retraxit is only in the nature of an estoppel; and therefore the other shall not have advantage; neither is it a release, though it be in the nature of a release; and if the obligee sues both, and then covenants with one not to sue farther, that is in the nature of a release, but the other shall not take advantage of it; and in 21. H. 6. it is said, that there must be an actual release to one obligor to discharge the other. See March. Rep. 165.—Pai. 18. Car. Hannan v. Roll. The obligee releases to one obligor; the other, in consideration of the forbearance, undertakes to pay, and

(Ant. 214. a. Post. 260. 280.
2. Roll. Abr. 45. 46. 48.
1. Sud. 212. 213.)

And it is also implied, that if a man hath an obligation, though he cannot grant the thing in action, yet hee may give or grant the deed, viz. the parchment and waxe to another, who may cancell and use the same at his pleasure. (1)

Serra plus tost entend', que il vient al fait per loyall meane, que per tortious meane. Omnia presumuntur legitime facta, donec probetur in contrarium. Injuria non presumitur.

Quære de dubiis.

There be three kinds of unhappy men.

1. Qui scit & non docet, Hee that hath knowledge and teacheth not.

2. Qui docet & non vivit, He that teacheth, and liveth not thereafter.

3. Qui nescit, & non inter- rogat, He that knoweth not, and doth not enquire to understand. Therefore Littleton saith, Quære de dubiis.

Infelix cujus nulli sapientia prodest.

Infelix qui recta docet, cum vivit iniquè.

Infelix qui pauca sapit spernitque doceri.

Quia per rationes pervenitur ad legitimam rationem. For Ratio est radius divini luminis. And by reasoning and debating of grave learned men the darknesse of ignorance is expelled, and by the light of legall reason the right is discerned, and thereupon judgment given according to law, which is the perfection of reason. This is of Littleton here called legitima ratio, whereunto no man can attaine but by long studie, often conference, long experience, and continuall observation.

Certaine it is, that in matters of difficultie the more seriously they are debated and argued, the more truly they are resolved, and thereby new inventions justly avoided.

Inter cuncta leges, & percunctabere doctos.

Sect. 378.

Condition en ley, &c.

Littleton having spoken of conditions in deed, now according to his owne division commeth to speake of conditions in law.

Que ne soit specifie en escript. A condition in law is that which the law intendeth or implyeth without expresse words in the deed.

ESTATES que

homes ont sur condition en ley, sont tiels estates que ont un condition per la ley a eux annex, comment que ne soit specifie en escript. Si come home grant per son fait a un auter l'office de

ESTATES which men have upon condition in law, are such estates which have a condition by the law to them annexed, albeit that it be not specified in writing. As if a man grant by his deed to another the par-

* est—eo, L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It is to be observed, that the king was always an exception to this rule; for he might always either grant or receive a chose in action by assignment.—The reason why, by the strict rules of the common law, a chose in action cannot be assigned or granted over, was, that it was thought to be a great encouragement to litigiousness if a man were allowed to make over to a stranger his right of going to law. But this nicety is now disregarded: though, in compliance with the antient principle, the form of assigning a chose in action is in the nature of a declaration of trust, and an agreement to permit the assignee to make use of the name of the assignor, in order to recover the possession. And therefore, when in common acceptance a debt or bond is said to be assigned over, it must still be sued in the original creditor's name; the person to whom it is transferred being rather an attorney than an assignee: and our courts of equity, considering that in a commercial country almost all personal property must necessarily lie in contract, will protect the assignment of a chose in action, as much as the law will that of a chose in possession. Dyer 30. Br. Ab. tit. Chose in action. 3. P. W. 199. 2. Bla. Com. Ch. 30.

and in an action upon the case the matter was found specially; and Rolls argued, that the debt was not absolutely discharged, but only sub modo, viz. if the other can have the release to plead, and because the forbearance was a good consideration. But the court was of opinion, that the debt was absolutely discharged, and therefore the consideration was insufficient.—See Hobart Rep. 70. Parker v. Sir John Lawrence. In trespass against three, they divided on the pleading. Judgment against one. Then he entered a noli prosequi against the two others; it was held to be no discharge to him against whom judgment was had; for as to him, the action was determined by the judgment, and the others are divided from him, and not subject to the damages recovered against him;—but a noli prosequi, or non-suit before judgment against one, would discharge all. Lord Nott. MS.

*parkership de un park a auter, & occupier mesme l'office pur terme de son vie, l'estate que il ad en l'office est sur condition en ley, cestascavoir, que le parker bien & loyalment gardera le park, & ferra ceo que a tiel office appartient a faire, ou auterment bien lirroit al grantor & a ses heires de luy ouste, & de granter ceo a un auter s'il voit, &c. Et tiel condition que est entendus per la ley estre annexe a ascun chose, est auxy fort sicome la condition fuissoit mis * en escript.*

the office of parkership of a park, to have and occupie the same office for terme of his life, the estate which he hath in the office is upon condition in law, to wit, that the parker shall well and lawfully keepe the parke, and shall doe that which to such office belongeth to doe, or otherwise it shall be lawful to the grantor and his heires to oust him, and to grant it to another if he will, &c. And such condition as is intended by the law to be annexed to any thing, is as strong as if the condition were put in writing.

lard, herne, &c. whereof I have seen this record^(*): Rex concessit Johanni de Beverly Armigero suo quodd ipse cum quibuscunque canibus suis ad quascunque bestias feras regis in quibuscunque forestis, parcis suis quotiescunque voluerit venari possit, & quoscunque falcones possit permittere volare ad quascunque aves de warrenâ in quibuscunque ripariis, &c.

It is resolved [c] b; the justices and the king's counsell, that capreoli, id est roes, non sunt bestia de foresta, sed quodd fugant alias feras. Beasts of forrests be properly hart, hind, bucke, hare, boare, and wolfe, but legally all wild beasts of venery.

A forest and chafe are not, but a parke must be inclosed. The forest and chafe doe differ in offices and lawes: every forest is a chafe, but every chafe is not a forest. A subject may have a forest by especiall grant of the king, as the duke of Lancaster and abbot of Whitbie had.

Ockam cap. quid regis foresta, saith, Foresta est tuta ferarum mansio non quarumlibet, sed filvestrium, non quibuscunque in locis, sed certis, & ad hoc idoneis; unde foresta E mutata in O, quasi jessita, hoc est, ferarum statio.

Pudgeld or Woodgeld is to bee free from payment of money for taking of wood in any forest. But let us now returne to our Littleton.

In this section Littleton putteth an example of a condition in law annexed to the office of the keeper of a park, but this example must be understood with a distinction; for if the parker doth not attend on the parke one or two, &c. dayes, this is no forfeiture of the office of parkership; but if in his default any deere be killed, and so a damage to the lord, that is a forfeiture: for (that it may be said once for all) non-user of it selfe without some speciall damage is no forfeiture of private offices, but non-user of publique offices which concern the administration of justice, or the common wealth, is of it selfe a cause of forfeiture.

Luy ouster s'il voit, &c. Littleton here speaketh of an ouster by force of a condition in law, therefore it is to be seen in what other cases the grantor may lawfully oust his officer. (1)

There is a diversitie between officers that have no other profit, but a collateral certain fee, for there the grantor may discharge him of his service, as to be a bayly, receiver, surveyor,

Que le parker bien & loyalment gardera le parke, &c. Parke this should be written parque, which is a French word, and signifieth that which we vulgarly call a parke, of the French word parquer, to im-parke, to inclose. It is called in Domesday, Parcus. In law it signifieth a great quantity of ground inclosed, priviledged for wild beasts of chafe by prescription, or by the king's grant.

The beasts of parque, or chafe, properly extend to the bucke, the doe, the foxe, the matron, the roe, but in a common and legall sense, to all the beasts of the forrest. There be both beasts and fowles of the warren. Beasts, as hares, conies, and roes called in records [d] Capreoli. Fowles of two sorts, viz. Terrestres and Aquatiles. Terrestres of two sorts, Silvestres and Campe- stres: Campestres, as partridge, quaille, raile, &c. Silvestres, as pheasant, wood-cocke, &c. Aquatiles, as mal-

(Ant. 2. 2. 115. 2. Cro. Car. 59. 60. 3. Inf. 76. 4. Inf. 289. Hutt. 86. 87.)

(8. Rep. 136.)

(F. N. B. 161. d.)

(5. Rep. 104. b.)

[d] Hill. 13. E. 3. coram rege in Thesaur. (7. Rep. 15.)

(*) 38. E. 3. rot. patent pars 1. m. 10.

[c] Hill. 13. E. 3. coram rege in Thesaur.

Vide Sect. 1.

Vide Brañ. fo. 231. & 316. Britton fo. 34. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 34. 35.

(9. Rep. 50. Sid. 14.)

5. E. 4. 15. b. L. 5. E. 4. 26. Pl. Com. 379. 380.

2. H. 7. 11. 30. A. 6. 32 &c. (Cro. 11. Rep. And. Curll's case.)

* ou mustre, added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Since Sir Edward Coke's time, several statutes have been passed, particularly 25. Car. 2. Ch. 2. 13. & 14. W. 3. Ch. 6. & 1. An. Ch. 22. by which all persons admitted into offices civil or military are to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, otherwise they forfeit their offices, and incur other penalties.

18. E. 4. 8. 31. H. 8. grants.
Br. 134. 34. H. 8. ibid. 93. 11.
Eliz. Dyer 285.
(Plo. 379. b. 381. b. F. N. B. 164.
Sid. 74. 81. 2. Roll. Abr. 155.
9. Rep. 50. Cro. Car. 55. 56. 59.
60. 61.)

veyor, auditor, or the like, the exercise whereof is but labour and charge to him, but hee must have his fee: for the maine rule of law is, that no man can frustrate or derogate from his owne grant to the prejudice of the grantee. And where albeit the grantee hath no other profit but his fee, yet that fee is to be perceived and taken out of the profits appertaining to the lord within his office, for there the grantor cannot discharge him of his service or attendance, for that may turn to the prejudice of the grantee, if the grantor will not grant the office at all. But in all cases where the officer relinquisheth his office, and refuseth to attend, he loseth his office, fee, profit, and all.

22. H. 6. 10. 3. 6. E. 6. Dier 71.

There is another diversity where the grantee, besides his certaine fee, hath profits and availes by reason of his office; there the grantor cannot discharge him of his service or attendance, for that should be to the prejudice of the grantee. As if a man doth grant to another the office of the stewardship of his courts of his manors with a certain fee, the grantor cannot discharge him of his service and attendance, because he hath other profits and fees belonging to his office, which he should lose if he were discharged of his office. And as in the case which Littleton here putteth of the office of the keeper of a parke, for that hee hath not onely his fee certaine, but profits and availes also, in respect of his office, as deere skinner, shouldiers, &c. But now let us proceed and see what other particular forfeitures in law bee of this office here spoken of by Littleton, and somewhat of conditions in law in generall.

(Ant. 54. a.)

15. E. 4. 2. b. 5. E. 4. 26. 28. H.
8. Bendloe's enter evesque de Londres & Hieron. lib. 9. fo. 50.
95. 96. 99.

[f] Mich. 33. E. 1. coram rege in Thefaur. L'evesque de Durham's case.

Pl. Com. 373. a. Sir Henric Nevill's case 21. E. 4. 20. 93.

(1. Rep. 14. b.)

Lib. 8. fo. 41. Wittingham's case.

And it is to be understood, that if any keeper kill anydeere without warrant, or fell or cut any trees, woods, or underwoods, and convert them to his owne use, it is a forfeiture of his office, for the destruction of vert is, by a meane, destruction of venison. So it is if he pull downe the lodge, or any house within the park for putting of hay into it for feeding of the deere or such like, it is a forfeiture; and the reason wherefore the office in these and in like cases shall be forfeited [f] is, quia in quo quis delinquit in eo de jure est puniendus.

As to conditions in law, you shal understand they bee of two natures, that is to say, by the common law, and by statute. And those by the common law are of two natures, that is to say, the one is founded upon skill and confidence, the other without skill or confidence: upon skill and confidence, as here the office of parkership, and other offices in the next section mentioned, and the like.

Touching conditions in law without skill, &c. some be by the common law, and some by the statute. By the common law as to every estate of tenant by the courtesie, tenant in tayle after possibility of issue extinct, tenant in dower, tenant for life, tenant for years, tenant by statute merchant or staple, tenant by elegit, gardian, &c. there is a condition in law secretly annexed to their estates, that if they alien in fee, (1) &c. that he in the reversion or remainder may enter, and sic de similibus, or if they claime a greater estate in court of record, and the like.

Concerning conditions in law founded upon statutes, for some of them an entrie is given, and for some other a recovery by action: where an entrie is given, as upon an alienation in mortmaine, &c. and the like: where an action is given, as for waste against tenant for life and yeares, and the like.

Et tiel condition que est entendus per la ley estre annex a ascun chose, est auxi fort, &c. Here it is worthy the observation to take a view of the divisions afore-

(Cro. Car. 279.)

Lib. 8. fo. 44. Wittingham's case.

(Mo. 92. 1. Cro. 7. 9. Rep. 72.

Plo. 205. Ant. 100.)

saied in some particular case. As for example. Admit that an office of parkershippe bee granted or descend to an infant or feme covert, if the conditions in law annexed to this office which require skill and confidence be not observed and fulfilled, the office is lost for ever, because, as Littleton saith here, it is as strong as an expresse condition. But if a lease for life be made to a feme covert, or an infant, and they by charter of feoffment alien in fee, the breach of this condition in law, that is, without skill, &c. is no absolute forfeiture of their estate. So of a condition in law, given by statute, which giveth an entrie onely. As if an infant or feme covert with her husband aliens by charter of feoffment in mortmaine, this is no barre to the infant, or feme covert. But if a recovery be had against an infant or feme covert in an action of waste, there they are bound and barred for ever.

And it is to be observed, that a condition in law by force of a statute which giveth a recovery, is in some case more strong than a condition in law without a recovery. For if lessee for life make a lease for yeares, and after enter into the land, and make waste, and the lessor recover in an action of waste, he shal avoid the lease made before the waste done. But if the lessee for life make a lease for years, and after enter upon him, and make a feoffment in fee, this forfeiture shal not avoid the lease for yeares. Nor in any of the said cases a precedent rent granted out of the land shal be avoyded. For if lessee for life grant a rent charge, and after doth waste, and the lessor recovereth in an action of wast, he shal hold the land charged.

(Ant. 185. a.)

(1) But this must be understood of an alienation which divests the remainder or reversion, as a feoffment, fine, or common recovery; but a conveyance by lease and release, or bargain and sale, is no forfeiture. Neither is it a forfeiture of the particular estate, if the reversioner, or remainder-man in fee, joins with the tenant for life or years in making the alienation; nor is his grant of an advowson, remainder, or any thing else which lies in grant, a forfeiture. But if a tenant for life or years claims the fee, as by joining the mise upon the meve right; or if he affirms the fee to be in a stranger, as by accepting a fine sur consens de droit come ceo from a stranger, it is a forfeiture. See post. 251. b. 152. a.

ed during the life of the tenant for life, but if the rent were granted after the waste done, the lessor shall avoid it.

And the reason wherefore the lease for years in the case aforesaid shall be avoyded, is because of necessity the action of waste must be brought against the lessee for life, which in that case must bind the lessee for yeares, or else by the act of the lessee for life the lessor should be barred to recover locum v. statum, which the statute giveth. (1)

If a man hath an office for life which requireth skill and confidence, to which office he hath a house belonging, and chargeth the house with a rent during his life, and after com- mit a forfeiture of his office, the rent charge shall not be avoyded during his life, for regularly a man that taketh advantage of a condition in law shall take the land with such charge as he finds it. And therefore Littleton is here to be understood, that a condition in law is as strong as a condition in deed, as to avoid the estate or interest it selfe, but not to avoide precedent charges, but in some particular cases, as by that which hath beene said appeareth.

There be at this day more conditions in law annexed to offices then were when Littleton wrote: for example, for offices in any wise touching the administration or execution of justice, or clerkship in any court of record, or concerning the king's treasure, revenue, account, customes, alnage, auditorship, king's surveyor, or keeping of any of his majesties castles, forts, &c. For if any of these officers bargain or sell any of the said offices or any deputation of the same, or take any money or profit, or any promise, covenant, bond, or assurance, to have any money or reward for the same, the person so bargaining or selling or that shall take any such promise, covenant, bond or assurance, shall not only forfeit his estate, but also every person so buying, giving or assuring, be adjudged a disabled person to have or enjoy the same office or offices, deputation or deputations, &c. and that all such bargains, sales, promises, covenants and assurances, as be before specified, shall be voide, except as in the said act is excepted.

Sir Robert Vernon, knight, being coferer of the king's house of the king's gift, and having the receipt of a great summe of money yearly of the king's revenue, did for a certaine summe of money bargain and sell the same to Sir A. I. and agreed to surrender the said office to the king, to the intent a grant might be made to Sir A. who surrendered it accordingly: and thereupon Sir A. was by the king's appointment admitted and sworne coferer. And it was resolved by Sir Thomas Egerton, lord chancellor, the chiefe justice, and others to whom the king referred the same, that the said office was void by the said statute, and that Sir A. was disabled to have or to take the said office, and that no non obstante could dispence with this act to enable the said Sir A. for the reason and cause before-mentioned, Sect. 180. And hereupon Sir A. was removed, and Sir Marmaduke Darrell sworne (by the king's commandment) in his place. And note, that all promises, bonds and assurances as wel on the part of the bargainor as of the bargainee, are void by the same act. (*) Nulla alia re magis Romana res publica interit, quam quod magistratus officia venalia erant. Ærod. fo. 353.

(g) Jugurtha going from Rome, said to the city, Vade venalis civitas, mox peritura si emptorem invenias. (g) Salust.

Therefore by the law of England it is further provided, that no officer or minister of the king shall be ordained or made for any gift or brokerage, favour or affection, nor that any which pursueth by him or any other, privily or openly, to be in any manner of office, shall be put in the same office or in any other, but that all such officers shall be made of the best and most lawfull men and sufficient. A law worthy to be written in letters of gold, but more worthy to be put in due execution. For certainly never shall justice be duely administred, but when the officers and ministers of justice be of such quality, and come to their places in such manner, as by this law is required.

Tiel condition que est entendus per la ley estre annex a ascun chose, est auxi fort sicome la condition fuit mise in escript. And this accords with that ancient rule, Uniquè fortior & potentior est dispositio legis quam hominis. Vide Sect. 419. 429. 430.

Sect. 379.

EN mesme le maner est de grants d'
offices de seneschal,
constabularie, bedelary,
bailiwick, ou auters

IN this manner it is of grants of the offices of steward, constable, bedelarie, bayliwick, or other offices, &c. But if Seneschall. Of this I have spoken before. 21. E. 4. 20. Pl. Com. 379.

(Ant. 61. a.)

Constabularie. Of this likewise something hath beene spoken before. 8. E. 4. 6.
(5. Rep. 59.)

(1) For the recovery relates to the time of the waste done, which is paramount to the grant, but it does not relate to the time of making the estate, to avoid charges by force of this condition in law, unless in the case of a lease for years, which is of necessity to have the place wasted. Lord Nott. MS.

before. But a constable is often taken in the law for a warden or keeper, as Constabularius castri de Dover & 5. portuum; for the warden of the castle of Dover and the Cinque ports, &c. So as in this sense Constabularius is taken for Castellanus, and this is proved by the statute (*) of W. 1. ca. 7. Des prises des Constables ou Castellains faitz des auters, &c. And Magna Carta, c. 19. Nullus constabularius vel ejus ballivus capiat blada vel alia catalla alicujus

(*) W. 1. ca. 7.

(b) Magna Carta, ca. 19.

Stanf. fo. 152. 32. H. 8. ca. 28.

qui non sit de villâ, ubi castrum suum situm est, &c. Stanford fo. 152. Constabularius Turris London, for Custos Turris, 32. H. 8. ca. 28. Constable of the Forest, for the Keeper of the Forest.

Bedelarie. Bedell is derived of the French word Beadeau, which signifies a messenger of the court, or under Baylife, in Latine Bedellus.

And the oath of a bedell of a manor is, that he shall duly and truly execute all such attachments and other proces as shall be directed to him from the lord or steward of his court, and that he shall present all pound breaches, which shall happen within his office, and all chattels wayved, and estrayes.

Bayliwicke. Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 380.

HERE Littleton termeth words of limitation to be conditions in law: for his first example is,

Durant le co-verture enter eux, Durante coopturâ inter eos. This word (durante) is properly a word of limitation, as durante virginitate, or durante vitâ, &c. And properly a condition in law is, as hath beene said, where the law createth the same without any expresse words.

37. H. 6. 27. 3. E. 3. 15. 3. Aff. Pl.

Dum also maketh a limitation; as if a lease be made, dum sola fuerit, or dum sola & casta vixerit. Dummodo is also a word of limitation; as dum-

ITEM Mestates de terres ou tenements purront estre sur condition en ley, coment que sur l'estate fait ne fuit ascun mention ou reherfal fait de le condition. Si come mittomus que un leas soit fait a le baron et a sa feme, a aver et tener a eux durant le couverture enter eux; en cest cas ils ont estate pur terme de leur deux vies sur condition en ley, scilicet, si un de eux devie, ou que devorce soit fait entre eux, donque bien

ALSO estates of lands or tenements may be made upon condition in law, albeit upon the estate made there was not any mention or reherfall made of this condition. As put the case that a lease be made to the husband and wife, to have and to hold to them during the couverture betweene them; in this case they have an estate for terme of their two lives upon condition in law, scil. if one of them die, or that there be a divorce belirroit

* le grantor—il, L. and M. and Roh.

† le grantee not in L. and M. nor Roh.

lirroit a le lessor et a ses beires d'entrer, &c. tween them, then it shall bee lawfull for the lessor and his heires to enter, &c.

quandiu the grantor shall bee dwelling upon the mannor, this is good, or quandiu se bene gesserit.

And so be these words, donec, quousque, usque ad, tamdiu, ubicunque.

Si l'un de eux devie, &c. For if any of them die the coverture is dissolved, and consequently the state determined by the limitation.

Ou que divorce soit fait enter eux, &c. Here is a distinction to be understood: for there bee two kinde of divorces, viz. one, à vinculo matrimonii,* and the other à mensâ et thoro. Divortium dicitur à divertendo, or divortendo, quia vir divertitur ab uxore. Divorces à vinculo matrimonii are these: Causâ præcontractûs, causâ metûs, causâ impotentia seu frigiditatis, causâ affinitatis, causâ consanguinitatis, &c. And I reade in an ancient record, coram rege Termino Pasch. 30. E. 1. William de Chadworthe's case, that he was divorced from his wife for that he did carnally know her daughter before he married the mother; all which are causes of divorce preceding the marriage.

A mensâ et thoro, as causâ adulterii, which dissolveth not the marriage à vinculo matrimonii, for it is subsequent to the marriage. And the divorce that Littleton here speaketh of is intended of such divorces [*] as dissolve the marriage à vinculo matrimonii, and maketh the issue bastard, because they were not justæ nuptiæ. And therefore in Littleton's case though the husband and wife be divorced causâ adulterii, yet the freehold continueth, because the coverture continueth. And it is further to be understood, that many divorces that were of force by the canon law when Littleton wrote, are not at this day in force; for by the statute of 32. H. 8. c. 38. it is declared that all persons be lawfull (that is, may lawfully marry) that be not prohibited by God's law to marry, that is to say, that be not prohibited by the Leviticall degrees.

A man married the daughter of the sister of his first wife, and was drawne in question in the ecclesiasticall court for this marriage, alleging the same to be against the canons; and it was resolved [a] by the court of common-pleas, upon consideration had of the said statute, that the marriage could not be impeached, for that the same was declared by the said act of parliament to be good, inasmuch as it was not prohibited by the Levitical degrees, et sic de similibus. (1)

modo solveret talem redditum. Quandiu also is a word of limitation, for if a man grant a rent out of the mannor of D. good, or quandiu se bene (Ant. 214. b. 4. Rep. 3. a.) 14. E. 2. Grant. 92. (10. Rep. 42. Plo. 242. a. Vaughan 32. 4. Rep. 33.) 37. H. 6. 27. (9. Rep. 95.)

10. Aff. 4. 6. E. 3. 8. 9. 11. 3. E. 3. 18. Annuite 40. 19. H. 6. 54. Temps E. 1. Annuite 150. 11. Aff. p. 8. 21. Aff. p. 18. 26. E. 3. 69. 7. E. 4. 16. 9. E. 4. 25. 26. 9. H. 6. 39. 14. H. 8. 13.

* 47. E. 3. 27. 39. E. 3. 32. 33. 11. H. 4. 14. 76. Bracton fo. 298. 18. E. 4. 28. 24. H. 8. bastards. Br. 44. 39. E. 1. bastard 21. 22. E. 4. tit. Consultat. 5. 6. E. 3. 249. 25. E. 3. 39.

(1. Sid. 64. 1. Roll. Abr. 341. 360. 681.) (*) Vid. Sect. 399. (Sid. 13. 118. 5. Rep. 98. 7. Rep. 42. Cro. Car. 463. 2. Inlt. 682. Vaug. 221. 319. 321.) 32. H. 8. ca. 38.

[a] Tr. 2. Jac. Rot. 1032. Richard Parsons' case. (Cont. 1. Cro. 228. Acc. Mo. 907. Vid. Sid. 434.)

Sect. 381.

ET que ils ont estate pur terme de leur deux vies, probatur sic: Chescun home que ad estate de franktenement en ascun terres ou tenements, ou il ad estate en fee, ou en fee taile, ou pur terme de sa vie demesne, ou pur terme d'auter vie, et per tiel lease ils ont franktenement, mes ils n'ont per cest grant fee, ne fee taile, ne pur terme d'auter vie, ergo, ils ont estate pur terme de leur vies, mes ceo est sur condition en ley en le forme avantdit; et en cest cas s'ils fieront wast, le feoffor avera envers eux brieve de wast

AND that they have an estate for term of their two lives, is proved thus: Every man that hath an estate of freehold in any lands or tenements, either he hath an estate in fee, or in fee taile, or for terme of his own life, or for terme of another man's life, and by such a lease they have a freehold, but they have not by this grant fee, nor fee taile, nor for terme of another's life, ergo, they have an estate for terme of their owne lives, but this is upon condition in lawe in forme aforefaid; and in this case if they shal do wast, the feoffor shall

sup-

(1) This passage exposed Sir Edward Coke to much censure. — It was struck out of the third and every following edition to the ninth. — It was restored to its place in that edition, and is to be found in all the subsequent editions. — The following account is given of this circumstance in Burn's Ecclesiastical Law, vol. 3. p. 402. 3d edit. — "There are several degrees, which, although not expressly named in the Levitical law, are yet prohibited by that, and by the statute of 32. H. 8. c. 38. by parity of reason. Hence, in the case of Wortly and Watkinson, a consultation was granted, where one had married the daughter of the sister of his former wife; which (as Sir John King laid the argument) is the same degree of proximity, as the nephew's marrying his father's brother's wife; and this being expressly prohibited, the other by parity of reason is so likewise; as it had been declared E. 16. J. in Pennington's case, before the High Commissioners. Which point was again argued T. 1. An. in the case of Snowling and Nursey, and consultation granted as before, notwithstanding the case of Richard Parsons, mentioned by lord Coke, 1. Inlt. 235. in which it was first determined not to be within the Levitical degrees, and prohibition granted; but a consultation being awarded on debate, two years after, that case is said to have been expunged out of the First Institute, by order of the King and Council. And this was the very point in which (presently after the making of the act) lord Cromwell desired a dispensation for one Massey, who was contracted to his sister's daughter of his late wife; but the archbishop denied it, as contrary to the law of God, and gave for reason, that as several persons are prohibited, which are not expressed, but understood by like prohibition in equal degree; so in this case, it being expressed that the nephew shall not marry his uncle's wife, it is implied, that the niece shall not be married to the aunt's husband. Gibf. 412. 413. Much less can it be doubted, whether the like rule concerning parity of reason, doth not forbid the uncle supposant per son briefe, quòd have a writ of waste against them, tenet ad terminum vitæ, &c. supposing by his writ, quòd tenet * mes en son count il declare coment ad terminum vitæ, &c. but in this count he shall declare how and in what maner the lease was made.

Pl. Com. 561. b. Vid. sect. 345. simile.

PRobatur sic. By this argument logically drawne à divisione, it appeareth, how necessary it is that our student should (as Littleton did) come from one of the universities to the studie of the common law, where he may learne the liberall arts, and especially logick, for that teacheth a man not onely by just argument to conclude the matter in question, but to discern between truth and falsehood, and to use a good method in his studie, and probably to speake to any legall question, and is defined thus, dialectica est scientia probabiliter de quovis themate differendi, whereby it appeareth how necessary it is for our student.

37. H. 6. 27.

Supposant per son briefe, quòd tenet ad terminum vitæ, &c. This and the rest of this section is evident and plaine.

Sect. 382.

Vid. Bracl. lib. 5. 414.

(Flo. 242.)

SI un Abbe.

So it is of a bishop, archdeacon, and other ecclesiasticall or temporall body politique or corporate, or of any officer or graduate, or the like.

Resigne ou soit depose. And so it is of a translation and cession.

EN mesme le manner est, si un abbe fait un lease a un home, a aver et tener a luy durant le temps que le lessor est abbe; en cest case le lessée ad estate pur terme de sa vie demesne: mes ceo est sur condition en ley, scilicet, que si l'abbe resigna, ou soit depose, que bien lirroir a son successeur d'entrer, &c.

IN the same maner it is, if an abbot make a lease to a man for yeares, to have and to hold to him during the time that the lessor is abbot; in this case the lessee hath an estate for term of his own life: but this is upon condition in law, scilicet, That if the abbot resigne, or be deposed, that then it shall be lawfull for his successor to enter, &c.

Sect. 383.

LIVRE d'Assises

is a booke of the Reports of Cases in the reign of king Edward the Third, and it is called the Booke of Assises, because the greatest part of the cases therein are upon writs of assises brought as hath been said, and which hath been cited before.

Devisa les tene-ments a vendre per son executor. This must

ITEM home poit veier en le Livre d'Assise, viz. anno 38.

E. 3. † p. 3. un plea d'Ass. en cest forme que ensuist: scilicet, Un assise de Novel disseisin auterfois fuit port vers A. que ple- da al assise, et trove fuit per verdict, que

ALSO a man may see in the Book of Assises, an. 38. E. 3. p. 3. a plea of Assise in this form following, scilicet, An assise of Novel Disseisin was sometime brought against A. who pleaded to the assise, and it was found by verdict, that

* mes—et, L. and M. and Roh.

† p. 3. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

“to marry his niece, which, though not expressly forbidden, is virtually prohibited in the precept that forbids the nephew “to marry the aunt; nor is it of moment to alledge, that the first is a more favourable case, as the natural superiority is preserved; since the parity of degree, which is the proper rule of judging, is the very same. Gibf. 413. But where in the case “of Harrison and Burwell, T. 20. C. 2. in the spiritual court, one had married the wife of his great uncle, this was declared not “to be within the Levitical degrees; and accordingly, after the opinion of all the judges taken by the king’s special command, a prohibition was granted. Gibf. 413.” — Note the case of Richard Parsons, T. 2. Ja. Ro. 1032. where a man may marry the daughter of his wife’s sister, which is in the editions of 1628, and that of 29, and is here left out. See Moor 1266, Mame’s case, 33. Eliz. in the case of the widow of one Rennington, who claimed a widow’s estate, but was denied because she was niece to the former wife of Rennington, who had done penance for the incestuous marriage; but it was resolved she should have her widow’s estate, because there was never any divorce had in the life of her husband, though there was cause. Hob. 181. in the case of Howard v. Bartlett, 2. Inst. 683. 1. Cro. 228. Vaugh. 302. Hill v. Geed, 3. Lev. 364. Vide auxy 2. Jones 118. 3. Mo. 161. and B. Stillingfleet’s Life, 121. Lord Nott. MS.

*l'auncestor le plaintiff devisa ses tenements a vendre per le defendant, que fuit son executor, et de faire distribution des deniers pur son alme: et fuit trove, que maintenant apres la mort le testator, un home luy tendist certaine somme de deniers pur les tenements, mes non pas al value, et que le executor puis avoit tenu les tenements en sa main demesne per deux ans, al entent de les vender plus cbier a ascun auter; et trove fuit que il avoit tout temps prist les profits de les tenements a son use demesne, sans rien faire pur l'alme le mort, &c. Moubray * justice disoit, l'executor en tiel case est tenu per la ley a faire le vender a plus tost que il purroit apres la mort son testator, et trove est que il refuse de faire vendre, & issint de avoit un default en luy, et issint per force del devise il fust tenu d'aver mis tous le profits † avenants de les tenements al use le mort, et trove est que il ad*

the ancestour of the plaintife devised his lands to bee sold by the defendant, who was his executor, and to make distribution of the money for his soule: and it was found, that presently after the death of the testator, one tendred to him a certaine sum of mony for the lands, but not to the value, and that the executor afterwards held the lands in his own hands two yeares, to the entent to sell the same dearer to some other; and it was found that he had all the time taken the profits of the lands to his owne use, without doing any thing for the soule of the deceased, &c. Moubray justice said, the executor in this case is bound by the law to make the sale as soone as he may after the death of his testator, and it is found that hee refused to make sale, and so there was a default in him, and so by force of the devise he was bound to put all the profits comming of the lands to the use of the dead, and it is found that he tooke them to his

be intended to be of lands devisable by custome, for lands by the common law were not devisable (as hath been said): for in this section is implied a diversity, viz. when a man deviseth that his executor shal sell the land, there the lands descend in the meane time to the heire, and untill the sale bee made, the heire may enter and take the profits. But when the land is devised to his executor to be sold, there the devise taketh away the descent, and velleth the state of the land in the executor, and he may enter and take the profits, and make sale according to the devise. And here it appeareth by our author, that when a man deviseth his tenements to be sold by his executors, it is all one as if he had devised his tenements to his executors to be sold: and the reason is, because he deviseth the tenements whereby hee breakes the descent. (1)

(Latch. 9. Ant. 113. a. 181.)

Mowbray. John

Mowbray was a reverend judge of the court of common pleas, and descended of a noble family.

L'executor en tiel case est tenu per la ley a faire le vender a plus tost que il purroit apres la mort son testator, &c.

And the reason hereof is, for that the meane profits taken before the sale, shall not bee assets, so as he may be compellable to pay debts with the same, and therefore the law will enforce him to sell the lands as soone as he can, for otherwise hee shall take advantage of his owne laches: but if a man devise that his executor shall sell his land, there he may sell it at any time, for that he hath but a bare power, and no profit. And by this case it appeareth what construction the law maketh for the speedy payment of debts. And here is to be observed, that many words

(4. Rep. 81. b.)

* justice disoit, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† avenants—prevenances, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) 1. Co. 25. b. Porter's case. Breach of condition assigned, because he has not performed within convenient time, viz. 8 years.—Ant. 113. cont. that where lands are devised to executors to sell, and one refuses, yet it is within 21. H. 8. though it be an interest, and though the words of the statute are, where lands are willed to be sold by executors, which gives only a power; so there was a difference between them.—40. E. 3. 17. The case was, a woman seised of lands in London devised them to be sold by her executors, and died without an heir; that devise prevented the escheat which the king pretended to have, and the executors could enter and sell, therefore more than a bare authority passed. Yet in 1651, on evidence at the bar, between Wilkinson and White, this case was started; and lord chief justice Rolls doubted of this opinion, because, he said, it was only a descent, according to the words of Littleton; and that it appeared to him, that when lands are devised to be sold by executors, there no interest passes, as in the last clause here.—Lord Nott. MSS.

(3. Cro. 19. 21. a.)

Mich. 31. & 32. El. in the King's Bench. Crickmer's case adjudged. Dy. 6. E. 6. fo. 74. 7. E. 6. 70.

(1. Leo. 174. 10. Rep. 41. Cro. Car. 185.)

words in a will doe make a condition in law, that make no condition in a deed: As here to devise lands to an executor ad vendendum, so if lands be devised to one ad solvendum 20 l. to I. S. or paying twentie pounds to I. N. this amounts to a condition. And Crickmer's case was this, A man seised of certaine lands holden in so- cage had issue two daughters A. and B. and devised all his lands to A. and her heires, to pay unto B. a certaine summe of money at a certaine day and place; the money was not paid, and it was adjudged, That these words, "to pay," &c. did amount in a will to a condition; and the reason was, for that the land was devised to A. for that purpose, otherwise B. to whom the money was appointed to be paid, should be remediless, et interest reipublice suprema hominum testamenta rata haberi: and the lessee of B. upon an actuall ejectment recovered the moitie of the land against A.

Et issint appiert per le judgement, &c. This conclusion upon a judgment is of great authoritie in law, quia judicium pro veritate accipitur, and, as it hath beene said, judicium is quasi juris dictum.

prise a son use demesne, et issint auter default en luy. Per que fuit adjudge, que le plain- tife recovers. Et issint appiert per le dit judgement, que per force del dit devise, l'executor n'avoit estate ne poyer en les tenements, forsque sur condition en ley.* owne use, and so another default in him. Wherefore it was adjudged, that the Pl. should recover. And so it appeareth by the said judgement, that by force of the said devise the executour had no estate nor power in the lands, but upon condition in law.

Sect. 384.

9. E. 4. 36. (5. Rep. 74. 6. Rep. 38.)

(Ant. 214. b.)

Vid. Sect. 220.

Bract. li. 2. fo. 16. 17. Aff. p. 2. 5. E. 3. 42. E. 3. 1. 43. E. 17. 43. Aff. 12. 7. H. 6. 43. 8. H. 6. 23. 32. E. 3. Annu. 30. 5. E. 3. Annuity 44. 30. Aff. p. 1. 30. Aff. p. 11. 31. Aff. 32. (Ant. 207. a. 1. Roll. Abr. 590.)

HEREBY it appeareth, that limitations (which, as hath beene said, Littleton termeth conditions in law) may be pleaded without deed; and the reason of our author is observable, because the law in itselfe purporteth the condition, whereof somewhat hath bin said before, and therefore looke backe to the conditions in law, or words of limitation, and withall that a stranger may take advantage of a limitation, as hath beene said.

Littleton having spoken at large of conditions in deed and in law, somewhat seemeth necessary to bee said of defeasances, whereby the state or right of freehold and inheritance may be defeated and avoyded.

Defeasance, Defeasantia, is fetched from the French word defaire, i. e. to defeat or undoe, infectum reddere quod factum est. There is a diversitie between inheritances executed, and inheritances executorie; as lands executed by livery, &c. cannot by indenture of defeasance be defeated afterwards. And so if a disseisor release a disseisor, it cannot bee defeated by indentures of defeasance made afterwards; but at the time of the release or feoffment, &c. the same may be defeated by indentures of defeasance, for it is a maxime in law, Quæ incontinenti fiunt in esse videntur. (1)

† ET mults auters choses et cases y sont d'estates sur condition en la ley, et en tiels cases il ne besoigne d'aver monstre ascun fait, rehearsing la condition, pur ceo que la ley en luy mesme purport le condition, &c.

Ex paucis dictis intendere plurima possis.

Plus ferra dit de conditions en le † prochain chapter, en le chapter de Releases, et en le chapter de Discontinuance.

AND many other things there are of estates upon condition in law, and in such cases hee needed not to have shewed any deed, rehearsing the condition, for that the law it selfe purporteth the condition, &c.

Ex paucis dictis intendere plurima possis.

More shall be said of conditions in the next chapter, in the chapter of Releases, and in the chapter of Discontinuance.

But

* Et added in L. and M. and Roh. M. nor Roh.

† Et mults auters choses et cases y sont d'estates sur condition en la ley, not in L. and M. nor Roh. † prochein chapter—chapitre de discentz que tollent entres, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) A power of revocation may be defeated by a defeasance made at the same time, or any time after. 1. Rep. 113.—See Carth. 64. But if a thing executory on its commencement be after executed, it cannot be defeated by a subsequent defeasance. 5. Rep. 90. b. In the case of Cottrel v. Purchase, lord Talbot said he should always discourage the practice of drawing an absolute deed, and making a defeasance, as it wore the face of fraud.

But rents, annuities, conditions, warranties, and such like, that be inheritances executorie, may be defeated by defeasances made, either at that time, or any time after : and so the law is of statutes, recognizances, obligations, and other things executorie.

20. Aff. pl. 7. 7. E. 4. 29. Blowing and Belton's case, Pl. Com. 131. 28. H. 8. Dier 6. 27. H. 8. 15. 19. R. 2. done 10. Albanie's case, lib. 1. 107.

Ex paucis dictis intendere plurima possis.

Verbes at the first were invented for the helpe of memorie, and it standeth well with the gravitie of our lawyer to cite them. By this verbe of our author, inferences and conclusions in like cases are warrantable.

Lastly, somewhat were necessarie to be spoken concerning clauses of provisos, containing power of revocation, which since Littleton wrote are crept into voluntarie conveyances, which passe by raising of uses, being executed by the (*) statute of 27. H. 8. and are become verie frequent, and the inheritance of many depend thereupon. As if a man seised of lands in fee, and having issue divers sonnes, by deed indented, covenanteth in consideration of fatherly love, and for the advancement of the blood, or upon any other good consideration, to stand seised of three acres of land to the use of himselfe for life, and after to the use of Thomas his eldest son in taile; and for default of such issue, to the use of his second son in taile, with divers like remainders over; with a proviso that it shall be lawfull for the covenantor at any time during his life to revoke any of the said uses, &c. this proviso being coupled with an use, is allowed to be good, and not repugnant to the former states. But in case of a feoffment, or other conveyance, whereby the feoffee or grantee, &c. is in by the common law, such a proviso were merely repugnant and void.

(6. Rep. 32. 3. Rep. Twyne's case.) (*) 27. H. 8. cap. 10. (Cro. Car. 472. Hob. 348. 9. Rep. 107. 1. Rep. 173. 175.)

And first, in the case aforesaid, if the covenantor, who had an estate for life, doe revoke the uses according to his power, he is seised againe in fee simple without entrie or claime.

Secondly, he may revoke part at one time, and part at another.

Thirdly, If he make a feoffment in fee, or levie a fine, &c. of any part, this doth extinguish his power but for that part; whereas in that case the whole condition is extinct. But if it be made of the whole, all the power is extinguished; so as to some purposes it is of the nature of a condition, and to other purposes in nature of a limitation.

Lib. 1. fol. 173. 174. Digge's case, lib. 1. fol. 107. Albanie's case, lib. 10. fol. 143. Scrope's case, lib. 7. fol. 12. 13. Sir Francis Englefield's case.

Fourthly, If hee that hath such power of revocation hath no present interest in the land, nor by the ceasor of the state shall have nothing, then his feoffment or fine, &c. of the land is no extinguishment of his power, because it is mere collateral to the land.

(2. Roll. Abr. 263. 1. Roll. Abr. 331.)

Fifthly, By the same conveyance that the old uses be revoked, may new be created or limited, where the former cease ipso facto by the revocation, without either entrie or claime.

Sixtly, That these revocations are favourably interpreted, because many men's inheritances depend on the same. (1) And here I may apply the aforesaid verbe:

Ex paucis dictis intendere plurima possis.

CHAP. 6. Discents quetollent Entries. Sect. 385.

DISCENTS que tollent entries *font en deux maners, cest ascavoir, ou discent est en fee, ou en fee taile. Descents en fee que tollent entries * font, si come home seisie de certaines terres ou tenements est per un auter disseisie, &*

DISCENTS which toll entries are in two manners, to wit, where the discent is in fee, or in fee taile. Descents in fee which toll entries are, as if a man seised of certaine lands or tenements is by another disseised, and the discentor hath issue, and DISCENTS.

This word commeth of the Latine word discentere, id est, ex loco superiore in inferiorem movere; and in legall understanding it is taken when land, &c. after the death of the ancestor is cast by course of law upon the heire, which the law calleth a discent. And this is the noblest and worthiest meanes whereby lands are derived from one to another, because it is wrought and vested by the act of law, and right of blood,

Mirror, cap. 2. sect. 5. Bracton, lib. 5. fol. 370. and 434. Britton, fol. 115. 215. Vide Sect. 5. (Sid. 198. Ant. 13. b. Ant. 163.)

* font—est, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Some observations will be made in the notes to the chapter of Releases, on powers of revocation, and other powers deriving their effect from the statute of uses.

blood, unto the worthiest and next of the blood and kindred of the ancestor, and therefore it hath not in the common law altogether the same signification that it hath in the civill law; for the civilians call him, heredem, qui ex testamento succedit in universum jus testatoris. But by the common law he is only heire which succeedeth by right of blood. And this agreeth well with the etymologie of the word (heire) to whom the lands descend, for heres dicitur ab herendo, quia qui heres est heret, hoc est, proximus est sanguine illi cujus est heres. So as hee that is heres, sanguinis est heres, & herus hereditatis.

Discents que tollent entrees sint en deux manners. Here is an exact and perfect division made by our author, and yet withall plaine and perspicuous.

Now, as a discent is the worthiest meanes to come to lands, &c. so hath the heire more privileges than any that by other order or meanes come to the lands, &c. as shall appear hereafter.

Nota, In ancient time * if the disseisor had beene in long possession, the disseisee could not have entred upon him. [a] Likewise the disseisee could not have entred upon the feoffee of the disseisor, if he had continued a yeare and a day in quiet possession. But the law is changed in both these cases, only the dying seised being an act in law, doth hold at this day, and this seemeth to be verie ancient, for this was the law before the Conquest. [b] Porro autem quam maritus sine lite et controversia sedem incoluerit, eam conjux et proles sine controversia possident, si qua in illum lis fuerit illata viventem, eam heredes ad se (perinde atque is vivus) accipiunt.

And one of the reasons of this ancient law may be, that the heire cannot suddenly by entredment of law know the true state of his title. And for that many advantages follow the possession and tenant, the law taketh away the entrie of him that would not enter upon the ancestor, who is presumed to know his title, and driveth him to his action against the heire that may be ignorant thereof.

Et morust de tiel estate seisie. To a discent that taketh away an entrie, a dying seised is necessarie, as here it appeareth; but a man to other purposes may have lands by discent, though his ancestor died not seised, as hath beene said before.

Des terres ou tenements. That is, of such tenements as be corporeall, and doe lye in liverie, and not of inheritances which lye in grant, as advowsons, rents, commons in grosse, and such like, which bee inheritances incorporeall, and yet are included within this word (tenements). For discents of them doe not put him that right hath to an action; and the reason of this diversitie is, for that houses serve for the habitation of men, and lands to be manured for their sustenance, and therefore the heire after a discent shall not be molested or disturbed in them by entrie.

Est per un auter disseisie. The like law is of an abatement or intrusion, and of their feoffees, or donees, &c.

Upon the words of Littleton a diversitie may be collected, that if a recoverie be had by A. against

(Ant. 7. b.)

* Bracton, lib. 4. fol. 162. & 209. Britton, fol. 115. Fleta, lib. 4. cap. 2.

[a] 50. E. 3. 21. 1. Aff. 13. 20. H. 3. Aff. 432. 0. Aff. 15. 29. Aff. 5. 54. 26. Aff. 12. 21. Aff. 28. 43. Affise 17.

[b] Lamb. explicat. fol. 120. 70.

31. H. 7. 12. 40. E. 3. 24.

33. E. 3. gard. 162. 6. H. 4. 4. 39. E. 3. 36. 15. E. 4. 14. F.N.B. 143. q. 7. H. 4. 12. 5. 2. Aff. p. 9. 21. E. 3. 2.

(8. Rep. 101.)

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

against B. and before execution B. die seised, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the recoveror. But if after execution B. had disseised the recoveror and died seised, this discent shall take away the entrie of the recoveror within the expresse words of Littleton: and so it is in case of a fine.

(n) A recoverie is had against tenant for life, where the remainder is over in fee, tenant for life dieth, he in remainder entreteth before execution, and dieth seised, the entrie of the recoveror is lawfull, because he is privie in estate; otherwise it is if the discent had bene after execution.

A. recovereth an advowson against B. in a writ of right, and hath judgement finall; the incumbent dieth; B. by usurpation presents to the church, and his clarke is admitted and instituted; B. dieth: A. is put out of possession, and the heire of B. is not so bound by the judgement either in blood or estate but that he shall present. (o) B. levies a fine to A. of an advowson to him and his heires; after the church becomes void; B. presents by usurpation, and his clarke is admitted and instituted: this shall put A. the conusee out of possession. And the reason of these two cases is, for that at the common law, everie presentation to a church did put the rightfull patron out of possession, and did put him to his writ of right, whether the presentation were by title or without, and therefore albeit the usurpation were in both the said cases before execution, yet it put the rightfull patron out of possession. So note a diversitie betwene a recoverie of land, and of an advowson.

L'entrie le disseisee est tolle. Here is one of the privileges which the law giveth to the heire by discent of houses and lands.

(p) At the common law if the disseisor, abator, or intruder had died seised soone after the wrong done, the disseisee and his heires had been barred of his and their entrie without any time limited by law; but now by the statute (q) made since Littleton wrote, it is enacted, that except such disseisor hath been in the peaceable possession of such mannors, lands, &c. whereof he shall die seised by the space of five yeares next after such disseisin, &c. without entrie or continuall claime, &c. that there such dying seised, &c. shall not take away the entrie of such person or persons, &c. But after the five yeares the disseisee must take such continuall claime as our author hath taught us, the learning whereof is necessarie to be knowne. And it is said that abators and intrudors are out of this statute, because the statute is penall, and extends only to a disseisor, and that was the most common mischief. Et ad ea quæ frequentius accidunt jura adaptantur.

The feoffee of a disseisor is out of the said statute, and remaines as at the common law. But to a disseisor, the statute is taken favourably for advancement of the ancient right: for whether the disseisin be without force, or with force, it is within the statute. And albeit the statute speake of him that at the time of such discent had title of entrie, &c. or his heires, yet the successors of bodies politique or corporate, so you hold yourselfe to a disseisin, are within the remedie of this statute, for the statute extendeth cleerely to the predecessor, being disseised; and consequently without naming of his successor extendeth to him, for he is the person that at the time of such discent had title of entrie.

But if a man make a lease for life, and the lessee for life is disseised, and the disseisor die seised within five yeeres, the lessee for life may enter; but if he die before he doth enter, it is said that the entrie of him in the reversion is not lawfull, because his entrie was not lawfull upon the disseisor at the time of the discent, as the statute speaketh. But if lessee for life had died first, and then the disseisor had died seised, he in the reversion had bene within the remedie of the statute, because he had title of entrie at the time of the discent, as the statute speaketh, and so within the expresse letter of the statute, albeit the disseisin was not immediate to him, and the like is to be said of a remainder, &c.

Briefve d'entrie sur disseisin, Breve de ingressu super disseisinam. Of this writ somewhat shall be said in the next section.

Sect. 386.

DISCENTS en taile que tollent entries * sont, sicome home est disseisee, et DISCENTS in taile which take away entries are, as if a man bee disseised, and the MORUST de tiel estate seisee.

If a disseisor make a gift in taile, and the donee continueth in fee, and disseise the

* sont—est, L. and M. and Roh.

(6. Co. 51. b.)

33. E. 3. tit. 3. Entrie conge 57.

45. E. 3. quare Imp. 139. 27. b.

3. 83. 9. H. 6. 49. 21. H. 6. 17.

3. E. 4. 6. 12. E. 4. 19. 3. H.

7. 3. 6. E. 4. 11. 7. H. 7. 15.

5. H. 7. 31. 10. H. 7. 5. b.

(n) 5. H. 7. a.

45. E. 3. quare Imp. 139.

(o) 8. E. 2. quare Imp. 166.

(6. Co. 48.)

(p) L'estatute de 32. H. 8. cap. 33.

Vide Sect. 422. 426.

(q) 37. H. 6. 1.

Pl. Com. 47. in Wimbeshe's case.

(11. Co. 46. Mo. 151.)

Mich. 4. & 5. Eliz. 219. acc.

(Post. 246. a.)

Vide Pl. Com. 47. ubi supra.

the discontinuee, and dieth seised, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the disseisee, for the discent of the fee simple is vanished and gone, by the remitter; and albeit the issue be in by force of the estate taile, yet the donee died not seised of that estate, and of necessitie there must be a dying seised, as hath beene said, which is a point worthy of observation, and implyeth many things.

En cest case l'entrie le disseisee est tolle.

If a disseisor make a gift in taile, and the donee hath issue and dieth seised, now is the entrie of the disseisee taken away; but if the issue die without issue, so as the estate taile which descended is spent, the entrie of the disseisee is revived, and he may enter upon him in the reversion or remainder.

So if there be grandfather, father and son, and the son disseiseth one, and infeofeth the grandfather who dieth seised, and the land descendeth to the father, now is the entrie of the disseisee taken away; but if the father dieth seised, and the land descendeth to the sonne, now is the entrie of the disseisee revived, and he may enter upon the son, who shall take no advantage of the discent, because he did the wrong unto the disseisee. But in the case above-said some have said, that where after such discent to the father, he made a lease to the son for terme of another man's life upon whom the disseisee entred, that the son brought an assise and recovered; and the reason that hath beene yeilded is, for that the son had not the fee simple which he gained by disseisin, but is a purchaser of the free-hold only from the father, and the discent remaine not purged. Contrarie it were, as it is there said, if the son were heire to the discent. But the booke cited there in Fitzherb. tit. title placit. 6. doth not warrant that case, and I hold the law to be contrarie, viz. that the disseisee in that case shall enter upon the disseisor, aswell as if the father had conveyed the whole fee simple to the son, for in that case also the discent to the father is not purged. If a disseisor make a lease to an infant for life, and he is disseised, and a discent cast, the infant enters, the entrie of the disseisee is lawfull upon him. More shall be said of the like matter in this chapter hereafter in his proper place, Sec. 393. 395.

Briefe d'entrie sur disseisin, Breve de ingressu super disseisinam.

This writ lieth only upon a disseisin made to the demandant or to some of his ancestors, and of this writ there be foure kindes. The first is a writ that lieth for the disseisee against the disseisor upon a disseisin done by himselfe, and this is called a writ of entrie in the nature of an assise. The second is a writ of entrie sur disseisin en le per, whereof Littleton here speaketh, for the heire by discent is in the per by his ancestor: so it is if the disseisor make a feoffment in fee, a gift in taile, or a lease for life, for they are in the per by the disseisor. (*) The third is a writ of entrie sur disseisin en le per & cui; as where A being the feoffee of D. the disseisor maketh a feoffment over to B. there the disseisee shall have a writ of entrie sur disseisin of lands, &c. in which B. had no entrie but by A. to whom D. demised the same, who unjustly and without judgement disseised the demandant. These are called gradus, degrees, which are to be observed, or else the writ is abatable; for sicut natura non facit factum, ita nec lex.

The fourth is a writ of entrie sur disseisin in le post, which lieth when after a disseisin the land is removed from hand to hand beyond the degrees; and it is called in le post, because the words of the writ be, post disseisinam quam D. injuste, &c. fecit, &c. The formes of these writs you shall read in the Register and F. N. B. and therefore it were needlesse to recite them here. So then a degree is of two sorts; either by act in law, whereof Littleton here putteth an example of a discent, or by act of the partie, by lawfull conveyance, as is aforesaid. But it is to be understood, that at the common law, if the lands were conveyed out of the degrees, the demandant was driven to his writ of right, in respect of such long possession in so many men's hands, which the law doth ever respect and favour. And therefore by the statute (a) of Moriebridge, the writ of entrie in le post is given: Provisum est etiam quod si alienationes illarum de quibus breve de ingressu dari consuevit, per tot gradus fiant, per quod breve illud in forma prius usitata fieri non possit habeant conquerentes breve ad recuperandam seisinam suam sine mentione graduum.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

10. H. 7. 24.
(Post. 240.)

11. H. 4. 8. 9. 33. H. 6. 5. b.
per Moyle. 34. H. 6. 11. a. per Curiam. Vide Sect. 395.
(Ant. 206. b.)

13. E. 3. Br. tit. Entrie Cong. 127.
(Post. 241. a. lect. 395.)

(Sect. 408. F. N. B. 192. d.)

19. H. 6. 56. 9. H. 5. 9.

Bracton lib. 5. fol. 210. b. & 3. 8.
Brit. fol. 264. 265. Fleta, lib. 5.
cap. 35. 5. E. 3. 216.
(*) 22. E. 3. 1. b. 7. E. 3. 25.
F. N. B. 192.

34. H. 4. 40.
(6. Co. 9. b.)

[a] Maribr. cap. 29. 24. E. 3.
70.

graduum, ad cuiusque manus per huiusmodi alienationes res illa devenit, per breve originale, & per commune consilium domini regis inde providendum, &c. (1)

Now it is necessarie to be knowne, what doth make a degree. First, no estate gained by wrong doth make a degree, and therefore neither abatement, intrusion, or disseisin upon disseisin, doth make a degree. Neither doth everie change by lawfull title worke a degree, as if a bishop or an abbot, or the like, disseise one and die, where his successor is in by lawfull title; for though the parson be altered, yet the right remaines where it was, viz. in the church, and both of them seised in the same right, viz. in the right of the church, and therefore in that verie case Bracton [b] demands the question, An faciunt gradum de abbate in abbatem sicut de barede in baredem? Et videtur quod non magis quam in computatione descensus, quia et si alternatur persona, non propter hoc alternatur dignitas, sed semper manet. And herewith agreeth [c] Fleta.

Also an estate made to the king doth make no degree, and therefore if a disseisor by deed inrolled convey the land to the king, and the king by his charter granteth it over, the disseisee cannot have a writ of entrie in le per & cui, but in le post, for the king's charter is so high a matter of record, as it maketh no degree.

Also an estate of a tenant by the curtesie, or of the lord by escheat, or of an execution of an use, by the statute of 27 H. 8. or by judgement, or recoverie, or of any others that come in in the Post, worke no degree. [d] But a tenancie in dower by assignement of the heire doth worke a degree, because she is in by her husband; but assignement of dower by a disseisor worketh no degree, but is in the Post, as hereafter shall be said in his proper place.

When the degrees are past, so as a writ of entrie in the Post doth lye, yet by event it may be brought within the degrees againe; as if the disseisor infeoffe A. who infeoffes B. who infeoffes C. or if the disseisor die seised, and the land descend to A. and from him to C. now are the degrees past; and yet if C. infeoffe A. or B. now it is brought within the degrees againe.

If the disseisor make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, tenant for life dieth, he in the remainder is in the Per, because he now claimeth immediately from the disseisor, and both these estates make but one degree. (2)

Note, there bee divers other writs of entrie besides this writ of entrie sur disseisin, whereof Littleton here speaks; as a writ of entrie ad terminum qui preterit, in casu proviso, in consimili casu, ad communem legem, sine assensu capituli, dum fuit infra etatem, dum non fuit compos mentis, cui in vita, sur cui in vita, intrusion, cessavit, and the like; and that which hath bene said of one, may be applied to all.

Sect. 387.

Et nota, que en tiels discents que tollent entries, il convient que home morust seise en son demesne come de fee, ou en son demesne come de fee taile. Car un morant seise pur terme de vie, ne pur terme d'auter vie, ne unquez tollent entre.*

AND note, that in such discents which take away entries, it behoveth that a man die seised in his demesne as of fee, or in his demesne as of feetaile. For adying seised for terme of life, or for terme of another man's life, doth never take away an entry.

So it is if there be tenant for life, the remainder in taile, the remainder in fee, and tenant in taile disseiseth the tenant for life and dieth seised, this shall take away the entrie of the tenant for life.

But if the king's tenant for life be disseised, and the disseisor die seised, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the lessee for life, because the disseisor had but a bare estate of freehold during the life of the lessee, and Littleton saith, that a discent of an estate for terme of another man's life shall not take away an entrie (5).

En son demesne come de fee. If an infant bee disseised, and the disseisor die seised,

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The different degrees of title which a person dispossessing another of his lands acquires in them in the eye of the law (independently of any anterior right), according to the length of time and other circumstances which intervene from the time such dispossession is made, form different degrees of presumption in favour of the title of the dispossessor; and in proportion as that presumption encreases, his title is strengthened; the modes by which the possession may be recovered vary; and more, or rather different proof is required from the person dispossessed, to establish his title to recover. Thus if A. is disseised by B. while the possession continues in B. it is a mere naked possession, unsupported by any right, and A. may restore his possession, and put a total end to the possession of B. by an entry on the lands, without any previous action: if B. dies, the possession descends on the heir by act of law. In this case the heir comes to the land by a lawful title, and acquires in the eye of the law an apparent right of possession; which is so far good against the person disseised, that he has lost his right to recover the possession by entry, and can only recover it by an action at law. The actions used in these cases are called Possessory Actions, and the original writs by which the proceedings upon them are instituted, are called Writs of Entry. But if A. permits the possession to be with-held from him beyond a certain period of time without claiming it, or suffers judgement in a possessory action to be given against him by default, or upon the merits; or if, being tenant in tail, he makes a discontinuance; in all these cases, B.'s title in the eye of the law is strengthened, and A. can no longer recover by a possessory action, and his only remedy then is by an action on the right. These last actions are called Droituel Actions, in contradistinction to Possessory Actions. They are the ultimate resource of the person disseised; so that if he fails to bring his writ of right within the time limited for the bringing of such writs, he is remediless, and the title of the dispossessor is complete. The original writs by which droituel actions are instituted are called Writs of Right. The dilatoriness and niceties in these processes, introduced the Writ of Affize. The invention of this proceeding is attributed to Glanville, chief justice to Henry II. (See Mr. Reeves's History of the English Law, Part I. ch. 3.) It was found so convenient a remedy, that persons, to avail themselves of it, frequently supposed or admitted themselves to be disseised by acts which did not in strictness amount to a disseisin. This disseisin, being such only by the will of the party, is called a disseisin by election, in opposition to an actual disseisin: it is only a disseisin as between the disseisor and the disseisee, the disseisee still continuing the freeholder as to all persons but the disseisor. The old books, particularly the Reports of Affize, when they mention disseisins, generally relate to those cases where the owner admits himself disseised (See 1. Burr. 111. and see Bract lib. 4. cap. 3.). As the processes upon writs of entry were superseded by the affize, so the affize and all other real actions have been since superseded by the modern process of ejectment. This was introduced as a mode of trying titles to lands in the reign of Henry VII. From the ease and expedition with which the proceedings in it are conducted, it is now become the general remedy in these cases. Booth, who wrote about the end of the last century, mentions real actions as then worn out of use. It is rather singular that this should be the case, as many cases must frequently have occurred in which a writ of ejectment was not a sufficient remedy. Within these few years past some attempts have been made to revive real actions: the most remarkable of these are the case of Tiffen v. Clarke, reported in 3. Will. 419. 541. and that of Carlos and Shuttlewood v. Lord Dorner. The writ of summons in this last case is dated the 1st day of December, 1775. The summons to the four knights to proceed to the election of the grand affize, is dated the 22d day of May, 1780. To this summons the sheriff made his return; and there the matter rested. The last instance in which a real action was used, is the case of Sidney v. Perry. All these were actions on the right. That part of Sir William Blackstone's Commentary which treats upon real actions, is not the least valuable part of that excellent work.

(2) Booth, in his Real Actions 171, makes the first degree to consist in the original wrong; but Sir Henry Finch 262, and Mr. Justice Blackstone, vol. 3. ch. 10. agree with Sir Edward Coke. Abatement, disseisin, escheat, recovery, election, succession, dower, judgement, and a third, and every subsequent feoffment, are in the Post. Finch ibid.

(3) See note 4, page 241. a.

(4) But it will not take away the entry of a stranger; for as to him it is but the estate for life still, a fictitious not true descendible estate. Lord Nott. MS.

(5) This is by reason of the king's prerogative, that he cannot be disseised. See Hob. 322.

Bracton, ubi supra. Britton, ubi supra. Fleta, ubi supra. 4. E. 2. brev. 790. 21. H. 6. 8.

(a. Inft. 155. Stat. Marl. 30. Post. Sec. 413.)

[b] Bracton lib. 4. fol. 321.

5. E. 3. 38. 5. E. 2. entrie 66.

11. H. 4. 83.

[c] Fleta, lib. 5. cap. 34. 3. H. 3.

entrie 11. 22. E. 3. 7.

F. N. B. 191. k.

(Post. 318. a.)

5. E. 2. entrie 66. 7. E. 3. 360.

[d] 36. H. 6. dower 30.

44. E. 3. 4. 5. 39. E. 3. 25.

5. H. 7. 6. 3. H. 6. 38.

50. E. 3. 27.

(F. N. B. 192. a.)

(8. Rep. 86.)

Dier 8. El. 2. 253. 7. H. 4. 46.

8. H. 4. 15.

17. E. 3. 48. 11. H. 4. 42.

(1. Rep. 140. b.)

[d] Pasch. 16. Eliz. in communi banco.

(Ant. 41. b.)

3. E. 3. tit. Entr. Cong.

58. F. N. B. 145. m.

9. H. 7. 25. a.

9. H. 7. 25.

(Hob. 323.)

(Post. 276. a.)

(Flo. 546. a.)

Temps E. 1. Reliefe 12. Dier 14.
Eliz. 308. 40 E. 3. 9. b.

(*) 24. E. 3. 47.
(8. Rep. 99.—)

seised, and after the infant commeth to full age, and the heire of the disseisor die before he entreth, albeit he died not seised of an actuall seisin (1), but of a seisin in law, yet that dying seised shall take away the entrie of the disseisee. (*) And yet in pleading the second heire shall (as hath beene said) make himsele heire to the disseisor, and that land shall not be recovered in value for the warrantie made of other lands by the first heire; but though the first heire had but a seisin in law, yet he is within the words of Littleton, for he was seised and died seised in his demesne as of fee.

Sect. 388.

AND therefore if a disseisor make a lease for yeares, and die seised of the reversion, this discent shall take away the entrie of the disseisee, because hee died seised of the fee and franktenement. Like law it is if the land be extended upon a statute, judgement, or recognizance, and so it is in case of a remainder.

But if he had made a lease for life, and die seised of the reversion, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the disseisee, for that though he had the fee, yet he had not the franktenement. (2)

So it is of a tenant in taile, mutatis mutandis; and note, the law doth ever give great respect to the estate of freehold, though it be but for terme of life.

If a disseisor make a lease for terme of his own life, and dieth, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the disseisee; for though the fee and franktenement discent to the heire of the disseisor, yet the disseisor died not seised of the fee and franktenement: and Littleton saith, that unlesse he hath the fee and franktenement at the time of his decease, such discent shall not take away the entrie. (3)

ITEM, un discent de reversion, ou de remainder, ne unques tollent entrie*. Issint que en tiels cas les que tollent entries per force de discents, il covient que celuy que morust seise ad fee et franktenement al temps de son morant †, ou fee taile et franktenement al temps de son morant, ou auterment tiel discent ne tolle entre.

ALSO, a discent of a reversion, or of a remainder, doth not take away an entrie. So as in those cases which take away entries by force of discents, it behoveth that hee dieth seised of fee and freehold at the time of his decease, or of fee taile and freehold at the time of his death, or otherwise such discent doth not take away an entrie.

Vide Sect. 302. 393.

Sect. 389.

BY this it appeareth, that a discent in the collateral line doth take away an entrie, as well as in the lineall.

Moront seises, &c. Here (&c.) implieth fee simple, or fee taile.

ITEM, come est dit de discents que descendent al issue de ceux que moront seises, &c. mesme la ley est lou ils n'ont ascun issue, mes les tenements descendent al frere, soer, uncle, ou auter cousin de celuy que morust seise ‡.

ALSO, as it is said of discents which discent to the issue of them which die seised, &c. the same law is where they have no issue, but the lands discent to the brother, sister, uncle, or other cousin of him which dieth seised.

Sect.

* &c. added in L. M. and Roh.
‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† ou fee taile et franktenement al temps de son morant, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) See 1. Rep. 140. temp. Edw. The eldest son before entry died without issue, the youngest will pay two reliefs, for the death of his father and the death of his brother; for they both were tenants to the lord. So note, the death of a person seised of a seisin in law, is a discent to entitle the lord to relief.—By Thorp and Wilby, the grandfather leased for life and died. The father makes a feoffment of Black Acre with warranty, the son shall not render in value the term of which the reversion descends upon him, because the father had only a seisin in law. 24. E. 3. 47. L. Nott. MS.

(2) The necessity that there should be a tenant to do the feudal duties, and the notoriety of title which the disseisor acquired by being permitted to continue during his life in the peaceable possession of the fee, and to die seised of it, are the grounds upon which the law is induced to defend the possession of the heir of the disseisor from the entry of the disseisee, and to leave the disseisee to his remedy by action. But when the disseisor parts with the freehold, there is no vacancy in the possession; and the possession of the disseisor, and consequently the notoriety of it, is lost. Thus the principles which apply to the discent of an estate in possession, do not apply to the discent of an estate in remainder or reversion expectant on an estate of freehold. But they apply when the particular estate is only for years; a tenant for years being considered merely as the bailiff of the freeholder, and to hold the possession for him.

(3) But suppose the disseisor in this case had conveyed the estate to the use of himself for life, remainder to the use of his first and other sons in tail, with the immediate reversion or remainder to himself in fee, and that he died without issue living at the time of his decease; it seems to be a question, whether he is to be considered as seised in fee at the time of his decease, so as to entitle his wife to dower. See Cordall's case, Cro. El. 315. Hooker v. Hooker, Cas. temp. Hardw. 13. Duncomb v. Duncomb, 3. Lev. 447. In the latter case, between the estate of the tenant for life, and the limitation to his first and other sons, there was interposed an estate to trustees during the life of the tenant for life, for preserving the remainder to the sons. This was held to be a vested estate, and that it prevented the wife from dower; and lord Hardwicke in Hooker v. Hooker admitted this reasoning. The passage in the text and the three cases cited above were mentioned, and great stress laid upon them, in the case between the heir and next of kin of the late lord Thomond. In that case, lord Thomond being tenant for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, with the immediate reversion expectant thereupon to himself in fee, paid off a sum of 18,000l. charged upon the estate under the trusts of a term of years; and afterwards died intestate, and without issue. Now it is a rule in equity, that when a person, having a partial estate in land, is entitled to a sum of money charged upon it, his right to the money does not merge in the land, but he may keep it as a subsisting charge on the estate; and in some cases, if he makes no particular disposition of it in his life-time, it goes upon his decease to his personal representative. Upon this ground, it was contended that lord Egremont, upon whom the estate descended at lord Thomond's decease as his heir at law, took the estate charged with the 18,000l. for the benefit of the intestate's representatives. To this it was answered, that tho' lord Thomond was, at the time of his decease, seised of an estate for life, with the immediate reversion in fee; yet as he had no children living at the time of his decease, and his heir at law immediately upon his decease took the lands in fee simple in possession by descent, he was to be considered as seised of an estate in fee simple in possession, and consequently that the 18,000l. was to be considered as merged in the inheritance. But lord chancellor Bathurst, before whom the cause was heard, was of opinion, that lord Thomond was to be considered as seised only for life, and that of course his lordship's personal representatives were entitled to the 18,000l.

Sect. 390.

ITEM, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant soit disseise, et le disseisor aliena a un autre en fee, et l'alienee devie sans heire, et le seignior enter come en son escheat: en cest case le disseisee peut enter sur le seignior, pur ceo que le seignior ne vient a la terre per descent, mes per voy d'escheat.

heire of the disseisor dieth without heire, the disseisee cannot enter upon the lord by escheat. So as there is a diversitie as touching the descent, when after a descent call, the issue in taile dieth without issue, and when after a descent call, the heire in fee simple dieth without heire; for he in the reversion, or remainder, upon a state taile claimeth in above the state taile, but the lord by escheat claimeth in under the heire in fee simple.

ALSO, if there bee lord and tenant, and the tenant be disseised, and the disseisor alien to another in fee, and the alienee die without issue, and the lord enter as in his escheat: in this case the disseisee may enter upon the lord, because the lord commeth not to the land by descent, but by way of escheat (1).

LE disseisee peut enter sur le seignior, &c.

For albeit the alienee of the disseisor die seised, and the lord by escheat commeth to the land by act in law, yet because the land descendeth not to him, the entrie of the disseisee in respect of the escheat shall not be taken away. For a dying seised, and a descent, and not a dying seised and an escheat, doth take away the entrie: for (as hath beene said) the descent is the worthier title. But in that case, if the lord by escheat die seised, and the land descend to his heire, that descent shall take away the entrie of the disseisee. So it is if the disseisor die seised, and the

(F. N. B. 144. a.)

37 H. 6. 1. 9. II. 7. 24. b. (Post. 364. b.) (Ant. 238. b.)

Sect. 391.

ITEM, si home seise de certaine terre en fee, ou en fee taile, sur condition de render certaine rent, ou sur autre condition, coment que tiel tenant seise en fee, ou en fee taile, morust seise, uncore si le condition soit enfreint en leur vies, ou apres leur decease, ceo ne tollera pas l'entrie del feoffor, ou del donor, ou de leur heires, pur ceo que le tenancie est charge

ALSO, if a man be seised of certain land in fee, or in fee taile, upon condition to render certain rent, or upon other condition, albeit such tenant seised in fee, or in fee taile, dieth seised, yet if the condition bee broken in their lives, or after their decease, this shall not take away the entrie of the feoffor or donor, or of their heires, for that the tenancie is char-

UPON these two sections is to bee observed a diversitie betweene a right, for the which the law giveth a remedie by action, and a title, for the which the law giveth no remedie by action, but by entrie only (2). For example, the feoffee upon condition in this case hath a right to the land, and therefore his entrie may be taken away, because hee may recover his right by action; but the feoffor or donor that hath but a condition, his title of entrie cannot be taken away by any descent, because he hath no remedie by action to recover the land, and therefore if a descent should take away his entrie, it should barre him for ever. And the law is all one whether the descent were before the condition broken, or after.

33. Aff. 11. 24. 21. H. 6. 17.

33. Aff. 11. 24. (Ant. 205.)

(1) When the lord comes to the land by escheat, the law only casts the freehold upon him for want of a tenant. The disseisee, notwithstanding the disseisin, continues the rightful tenant; and as, by his entry, he fills the possession, the lord's title, which was only good while a tenant was wanting, must necessarily be at an end.

(2) Though by the disseisin a tortious possession is acquired, it is so in the present case, only as between the disseisor and the disseisee, and does not affect the estate of the feoffor on condition; the condition being so inseparably annexed and inherent to the land, as to bind it, in whose hands soever it comes. See Ow. 141.

Brook tit. Mortmaine 6.
47. E. 3. 11. 21. E. 3. 17.

40. Aff. 13.

Also hee that hath a title to enter upon a mortmaine, shall not be barred by a discent, because then he should bee without all remedie. And so it is in case where a woman hath a title to enter causâ matrimonii prælocuti, no discent shall take away her entrie, because shee hath but a title, and no remedie by action. (1) ove le condition, et l'estate del tenant est conditionall, en queconque mains que le tenancie vient, &c.

ged with the condition, and the state of the tenant is conditionall, in whose hands soever that the tenancie commeth, &c.

Seet. 392.

IF a man be seised of lands in fee, and by his last will in writing deviseth the same to another in fee, and dieth, after whose decease the freehold in law is cast upon the devisee, and the heire, before any entrie made by the devisee, entreth, and dieth seised, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the devisee; for if the discent, which is an act in law, should take away his entrie, the law should barre him of his right, and leave him utterly without remedie. (2) And so it is of him that entreth for consent to a ravishment; and so it was resolved in the case of Martin Trotte of London, [n] Paschæ 32. El. in Com. Banco; and accordingly was the opinion of the court of common pleas, [e] Pasch. 1. Jac. Reg. To this may be added as a like case, the king's patentee before he enter, &c. Another reason wherefore a discent shall not take away the entrie of him that hath a title to enter by force of a condition, &c. is, for that the condition remaines in the same essence that it was in at the time of the creation of it, and cannot be divested or put out of possession, as lands and tenements may (3).

*ITEM, si tiel tenant sur condition soit disseise, et le disseisor devie ent seise, et la terre descendist al heire le disseisor, ore le entrie le tenant sur condition, que fust disseise, est toll. Mes uncore si le condition soit enfreint , donque poit le feoffor ou le donor que fierent estate sur condition, ou leur heirs, enter, causâ quâ supra.

ALSO, if such tenant upon condition be disseised, and the disseisor die thereof seised, and the land descend to the heire of the disseisor, now the entrie of the tenant upon condition, who was disseised, is taken away. Yet if the condition be broken, the feoffor or the donor which made the estate upon condition, or their heires, may enter, causâ quâ supra.

[n] Pasch. 32. Eliz. in Communi Banco. 7. R. 2. Scir. Fac. 3. 41. E. 3. 14. per Finchden.

[e] Pasch. 1. Jac. Regis in Communi Banco.

Seet. 393.

DEVIE seise, &c. viz. in fee simple or in fee tayle.

Et son heire enter, &c. So as he hath an actuall fee simple.

De la 3. part de les tenements, &c. id est, in severaltie.

By this section it appeareth, that an entrie being taken away by the discent, is revived by the endowment, albeit the tenant in dower shall have it but for her life. And the cause is, for that although the heire entred, yet

ITEM, si un disseisor devie seise, &c. et son heire enter, &c. lequel endowa la feme le disseisor de la tierce part de les tenements, &c. en cest cas quant a cest tierce part que est assigne a la feme en dower, maintenant apres ceo que la feme enter, et ad le

ALSO, if a disseisor die seised, &c. and his heire enter, &c. who endoweth the wife of the disseisor of the third part of the land, &c. in this case as to this part which is assigned to the wife in dower, presently after the wife entreth, and hath the possession of the same third pos-

* &c. added in L. and M. but not in Roh.

(1) The assertion, that a woman in this case has no remedy by action, may, perhaps, be disputed, as the writ causâ matrimonii prælocuti extends to all the degrees. See the writ in the Register. Booth's Real Actions 197. and Fitz. Nat. Br. 205.

(2) Acc. the case of Mattheson v. Trot, Owen 141. 1. Leo. 209. But the reason given in the Commentary, that the devisee, in this case, has no remedy by action, is not well founded, if what Sir Edward Coke observes in page 111 a. be true, that the devisee may either enter, or have his writ ex gravi querelâ. Upon this head, the judges Anderson and Walmesley seem to differ on the case above cited. Whatever may be the case with respect to a descent, a fine levied by the heir at law, is a bar to a devisee after five years non-claim. Hulm v. Heylock, Cro. Car. 200. It is also a bar to a title of entry for a condition broken, or a right or title of entry upon any other account. Mayor of London v. Alsford, Cro. Car. 575. 1. Jones 452. See Mr. Cruise's Essay on Fines, 146. 147.

(3) Hamsworth v. Pretty, Cro. Eliz. 919. Thomas devised to Richard, his eldest son, in fee, upon condition that he should pay to his other children the sums appointed to them according to the intent of his will; and on refusal, that his younger sons and daughters should have it to them and their heirs. Thomas refused payment, and died; and William, his son, entered, and the younger sons and daughters entered upon him: it was contended, that the descent upon William took away the entry of the younger sons and daughters; but the court held the contrary. For it was not as a descent by a stranger after a devise, before the entry of the devisee, which, perhaps, might take away their entry, because it was not then an immediate devise; but it was quasi a devise upon a limitation, or upon a condition broken, which no descent should take away or prejudice.

possession de mesme la tierce part, le disseisee poit loyalment enter sur la possession le feme en mesme la tierce part. Et la cause est, pur ceo que quant la feme ad son dower, el sera adjudge eins immediate per son baron, et nemy per l'heire; et issint quant a le franktenement de mesme la tierce part, le discent est defeate. Et issint poies veir, que devant le endowment le disseisee ne poit enter en aucun part, &c. et apres le dowment il poit enter † sur la feme, &c. mes uncore il ne poit enter sur les auters deux parts que l'heire le disseisor ad per le discent ‡.*

part, the disseisee may lawfully enter upon the possession of the wife into the same third part. And the reason is, for that when the wife hath her dower, she shall be adjudged in immediately by her husband, & not by the heire (1); and so as to the freehold of the same third part, the discent is defeated. And so you may see, that before the endowment the disseisee could not enter into any part, &c. and after the endowment he may enter upon the wife, &c. but yet hee cannot enter upon the other two parts which the heire of the disseisor hath by the discent (2).

when the wife is endowed she shall not be in by the heire, [a] but immediately by her husband being the disseisor, who is in for her life by a title paramount the dying seised and discent, and therefore in judgement of law, the discent as to the freehold, and the possession which the heire had is taken away by the endowment; for that the law adjudgeth no meane seisin between the husband and the wife.

[1] 8. E. 2. Entric 75. 19. E. 2. Dower 171. 5. E. 2. Entric 66. 24. E. 3. 34. 40. 38. Aff. Pl. 26.

43. E. 3. 32. 45. E. 3. 9. b. 11. H. 4. 11. 7. H. 5. 3. 10. E. 3. 27. 28. 36. H. 6. Dower 30.

31. E. 1. Mesne 55. (F. N. B. 136.)

If there bee lord, mesne and tenant, the mesne doth grant to the tenant to acquite him against the lord and his heires, the lord dies, his wife hath the seigniorie assigned to her for her dower, and distraines the tenant; albeit the grant was to acquite him against the lord and his heires only, yet because shee continued the estate of her husband, and the reversion remained in the heire, this grant of acquitall did extend to the wife, which is a notable case.

If after the dying seised of the disseisor, the disseisee abate, against whom the wife of the disseisor recover by confession in a writ of dower, in that case, though the discent bee avoided as Littleton here saith, yet the disseisee shall not enter upon the tenant in dower, because the recoverie was against himselfe; but if he had assigned dower to her in pais, some say hee should enter upon her (3).

A man makes a gift in taile reserving twentie shillings rent, and dies, the donee takes wife, and dieth without issue, the heire of the donor entreth and endoweth the wife, shee is so in of the estate of her husband, that albeit the estate taile be spent, and the rent reserved thereupon determined, yet after she be endowed, she shall be attendant to the heire in respect of the said rent. And so it is of lord and tenant, the wife that is endowed shall be attendant for the due services; but if any services be encroached, albeit that encroachment shall binde the heire, yet the wife shall be contributorie but for the services of right due (4).

10. E. 3. 26. (7. Rep. 9. a.)

Issint poies veir, que devant le dowment le disseisee ne poit enter, et apres l'endowment il poit enter, &c. The like hath beene said before in this chapter, Sec. 386. where the entrie of the disseisee may be taken away for a time, and by matter ex post facto revived againe.

Nota, albeit the disseisor after a discent taketh to him but an estate for life, yet when the disseisee doth enter upon him, he shall thereby devest the reversion, for the estate of freehold is that whereupon a præcipe doth lye, and therefore the entrie of the disseisee is as available in law, as if he had recovered it in a præcipe. And so it is if a disseisor make a lease for life, and grant the reversion to the king, the entrie of the disseisee upon the tenant for life shall devest the reversion out of the king in the same manner as if the disseisee had recovered the lands against the tenant for life in a præcipe.

Vide Sec. 372-388. 25. E. 3. 48. Pl. Com. 553. (Post. 354. b. Dyer 31. b.) (1 Roll. Abr. 638. Ant. 55. b.)

Sect.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† sur la feme, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The dowress holds of the heire; but by the institution of the law, she is in of the estate of her husband; so that after the heire's assignment, she holds by an infeudation from the immediate death of her husband. Hence it is that dower defeats discent, because the lands cannot be said to descend as demesne which are in tenure; and the assignment of dower being in the nature of infeudation, and taking place immediately from the death of the husband, there are only two-thirds which descended as demesne. Gilb. on Dower 395.—See ant. 31. b.

(2) The doctrine contained in this section seems to apply to the cases of a recovery suffered by the heire, either before or after the assignment of dower.

(3) So note, though the disseisee, being an abator, did an act to which he was compellable, yet it is not as good as if he had been actually compelled. Supra, 35. Lord Nott. MS.

(4) Sir Edward Coke, in this passage, and in a former part of his Commentary, puts several cases on the continuance of the wife's dower after the fee charged with it is determined. Perhaps the following distinctions and observations will assist in clearing up the complex and abstruse points of learning in which this question is involved. I. In those cases where the fee is evicted by title paramount, the dower and courtsey necessarily cease upon the eviction. Such is the case put by Littleton in the section before us. II. When the donor enters for breach of condition; as his entry absolutely defeats the estate of the tenant on condition, so it defeats his wife's right of dower, and the husband's right of courtsey, and all other charges brought upon the estate, either by the donee's own act, or by act of law. See Note 2, fo. 202. b. III. If a person seised in fee tail, or any other determinable fee, conveys in fee, the wife's right of dower, and the husband's courtsey, can only be commensurate with the estate of the grantor, and must necessarily cease whenever that estate ceases. See 10 Rep. 97. b. 98. a. IV. As to estates in fee simple conditional at the common law, and estates tail under the statute de donis;—the wife was entitled to her dower, and the husband to his courtsey, out of them, after the failure of the issues in tail. But it may be observed, that though it now is difficult to avoid considering estates in fee simple conditional in any other light than as estates originally granted to the donee, and to the heirs general, or to some particular heirs of his body; and the estate of the donor, as that of a reversioner expectant on the failure of these heirs; yet this restriction to particular heirs, and exclusion of others, is understood to be produced, not by any limitation of persons introduced into the grant, but by a condition supposed to be annexed to it, that if there were no such heirs, or being such, if they afterwards failed, and the donee did not alien the estate, it should be lawful for the donor and his heirs to enter. — This entry, therefore, was not an entry upon the natural expiration of a previous estate, but for a condition broken; in which case, as in all others where entry is made for breach of a condition, the right of the wife to her dower, and the husband to his courtsey, if the general rule were adhered to, would be defeated. But for reasons now rather to be guessed than demonstrated, this case was made an exception from the general rule. So with respect to the right of the wife of tenant in tail to her dower, and the husband to his courtsey, after the failure of the issues in tail; the statute de donis introduced no new estate, but only preserved estates limited as conditional fees to the issues inheritable under them, by preventing the tenants of such conditional fees from alienating or disposing of them; and as they preserved the estates, so they preserved the incidents belonging to them, and, among others, the right of the wife to her dower, and the husband to his courtsey. V. If a person makes a gift in tail, reserving rent; after failure of the issues in tail, the rent will not be continued, either for the dower of the wife, or the courtsey of the husband. Plow. Com. 155. VI. As to limited fees;—by which, in this place, are to be understood those fees which are qualified, not because the estate of the grantor is limited — (such

Sect. 394.

EN cest case jeo poy enter sur le possession l'issue, &c.

Vide 9. H. 7. 24. and 37. H. 6. 1.

See before the chapter of Homage.

(3. Rep. 34. 2.)

For here was but a discent of a reversion at the time of the dying seised, for the estate of the tenant by the courtsey had commencement by the having of issue, and is consummate by the death of the wife, so as the fee & franktenement did not after the decease of the wife descend to the heire, and albeit the tenant by the courtsey dieth afterwards, and that the franktenement is cast upon the heire, so as now he hath the fee and franktenement by discent, yet because the heire came not to the fee and franktenement at once, immediately after the decease of the wife, such a mediate discent shall not take away the entrie of the disseisee. On the other side, an immediate discent may take away an entrie for a time, and mediate may be avoided by matter ex post facto, as hath beene said. But if a dying seised taketh not away the entrie of him that right hath at the time of the discent, it shall not by any matter ex post facto take away his entrie.

If a disseisor die without heire, his wife privement enseint with an issue, and after the issue is borne, who entreteth into the land, he hath the land by discent, and yet thereby the entrie of the disseisee shall not be taken away, because, as Littleton here saith, the issue cometh not to the lands immediately by discent, after the decease of the father.

And so it is if a disseisor make a gift in taile, the remainder in fee, and the donee dieth without issue, leaving his wife privement enseint with a sonne, and he in the remainder enters, and after the sonne is borne, who entreteth into the land, this discent shall not take away the entrie of the disseisee, causa qua supra.

Contrarium tenetur, &c. This is an addition, and therefore to be passed over. And at this day, this case of Littleton is holden for cleere law.

*ITEM, si un feme soit seisee de terre en fee, dont jeo aye droit et tite d'entre, si la feme prent baron, et ont issue enter eux, et puis la feme devie seisee, et apres le baron devie, et l'issue enter, &c. en cest case jeo * poy enter sur le possession l'issue, pur ceo que l'issue ne vient a les tenements immediate per discent apres la mort sa mere, &c. † eins per le mort del pier. (1)*

Contrarium tenetur P. 9. Hen. 7. per tout le court, & M. 37. H. 6.

Contrarium tenetur P. 9. H. 7. per tout le court, & M. 37. H. 6.

Sect. 395.

ITEM, si un disseisor enseoffe son pier en fee, et le pier mort de tiel estate seisee, per que les tenements descendont a le disseisor, † come s'its et heire, &c. en cest case le disseisee bien poit enter sur le disseisor, nient obstant le discent,

ALSO, if a disseisor enseoffe his father in fee, and the father die seised of such estate, by which the land descend to the disseisor, as sonne and heire, &c. in this case the disseisee may well enter upon the disseisor, notwithstanding the discent,

* poy not in L. and M. and Roh.
† ent added in L. and M.

† eins per le mort del pier, and the note that follows, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Conformably to this it was held by lord Holt in the case of Carter v. Tash, 1. Salk. 241. that a discent which tolls entry ought to be an immediate discent; and therefore if a feme disseisores take husband, and hath issue and dies, and after the husband dies, the discent of the issue does not take away entry, because the interposition of tenant by the courtsey does impede it, and that coverture to avoid a discent ought to be continual from the time of the disseisin to the discent; for if a feme be sole at the time of the disseisin, or of the discent, or any time intermediate, her entry is not prevented, because she had an opportunity to enter and prevent the discent: as if a feme covert is a disseisee, and after her husband dies she takes a second husband, and then the discent happens, this discent shall take away the entry of the feme: and upon this last point the plaintiff in that case was nonsuited.

as those which are classed under the third distinction)—but those which being created by a person seised in fee simple, are by the original grant by which they are created, only to continue till a certain event; as a grant to A. and his heirs, tenants of the manor of Dale, or to A. and his heirs, while there shall be heirs of the body of B.—or those fees which are originally devised or limited in words importing a fee simple or fee tail absolute and unconditional, but which, by subsequent words, are made determinable upon some particular event (see Note 1. 203.):—as to fees of this description, it should seem by the case cited in the Note to F. N. B. 149. G. and the cases of Flavell v. Ventrice, Roll. Abr. 676. and Sammes v. Payne, 1. Leo. 167. 1. And. 184. 8. Rep. 34. Gouldf. 81. that where the fee, in its original creation, is only to continue to a certain period, the wife is to hold her dower, and the husband his courtsey, after the expiration of the period to which the fee charged with the dower or courtsey is to continue; but that where the fee is originally devised in words importing a fee simple, or fee tail absolute and unconditional, but by subsequent words is made determinable upon some particular event; there, if that particular event happens, the wife's dower and the husband's courtsey cease with the estate to which it is annexed. Such appears to be the distinction established by the foregoing cases. But a different doctrine as to cases of the latter description, seems to have been laid down in the case of Buckworth v. Thirkell, determined in last Trinity term in the court of king's bench. There Joseph Sutton the testator devised his estates to trustees upon trust to pay the rents and profits of them for the maintenance and education of Mary Barrs, till she arrived at twenty-one, or was married: "And from and after the said Mary Barrs should have attained her age of twenty-one years, or should be married, he gave and devised all the said lands and premises to the said Mary Barrs, her heirs and assigns for ever; but in case the said Mary Barrs should happen to die before she arrived at the age of twenty-one years, and without having issue of her body lawfully begotten; then, from and after the decease of the said Mary Barrs without issue, as aforesaid, he gave and devised all his said estates unto his grandson Walter for life," with several remainders over. Mary Barrs married Solomon Hanford, and had issue a son, who died in her life; and afterwards Mary Barrs died under twenty-one. In this case, the court were unanimously of opinion, that on the decease of Mary Barrs, her husband became intitled by the courtsey to the estates for his life, and that, subject thereto, the devisees over became entitled to them by way of executory devise. By a manuscript report of this case, the ground upon which the court appears to have formed their opinion on it, is,

*pur. ceo que quant al disseisin, le disseisor ferra adjudge eins for- que come disseisor, nient obstant le discent, * quia particeps criminis.*

discent, for that as to the disseisin, the disseisor shall be adjudged in but as a disseisor, notwithstanding the discent, quia particeps criminis. (1)

(Ant. 238. b.)

OF this sufficient hath been said before in this chapter, Sect. 386. And regularly it is true, that albeit a discent be cast, and the entrie of the disseisee taken away, yet if the disseisor commeth to the land againe, either by discent or purchase, of any estate or freehold, which is implied in the (&c.) the disseisee may enter upon him, or have his assise against him, as if no discent or meane conveyance had beene, quia particeps criminis.

15. E. 4. 23. a. 11. E. 4. 4.
18. E. 4. 25. a. 33. H. 6. 5. b.
34. H. 6. 11. 12. H. 8. 9.
24. H. 8. 3. 9. 18. H. 8. 5.
5. H. 7. 29. Aff. 54. 39. E. 3.
25. 26.
(Poll. Sect. 409.)

Sect. 396.

ITEM, si home seise de certaine terre en fee ad issue deux firs, et morust seise, et le puisne firs entra per abatement en la terre, quel ad issue, et de ceo morust seise, et les tenements descendont al issue, et l'issue entra en la terre: en cest case le firs eigne, ou son heire, poit enter per la ley sur l'issue del firs puisne, nient contristeant le discent, pur ceo que quant le firs puisne abatist en la terre apres le mort son pier devant aucun entrie per le firs eigne † fait, la ley intendra que il entra en claymant come heyre a son pier. Et pur ceo que l'eigne firs clayma per mesme le title, cestascavoir, come heyre a son pier, il et ses heires poient enter sur l'issue de puisne ‡ firs, nient obstant le discent, &c. pur ceo que ils clay-

ALSO, if a man seised of certaine land in fee have issue two sons, and die seised, and the younger sonne enter by abatement into the land, and hath issue, and dieth seised thereof, and the land descend to his issue, and the issue enters into the land: in this case the eldest sonne, or his heire, may enter by the law upon the issue of the younger son, notwithstanding the discent, becaule that when the younger son abated into the land after the death of his father before any entrie made by the eldest sonne, the law intend that hee entred claiming as heire to his father. And for that the eldest sonne claimes by the same title, that is to say, as heire to his father, hee and his heires may enter upon the issue of the younger son, notwithstanding the dis-

EN cest case le firs eigne, &c. poit enter sur l'issue del firs puisne, &c.

And the reason hereof is, for that the law intendeth the youngest sonne entred claiming the land as heire to his father, and because the eldest sonne claimeth also by the same title, viz. as heire to his father, therefore hee and his heires may enter upon the second sonne and his heires, in respect of the privitie of the blood betwene them, and of the same claime by one title, albeit the youngest son gained a fee simple by his entrie: for Littleton here calleth it an abatement, which proveth the gaining of a fee simple.

(Plow. 306. a.)

And it is to be observed, that assisa mortis antecessoris non tenet inter conjunctas personas sicut fratres & sorores, &c. for these are privie in blood, but it lyeth against strangers, and then damages are to be recovered against a stranger, but not against his brother.

Lands were given to the husband and wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, they had issue a daughter, the wife died, the husband had issue by another wife foure sons and died, the eldest sonne abated

Bract. lib. 4. fol. 261. 282. 283.
Brinton, fol. 183. 181. Fleta,
lib. 5. cap. 1. 2, &c. 20. E. 3.
Darr. present 13. 12. H. 3.
Mord. pl. ultim. 13. E. 1.
Mord. 47. 29. Aff. 11.
F. N. B. 196. b.
(8. Rep. 42.)
(Poll. 271. a.)

Pasch. 3. E. 3. Coram Rege
Kanc. in Theaur.

* &c. added: quia particeps criminis, not in L. and M.

† fait not in L. and M.

‡ firs—frere, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) For when the disseisor enfeoffs the father, it is presumed to be done in order afterwards to come in by discent, and the act of law shall not give function to the wrong of the party; nor shall any man by his own wrong, however cunningly contrived, give to himself a right; for when the heir by the discent gains a jus possessionis, he is supposed innocent of the wrong of his ancestor, but here he is partner of his guilt. See Gilb. Ten. 27. 28.

is, an analogy they supposed it to bear to the case of estates in fee simple conditional, and estates tail; in both of which dower and courtesy continue after failure of the issues; and in both of which the wife's being seised of a fee, to which the issue might by possibility inherit, entitles the husband to courtesy. Some observations have been offered above to shew that the continuation of dower and courtesy in the cases of estates in fee simple conditional, was an exception to a general rule (dower and courtesy, in all other cases of conditions, being defeated by the entry for the condition broken); and that the same reasoning may be applied to the continuation of dower and courtesy out of an estate tail, after the failure of issue. It may therefore seem singular that the court, on this occasion, should prefer reasoning by way of analogy from the only admitted exception to the general rule, to reasoning by analogy from the general rule itself:—it is the more singular, as the general case of estates on condition approached nearer to the case then under consideration of the court, than the particular case of estates in fee simple conditional, or estates tail; for the distinguishing feature of the devise which gave rise to the case before the court (as of all devises of that description) is, that after the whole fee is first devised, it is made defeasible by a subsequent clause. Now neither an estate in fee simple conditional, nor an estate tail, has any such defeasible quality or incident annexed to it; but this quality forms the very essence of all other estates upon condition.—With respect to the application of the maxim, that where the issue may by possibility inherit, the husband shall have his courtesy (and so vice versa of dower); in every place in the books where that is mentioned, it is to introduce an enquiry whether the wife, being in the actual seisin of an estate, was in fact seised of an estate, the quality of which was such, that the issue of the husband might inherit it, but never with a view to shew that the quantity of the estate was such, that it might endure so long as to be inheritable by the issue. On the contrary, when the wife's estate is evicted by title paramount, or by an entry for the breach of a condition, in both cases the issue might have inherited; but the husband would be entitled to his courtesy in neither, after the eviction or entry. Another difference between the case of an estate in fee simple made defeasible by a subsequent executory limitation or devise, and that of an estate in fee simple conditional, or an estate tail, is, that an estate in fee simple, made defeasible by an executory limitation or devise, cannot, by any means whatever, be discharged by the first taker, or devisee, from the operation of the subsequent limitation or devise; but an estate in fee simple conditional may immediately after the birth of a child, and an estate tail immediately after marriage, be destroyed, and a fee-simple absolute acquired, by the husband and wife joining in a fine or common recovery.—The case is the same with respect to the wife's right of dower.—Besides, the quality we are speaking of is not sufficient of itself to entitle the husband to courtesy, or the wife to dower; it is only one of many incidents which the estate ought to have to give that title.

abated and died seised, this discent did take away the entrie of the daughters, because they claimed not by one title. And in ancient bookes the eldest sonne is called heres propinquus, and the younger sonne heres remotus. And albeit the eldest sonne hath issue and dieth, and that after his decease the youngest son or his heire entreth, and many discents be cast in hisline, yet may the heires of the eldest sonne enter in respect of the privitie of the blood, and of the same claime by one title; but if the youngest sonne make a feoffment in fee, and the feoffee die seised, that discent shall take away the entrie of the eldest, in respect that the privitie of the blood faileth. And admit that the youngest sonne be of the halfe blood to his brother, yet he is of the whole blood to his father; and therefore if he entreth by abatement, and dieth seised, it shall not barre his elder brother of his entrie. But if the eldest sonne entreth, and gaineth an actuall possession and seisin, then the entrie of the youngest is a disseisin. And then a dying seised shall take away the entrie of the eldest, for possessio terræ must be vacua when the youngest sonne enters by abatement, as Littleton saith, because he hath more colour in that case to claime, as heire to his father, who last was actuall seised. Therefore if after the decease of the father, an estranger doth first enter and abate, upon whom the youngest sonne entreth and disseise him and die seised, this discent shall binde the eldest, for he entered by disseisin, and not by abatement.

If a man bee seised of lands of the nature of mont per un mesme title. Et en mesme le maner il serra, si fueront plusors discents de un issue a un autre issue del puisne fits.

cent, &c. because they claime by the same title. And in the same manner it shall be, if there were more discents from one issue to another issue of the younger sonne (1).

Sect. 397.

MES en tiel cas, si le pier fuit seise de certaine terres en fee, et ad issue deux fits, et devie, et l'eigne fits enter, et est seise, &c. et puis le puisne frere luy disseisist, per quel disseisin il est seise en fee, et ad issue, et de tiel estate morust seise, donques l'eigne frere ne poit enter, mes est mis a son brieve d'entre sur disseisin, &c. † de recoverer la terre. Et la cause est, pur ceo que le puisne frere vient a les tenements per tortious disseisin fait a son eigne frere, et per cel tort la ley ne poit entendre que il claime come heire a son pier, nient plus que une strange person que ust disseisie l'eigne frere ‡ que n'avoit ascun title, &c. Et issint poyes veier la diversitie, lou le puisne frere enter apres le mort le pier devant ascun entrie fait per l'eigne frere en tiel cas, || et ou l'eigne frere*

BUT in this case, if the father were seised of certaine lands in fee, and hath issue two sons, and die, and the eldest sonne enter, and is seised, &c. and after the yonger brother disseiseth him, by which disseisin he is seised in fee, and hath issue, and of this estate dieth seised, then the elder brother cannot enter, but is put to his writ of entrie sur disseisin, &c. to recover the land. And the cause is, for that the youngest brother commeth to the lands by wrongfull disseisin done to his elder brother, and for this wrong the law cannot intend that he claime as heire to his father, no more than if a stranger had disseised the elder brother which had no title, &c. And so you may see the diversitie, where the younger brother entreth after the death of the father before any entrie made by the elder brother in this

8. E. 2. Aff. 380.

40. E. 3. 24. b. 19. Aff. 24.

Vid. Brooke tit. Entrie 27.

(Roll. Abr. 628. 629.)

(4. Rep. 58.)

* fits—frere, L. and M. and Roh.

|| &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ frere not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) When a younger brother enters in this case, he does not enter to get a possession distinct from that of the elder brother, but to preserve the possession in the family, that nobody else abates. Gilb. Ten. 25.

Frere enter apres la mort son fier, et puis est disseisie per le puisne frere, lou le puisne frere puis morust seisie * case, and where the elder brother enters after the death of his father, and after is disseised by the younger brother, where the younger after dieth seised.

burgh English, and hath issue two sonnes and die, and the eldest sonne before any entrie made by the youngest, entreth into the land by abatement, and dieth seised, this shall not take away the entrie of the youngest brother. Et sic de similibus. And these and the like cases are all within the reason and rule of our author. And where our author speaketh only of an abatement, so it is not an intrusion; for if the father make a lease for life, and hath issue two sonnes and dieth, and the tenant for life dieth, and the youngest sonne intrude, and die seised, this descent shall not take away the entrie of the eldest. But if the father had made a lease for yeares, it had bene otherwise, for that the possession of the lessee for yeares maketh an actual freehold in the eldest sonne. And it is to be observed, that the reason of Littleton in this case (for that both the brethren hold by one title) holdeth also in many other cases.

If two coparceners make partition to present by turne, and one of them usurpe in the turne of the other, this usurpation shall not put the other out of possession, because they claime by one title.

If two coparceners be, and they severally present to the ordinarie, yet the church is not litigious, because they claime all by one title (1).

If upon a writ of diem clausit extremum, the youngest sonne be found heire, the eldest son had no remedy by the common law, because they claimed by one title; but otherwise it is, if they claime by severall titles, as it appeareth in our bookes (2). But this is now holpen by a statute * made since Littleton wrote.

If two parsons be in debate for tithes, which amount to above the fourth part, and one man is patron of both churches, no indicavit doth lye, for that both incumbents claime by one and the same patron. Et sic de similibus.

And where Littleton saith, seised of lands in fee, the same law it is if a man bee seised of lands in taile, and hath issue two sonnes mutatis mutandis.

Et est seisie, &c. That is to say, actually seised, either by entrie, as Littleton here putteth it, or by possession of the lessee for yeares, or the like. (Post. 245. a.)

N'avait ascun title, &c. That is to say, any pretence or semblance of title, as the younger brother here hath; and in many other cases, there is a great diversitie holden in our bookes [o] where one hath a colour or pretence of right, and when he hath none at all, whereof you may read plentifully in our bookes.

(1. Roll. Abr. 629. Ant. 15. a.)

22. E. 4. 4.
(F. N. B. 34. Ant. 136. b.)

Doctor & Stud. cap. 30. fol. 119

12. E. 4. 18.

* 2. E. 6. cap. 8.

2. H. 7. 12. a.

See the Section next following.

(Post. 245. a.)

[o] 2. E. 2. bastardie 19. 21.
E. 3. 34. 22. Aff. 85. 39. E. 3. 26.
17. E. 3. 59. 11. E. 3. Aff. 88.
21. H. 6. 14. 11. E. 3. age 3.
Vide Sect. 400. & cap. Gattan.

Sect. 398.

EN mesme le maner est, si home seisie de certaine terre en fee ad issue deux files et devie, l'eigne file entra en la terre claymant tout la terre a luy, et ent solement prisl les profits, et ad issue et morust seisie, per que son issue enter, quel issue ad issue et devie seisie, et le second issue enter†, & sic ultra, uncore le puisne file ou son issue, quant a le moitie soit enter sur quecunque issue de l'eigne file, nient obstant tiel

IN the same manner it is, if a man seised of certaine land in fee, hath issue two daughters and dieth, the eldest daughter entreth into the land claiming all to her, and thereof onely taketh the profits, and hath issue and dieth seised, by which her issue enter, which issue hath issue and dieth seised, and the second issue enter, & sic ultra, yet the younger daughter or her issue as to the moitie may enter upon any issue whatsoever of the elder discent,

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Acc. Dig. p. 1. c. 3.—See 7th Ann. c. 18.

(2) At the common law, if the youngest son were found heir, the eldest might have an office; the doubt was, whether it should be tried which of them was heir by immediate interpleader, or at the full age of him that was first found heir: but the 2d and 3d Ed. 6. ch. 8. hath remedied it, and given an interpleader immediately, on traversing the first office, which cannot be, unless the party who traversed had an office found for himself. 7. Co. 44. a. b. Kenn's case.

discent, pur ceo que ils claimont per un mesme title, &c. Mes en tiel case si ambideux soers avoyant enter apres la mort leur pier, et ent fueront seises, et puis l'eigne soer ust disseise la puisne soer de ceo que a luy affiert, et ent fuit seise en fee, et ad issue, et de tiel estate morust seise, per que les tenements discent al issue del eigne soer, dunque le puisne soer ne ses heires ne poient enter, &c. causâ quâ supra, &c.

daughter notwithstanding such discent, for that they claime by one same title, &c. But in such case where both sisters have entred after the death of their father, and were thereof seised, and after the eldest sister had disseised the younger of her part, and was thereof seised in fee, and hath issue, and of such estate dieth seised, whereby the lands descend to the issue of the elder sister, then the younger sister nor her heires cannot enter, &c. causâ quâ supra, &c.

(Hob. 120. Post. 373. b. Ant. 198.)
21. Aff. 19. 21. E. 3. 7. 27. 32.
26. Aff. 2. 27. Aff. 68. 36. Aff.
p. 1. 43. E. 3. 19. 4. H. 7. 10.
16. H. 7. 4.
(Mo. 60.)
See more of this in the chapter of Warrantie. Sect. 710. 28. Aff.
30. Vide Sect. 710.
(4. Leo. 52. Ant. 174. a.)

CLaimont tout la terre. Here it appeareth, that when the one coparcener doth specially enter, claiming the whole land, and taking the whole profits, that the gainer the one moitie, viz. of her sister by abatement, and yet her dying seised shall not take away the entrie of her sister; whereas when one coparcener enters generally, and taketh the profits, this shall be accounted in law the entrie of them both, and no divesting of the moitie of her sister (1).

If one coparcener enter claiming the whole, and make a feoffment in fee, and take backe an estate to her and her heires, and hath issue and die seised, this discent shall take away the entrie of the other sister, because by the feoffment the privie of the coparcenarie was destroyed.

Claimont per un mesme title, &c. Of this sufficient hath beene said in the next precedent Section.

Ne poient enter, &c. Of this there hath beene also spoken in the same Section.

Sect. 399.

Pl. Com. 57. 39. E. 3.
Le darreine case.

Lib. 8. fol. 101. 102. Sir Rich.
Lechford's case.
(2. Roll. Abr. 584. 586. Doctor & Stud. 68. 69.)

Glanvil. lib. 7. cap. 2. Bract.
lib. 5. cap. 19. Brit. cap. 70.

Vide Sect. 289.

SEise en fee. For this holds not in case of an estate taile.

Mulier, seu filius mulieratus. Mulier hath three significations. First, Sub nomine mulieris continetur quælibet femina. Secondly, Proprie sub nomine mulieris, continetur virgo. Thirdly, Appellatione mulieris, in legibus Angliæ, continetur uxor. Et sic filius natus vel filia nata ex iustâ uxore, appellatur in legibus Angliæ filius mulieratus, seu filia mulierata, a femme mulier, or a daughter mulier. Sicut bastardus (2) dicitur à Græco verbo Bastaris, i.e. meretrix, seu concubina, quia procreatur ex meretrice seu

ITEM, si home est seise de certaine terre en fee, et ad issue deux fits, et l'eigne fits est bastard, et le puisne frere est mulier, et le pier devie, et le bastard enter enclaimant come beire a son pier, et occupia la terre tout sa vie, sans ascun entre fait sur luy per le mulier, et le bastard ad issue, et morust seise de tiel estate en fee,

ALSO, if a man be seised of certain lands in fee, and hath issue two sonnes, and the elder is a bastard, and the younger mulier, and the father die, and the bastard entereth claiming as heire to his father, and occupieth the land all his life, without any entrie made upon him by the mulier, and the bastard hath issue, and dieth seised

et

(1) Hob. 120. Smale v. Dales. The contrary is held, that one coparcener cannot be disseised without actual ouster, and claim shall not alter the possession. Lord Nott. MS.

(2) Sir Henry Spelman verbo Bastard rejects this derivation, and holds it to be a pure Saxon word Bastart, viz. impure natus, ut apud nos, Upstart dicitur homo novus. Lord Nott. MS. In Germany, and with us, (who derive many of our customs and political opinions from the Germans) bastardy was always a circumstance of ignominy. But in Spain, Italy, and France, bastards were in many respects on an equal footing with legitimate children. During the first and second races of the kings of France no difference appears to have been made between their legitimate and illegitimate offspring. The same seems to have been the case of the offspring of all the sovereign princes and higher ranks of nobility in France. Their acknowledging a natural child to be their child, was considered as tantamount to any formal act of legitimation. But the natural children of all other persons were considered as villeins. After the accession of the Capetian line, the condition of bastards was altered for the worse in many respects. Those of royal parentage were excluded from the throne, and were no longer held to be of blood royal. They were only permitted to bear the arms of France, with a bar. A similar change took place with regard to the bastards of the princes and nobility. By an ordinance of the year 1600, it was declared, that the children of nobility should not be considered even as gentlemen, unless they obtained letters of nobility. On the other hand, the bastards whose parents were of a lower order, instead of being considered villeins, as before, began about the commencement of the 16th century to be considered as free men, and except as to the right of receiving and transmitting succession, they are now, in France, on an equal footing with their fellow-subjects.—See Oeuvres du Chancelier D'Aguesseau, t. 7. p. 881. Dissertation dans laquelle on discute les principes du droit Romain et du droit François par rapport aux Bastards.

*et la terre discent, dist a son issue, et son issue enter, &c. en cest case le mulier est sans remedie, car il ne poit enter, ne aver aucun action pur recoverer la terre, pur ceo que est un antient ley en tiel case use, &c.

of such estate in fee, and the land descend to his issue, and his issue entreth, &c. in this case the mulier is without remedie, for he may not enter, nor have any action to recover the land, because there is an antient law in this case used, &c.

concupinā. In English, hee is called base borne, and thereupon some say, that a bastard is as much to say, as one that is a base naturall, for aerd signifieth nature. I read in Fleta, [p] that there be three kindes of bastards, viz. manser, nothus, & spurius, which are described in two old verses:

*Manseribus scortum, notho machus dedit ortum.
Ut fides è spicā, sic spurius est ab amicā. (1)*

[p] Flet. lib. 1. cap. 5. Vide Sect. 380.
(1. Roll. Abr. 356. 357. 358. 359. Cro. Jac. 541. Godb. 281. Paim. 9. 4. Init. 36.)

But we terme them all by the name of bastards, that be borne out of lawfull marriage. By the common law, [r] if the husband be within the foure seas, that is, within the jurisdiction of the king of England, if the wife hath issue, no prooffe is to be admitted to prove the childe a bastard, (for in that case filiatio non potest probari) unless the husband hath an apparent impossibilitie of procreation; as if the husband be but eight yeates old, or under the age of procreation, such issue is bastard, albeit he be borne within marriage. (2) [f] But if the issue be borne within a moneth or a day after marriage, betweene parties of full lawfull age, the childe is legitimate. (3)

[r] Brañ. lib. 4. fol. 278. 279.
7. H. 4. 9. 43. E. 3. 19. 41. E. 3. 7.
41. E. 3. 10. 29. Aff. 54.
98. Aff. 14. 1. H. 6. 7.
19. H. 6. 17. 39. E. 3. 13.
[f] 18. E. 4. 28.
(1. Salk. 120.)

Discendist a son issue. For if the bastard dieth seised without issue, and the lord by escheat entreth, this dying seised shall not barre the mulier, because there is no discent. If the bastard enter, and the mulier dieth, his wife privement enseint with a sonne, the bastard hath issue and dieth seised, the sonne is borne, his right is bound for ever. But if the bastard dieth seised, his wife enseint with a sonne, the mulier enter, the sonne is borne, the issue of the bastard is barred: for Littleton putteth his case, that there must not only be a dying seised, but also a discent to his issue.

(Post. 267. 273. 1. Roll. Abr. 624. 8. Rep. 101. b. Ant. 15. a. 7. Rep. 42.)

Et son issue enter, &c. And so it is to be understood, albeit the mulier, after the decease of the bastard, doth enter before the heire of the bastard; for the discent bindeth, and not the entrie of the heire.

Le mulier est sans remedie. Hereby it appeareth that this discent differeth from other discents, for this discent barreth the right of the mulier, whereas other discents doe take away the entrie only of him that right hath, and leaveth him to his action, but here by the dying seised of the bastard, his issue is become lawfull heire. [a] It is holden, that if the mulier be within age at the time of the dying seised, that neverthelesse hee shall be barred, because the issue of the bastard is in judgement of law become lawfull heire, and the law doth preferre legitimation, before the privilege of infancie.

Lib. 8. 101. 102. Sir Rich. Lechford's case.

[a] 5. E. 2. Discent. Br. 49.
31. Aff. 18. 22. 33. E. 3.
Verdict. 48. 36. Aff. 2. Pl. Com.
Stowel's case. 10. E. 3. 2.

And the reason of this case is, for that Justum non est aliquem post mortem facere bastardum, qui toto tempore vite sue pro legitimo habebatur. And so it seemeth to be, that if a man hath issue a sonne being bastard eigne, and a daughter, and the daughter is married, the father dieth, the sonne entreth and dieth seised, this shall barre the feme covert. And the discent in this case of services, rents, reversions, expectant upon estates taile, or for life, whereupon rents are reserved, &c. shall binde the right of the mulier, but a discent of these shall not drive them, that right have, to an action.

13. E. 1. tit. Bastardie 28.
(Post. 246. a. 5. Rep. 98.)

So if the bastard dieth seised, and his issue endoweth the wife of the bastard, yet is not the entrie of the mulier lawfull upon the tenant in dower, for his right was barred by the discent.

Sir Rich. Lechford's case, ubi supra.
(Ant. 241.)

If the bastard eigne entreth into the land, and hath issue, and entreth into religion, this discent shall barre the right of the mulier.

20. H. 3. Bastardie 29.
(Post. 248.)

Ad issue deux fis. If a man hath issue such a bastard as is aforesaid, and dieth, and the bastard entreth and dieth seised, and the land descendeth to his issue, the collateral heire of the father is bound as well as where there be two sonnes.

Hil. 18. E. 3. cor. Reg. Rot. 144.
Ebor. 17. E. 3. 59. F. tit. Bastard.
32. Sir Rich. Lechford's case, ubi supra. See afterwards in the Chapter of Warranties.
(Post. 368. a.)

And where our author speaketh of sonnes, so it is if a man hath issue two daughters, the eldest being a bastard, and they enter and occupie peaceably as heires; now the law in favour of legitimation shall not adjudge the whole possession in the mulier, (who then had the only right) but in both, so as if the bastard hath issue and dieth, her issue shall inherit.

[b] And

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Filius naturalis à vulgo barbarorum opponitur legitimo. Sed revera opponitur filio adoptivo, in quo sensu Tiberius vocat Drusum filium suum naturalem. Cal. Lex. verb. nat. filius. Spuri Latini et Græci sine patre. Ib.—Lord Nott. MS. Jure pontificio nostro dicuntur qui ex adulterino concubitu, manseres qui ex scorto, spurii exitus qui sacris initiati sunt, aut religionem professi sunt.—15.

(2) It is now held that the husband's being within the four seas, is not conclusive evidence of the legitimacy of the child, and it is left to a jury to consider whether the husband had access to his wife. See 3d P. W. 275, 276. Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2. Stra. 925. So evidence may be given, that the husband's habit of body was such, as to make his having children an impossibility. Lomax v. Holmden, 2. Stra. 940. See also 1. Roll. Abr. 358. 1. Salk. 123. But the rule laid down by lord Coke, was once generally received. In Jenk. c. 10. pl. 18. it is said, "that if the husband be in Ireland for a year, and the wife in England during that time has issue, it is a bastard; but it seems otherwise now for Scotland, both being under one king, and make but one continent of land."—See ant. note 2. to p. 126.

(3) See note 1. to page 261. a.

[b] 2. E. 3. tit. bastardie 15.
21. E. 3. 34. b. 30. Aff. p. 7.
Sir Rich. Lechford's case, ubi
sup.
[c] Britt. cap. 73. 20. E. 3.
Vouch. 129. 11. E. 3. Age 3.
5. H. 7. 2. Sir Rich. Lechford's case, ubi sup.
(Ant. 170. b.)

[b] And in the same case, if both daughters enter and make partition, this partition shall binde the mulier for ever.

[c] And an assise of mortd'ancestor lieth not betweene the bastard and the mulier in respect of the proximitie of blood.

And the bastard being impleaded or vouched shall have his age.

Et le bastard enter come heire a son pier. If a man hath issue bastard eigne and mulier puisne, and the bastard in the life of the father hath issue and dieth, and then the father dieth seised, and the sonne of the bastard entreth, as heire to his grandfather, and dieth seised, this discent shall binde the mulier.

Pur ceo que est antient ley en tiel case use, &c. As hereafter in our Commentarie upon the two next Sections shall appeare, by our antient bookes, and the antient statutes of the realme. And here is implied how necessarie it is, after the example of our author, to looke into the antiquities, than which nothing is more venerable, profitable, and pleasant. (1)

Sect. 400.

*MES il ad estre l'opinion d'ascuns, que ceo serra intendue lou le pier ad un fits bastard per un feme, et puis espousa mesme la feme, et apres le espousels il ad issue per mesme la feme un fits, ou un file mulier, et puis le pier morust, &c. si tiel bastard enter, &c. et ad issue et devie seise, &c. denque avera l'issue de tiel bastard le terre cleerement a luy, come avant est dit, &c. et nemy ascun auter bastard la mere que ne fuit unque espouse a son pier. Et ceo semble bone et reasonable opinion: car tiel bastard née devant espousels celebres pe-renter son pier et sa mere, per la ley de saint esglise est mulier, comment que per la ley del terre il est bastard, et issint il ad un colour d'entrer come heire a son pier, pur ceo que il est per un ley mulier, &c. scilicet, per la ley de saint esglise. Mes autrement est de bastard que n'ad ascun * maner colour d'entre come heire, entant que il ne poit per nul ley estre dit mulier, car tiel bastard est dit en la ley, quasi nullius filius, &c.*

BUT it hath beene the opinion of some, that this shall be intended where the father hath a sonne bastard by a woman, and after marrieth the same woman, and after the espousels he hath issue by the same woman a son or a daughter, and after the father dieth, &c. if such bastard entreth, &c. and hath issue and die seised, &c. then shall the issue of such bastard have the land cleerely to him, as it is said before, &c. and not any other bastard of the mother which was never married to his father. And this seemeth to be a good and reasonable opinion: for such a bastard borne before marriage celebrated betweene his father and his mother, by the law of holy church is mulier, albeit by the law of the land he is a bastard, and so he hath a colour to enter as heire to his father, for that he is by one law mulier, scilicet, by law of holy church. But otherwise it is of a bastard which hath no manner of colour to enter as heire, in so much as hee can by no law bee said to be mulier, for such a bastard is said in the law to be quasi nullius filius, &c. (2)

Mes

* maner not in L. and M. but in Roh.

(1) In the case of Pride v. the earls of Bath and Montague, it was held, that the rule that a person shall not be bastardized after his death, is only good in the case of bastard eigne and mulier puisne. 1. Salk. 120.

(2) Nota. 2. Inst. 96. 97. On the statute of Merton, Pope Alexander III. (ann. 1165. 6. H. 2.) ordained, that children born before matrimony, where matrimony follows, should be as legitimate as those born after marriage, quia ecclesia tales habet pro legitimis. — Constitutio pontifica, or the canon law, est intelligenda solummodo de filiis natis ex coitu, qui poterunt esse conjugales; qui vero ex damnato coitu nascuntur, scilicet ex coitu incestuoso vel adulterino, cujusmodi coitus non poterat esse uxorius, tamen nunquam legitimari possunt per subsequens matrimonium. Ratio est quia matrimonium subsequens ex fictione legis retrahitur ad tempus susceptionis liberorum, ut legitimati habeantur legitime suscepti (i. e.) post contractum matrimonium. Fictio autem juris nunquam admittitur contra naturam et bonos mores. Quapropter lex non potest fingere matrimonium fuisse cum eis, cum quibus nuptie non potuerunt esse per leges; quia in fictionibus translationis requiritur habitus extremorum a quo et ad quem. Ideoque leges civiles et decretales olim matrimonium inter adulteros prohibebant, contractumque dirimebant. Jam vero ista prohibitio locum non habet, nisi in mortem prioris conjugis alteruter fuerit machinatus, vel prematurus, dum adhuc viveret, de contrahendo post mortem ejus connubio pacta fuerit fides. Secundò, notandum est quòd subsequens matrimonium legitimos facit quoad spiritualia, non quoad temporalia, quia Papa non potest legitimare, quoad temporalia, extra sui ipsius dominica, scilicet extra terras que sunt de patrimonio sancti Petri, quod Papa Innocentius III. committatur (ergo Anglia non est ex patrimonio sancti Petri quicquid fecerit Rex Johannes). Et Sanchez quem Clemens III. valde laudavit, aperte dicit si proles habita sit ex concubitu omnino fornicario, eam non posse pontificem, quoad temporalia et secularia, legitimare. All this was said and proved out of antient authors by a learned advocate, whose discourse is printed at large in the modern arrears collected by Mons. de Maisons, Arreft 20. And there the principal case was, the uncle, in the life of his wife, had a child by his niece and god-daughter, on promise of marriage when time should serve; the wife dies, and then the uncle had other children, and ten years after, by dispensation from the pope, containing a clause of legitimization of the children born before, marries her. Res. The pope's dispensation was void as to any legitimization, which, whether it were because the marriage were within the Levitical degrees, or because of spiritual kindred, or because against the council of Trent, a general council being held by the Sorbonne to be above the pope, appears not; but may be for all these reasons, or for none of them, but only because the pope cannot legitimate in temporalis. 2dly, That the children of this marriage should have portions to live on, which may seem to approve the dispensation as to the marriage. 3dly, That no such be granted for the future. Ibid. 360. Romani filios naturales tantum non alio jure habuerunt quam peregrinos. Theodosii & Arcadii principatu temperata fuit legum severitas, ac deinde Zenonis lege obtinuit, ut naturales liberi consequentibus eum matre nuptiis iusti ac legitimi haberentur. Eodinus de Repub. lib. 1. cap. 4. p. 29. Sed nota, quòd ante Zenonis tempora, viz. per legem Divi Constantini, nati ante matrimonium, fiebant legitimi per matrimonium subsequens; quod tamen explicatur in eodem codice, viz. per matrimonium legitimantur liberi naturales modò procreati sunt muliere liberâ, & cujus matrimonium non est legibus interdictum. Vide Mons. de Maisons, Arreft 20. page 359 — Lord Nott. 215.

MES ad este l'opinion d'ascuns, &c. And our author here saith, that this opinion is good and reasonable, for that such a bastard, by the law of holy church (*) is a mulier.

Matrimonium subsequens legitimos facit quoad sacerdotium non quoad successionem. propter consuetudinem regni quod se habet in contrarium. Yet the canon law holdeth them legitimate quoad successionem. At a parliament holden [q] anno 20. H. 3. for that to certify upon the king's writ, that the sonne borne before marriage as a bastard, was contra communem formam ecclesie, rogaverunt omnes episcopi magnates ut consentirent, quod nati ante matrimonium essent legitimi, sicut illi qui nati sunt post matrimonium quantum ad successionem hereditariam, quia ecclesia tales habet pro legitimis: et omnes comites & barones una voce responderunt, quod nolant leges Anglie mutare, quae hucusque usitatae sunt & approbate.

Issint que il ad un colour d'entre, &c. Here it is to be observed, that the law more respecteth him that hath a colourable title, though it be not perfect in law, than him that hath no title at all, as hath beene said (r) before. (1)

* Vid. Britton fol. 128. b. 166. 203. And the statute of Merton 20. H. 3. cap. 19. confirmeth this opinion. Hil. 18. E. 3. coram rege in Thesaur. Eborum. Bracton lib. 2. fol. 63.

[q] Statut. de Merton. 20. H. 3. cap. 9. Vid. Bract. 1. 5. f. 416. 417. 10. Aff. Pl. 20.

[r] Vide Sect. 397. & cap. garr. Sect.

Sect. 401.

MES en le case avant dit, lou le bastard enter apres la mort le pier, et le mulier luy ousta, et puis le bastard disfeist le mulier, et ad issue, et devie seisie, et l'issue enter, donque le mulier poit aver briefe d'entre sur disfeisin envers l'issue del bastard, et recovers la terre, &c. Et issint poies veir le diversite lou tiel bastard continue la possession tout sa vie sans interruption, et lou le mulier enter et interrupt le possession de tiel bastard, &c.

BUT in the case aforesaid, where the bastard enter after the death of the father, and the mulier oust him, and after the bastard disfeise the mulier, and hath issue and dieth seised, and the issue enter, then the mulier may have a writ of entrie sur disfeisin against the issue of the bastard, and shall recover the land, &c. And so you may see a diversity where such bastard continues the possession all his life without interruption, and where the mulier entreth and interrupts the possession of such bastard, &c.

ET le mulier luy ousta. An estranger in the name of the mulier without his commandement cannot enter upon the bastard, for that the bastard may gaine the estate and barre the mulier. And therefore regularly none shall enter but the mulier, or some other by his commandement. And therefore Littleton saith (and the mulier put him out) no more than in the case [a] of the lord Audley: for there an estranger of his owne head could not enter in the name of him that right had to enter within the five yeares to avoid the fine. But in both those cases, first, if the mulier agree thereunto before the descent of the bastard; or secondly, if he that right hath before the five yeares be past do assent thereunto, the claime is good, and shall avoid the estate both of the bastard and of the consuee, as it was holden in the lord Audley's case, quia omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur & mandato equiparatur, and it standeth well with the words of the statute, so that they pursue their title, &c. by way of action or entry; and so is the booke in [b] 31. H. 8. to be intended.

[a] Mich. 38. & 39. Eliz. in the king's bench upon evidence by the whole court. Vide 31. H. 8. contr. conge. Br. 123.

4. H. 7. cap.

But in the case of the bastard cigne, which is Littleton's case, gardein in socage, or gardein in chivalrie, may enter, for they are no strangers, as in another place is plainly shewed. If an infant make a feoffment in fee, an estranger of his owne head cannot enter [c] to the use of the infant, for the estate is voidable. But where an infant or a man of full age is disfeised, an entrie by a stranger of his owne head is good, and vesteth presently the estate in the infant, or other disfeisee. So it is if tenant for life make a feoffment in fee, an estranger may enter for a forfeiture in the name of him in the reversion, and thereby the estate shall be vested in him, et sic de similibus.

Vide Sect. 334.

[b] 31. H. 8. contr. conge. Br. 123.

[c] Pasch. 39. Eliz. in communi banco per curiam. 10. H. 7. 16. 7. E. 3. 69. 26. E. 3. 62. per Thorp. 45. E. 3. release 28. 11. Aff. 11.

Lou

(1) Both by the civil and canon law, children born before marriage are made legitimate by the subsequent marriage of their parents. This was established in the civil law by the emperor Constantine, and confirmed by the emperor Justinian. It was established in the canon law by a constitution of pope Alexander the Third, in 1160. This legitimation is a privilege or incident inseparably annexed to the marriage; so that tho' both the parents and the children should waive or refuse it, the children nevertheless would be legitimate. But it holds in these cases only where, at the time of the birth of the children, it was lawful for both parents to intermarry; for if the father were married to another woman at the time of the birth of the children, and afterwards his wife died and he married the mother of the child, the child would not be legitimated by this subsequent marriage. Children thus legitimated are on an equal footing with the legitimate children; and if they die before the marriage of their parents, still they are considered as legitimate, and transmit their legitimacy to their issue: but whether they are considered legitimate from the time of the marriage of their parents, or whether their legitimacy by their parents' marriage has a relation back only to the time of their birth, is a point warmly disputed by the civilians and canonists. The prevailing opinion seems to be, that they are to be considered as legitimate from the time of their birth to all purposes but those in which to consider them as such would operate to the detriment of a third person. Thus, if there be a natural-born child, and the father afterwards marries and has sons; his wife dies, and he marries the woman by whom he had the natural child; it seems to be the better opinion, that the child legitimated by the subsequent marriage does not acquire the right of progeniture over the sons of the first marriage. The doctrine of legitimacy by a subsequent marriage was never admitted into the English law; and the refusal of the noblemen of our nation to admit it, on the occasion mentioned in sir Edward Coke's Commentaries, is spoken of by sir William Blackstone and other writers as a memorable instance of their jealousy of the civil law, and their firmness in opposing foreign innovations. The doctrine of legitimation prevails, with different modifications, in France, Germany, and Holland. By an arret d'audience of the 21st of June, 1668, it was adjudged, that if a person marries in England a woman by whom he had children previous to the marriage, the children born in France are legitimated by it, and acquire all the rights of legitimacy under the French law. See c. 10. C. de Natur. lib. Nov. 89. c. 8. Vinn. in Inst. l. 1. t. 10. f. 13. Hein. Elem. Jur. de Legitimatione. Traité des Successions par le Brun, ed. 1776. lib. 1. c. 2. f. 1. D. 1. l. 2. c. 2. f. 1. n. 13. and sir John Fortescue, c. 39. Till the statute of Merton, the question whether born before or after marriage, was examined before the ecclesiastical judge, and his judgment was certified to the king or his justices, and the king's court either abided by it or rejected it at pleasure. But after the solemn protest made by the barons at Merton against the introduction of the doctrine of the civil and canon law in this respect, special bastardy has been always triable at common law; and general bastardy alone has been left to the judgment of the ecclesiastical judge, who in this case agrees with the temporal. 2. Ingg. Reeves's Hist. of the English Law, 85. 201. and see ant. note 2. to page 126. 2.

Lou tiel bastard continue tiel possession sans interruption. If the mulier entred upon the bastard, and the bastard recovereth the land in an assise against the mulier, now is the interruption avoided; and if the bastard dieth seised, this shall barre the mulier.

3. Aff. 9.

If the bastard eigne after the decease of the father entred, and the king seifeth the land for some contempt supposed to be committed by the bastard, for which no freehold or inheritance is lost, but only the profits of the land by way of seifure, and the bastard die, and his issue is upon his petition restored to the possession, for that the seifure was without cause, the mulier is barred for ever; for the possession of the king when he hath no cause of seifure shall be adjudged the possession of him for whose cause he seifed. But if after the death of the father the mulier be found heire and within age, and the king seifeth, in that case the possession of the king is in right of the mulier, and vesteth the actual possession in the mulier, and consequently the bastard eigne is fore-closed of any right for ever.

And so it is when the king seifeth for a contempt, or other offence of the father, or of any other ancestor; in that case, if the issue of the bastard eigne upon a petition be restored, for that the seifure was without cause, the mulier is not barred, for the bastard could never enter, and consequently could gain no estate in the land, but the possession of the king in that case shall be adjudged in the right of the mulier. And it is to be observed, that the bastard must enter in vacuam possessionem, and continue during his life, without interruption made by the mulier.

Pl. Com. Parson de Honylane's case, 91.

35. H. 6. 24. 21. H. 6. 9.

1. E. 4. 3. 21. E. 4. 5.

5. E. 4. 60.

Interrupt le possession del bastard, &c. If the bastard invite the mulier to see his house, and to see pictures, &c. or to dine with him, or to hawk, hunt, or sport with him, or such like upon the land descended, and the mulier commeth upon the land accordingly, this is no interruption, because he came in by the consent of the bastard, and therefore the coming upon the land can be no trespass; but if the mulier commeth upon the ground of his own head, and cutteth downe a tree, or diggeth the soile, or take any profit, these shall be interruptions; for rather than the bastard shall punish him in an action of trespass, the act shall amount in law to an entry, because he hath a right of entry. So it is if the mulier put any of his beasts into the ground, or command a stranger to put on his beasts, these doe amount to an entry; for albeit in these cases the mulier doth not use any express words of entry, yet these, and such like acts, doe without any words amount in law to an entry; for acts without words may make an entry, but words without an act (viz. entry into the land, &c.) cannot make an entry, (all which interruptions are implied in the said &c.) More shall be said hereafter of Interruptions, in the chapter of Continuall Claime.

Sect. 402.

Brooke tit. descent. 40.

SI un enfant deins age ad cause d'entrer.

If a man seised of lands in fee die, his wife privement enseint with a son, and a stranger abate and die seised, and after the sonne is borne, hee shall bee bound by the descent, because hee at the time of the descent had no right to enter, and this is to be gathered upon these words of J. titleton, ad cause d'entrer, which at the time of the descent he hath not.

20. H. 6. 28. b. 2. E. 4. 25. 26.
15. E. 4. descent. 30.

Est eins per descent, &c. Here is implied any other heire, collaterall or lineall.

An infant is accounted in law (as hath beene often said,) [d] untill he passeth the

ITEM, si un enfant deins age

ad tiel cause de entry en ascuns terres ou tenements sur un autre, que est seise en fee, ou en fee taile de mesme les terres ou tenements, si tiel home que est tielment seise, morust de tiel estate seise, et les terres descendent a son issue durant le temps que l'enfant est deins age, tiel descent ne tollera

ALSO, if an infant within age hath such cause to enter into any lands or tenements upon another, which is seised in fee, or in fee taile of the same lands or tenements, if such man who is so seised, dieth of such estate seised, and the lands descend to his issue during the time that the infant is within age, such descent shall not take away the entry of the l'entry

[d] Vide Sect. 259. 403:

l'entry l'enfant, mes que il poit enter sur le issue que est eins per discent, &c. pur ceo que nul laches ferra adjudge en un enfant deins age en tiel case.

infant, but that hee may enter upon the issue which is in by discent, for that no laches shall be adjudged in an infant within age in such a case.

age of 21 yeares, and certaine privileges hee hath in respect of his infancy.

Nul laches ferra adjudge en le enfant deins age en tiel case.

And Littleton well added (en tiel case) that is, in case of discent, for in some other cases, laches shall prejudice

33. E. 3. quar. imp. 46.
(Ant. 171 a. Post. 337. b. 350. b. 380.)

Pl. Com. 372.
(F. N. B. 33 b. 6. Rep. 48. b. 3. Rep. 84.)

(Post. 318. a. 357. a.)

[c] 11. E. 4. 1. 2.
F. N. B. 35. m.

[f] 35. H. 6. 60.

an infant. As laches shall be adjudged in an infant, if he present not to a church within six moneths, for the law respecteth more the privilege of the church (that the cure bee served) than the privilege of infancy. And so the publike repose of the realme, concerning mens freeholds and inheritances, shall be preferred before the privilege of infancy, in case of a fine, where the time begins in the time of the ancestor. So non-claim of a villaine of an infant by a yeare and a day, who hath fled into ancient demesne, shall take away the seisure of the infant. And if an infant bring not an appeale of the death of his ancestor within a yeare and a day, he is barred of his appeale for ever, for the law respects more liberty and life than the privilege of infancy. And here it is to be observed, that Littleton putteth his case, that an infant shall enter upon a discent, when a stranger dieth seised, but hee put it not so before, in the case of the bastard eigne. B. tenant in taile infeofeth A. in fee, A. hath issue within age and dieth, B. abateth and dieth seised; the issue of A. being still within age, this discent shall binde [e] the infant, for the issue in taile is remitted: and the law doth more respect an ancient right in this case, than the privilege of an infant that had but a defeasible estate. And it is said [f] if the king die seised of lands, and the land descend to his successor, that this shall bind an infant, for that the privilege of an infant in this case holds not against the king (1).

Sect. 403.

ITEM, si le baron et sa feme, come en droit la feme, ont tite et droit d'enter en tenements que un auter ad en fee, ou en fee taile, et tiel tenant morust seisie, &c. en tiel case l'entrie le baron est tolle sur l'heire que est eins per discent. Mes si le baron devie, donque la feme bien poit enter sur le issue que est eins per discent, pur ceo que laches le baron ne turnera la feme ne ses beires en prejudice ne en damage

ALSO, if husband and wife, as in right of the wife, have title and right to enter into lands which another hath in fee, or in fee taile, and such tenant dieth seised, &c. in such case the entry of the husband is taken away upon the heire which is in by discent. But if the husband die, then the wife may well enter upon the issue which is in by discent, for that no laches of the husband shall turn the wife or her heires to a ny prejudice nor losse

SI baron et feme, come en droit sa feme, ont tite et droit d'enter, &c. et tiel tenant morust seisie, &c.

These words are generally, but are particularly to be understood, viz. when the wrong was done to the wife during the coverture; for if a feme sole be seised of lands in fee, and is disseised, and then taketh husband; in this case the husband and wife, as in the right of the wife, have right to enter, and yet the dying seised of the disseisor in that case shall take away the entry of the wife after the death of her husband; and the reason is aswell for that shee herselfe when shee was sole, might have entred and recontinued the possession, as also it shall be accounted her folly that shee would take such a husband which would not enter before the discent.

9 H. 7. 24. a. 2. E. 4. 25.
7 E. 3. 47. b. 20. H. 6. 28. b.
42. E. 3. 12.

15. E. 4. discent. 30.

But

(1) This and many other passages in this work, respecting the operation and force of the acts of infants, were fully considered in the cases of Zouch v. Parsons, 3. Burr. 1794; and May v. Hook, heard before lord chancellor Bathurst, in 1773. — There being no printed account of the last case, it may not, perhaps, be unacceptable to the reader to find an account of it here. — Ann May and her two sisters were, under their father's will, seised of a considerable freehold estate; and possessed of a considerable leasehold estate, as joint-tenants. Previous to the marriage of Ann May with John Hook the defendant, she being then an infant, by articles of agreement dated the 28th of October 1761, and made between her of the first part, John Hook of the second part, and trustees of the third part, it was covenanted and agreed, that the leasehold estates should be assigned to John Hook for his own use and benefit; and that the freehold estates should be settled on him for life; and then on her for her life; remainder to their first and other sons successively in tail male; — remainder to their daughters, as tenants in common in tail; remainder to John Hook in fee. And he covenanted to pay 100 l. to the trustees upon trust to pay Ann Hook, if she survived him, the interest of it for her life, and after her decease to divide it among the children. — Afterwards Ann May died under age. The question was, Whether these articles were in equity a severance of the joint-tenancy? Lord chancellor Bathurst, when he made his decree in this cause, observed, that the first point attempted to be established by the counsel was, that had Ann May been of full age when she entered into the articles, they would have amounted to a severance; but that no determination to that effect had ever been made: — That the co-joint-tenants were not, in this case, to be considered as volunteers, as they claimed by title paramount; and that their situation approached nearer to that of issue in tail, who claimed per formam doni, than to that of an heir at law, who claims only under his ancestor: — That the utmost which the infant could do would be an avoidable act; and that, of course, it would be in the discretion of the court either to give or refuse their assistance to it; and, by a parity of reason, it must always be in their power to model his contracts at their pleasure: — That the contract, in the present case, was not such as the court would uphold. Had the infant lived to come of age, and a bill been filed against her for a performance of the articles, the court would have set them aside, and referred it to a master to draw new proposals for a proper settlement: — That as the contract was not such as would have bound the infant herself, à fortiori it should not bind the co-joint-tenants: — That it would be a strange doctrine, that any act of an infant, which is by its nature avoidable, should sever the joint-tenancy, as if that were allowed, it would always be in the power of the infant to say, whether the joint-tenancy should be severed or not; then, if any of the co-joint-tenants should die under age, the infant might avoid his own act, by pleading infra ætatem, and resort to his title of survivorship, which would be a great injustice and hardship on the co-joint-tenants. — On these grounds his lordship was of opinion, that the articles did not amount in equity to a severance of the joint-tenancy.

9. H. 7. 24.

But there if the woman were within age at the time of her taking of husband, then the dying feised shall not after the decease of her husband take away her entry; because no folly can bee accounted in her, for that shee was within age when shee tooke husband, and after coverture she cannot enter without her husband; all which is implied in the said (Sec.)

en tiel cas, mes que la feme et ses heirs bien poient enter, lou tiel discent est eschue durant le coverture.

in such case, but that the wife and her heires may well enter, where such discent is eschued during the coverture.

Vid. Sect. 402.

(Hob. 96. Ant. 233. b. 1. Lev. 266. 8. Rep. 100. 1. Roll. 421. Flo. 235.)

27. H. 6. 28. b.

[*] 31. All. p. 17. 42. F. 3. 1. Pl. Com. 55. 10. H. 7. 13. H. 7. 35. H. 6. 41. Pl. Com. 136. b. Fleta lib. 2. cap. 50.

[e] Le statute de Merton ca. 5.

Laches le baron ne turnera la fem, &c. al prejudice, &c. Laches signifieth in the common law, retchlesnesse, or negligence, et negligentia semper habet infortunium comitem. Here is a diversity to be observed, that albeit regularly no laches shall be accounted in infants, or feme coverts, as is atresaid, for not entry or clayme to avoid discents, yet laches shall be accounted in them for no performance of a condition annexed to the state of the land. For if a feme be infeoffed either before or after marriage, reserving a rent, and for default of payment a re-entry; in that case, the laches of the baron shall disherit the wife for ever. And so it is [u] of an infant; his laches, for not performing of a condition annexed to a state, either made to his ancestor or to himselfe, shall barre him of the right of the land for ever.

If a man make a feoffment in fee to another reserving a rent, and if he pay not the rent within a moneth, that he shall double the rent, and the feoffee dieth, his heire within age, the infant payeth not the rent, he shall not by this laches forfeit any thing. But otherwise it is of a feme covert; and the reason and cause of this diversity is, for that the infant is provided for by the statute, [o] non current usura contra aliquem infra etatem existentem &c. But that statute doth not extend to a feme covert, neither doth that statute extend to a condition of a re-entry; which an infant ought to performe, for the forfeiture thereof cannot bee called usura.

* Sect 404.

MES la court tient, lou tiel title est done al feme seile, que puis prent baron que n'entra pas, eins suffer un discent, &c. la auter est, car serra dit la folly le feme de prendre tiel baron que n'entre en temps, &c.

BUT the court holdeth, where such title is given to a fem sole, who after taketh husband which doth not enter, but suffer a discent, &c. there otherwise it is, for it shall be said the folly of the wife to take such a husband which entered not in time, &c.

9. H. 7. 24.

THIS is added, and therefore, as formerly I have done, I meddle not withall; howbeit the opinion is holden for law, as it appeareth in the section next precedent.

Sect. 405.

HERE Littleton explaineth a man of no sound memorie to be non compos mentis. Many times (as here it appeareth) the Latin word explaineth the true sense, and calleth him not amens, demens, furiosus, lunaticus, fatuus, stultus, or the like, for non compos mentis is most sure and legall. (1)

Non compos mentis is

ITEM, si home que est de non sane memorie, que est a dire en Latin, qui non est compos mentis, ad cause d'entre en ascuns tiels tenements, si tiel discent, ut supra, soit ewe en sa vie durant le temps que il fuit de

ALSO, if a man which is of non sane memory, that is to say in Latine, qui non est compos mentis, hath cause to enter into any such tenements, if such discent, ut supra, bee had in his life during the time that hee was not of sound non

* This Section is not in L. and M. nor Roll.

Pl. Com. fo. 368. b. per Sanders. lib. 4. fo. 127. 182. Beverley's case. Mirror cap. 1. sect. 9. ca. 5. f. 1. Bract. fo. 165. and 420. Britton fo. 167. b. 217. 66. Fleta li. 6. c. 39. Fitz. N. B. 222. b. Stanf. Prior. 13. 31. (Hob. 96. Sid. 112.)

(1) Scotch Pleading, anno C. 1. case 5. pages 69 and 70, and Sir Thomas Stewart's case. Fatui five idiotae sunt illi tantum, qui omni ratiocinatione et judicio carent, truci, tardi, moriones, macarones, qui inopia calor et spirituum laborant. Furor est dementia cum ferocia, et horrenda actionum vehementia. Fromanus de jure furiosorum, p. 6. Furor dividitur in continuum; ubi anomus continua mentis agitatione semper accenditur; et interpolatum seu intervallatum; qui dilucida habent intervalla; quorum furor habet inducias, et quos morbus non sine laxamento aggreditur; qui testamentum facere possunt; & quos furor stimulis suis variatis vicibus accendit. In these fury and madness is but an ague or a distase; in the others, it is temperant and complexion. Again, among those who have lucid intervals, it may be fit to distinguish between those who have only remissionem seu adumbatam quietem, and those who have intermissione seu resipiscientiam integram. Intermittentes deposing sane menti, are preferred and believed before an hundred touching fury and madness. Melancholy and hypochondriac vapours are like storms at sea, which, though they disturb for a while, yet they do not hinder the returning to the former calm; semel furibundus, semper furibundus presumitur; and therefore where the question is of a fact done lucido intervallo, which may be either by remission or intermission, it is not enough to shew the act was actus sapienti conveniens, for that may happen many ways; but it must be proved to be actus sapientis, and to proceed from judgment and deliberation, else the presumption continues. Lord Nott. MS.

*non sane memorie, et puis devia, son heire bien poit enter sur luy que est eins per discent. Et en cest case poyes veier un cas, que l'heire poit enter, et uncore son ancesster que avoit mesme le tittle ne puis- soit enter. Car celui que fuit hors de sa memorie al temps de tiel discent, s'il voile enter apres tiel discent, si action sur ceo soit sue envers luy, il n'ad riens pur luy a pleder, ou de luy ayder, mes a dire, que il fuit de non sane memorie al temps de tiel discent, &c. Et acco ne serra il reservee a dire, pur ceo que nul bome de pleine age serra reservee en aucun plee per la ley a * disabler le person demesne, mes le heire bien poit disabler le person son ancesster pur son advantage † demesne en tiel cas, pur ceo que nul laches poit estre adjudge per la ley en celui que ad nul discretion en tiel case.*

memorie, and after dieth, his heire may well enter upon him which is in by discent. And in this case you may see a case, where the heire may enter, and yet his ancestor which had the same title could not enter. For hee which was out of his memorie at the time of such discent, if hee will enter after such a discent, if an action upon this be sued against him, he hath nothing to plead for himselfe, or to helpe him, but to say, that hee was not of sane memorie at the time of such discent, &c. And he shall not bee received to say this, for that no man of full age shall bee received in any plea by the law to disable his owne person, but the heire may well disable the person of his ancestor for his owne advantage in such case, for that no laches may bee adjudged by the law in him which hath no discretion in such case.

of foure sorts: 1. Ideota, which from his nativite, by a perpetuall infirmitie, is non compos mentis. (2. Inst. 14.)

2. Hee that by sicknesse, griefe, or other accident, wholly loseth his memorie and understanding.

Lib. 4. 124. 125. Beverley's case.

3. A lunatique that hath sometime his understanding and sometime not, aliquando gaudet lucidis intervallis, and therefore he is called non compos mentis, so long as he hath not understanding. Lastly, hee that by his owne vicious act for a time depriveth himselfe of his memorie and understanding, as he that is drunken. But that kinde of non compos mentis shall give no privilege or benefit to him or to his heires. And a discent shall (1) take away the entrie of an ideot, albeit the want of understanding was perpetuall; for Littleton speaketh generally of a man of non sane memorie. So likewise if a man that becomes non compos mentis by accident, as is aforesaid, be diseased and suffer a discent, albeit he recover his memorie and understanding againe, yet hee shall never avoid the discent; and so it is a fortiori of one that hath lucida intervalla. As for a drunkard, who is voluntarius demon, he hath (as hath beene said) no privilege thereby, but what hurt or ill soever he doth, his drunkennesse doth aggravate it: Omne crimen ebrietas & incendit, & detegit.

(8. Rep. 170.)

(Flo. Com. 19.)

(4. Rep. 123. b. F. N. B. 232.)
39. H. 6. 42. b. Abb. Aff. 89. b.
F. N. B. 202. 5 E. 3. 70. Britton, cap. 28. fol. 66. 25. Aff.
pl. 4. 35. Aff. pl. 10.

32. E. 3. tit. Scire fac. 160.
Stanf. Pr. 34. F. N. B. 202. 2.
Beverley's case, lib. 4. 126.
127. 128.

If an ideot make a feoffment in fee, he shall in pleading never avoid it, by saying that hee was an ideot at the time of his feoffment, and so had beene from his nativite. But upon an office found for the king, the king shall avoid the feoffment, for the benefit of the ideot, whose custodie the law giveth to the king.

So it is of a non compos mentis by accident, and of him qui gaudet lucidis intervallis, if an estate be made during his lunacie: for albeit the parties themselves cannot bee received to disable themselves, yet twelve men upon their oathes may finde the truth of the matter. But if any of them alien by fine or recoverie, this shall not onely binde himselfe, but his heires also. (2) As amongst other things requisite to be knownen, these cases you shall finde at large in my Commentaries, whereunto, for brevite, I referre the reader; upon all which bookes there have beene foure severall opinions concerning the alienation, or other act of a man

* desluiser et, added L. and M. and Roh.

† demesne—del heire, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In all the editions except the first, the word not is here erroneously inserted.

(2) Lord Hobart observes in the case of Needler v. Bishop of Winchester, that in these cases "the law finds these persons not so disabled, nor admits the averment of such disablement, because it is certified by invincible and indisputable credit of the judge, that they were perfect and able persons. And so here is a law of policy that doth not cancel the law of nature, but doth only bound it in point of form and circumstance; it being better to admit a mischief in particular, even against the law of nature, than an inconvenience in general: and it is not the law of nature to admit any improbable surmise against authentic record or evidence." Hob. 224.—Sir Ed. Coke observes, post. 380. b. that the only mode by which an infant can reverse a fine levied by him, is by appearance in court during his infancy, and being inspected by the judges; non testium testimonio, aut jur. aorum veredicto, sed judicis inspectione solammodo; the judges may, however, inform themselves in cases of this kind by means of witnesses, church books, or any other kind of evidence. It appears a great hardship that infants should not be permitted to reverse their fines after they attain their full age; and it seems unaccountable that the law, which will not permit them to do it after they attain their full age, should permit them to do it before that age. The objection, that no averment can be made against any fact which is now upon record, applies as much to them before their attaining their full age as after. But the contrary has been too often established to be now called in question. See Ann Hungate's case, 12 Rep. 122. Warcomb v. Carrill, ib. 124. Herbert Parrat's case, 2 Vent. 30. Hutchison's case, 3 Lev. 36. Requisite v. Requisite, Bullstr. p. 2. 320. Sarah Gufforth's case, 12 Mod. 444. With respect to the fines levied by ideots and lunatics, see 12. Rep. 124. Hugh Lewis's case. 10. Rep. 42. b. But infant trustees within the stat. 7. Ann. c. 19. may both levy fines, and suffer common recoveries. See 3. Atk. 479. 559. Com. Rep. 615. Barnes's Case of Pract. 217. See also Fitz. Nat. Bre. 202. where much argument is used to shew, that a non compos may plead his disability to avoid his own acts as well as an infant; and 2. Blac. Com. ed. 5. p. 291. But in Stroud v. Marshall, Cro. Eliz. 398, debt upon obligation, the defendant pleaded, that at the time of the obligation made, he was de non sane memory; and it was thereupon demurred, and adjudged to be no plea; for he cannot save himself by such a plea, and the opinion of Fitzherbert was held to be no law.

Vide Rr. tit. Dum fuit infra ætatem 3.

Tr. Lib. 4. fol. 126, 127.
(Flo. 19. a. F. N. B. 232.)

26. Aff. 27. 21. H. 7. 31. Stanford 16. b. 8. E. 2. Coron. 412.
414. 251. 22. E. 3. ibid. 224.
Beverley's case, ubi supra.
F. N. B. 202. D. 2. H. 7. 2. Vide
3. E. 3. tit. Entry Cong. Statham.
12. E. 4. 8. 39. H. 6. 4. Abbr.
Aff. 89. 39. H. 6. 43.
(Poll. 265.)

15. E. 4. tit. Discent 30.

(Ant. 53. b. 200. b.)

man that is non compos mentis, &c. For, first, some are of opinion, that hee may avoid his owne act by entrie, or plea. Secondly, others are of opinion, that he may avoid it by writ, and not by plea. Thirdly, others, that he may avoid it either by plea, or by writ, and of this opinion is Pitchebert in his Natura Brevium, ubi supra. And Littleton here is of opinion, that neither by plea, nor by writ, nor otherwise, he himselfe shall avoid it, but his heire (in respect his ancestor was non compos mentis) shall avoid it by entrie, plea, or writ. And herewith the greatest authorities of our bookes agree; and so was it resolved with Littleton in Beverley's case; [r] where it is said, that it is a maxim of the common law, that the partie shall not disable himselfe. But this holdeth only in civil causes; for in criminall causes, as felonie, &c. the act and wrong of a madman shall not bee imputed to him, for that in those causes, actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea, and he is amens (id est) sine mente, without his minde or discretion; and furiosus solo furore punitur, a madman is only punished by his madnesse. And so it is of an infant, untill he be of the age of fourteene, which in law is accounted the age of discretion.

Et en cest case poyes veir un case, &c. And though Littleton saith (one case), yet other cases may be found to the same end. For if there be grandfather, father, and son, and the father disseise the grandfather, and make a feoffment in fee, without warrantie, the grandfather dieth, albeit the right descend to the father, he cannot by this right descended, enter against his owne feoffment; but if he die, the sonne shall enter, and avoid the estate of the feoffee.

So if the grandfather be tenant in taile, and the father disseise him, ut supra, mutatis mutandis.

If lands be given to two and to the heires of one of them, he that hath the fee simple shall not have an action of waste upon the statute of Gloucester, against the joyntenant for life, but his heire shall maintaine an action of waste against him, upon the statute of Gloucester; so the heire shall maintaine that action, which the ancestor could not.

Sect. 406.

*ET si tiel home de non sane memorie fait feoffment, &c.
il * mesme ne poit enter, ne aver briefe appell' Dum non fuit compos mentis, &c. causâ quâ supra:
mes apres † la mort son heire bien poit enter, ou aver le dit briefe Dum non fuit compos mentis a son election. ‡ Mesme la ley est lou enfant deins age fait feoffe-ment, et devie, son heire poit enter, ou aver un briefe de Dum fuit infra ætatem, &c.*

AND if such a man of non sane
memorie make a feoffment, &c. hee himselfe cannot enter, nor have a writ called Dum non fuit compos mentis, &c. causâ quâ supra:
but after his death his heire may well enter, or have the said writ of Dum non fuit compos mentis at his choice. The same law is where an infant within age maketh a feoffment, and dieth, his heire may enter, or have a writ of Dum fuit infra ætatem, &c.

FAIT feoffment, &c. Or any other like conveyance in pais; but fines and other assurances of record are not implied in this (&c.)

Mesme la ley d'un enfant. This is true, as to the bringing of a Dum fuit infra ætatem, &c. but without question the infant in that case might have entred, as it appeareth in the next Section.

Briefe Dum non fuit compos mentis. This writ (as it appeareth by our author) lieth for the heire of him that was non compos mentis, and not for himselfe; but a Dum fuit infra ætatem lieth as well for the ancestor himself after his full age, as for his heire.

Sect.

* mesme not in L. and M. nor Roh.
† this Section not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† la—sa L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh. The rest

Sect. 407.

ITEM, si jco sue • disseis per un enfant deins age, lequel aliena a un autre en fee, et l'alienee devie seisie, et les tenements descendont a son heire, † esleant l'enfant deins age, mon entry est tolle &c †.

ALSO, if I be disseised by an infant within age, who alieneth to another in fee, and the alienee dieth seised, and the lands descend to his heire, being an infant within age, my entrie is taken away, &c.

Sect. 408.

MES si l'enfant deins age enter sur l'heire que est § eins per discent, come il bien poit, pur ceo que || mesme le discent fuit durant son nonage, donque jco bien puisse enter sur le disseisor, pur ceo que per son entrie il ad defeat et anient le discent.

BUT if the infant within age enter upon the heire which is in by discent, as he well may, for that the same discent was during his nonage, then I may well enter upon the disseisor, because by his entrie hee hath defeated and taken away the discent.

H E R E it appeareth, that the entrie of the infant is lawfull, and giveth advantage to the disseisee to enter also, because the discent, which was the impediment, is avoided. And it is to be observed, that if the discent be cast, the infant being within age, he may enter at any time, either within age, or after his full age.

And so it is if an infant make a feoffment &c. he may enter either within age, or at any time after his full age, and so in both cases may his heire.

Vide the next Sect. following.

43. E. 3. tit. Entr. Cong.
Vet. N. B. 126. b.
F. N. B. 192.
45. E. 3. 21.

Sect. 409.

EN mesme le manner est, lou jco sue disseisie, et le disseisor fait feoffment en fee sur condition, et le feoffee morust de tiel estate seisie, ¶ jco ne purroy  my enter sur †† l'heire le feoffee: mes si le condition soit enfreint, issint que pur cel cause le feoffor enter sur l'heire, ore jco bien puisse enter, pur ceo que quant le feoffor ou ses heires entrent pur le condition enfreint, le discent est ousterment defeat, &c. ††

I N the same manner it is, where I am disseised, and the disseisor make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and the feoffee die of such estate seised, I may not enter upon the heire of the feoffee: but if the condition bee broken, so as for this cause the feoffor enter upon the heire, now I may well enter, for that when the feoffor or his heires enter for the condition broken, the discent is utterly defeated, &c.

T H E reason hereof is apparent, for cessante causa, cessat causatum. Tenant in capite maketh a feoffment in fee to the use of the feoffee and his heires, untill the feoffor pay an hundred pounds to him or his heires, the feoffee dieth his heire within age, now hath the king the wardship of the bodie, and is intruded to the gard of the land. But if the feoffor pay the hundred pounds according to the limitation, the wardship is devested, both for the body and the land, and so it is in case of a condition: for, as Littleton here saith, the discent, which is the cause of wardship, is utterly defeated. And by these two last cases which Littleton hath here put, it appeareth, that there is no difference, where the discent is disaffirmed by a right paramount, as where the state was never law-

Vide the Sect. next precedent.
Dyer 13. El. fol. 298. 299.
(Ant. 5. 395.)

(Ant. 76. b.)

* disseisie not in Roh. but in L. and M.

§ eins—heire, L. and M. and Roh.

 my not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† et added L. and M. and Roh.

|| mesme not in L. and M. but in Roh.

†† l'heire—la terre, L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

¶ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

†† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

lawfull, (as in the case of an infant,) and where the discent is affirmed for a time, the estate being lawfull, and being after defeated by matter ex post facto, by a title of re-entry.

Sect. 410.

Vid. Sect. 200.
(Ant. 132.)

ENTREN RELIGION, &c.

Here is implied profession. This discent shall not barre the entry of the disseisee, for that the discent commeth by the deed of the father, because he entred into religion, wherein there is an excellent point worthy of observation: for albeit the entry into religion make not the discent, but the profession, whereof you have read before, Sect. 200. yet here you may learne by Littleton, that the law respects the originall act, and that is, his entry into religion, which is his owne act, whereupon the profession followed: whereby the discent hapned; for, Cujusque rei partissima pars, principium est. And againe, Origo rei inspicit debet, whereof you shall make great use in reading of our bookes. * Here Littleton attributeth the cause of the discent to his entry into religion, which was his owne act, whereas a discent doth not take away an entry unlessse it commeth by death, which, as Littleton saith, is the act of God, and no glorious pretext of an act (no, though it bee of religion) shall work a wrong to a stranger, that hath right, to barre him of his entrie. But it is said, that in the case of the bastard cigne, and mulier pueri, such a discent shall bind the mulier, as before hath bene said, and such an heire that commeth in by such a discent, shall have his age.

Car si jco arraigne un assise, &c.

Nota, if a man be tenant or defendant in a reall or personall action, and hanging the writ the tenant or defendant entred into religion, by this the writ is not abated, because it is by his owne act. And so it is of a resignation; but otherwise it is of a deposition, or deprivation, because he is expelled by judgment, and yet his offence, &c. was the cause thereof, sed in presumptione legis, judicium redditur in incertum.

Moy de mon entry, &c. Here is implied, or any of my heires.

ITEM, si jco soy disseise, et le disseisor ad issue et enter en religion, per force de quel les tenements descendent a son issue, en cest case jco bien puisse enter sur l'issue, et uncore la fuit un discent. Mes pur ceo que tiel discent vient al issue per fait le pier, scilicet, pur ceo que il enter en religion, &c. et le discent ne vient a luy per fait de Dieu, scilicet, per mort, &c. mon entree est congeable. Car si jco arraigne un assise de novel disseisin envers mon disseisor, comment que il puit enter en religion, ceo ne abatera my mon briefe, mes mon briefe (ceo non obstant) esloyera en sa force, et mon recovre vers luy sera bonne. † Et per mesme le reason le discent que araigne a son issue per son fait demesne, ne tollera moy de mon entree, &c.

ALSO, if I be disseised, and the disseisor hath issue and entred into religion, by force whereof the lands descend to his issue, in this case I may well enter upon the issue, and yet there was a discent. But for that such discent commeth to the issue by the act of the father, scilicet, for that he entred into religion, &c. and the discent came not unto him by the act of God, (scilicet) by death, &c. my entry is congeable. For if I arraigne an assise of novel disseisin against my disseisor, albeit he after enter into religion, this shall not abate my writ, but my writ (notwithstanding this) shall stand in his force, and my recovery against him shall bee good. And by the same reason the discent which commeth to his issue by his own act, shall not take from me my entry, &c.

Sect.

(Ant. 126. b. 23. b. 3. Rep. 61.)

* Vid. Pl. Com. Dame Hale's Case.
6. E. 3. 41. &c.

10. E. 3. 55.
(Ant. 211.)

3. H. 6. 41. 10. H. 6. 10. b.
18. E. 4. 19. 9. E. 4. 25. 52.
7. E. 4. 15. 18. E. 3. 24. 25. E.
3. 29. 46. E. 3. 25. 30. E. 1.
Briefe 885. Bracton lib. 4. fo.
183. & lib. 5. fo. 414. 22. R. 2.
Briefe 936. 15. Aff. pl. 8.

* non recovre not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Sect. 411.

ITEM, si jeo leſſe a un home certaine terres pur terme de 20 ans, et un autre moy diſſeiſiſt, et ouſta le termor, et devie ſeiſie, et les tenements diſcendent a ſon heire, jeo ne purroy enter; et uncore le leſſee pur terme d'ans bien puit enter, pur ceo que il per ſon entry ne ouſta l'heire que eſt eins per diſcent de le franktenement que eſt a luy diſcendus, mes ſolement * clame d'aver les tenements pur terme d'ans, lequel n'eſt † pas expulſement de le franktenement del heire que eſt eins per diſcent. Mes autrement eſt ou mon tenant a terme de vie eſt ‡ diſſeiſie, cauſa patet, &c. ||

ALSO, if I let unto a man certain lands for the terme of twenty yeares, and another diſſeiſeth me, and ouſt the termor, and diſſeiſed, and the lands deſcend to his heire, I may not enter; and yet the leſſee for yeares may well enter, becauſe that by his entry hee doth not ouſte the heire who is in by diſcent of the freehold which is deſcended unto him, but only claymeth to have the lands for terme of yeares, which is no expulſion from the freehold of the heire who is in by diſcent. But otherwiſe it is where my tenant for terme of life is diſſeiſed, cauſa patet, &c. (1)

PUR terme de 20 ans.

It is cleere that a diſcent ſhall not take away the entry of a leſſee for yeares, as our author here ſaith, nor of a tenant by elegit, or tenant by ſtatute merchant, or ſuch like, as have but a chattle and no freehold; and the reaſon is, for that by their entry upon the heire by diſcent, they take no freehold (which, as often hath bin obſerved, is ſo much reſpected in law) from him; but otherwiſe it is of an eſtate for life, or any higher eſtate. And as a diſcent of a freehold and inheritance ſhall take away the entry of him that right hath to a freehold, or inheritance, ſo a diſcent of a freehold and inheritance cannot take away the entry of him that hath but a chattle, for that no diſcent or dying ſeiſed can be of the ſame.

(2) A man ſeiſed of an advowſon in fee, grants three avoydances one after another, and after the church becommeth void, and the grantor preſents, and his clark is admitted and inſtituted, and after the church becomes void againe, the grantee may preſent to the ſecond avoydance, for that he was not put out of the poſſeſſion thereof; for as the leſſor having the freehold and inheritance cannot diſſeiſe his leſſee for yeares, having but a chattle, that any diſcent may be caſt, to take away his entry (as Littleton here ſaith); ſo in the ſaid caſe, the grantor hath the franktenement and fee of the advowſon rightfully, ſo as he cannot make any uſurpation, to gaine any eſtate, or to put the grantee ſo out of poſſeſſion as that he ſhould not preſent, no more than the leſſee for yeares in this caſe, to enter. Alſo in reſpect of the privitie that is betweene them, the uſurpation of the grantor ſhall not put the grantee out of poſſeſſion for the two latter avoydances. And this was reſolved [a] by all the judges of the court of common pleas, which I myſelfe heard and obſerved.

(See 2. Roll. Abr. 371. Hob. 322. 323. 5. Rep. 57. 102.)

[a] Hill. 18. Eliz. in communi banco.

Sect. 412.

ITEM, il eſt dit, que ſi home eſt ſeiſie de tenements en fee per occupation en temps de guerre, et ent moruſt ſeiſie en

ALSO, it is ſaid, that if a man be ſeiſed of lands in fee by occupation in time of warre, and thereof dieth ſeiſed in the PER occupation en temps de guerre.

Fiſt, it is neceſſarie to be knowne, what ſhall bee ſaid time of peace, tempus pacis; (4. Inſt. 125.) and what ſhall be ſaid tempus belli, ſive guerra, time of warre. Tempus pacis eſt quando

* clame not in L. and M. nor Roh.
|| &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† pas not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ diſſeiſie—ſeiſie, &c. L. and M. and Roh.

(1) A leaſe is conſidered as a covenant real, that binds the poſſeſſion of lands into whoſe hands ſoever it comes, if the lands be not evicted by a ſuperior title; yet the termor has not the freehold in him, but holds the poſſeſſion as bailiff of the freeholder, nomine alieno, by virtue of the obligation of the covenant. Now then, if the termor enters before the deſcent, he reverts the freehold in the diſſeiſee, who has the right of poſſeſſion; but if he enters after the deſcent, then he can only hold in the name of the freeholder, who has the preſent right of poſſeſſion, which is the heir of the diſſeiſor. Gilb. Ten. 35.

(2) Hob. 322. 323. ſir William Elwis's caſe. This very caſe was the principal point; and there, by Hobart, Warburton, and Winch, it was adjudged contra, that uſurpation by the grantor puts the grantee out of poſſeſſion, and gets all that was granted out, Hutton diſſentiente. But it appears that this place is good law, and that Hobart erravit. Hil. 12. Car. C. B. Legge v. Archer. A man leaſed an advowſon for yeares, and then preſented; this was ruled to be no uſurpation, but plenarily pro hac vice: this place is cited l. 8. uſurpation 5. idque ratione privitiae, ut inter coparceners, and becauſe it is againſt his own act. 3. Rep. Dampford's caſe. Lord Nott. MS.

Inter brevia de anno 1. E. 3. parte 1. & pasch. 28. E. 3. inter adjudicata coram rege. lib. 2. fol. 37. in thesaur. Pasch. 29. E. 3. inter adjudicata coram rege in thesaur. lib. 2. fol. 92. (Cro. Car. 71.)

14. E. 3. tit. seire facias 122. but more fully in the record at large.

Bracton lib. 4. fol. 240.

Logham cap. de novel disseisin.

Lib. 4. fol. 49. 50. Ogenel's case.

6. E. 3. 41. 7. E. 3. darr. pref. 2.
13. E. 2. quar. imp. 175.
F. N. B. 31.

do cancellaria, & alia curia regis sunt aperta, quibus lex fiebat cuicunque prout fieri consuevit. And so it was adjudged in the case of Roger Mortimer, and of Thomas earle of Lancaster. Unum terra sit guerrina necne, naturaliter debet iudicari per recorda regis, & eorum, qui curias regis per legem terræ custodiunt, & gubernant, sed non alio modo.

And therefore when the courts of justice be open, and the judges and ministers of the same may by law protect men from wrong and violence, and distribute justice to all, it is said to be time of peace. So, when by invasion, insurrection, rebellions, or such like, the peaceable course of justice is disturbed and stopped, so as the courts of justice be as it were shut up, et filant leges inter arma, then it is said to be time of warre. And the triall hereof is by the records, and judges of the court of justice; for by them it will appeare, whether justice had her equall course of proceeding at that time or no, and this shall not be tried by jury.

If a man be disseised in time of peace, and the descent is cast in time of warre, this shall not take away the entry of the disseisee.

Item tempore pacis, quod dicitur ad differentiam eorum quæ fuerunt tempore belli, quod idem est, quod tempore guerrino, quod nihil differt a tempore juris. & injuriæ; est enim tempus injuriæ, cum fuerunt oppressiones violentæ, quibus resisti non potest. & disseisinæ injustæ.

So as hereby it also appeareth, that time of peace is the time of law and right, and time of warre is the time of violent oppression, which cannot be resisted by the equall course of law. And therefore in all reall actions, the expleas, or taking of the profits, are layed tempore pacis, for if they were taken tempore belli, they are not accounted of in law. (1)

Per occupation. Occupation is a word of art, and signifieth a putting out of a man's freehold in time of warre; and it is all one with a disseisin in time of peace, saving that it is not so dangerous as it appeareth here by Littleton; and therefore the law gave a writ in that case of occupavit, so called, by reason of that word in the writ, in stead of disseisavit, in the assise of novel disseisin, if the disseisin had beene done in time of peace; whereby it appeareth, how aptly both in this, and in all other places, Littleton thorow his whole booke speaketh. But albeit occupatio, wherof Littleton here speaketh, is used only in the said writ, and in none other, (that I can finde or remember) yet hath it beene used commonly in conveyances and leases, to limit, or make certaine precedent words, as ad tunc in tenurâ & occupatione. But occupatio is applied to the possession, be it lawfull or unlawfull; it hath also crept into some acts of parliament, as 4. H. 7. cap. 19. 39. Eliz. cap. 1. and others; and occupare is sometimes taken to conquer.

Et de ceo home poit vrier en un plea sur briefe de aiel, anno 7. E. 2.

Hereby it appeares, that ancient termes or yeares, after the example of Littleton, are to be cited and vouched, for confirmation of the law, albeit they were never printed; and that of those yeares, those especially of E. 1. H. 3. &c. are worthy of the reading and observation; a great number of which I have scene and observed, which in mine opinion doe give a great light, not onely to the understanding and reason of the common law, (which Fitzherbert either saw not, or were by him omitted) but also to the true exposition of the ancient statutes made in those times. Yet mine advice is, that they be read in their time. For after our student is enabled and armed to set on our yeare bookes, or reports of the law, let him reade first the latter reports, for two causes. First, for that for the most part the latter judgments and resolutions are the surest, and therefore it is best to season him with them in the beginning, both for the setting of his judgment, and for the retaining of them in memorie. Secondly, for that the latter are more facile and easier to be understood, than the more ancient: but after the reading of them, then to reade these others before mentioned, and all the ancient authors that have written of our law; for I would wish our student to be a compleat lawyer. But now to returne. As it is in case of descent, so it is in case of presentation, for so usurpation in time of warre putteth the right patron out of possession, albeit the incumbent come in by institution and induction: and time of warre doth not onely give privilege to them that be in warre, but to all others within the kingdome; and although the admission and institution be in time of peace, yet if the presentment were in time of warre, it putteth not the right patron out of possession.

Sect.

(1) If tenant by elegit is interrupted in taking the profits of the land, by reason of war, he shall not hold over, but it shall be in disadvantage of the tenant by elegit. 19. E. 1. Execution 246. 4. Rep. 82. b. — In Lib. Rub. Scacc. fol. 241. tempus guerra duravit à quarto die Apl. 48. H. 3. usque ad 17. Sep. an. 49. apud Winter post bellum de Evesham pax proclamata fuit. Nota H. 3. 19. die Oct. anno eiusdem 16. fuit apud Wall. An. 40. fuit apud Oxon. 48. apud Dudl. 14. Maii, an. 49. fuit apud Evesham. Et tamen sunt placita de Rich. 16. H. 3. de banco. Tr. 16. H. 3. Et assisa magna 40. H. 3. 48. H. 3. M. 40. H. 3. P. 48. H. 3. P. 49. H. 3. Et placita coram rege à 32. usque 40. H. 3. Tr. 4. H. 3. 26. et 27. E. 1. Ent. R. T. Rot. 5. Goods were seized for debt to the king; the sheriff returned, that the Scots entered hostiliter, by reason of which they could not be taken: Rule, Fiat inde inquisitio, & interim pacem habeat de demandâ. Noy MS. 384. — 1. Infl. 52. See the case of the earl of Lancaster put at large. Nota, that in 14. E. 3. F. seire facias 122. there is no intimation at all of the matter; but on the record of this case, as is to be seen in the manuscript Rep. of Coke 428. the case was thus: Henry Lancaster granted to the abbot of Ramsey and his successors, quod si ex tunc aliquo tempore vel aliquâ occasione guerra in regno Angliæ feriam suam amitterent, ita quod nihil inde percipere possunt, quieti essent ejusdem anno et tempore de formâ suâ prædictâ sol. And upon seire facias for the arrears of that rent, which was in court for three years, viz. 11. 12. and 13. E. 3. the abbot pleaded these charters, and said, that guerra fuit tam super mare quam super terram inter dominum regem et illos de Franciâ, ita quod mercatores ad dictas nundinas nec venerunt ut solebant, nec ipse abbas aliquod proficuum de iisdem nundinis per idem tempus percepit nec percipere possit, quod paratus fuit verificare juxta tenorem chartæ prædictæ; and it was resolved, quod utrum terra sit guerrina, &c. prout hic notatur. Then it follows in the said manuscript: Nota, quod guerra dicitur in hoc regno esse, quando exercitum justitiæ in curiis et placitis regis impeditur. And Coke adds a short note: Ceo trival de guerre in cest realm; et ex hoc semble que ne fuit guerre inter E. 4. et H. 6. car exercitum justitiæ non impeditum fuit, come appiert per les reports de 10. E. 3. et 49. H. 6. nec temps H. 3. hic supra, nec temps Car. 1. Lord Nott. MS.

* The Editor has not been able to discover what is the manuscript to which lord Nottingham alludes in this place.

Sect. 413.

ITEM, * que nul morant seisie (ou les tenements viendront a un auter per succession) † tollera l'entree d'ascun person, &c. ‡ Come de prelates, abbots, priors, deans, ou parson d'esglise, || ou d'autres corps politike, &c. coment que ils fueront xx. morants seisie, et xx. successors, ceo ne tolle jammes ascun home de son entree §.

Plus serra dit de discents en le prochain chapter.

ALSO, that no dying seised (where the tenements come to another by succession) shall take away the entree of any person, &c. As of prelates, abbots, priors, deanes, or of the parson of a church, or of other bodies politike, &c. albeit there were xx. dyings seised, and xx. successors, this shall not put any man from his entree (¶).

More shall be said of discents in the next chapter.

take and grant, &c. And this body politike, or incorporate, may commence, and be established three manner of ways, viz. by prescription, by letters patents, or by act of parliament. Every body politike, or corporate, is either ecclesiasticall or lay: ecclesiasticall, either regular, as abbots, priors, &c. or secular, as bishops, deanes, archdeacons, parsons, vicars, &c. lay, as maior and communaltie, baylives and burgeses, &c. Also every body politike, or corporate, is either elective, presentative, collative, or donative. And againe it is either sole, or aggregate of many; as you may reade in the Third Part of my Commentaries. And this body politike, or corporate, aggregate of many, is by the civilians called collegium, or universitas.

PER succession.

This in the common law is applied only to bodies politike, or corporate, which have succession perpetuall, and not to naturall men; as to a bishop and his successors, or to an abbot, deane, archdeacon, prebend, parson, &c. and their successors, and not to J. S. or any other naturall body and his successors, but to him and his heires. And the successor of any of these is in the post, and the heire of the naturall man is in the per; and succedere is derived of sub and cedere.

Vid. Sect. 1.

7. E. 3. 25. 2. 8. E. 3. 13. & 34.

Corps politique, &c.

This is a body to take in succession, framed (as to that capacity) by policie, and thereupon it is called here by Littleton a body politike; and it is also called a corporation, or a body incorporate, because the persons are made into a body, and are of capacity to

Lib. 3. fo. 73. in the case of the Deane and Chapter of Norwich. (1. Sid. 162. 14. Rep. 77. 2.)

CHAP. 7. Continuall Claime. Sect. 414.

CONTINUAL claime est † la lou home ad droit et title d'entrer en ascuns terres ou tenements dont  auter est seisie en fee, ou en fee taile, si cesty que ad title d'entrer fait con-

CONTINUAL claim is where a man hath right and title to enter into any lands or tenements whereof another is seised in fee, or in fee tail, if hee which hath title to enter makes continuall claime to the lands

HERE our Author first describeth what a continuall claime is. It is called continuum clameum, because at the common law it must have beene made within every yeare and day, as Littleton here teacheth. And yet if hee that right hath, maketh claime, and the tenant dieth within the yeare and the day, this claime though it bee but tinuall

Mirror cap. 1. §. 15. & §. 18. Bracton li. 5. fo. 435. 436. Britton 107. b. 126. 4. Fleta lib. 6. cap. 53. 53. Vid. Sect. 424.

Vid. Sect. 385. 22. H. 8. c. 23.

* que not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† ne added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ come—quor. L. and M. and Roh.

|| ou d'autres corps politike, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

¶ prochain chapitre—chapitre de continuelle claime, L. and M. and Roh.

† per added L. and M.

 un added L. and M.

(1) By the statute of limitations, 21. Jac. 1. c. 16. it is enacted, that no entry shall be made by any man upon lands, unless within twenty years after his right shall accrue. — By the 4th and 5th Ann. c. 16. it is enacted, that no entry shall be of force to satisfy the statute of limitations, or to avoid a fine levied of lands, unless an action be thereupon commenced within one year after, and prosecuted with effect.

* Vid. Sect. 414.

once * made (as hath beene said) shall preserve the entry of him that maketh the claime (1).

Ad droit et title d'enter. And yet in some cases, a continuall claime may be made by him that hath right, and cannot enter.

If tenant for years, tenant by statute staple, merchant, or cogit, be ousted, and he in the reversion disseised, the lessor, or he in reversion, may enter to the intent to make his claime, and yet his entry as to take any profits, is not lawfull during the terme. And in the same manner, the lessor or he in the reversion in that case may enter to avoid a collateral warranty, or the lessor in that case may recover in an assise. And so (as some have holden) may the lessor enter in case of a lease for life, to this intent, to avoid a discent, or a warranty.

If the disseisee make continuall claime, and the disseisor die seised within the yeare, his heire within age, and by office the king is intitled to the wardship, albeit the entry of the disseisee bee not lawfull, yet may he make continuall claime to avoid a discent, and so in the like.

Uncore poit celuy que fait tiel clayme ou son heire enter. This is to be understood in this manner: that if the father make claime, and the disseisor dieth, and then the father dieth, that his heire may enter, because the discent was cast in the father's time, and the right of entry which the father gained by his claime, shall descend to his heire. But if the father make continuall claime, and dieth, and the sonne make no continuall claime, and within the yeare and day after the claime made by the father, the disseisor dieth, this shall take away the entry of the sonne, for that the discent was cast in his time, and the claime made by the father shall not availe him, that might have claimed himselfe. And of this opinion was Littleton himselfe in our bookes, where he holdeth, that no continuall claime can avoid a discent, unlesse it be made by him that hath title to enter, and in whose life the dying seised was. See more of this matter hereafter, in this chapter, Sect. 416.

And as here Littleton putteth his case of the ancestor and heire, so it holdeth in all respects, of the predecessor and successor.

*tinuall claime a les terres ou tenements devant le morant seisi de celuy que tient les tenements, donques coment que tiel tenant morust ent seisi, et les terres ou tenements descendront a son heire, uncore poit celuy que avoit fait tiel claime, ou son heire, enter en les terres ou tenements issint descendus, per cause de le continual claime fait, nient contristiant le discent. Sicome en case que home soit disseise, et le disseisee fait continual claime a les tenements en la vie le disseisor, coment que le disseisor devie seise en fee, et la terre descendist a son heire, uncore poit le disseisee enter sur la possession le heire, nient obstant le discent .

or tenements before the dying seised of him which holdeth the tenements, then albeit that such tenant dieth therof seised, and the lands or tenements descend to his heire, yet may he who hath made such continual claime, or his heire, enter into the lands or tenements so descended, by reason of the continuall claime made, notwithstanding the discent. As in case that a man bee disseised, and the disseisee makes continuall claime to the tenements in the life of the disseisor, although that the disseisor dieth seised in fee, and the land descend to his heire, yet may the disseisee enter upon the possession of the heire, notwithstanding the discent.

Dyer 19. El. Pl. Com. 374.
15. H. 7. 3. 4. Jacobin's case.
28. H. 6. 28.

Vid. Sect. 442. 45. E. 3. 21.

7. H. 6. 49. Contin. Claime 1.
Downer's case. 5. E. 4. 4.
(Pl. 191. a.)
(9. Rep. 106.)
(1. Rep. 67. a.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 630.)

Bracton lib. 5. fo. 436.
Fleta lib. 5. cap. 52. 53.
22. H. 6. 37. 9. H. 4. 5. 2.
15. E. 4. 22. a.

23. H. 6. 37.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

Sect.

(1) It has been observed in the notes to the chapter of Discents, that the reasons for which the law protected the possession of the heir of the disseisor from the entry of the disseisee, were, the notoriety and presumptive right of possession which the disseisor acquired by his being permitted to live and die in the peaceable possession of the lands; the necessity that there should be a tenant to do the feudal duties; and by way of a punishment on the tenant for his neglect in not asserting his right. But none of these reasons could exist, where the tenant entered upon the lands, and made his claim for them; as by doing so he prevented the presumption in favour of the title of the disseisor; made a tender to the lord of his feudal services; and did all that was in his power to restore his possession. But to entitle the disseisee to enter on the heir of the disseisor, notwithstanding the discent upon him, this claim must have been made within a year and a day next preceding the descent. Lord chief baron Gilbert, in his commentary upon this chapter, observes, that the notion of laches, in not claiming for a year and a day, is taken out of the feudal law, it being the period of time within which the feudal services must be required. It is a space of time which is prescribed for the performance of different acts in our law, and in all laws derived from the feudal institutions. It seems only to import the space of a complete year. --- In Pl. Com. 359. a. lord chief justice Dyer is said to have defined claim to be a challenge of the ownership, or propriety, that he hath not in possession, but is detained from him by wrong.

Sect. 415.

EN mesme le maner est, si tenant a terme de vie alien en fee, celuy en le reversion ou celuy en le remainder poit enter sur l'alienee. Et si tiel alienee devie seise de tiel estate sans continual claime fait a les tenements, devant le morant seisi del alienee, et les tenements per cause del morant seisi del alienee discendent * a son heire, donques ne poit celuy en le reversion ne celuy en le remainder enter. Mes † si celuy en le reversion ou celuy en le remainder, que ad cause d'entre sur l'alienee, fait continual claime a les tenements devant le morant seisi del alienee, donques tiel home poit enter apres la mort l'alienee, auxy bien come il pouvoit ‡ en sa vie §.

IN the same manner it is, if tenant for life alien in fee, hee in the reversion or he in the remainder may enter upon the alienee. And if such alienee dieth seised of such estate without continuall claime made to the tenements, before the dying seised of the alienee, and the lands by reason of the dying seised of the alienee descend to his heire, then cannot he in the reversion nor hee in the remainder enter. But if hee in the reversion or in the remainder, who hath cause to enter upon the alienee, make continuall claime to the land before the dying seised of the alienee, then such a man may enter after the death of the alienee, as well as he might in his life-time. (1. Rep. 14. a.)

BY this it appeareth, that a continuall claime may be made as well where the lands are in the hands of a feoffee, &c. by title, as in the hands of a disseisor, abator, or intruder, by wrong, as before hath beene noted.

Sect. 416.

ITEM, si terre soit lessé a un home pur terme de sa vie, le remainder a un autre a terme de vie, le remainder a la tierce en fee, si le tenant a terme de vie aliena a un autre en fee, et celuy en le remainder pur terme de vie fait continual claime a la terre devant le morant seise d'alienee,

ALSO, if land be let to a man for terme of his life, the remainder to another for terme of life, the remainder to the third in fee, if tenant for life alien to another in fee, and he in the remainder for life maketh continual claime to the land before the dying seised of the alienee, and after the en fee. It is to be observed, that a forfeiture may be made by the alienation of a particular tenant, two manner of wayes; either in pais, or by matter of record.

ALIEN a un autre (1. Roll. Abr. 630.)

In pais, of lands and tenements which lie in livery (whereof Littleton intendeth his case) where a greater estate passeth by livery, than the particular tenant may lawfully make, whereby the reversion or remainder is divested, as here in the example that Littleton putteth when tenant for life alieneth in

Vid. Sect. 581. 609. 610. 611.

* a son heire, — al heire del aliene, L. and M. and Roh. M. and Roh. § &c. L. and M.

† si not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ pouvoit en post a, L. and

(1. Rep. 14.)

17. El. Dy. 119.
16. El. Dy. 324.31. E. 3. Devisé 11. 15. E. 4. 9.
Vide Sect. 608. 609. 610.
(1. Roll. Abr. 854.)

(1. Rep. 76. b.)

35. H. 6. 62. Tr. 32. El. in Informat. de intrusion vers Robinson par le Manor de Drayton Basset, so resolved by the court of exchequer.7 Post. 322. b. 1. Leo. 40. 1. Roll.
Abr. 855.)* 15. E. 4. 0. 21. E. 3. Cr. 62.
14. E. 3. 3. Avow. 117.15. E. 2. Judg. 237. 6. E. 3. 29.
9. E. 3. 4. 18. E. 2. Fines 120.
15. E. 4. 29. 36. H. 6. 29.
2. H. 6. 9. 4. El. Dy. 9. H. 5. 14.
22. Aff. 31. 18. E. 3. 28. 16. Aff.
16.
(Mo. 77. 212. 1. Rep. 16.)* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
added in L. and M. and Roh.
peut faire continual claim), not in L. and M. nor Roh.

in fee, which must bee understood of a feoffment, fine, or recoverie by consent.

If tenant for life, and hee in the remainder for life in Littleton's case, hath joyned in a feoffment in fee, this had beene a forfeiture of both their estates, because hee in the remainder is particeps injuria.
And so it is if hee in the remainder for life had entred, and disseised tenant for life,
and made a feoffment in fee, this had beene a forfeiture of the right of his remainder. (1)

A particular estate of any thing that lies in grant, cannot be forfeited by any grant in fee by deed. As if tenant for life or yeares of an advowson, rent, common, or of a reversion or remainder of land, by deed grant the same in fee, this is no forfeiture of their estates, for that nothing passes thereby, but that which lawfully may passe; and of that opinion is Littleton in our bookes.

But if tenant for life or yeares of land, the reversion or remainder being in the king, make a feoffment in fee, this is a forfeiture, and yet no reversion or remainder is divested out of the king; and the reason is, in respect of the solemnitie of the feoffment by liverie, tending to the king's disherison. (2)

By matter of record, and that by three manner of wayes. First, by alienation.
Secondly, by claiming a greater estate than he ought.

First, by alienation; and that of two sorts, viz. by alienation divesting, or not divesting, the reversion or remainder. Divesting, as by levying of a fine, or suffering a common recoverie of lands, whereby the reversion or remainder is divested: not divesting, as by levying of a fine in fee, of an advowson, rent, common, or any other thing that lieth in grant: and of this opinion is Littleton in our bookes. * And so note two diversities: first, between a grant by fine (which is of record) and a grant by deed in pais; and yet in this they both agree, that the reversion or remainder in neither case is divested: secondly, between a matter of record, as a fine, &c. and a deed recorded, as a deed inrolled, for that worketh no forfeiture, because the deed is the originall.

Secondly, by claime; and that may be in two sorts, either expresse or implied. Expresse, as if tenant for life will in court of record claime fee, or if lessee for yeares be ousted, and he will bring an assise ut de libero tenemento. Implied, as if in a writ of right brought against him, he will take upon him to joine the mise upon the meere right, which none but tenant in fee simple ought to doe. So if lessee for yeares doe lose in a præcipe, and will bring a writ of error, for error in proceffe, this is a forfeiture. (3)

Thirdly,

*et puis l'alienee morrust seisie, * et puis apres celuy en le remainder pur terme de vie morust devaunt ascun entrie fait per luy, en ceo cas celuy en le remainder en fee poit enter † sur heire l'alienee, per cause de continual claime fait per luy que avoit le remainder pur terme
de sa vie, pur ceo que tiel droit que il ave-roit d'entre, ‡ alera et remaindra a celuy en le remainder apres
luy, entant que celuy en le remainder en fee § ne puisse pas enter sur l'alienee en fee durant la vie celuy en le remainder pur terme
de sa vie, et pur ceo  que il ne puisse adon-ques faire continual claim. †† (Car nul poit faire continual claim mes quant il ad title d'entrie, &c.)*

alienee dieth seised, and after he in the remainder for life die before any entrie made by him, in this case he in the remainder in fee may enter upon the heire of the alienee, by reason of the continuall claime made by him which had the remainder for life, because that such right as hee had of en-trie, shall goe and re-maine to him in the remainder after him, insomuch as hee in the remainder in fee could not enter upon the alienee in fee during the life of him in the remainder for life, and for that hee could not then make continuall claim. (For none can make continuall claime but when hee hath title to enter, &c.)

Thirdly, by affirming the reversion or remainder to be in a

† no in L. and M. and Roh.

§ que †† (Car nul

(1) See the observations on feoffments introduced in the notes to the next chapter.

(2) See ant. 233. b. note.

(3) So in the case of a lease for life, the tenant may plead it in bar; but in the case of a lease for years, or an estate by tenant by statute or elegit, the defendant shall not plead in bar, as to say, assisa non, but justify by force of the lease; and conclude, issint sans tort; and if the tenant of the freehold be not named, he shall plead, nul tenant de franc tenement noimé en le bref; and in the case of a feoffment with a warranty, he must rely on the warranty. See ant. 238. b. 239. a.

Thirdly, By affirming the reversion or remainder to be in a stranger, and that either actively or passively. Actively, by five manner of wayes. As first, if tenant for life pray in aid of a stranger, whereby he affirms the reversion to be in him. Secondly, if he attorne to the grant of a stranger; and there note also a diversitie betweene an attournement of record to a stranger, and an attournement in pais, for an attournement in pais worketh no forfeiture. Thirdly, if a stranger bring a writ of entrie in casu proviso, and suppose the reversion to be in him, if the tenant for life confesse the action, this is a forfeiture. Fourthly, if tenant for life plead covinously, to the disherison of him in the reversion, this is a forfeiture. Fifthly, if a stranger bring an action of waste against lessee for life, and he plead nul wast fait, this is a forfeiture; or the like.

Passively, as if tenant for life accept a fine of a stranger, sur confans de droit come cco, &c. 3. Mar. Dy. 148. for hereby he affirms of record, the reversion to be in a stranger.

Littleton here speaketh of the forfeiture of an estate; and here it is to be known, that the right of a particular estate may be forfeited also, and that he that hath but a right of a remainder or reversion, shall take benefit of the forfeiture. As if tenant for life be disseised, and hee levie a fine to the disseisor, he in the reversion or remainder shall presently enter upon the disseisor for the forfeiture. And so it is if the lessee after the disseisin had levied a fine to a stranger, though to some respects, partes finis nihil habuerunt, yet it is a forfeiture of his right.

Littleton here speaketh of an alienation in fee absolutely, but so it is if the lessee for life make a lease for any other man's life, or a gift in taile. If A. be tenant for life, and make a lease to B. for his life, and B. dieth, and the lessee re-entred, yet the forfeiture remaineth.

If tenant for life make a lease for life, or a gift in taile, or a feoffment in fee, upon condition, and entreth for the condition broken, yet the forfeiture remaineth. Littleton speaketh of an estate for life; so it is of tenant in taile apres possibilite, tenant by the courtlesie, tenant in dower, or of him that hath an estate to him and his heires, during the life of I. S. &c. and so of tenant for yeares, tenant by statute merchant, statute staple, or elegit.

Littleton saith, that where the alienation in fee is made to another, which must be intended a stranger, for if it be made to him in reversion or remainder, it amounts to a surrender of his estate, as at large hath bene spoken in the chapter of tenant for life.

By Littleton it appeareth, that tenant for life in remainder may enter for the forfeiture of the first tenant for life, and that if the tenant for life in remainder make continuall claime, and the alienee die seised, then may he in the remainder for life enter; and if he die before he do enter, then he in the remainder in fee shall enter, because he in the remainder in fee could not make any claime; and therefore the right of entrie, which tenant for life in remainder gained by his entrie, shall goe to him in the remainder in fee, in respect of the privie of estate: and so it is of him in the reversion in fee in like case, for he is also privie in estate.

If two joyntenants be disseised, and the one of them make continuall claime and dieth, the survivor shall take benefit of his continuall claime in respect of the privie of their estate.

But if tenant for life make continuall claime, this shall not give any benefit to him in the remainder, unlesse the disseisor died in the life of tenant for life, for the cause abovesaid, See Note 414.

If tenant in taile, the remainder in fee with garrantie, have judgement to recover in value, and dieth before execution without issue, he in the remainder shall sue execution, for he hath right thereunto, and is privie in estate.

In the same manner, if a feignorie be granted by fine to one for life, the remainder in fee, the grantee for life dieth, he in the remainder shall have a per quæ servitia, for he hath right to the remainder, and is privie in estate. Here also it appeareth, that none can make continuall claime, but he that hath right to enter.

Sect. 417.

MES est a veier a toy (mon fils) coment et en quel manner tiel continuall claime serra fait: et ceo bien apprender, trois choses sont a intender. La 1. chose

BUT it is to be seene of thee (my son) how and in what manner such continuall claime shall be made: and to learne this wel, three things are to be understood. The first

SI bome ad cause d'entrer en ascuns terres outenements, &c.

It is not sufficient to tell one generally what he should doe, but to direct him how, and in what manner he shall doe it, as Littleton doth in this place. And here, the generall rules of our author are to bee understood,

21. E. 3. 14. a. 5. E. 4. a. 24. H. 8. For. Br. 87. li. a. fol. 55. 56. Buckler's case. 27. E. 3. 77. 17. E. 3. 7. a. 39. E. 3. 16. 29. E. 3. 24. 5. Aff. 5. 5. E. 3. contr. cong. 42. 14. E. 3. receit 135. 3. E. 3. 32. 24. E. 3. 68. 1. H. 7. (1. Roll. Abr. 852. 3. Rep. 4. b. 1. Leo. 264. 9. Rep. 106.)

3. Mar. Dy. 148.

Lib. 2. fol. 55. Buckler's case.

13. E. 4. 4.

(Ant. 202. b.)

39. Aff. 15. 43. E. 3. contr. cong. 30.

2. H. 5. 7. 39. E. 3. 16. 45. E. 3.

25.

(Ant. 28. a. 42. a.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 630.)

(Pl. 355. b. 359. a. 2. Infl. 513. 3. Rep. 91. a.)

(Post. 263. b.)

This hath bene adjudged, Mich. 14. & 15. Eliz. Rot. 1453.
in the Earl of Arundell's case.

(4. Leo. 8.)
(1. Leo. 36.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 793.)
(1. Leo. 51.)

7. Aff. 18. 12. E. 4. 10.
35. H. 6. 27. 32. Aff. pl. 1.

11. H. 7. 25. Dyer. 16. El.
337.

5. H. 7. 7. 4. E. 4. 19.
12. E. 4. 11. 2.
(Ant. 32. 180. b.)
(10. Rep. Lampet's case.)
(Flo. Com. 91.)

stood, that the entrie of a man, to recontinue his inheritance or freehold, must ensue his action for recoverie of the same. As if three men disseise me severally, of three severall acres of land, being all in one countie, and I enter in one acre, in the name of all the three acres, this is good for no more but for that acre which I entered into, because each disseisor is a severall tenant of the freehold, and as I must have severall actions against them, for the recoverie of the land, so mine entrie must be severall.

And so it is if one man disseise mee of three acres of ground, and letteth the same severally to three persons for their lives, &c. there the entrie upon one lessee, in the name of the whole, is good for no more than that acre that he hath in his possession. But if the disseisor had lettten severally the said three acres to three persons for yeares, there the entrie upon one of the lessees, in the name of all the three acres, shall recontinue and revest all the three acres in the disseisee, for that the disseisee might have had one assise against the disseisor, because he remained tenant of the freehold for all the three acres, and therefore one entrie shall serve for the whole.

If one disseise me of one acre at one time, and after disseise me of another acre in the same countie at another time, in this case mine entrie into one of them in the name of both is good; for that one assise might be brought against him for both disseisins.

But if I infeoffe one of one acre of ground upon condition, and at another time I infeoffe the same man of another acre in the same countie upon condition also, and both the conditions are broken, an entrie into one acre in the name of both is not sufficient, for that I have no right to the land, nor action to recover the same, but a bare title, and therefore severall entries must be made into the same, in respect of the severall conditions. But an entrie in one part of the land, in the name of all the land subject to one condition, is good, although the parcels be severall, and in severall townes. And so note a diversitie betweene severall rights of entrie, and severall titles of entrie, by force of a condition (1).

Deins mesme la countie. For if the lands lye in severall counties, there must be severall actions, and consequently severall entries, as hath bene said.

En nosme de tout, &c. If one disseise me of two severall acres in one countie, and I enter into one of them generally, without saying, In the name of both; this shall revest only that acre wherein entrie is made, as hath bene said; and that is proved by our bookes, which say, that if I bring an assise of two acres, if I enter into one hanging the writ, albeit it shall revest that only acre, yet the writ shall abate.

Dont il ad title d'entrie. Here in a large sence, title of entrie is taken for a right of entrie.

Sect.

* et added in L. and M. and Roh.

† tous ---- tiels, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ en fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) The entry for a condition broken has been discussed in the preceding chapter, and the commentary and notes upon it. In the notes to the chapter of Discontinuances, some observations will be made on entries of feoffees, or releasees, for the purpose of revesting uses.--- With respect to entries for avoiding fines, there were four modes of avoiding a fine at the common law; two by matter of record, and two by acts in pais. Those by matter of record were, a real action commenced within a year and a day after the fine was levied, and an entry of a claim on the record at the foot of the fine itself, in this manner, talis venit et apponit clamorem suum. Those by acts in pais were a lawful entry upon the land by the person who had a right; and if that could not be done, a continual claim. But by the statute of 4. H. 7. all those who are affected by a fine must pursue their title by way of action, or lawful entry: so that a claim entered on the record of a fine would now be ineffectual. The actual entry must be made by the person who has a right to the lands, or some one appointed by him, either by preceding command or subsequent assent, within five years. See Plowd. 355. 359. 2. Inst. 518. 3. Rep. 91. 2. Inst. 518. 2. Bla. Rep. 994. --- By the statute of 4. Ann. c. 16. Sect. 16. it is enacted, "That no claim or entry to be made of or upon any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, shall be of any force or effect to avoid any fine levied, or to be levied, with proclamations, according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, in the court of common pleas; or in the courts of sessions in any of the counties palatine, or in the courts of great sessions in Wales, shall be a sufficient entry or claim within the statute of limitations, unless upon such entry or claim an action shall be commenced within one year next after the making of such entry or claim, and prosecuted with effect."

Sect. 418.

CAR si home voile enseoffer un auter sans fait de certaine terres ou tenements que il ad deins plusours villes en un countie, et il voile liverer seisin al feoffee de parcel de tenements deins un ville en nosme de tous les terres ou tenements que il ad en mesme le ville, et en les auters villes, &c. tous les dits tenements, &c. passent per force de le dit livery de seisin a celui a que tiel feoffement en tiel maner est fait, et uncore celui a que tiel livery de seisin fuit fait, n'avoit droit * en tous les terres ou tenements en tous les villes, mes per cause de livery de seisin fait de parcel de les terres ou tenements en un ville : à multò fortiori, il semble bone reason que quant home ad title d'enter en les terres ou tenements en divers villes deins un mesme county, devant ascun entry per luy fait, que per l'entry fait per luy en parcel de les terres en un ville, en le nosme de tous les terres et tenements as queux il ad title d'enter deins mesme le countie, ceo † vest un seisin de tous en luy, et per tiel entry il ad possession et seisin en fait, sicome il avoit enter en chescun parcel, &c.

FOR if a man will enseoffe another without deed of certain lands or tenements which he hath in many townes in one countie, and he will deliver seisin to the feoffee of parcell of the tenements within one towne in the name of all the lands or tenements which he hath in the same towne, and in other townes, &c. all the said tenements, &c. passe by force of the said livery of seisin to him to whom such feoffment in such manner is made, and yet hee to whom such livery of seisin was made, hath no right in all the lands or tenements in all the townes, but by reason of the livery of seisin made of parcell of the lands or tenements in one towne : à multò fortiori, it seemeth good reason that when a man hath title to enter into the lands or tenements in divers townes in one same county, before entry by him made, that by the entry made by him into parcell of the lands in one towne, in the name of all the lands and tenements to which he hath title to enter within the same county, this shall vest a seisin of all in him, and by such entry hee hath possession and seisin in deed, as if he had entred into every parcell.

(9. Rep. 136. b.)

(Ant. 48. 49. 50. Post. 253. a.)

(2. Rep. 31.)

THIS is evident, but here is a diversity between a feoffment and an entry ; for a man may make a feoffment of lands in another county, and make livery of seisin within the view, albeit he might peaceably enter and make actuall livery ; and so may he shew the recognitors in an assise, the view of lands in another county ; but a man cannot make an entry into lands within the view where he may enter without any feare (for it is (*) one thing to invest, and another to devert), as hereafter shall be said in the Section next following.

38. E. 3. 11. 38. Aff. 23.

(*) Vid. Sect. next following.

A multò fortiori. Or à minore ad majus, is an argument frequent in our author, and in our bookes, the force of argument in this place standing thus : if it be so in a feoffment passing a new right, much more it is for the restitution of an ancient right, as the worthier and more respected in law, which holderth affirmatively, as our author here teacheth us.

Vid. Sect. 438.

The three (&c.) in this Section need no explication.

Sect.

* ex—a, L. and M. and Roh.

† vest—est, L. and M. and Roh.

Sect. 419.

Vide the Sect. preceding.
(2. Roll. Abr. 124. 2. Infl. 483.)

7. E. 4. 21. 39. H. 6. 5.

(3. Rep. 13.)
39. E. 3. 18. 11. R. 2. tit. dures 2.
12. H. 4. 19. 20.

Bract. lib. 2. fol. 16. b. Britton
fol. 19. 66. Fleta lib. 3. cap. 7.
and lib. 2. cap. 54. 49. E. 3. 14.
14. H. 4. 13. 39. Aff. 11.
11. H. 6. 51. 38. H. 6. 27.
39. H. 6. 36. 5. 20. H. 6. 28.
4. E. 4. 17. 12. E. 4. 7. 28. H. 6. 8.
41. E. 3. 9. 11. H. 4. 6.
8. Aff. 25. Vid. Sect. 424.
W. 2. cap. 49. 13. H. 4. dures 20.

Vid. Sect. 378.

11. H. 6. 51.
(Post. 256. b.)

Vid. Sect. 412. Pl. Com. 97. in Aff. de-trethforce. The parson of Honylanc's case.

HERE is to be observed, that every doubt or feare is not sufficient, for it must concerne the safety of the person of a man, and not his houses or goods; for if hee feare the burning of his houses, or the taking away or spoiling of his goods, this is not sufficient, because hee may recover the same, or damages to the value without any corporall hurt.

Again, if the feare doe concern the person, yet it must not bee a vaine feare, but such as may befall a constant man; as if the adverse partie lie in wait in the way with weapons, or by words menace to beat, mayhem, or kill him; that would enter; and so in pleading must hee shew some just cause of feare, for feare of it selfe is internall and feccret. But in a speciall verdict, if the jurors doe finde that the disseisee did not enter for feare of corporall hurt, this is sufficient, and shall be intended that they had evidence to prove the same. Talis enim debet esse metus qui cadere potest in virum constantem, et qui in se continet mortis periculum, et corporis cruciatum. Et nemo tenetur se infortuniis et periculis exponere.

And it seemeth that feare of imprisonment is also sufficient, for such a feare sufficeth to avoid a bond or a deed; for the law hath a speciall regard to the safety and liberty of a man. And imprisonment is a corporall damage, a restraint of liberty, and a kind of captivity. But see in the Second Part of the Institutes, H. 2. cap. 49. a notable diversity betwene a claime or an entry into land, and the avoidance of an act or deed for feare of battery.

Per tiel claime il ad un possession et seisin, &c. Here is to be observed, that there be two manner of entries, viz. an entry in deed, and an entry in law. An entry in deed is sufficiently knowne. An entry in law is when such a claime is made as is here expressed, which entry in law is as strong and as forcible in law as an entry in deed, and that as well where the lands are in the hands of one by title as by wrong. And therefore upon such an entry in law an assise doth lie, as well as upon an entry in deed, and such an entry in law shall avoid a warranty, &c.

But here is a diversity to be observed betwene an entry in law and an entry in deed, for that a continuall claime of the disseisee being an entry in law, shall vest the possession and seisin in him for his advantage, but not for his disadvantage. And therefore if the disseisee bring an assise, and hanging the assise he make continuall claime, this shall not abate the assise, but he shall recover damages from the beginning; but otherwise it is of an entry in deed. See more of this matter after in this chapter, Sect. 422.

LE second chose est a entendre, que si home ad title d'enter en ascuns terres ou tenements, s'il ne oFAST enter en mesmes les terres ou tenements, ne en ascun parcel de ceo per doubt de battery, ou per doubt de mayhem, ou per doubt de mort, s'il alast et approch auxy pres les tenements come il oFAST pur tiel doubt, et claime per parol les tenements estre les soens, maintenant per tiel claime il ad un possession et seisin en les tenements, auxy bien come * s'il uST enter en fait, coment que il n'avoit unque possession ou seisin de mesme les + terres ou tenements devant le dit claime.

THE second thing to be understood is, that if a man hath title to enter into any lands or tenements, if he dares not enter into the same lands or tenements, nor into any parcell thereof for doubt of beating, or for doubt of mayming, or for doubt of death, if he goeth and approach as neere to the tenements as hee dare for such doubt, and by word claime the lands to bee his, presently by such claime he hath a possession and seisin in the lands, as well as if hee had entered in deed, although hee never had possession or seisin of the same lands or tenements before the said claime.

Sect.

* Not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ terres ou not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Sect. 420.

ET que la ley est tiel, il est bien prove per un plee d'un assise en le liver d'assise, an. 38. E. 3. p. * 32. le tenor de quel ensuiet en tiel forme. En le county de Dorset, devant les justices, trouve fuit per verdict d'assise, que le plaintiffe que avoit droit per discent de heritage d'aver les tenements mis en plaint, al temps del morant son ancester fuit demurrant en le ville ou les tenements fueront, † et per parolx claime les tenements enter ses vicines, mes pur doubt de mort il n'osa approcher les tenements, mes port l'assise, et sur cest matter trouve, agard fuit que il recovers, &c.

AND that the law is so, it is well proved by a plea of an assise in the booke of assises, an. 38. E. 3. p. 32. the tenor whereof followeth in this manner. In the county of Dorset, before the justices, it was found by verdict of assise, that the plaintiff which had right by discent of inheritance to have the tenements put in plaint, at the decease of his ancestor was abiding in the towne where the tenements were, and by paroll claimed the tenements amongst his neighbours, but for feare of death hee durst not approach the tenements, but bringeth his assise, and upon this matter found, it was awarded that he should recover, &c.

HERE it appeareth that our booke cases are the best proofes what the law is, Argumentum ab autoritate est fortissimum in lege. And for proofe of the law in this particular case, Littleton here citeth a case in 38. E. 3. but it is misprinted, for the original, according to the truth, is in the Booke of Assises, 38. E. 3. p. 23. and not placito 32. for there be not so many pleas in that yeare. And after the example of Littleton, booke cases are principally to be cited for deciding of cases in question, and not any private opinion, teste meipso. More shall be said of the matter implied in this Section in the next following. 38. Ass. p. 23.

Sect. 421.

LA tierce chose est a entendre deins quel temps ‡ et per quel temps le claime que est dit continual claime servira et aidera celui que fist le claime, et ses heires. Et quant a ceo est ascavoir, que celui que ad tite d'enter, quant il voiet faire son claime, si il osast approcher la

THE third thing is to know within what time and by what time the claim which is said continual claime shall serve and aid him that maketh the claime, and his heires. And as to this it is to be understood, that hee which hath title to enter, when he will make his claime, if hee dare approach the land, then

*CO*vient a luy d'aller et approcher auxipres, &c. By this it should seeme, that by the authority of our author, if the disseise cometh as neere to the land as he dare, &c. and maketh his claime, this should be sufficient, albeit he be not within the view.

And the great authoritie of the booke * in 9. H. 4. (*) 9. H. 4. 5. (being by the whole court) is not against this; for that case is put where there is no such feare, as here our author mentioneth, in him that makes the continual claime, and

* p. 32. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ et per quel temps not in L. and M. nor Roh.

and then he that makes the continuall claime ought to bee within the view of the land; and therefore the authoritie of this booke, as it is commonly conceived, is not against the opinion of our author in the point aforesaid. But then it is further objected, that the said booke is against another opinion of our author in this Section, viz. that where there is no feare, &c. hee that maketh a continuall claime * ought to go to the land or to parcell thereof to make his claime, and therefore in that case he cannot make a claime within the view of the land.

* 11. H. 6. 51. agreeth with our author in this point.

(3. Rep. 25. Ant. 15. Ant. 245.)

Vid. Sect. 477.

*terre, donques il covient aler a la terre, ou a parcel de ceo, * et faire son claime; et s'il n'osast approcher la terre pur doubt ou pavor de batterie, ou maybem, ou mort, donques covient a luy d'aler et approcher auxypres come il osast vers laterre, ou † parcel de ceo, ‡ a faire son claime.*

he ought to goe to the land, or to parcell of it, and make his claime; and if hee dare not approach the land for doubt or feare of beating, or maiming, or death, then ought hee to goe and approach as neere as hee dare towards the land, or parcell of it, to make his claime.

To this it is answered, that where a continuall claime shall devest any estate in any other person in any lands or tenements, there, as it hath beene said, he that maketh the claime ought to enter into the land, or some part thereof, according to the opinion of our author: but where the claime is not to devest any estate, but to bring him that maketh it into actuall possession, there a claime within the view sufficeth; as upon a discent, the heire having the freehold in law may claime land within the view to bring himselfe into actuall possession, and in that sense is the opinion of Hall and the court to be intended. Et sic in similibus. But yet the entry into some parcell in the name of the residue is the surest way. (1)

Sect. 422.

Vid. Sect. 383. 426. 9. H. 4. 5. 14. H. 4. 36. 7. E. 3. 37. Pl. Com. 356. 357. 367. Mirror, cap. 2. 18. Britton, fol. 45. b. & 126.

DEINS l'an et le jour. It is to bee observed, that the law in many cases hath limited a yeare and a day to be a legall and convenient time for many purposes. As at the common law, upon a fine or finall judgement given in a writ of right, the party grieved had a yeare and a day to make his claime. So the wife or heire hath a yeare and a day to bring an appeale of death. If a villeine remained in antient demesne a yeare and a day, he is privileged. If a man be wounded or poysoned, &c. and dieth thereof within the yeare and the day, it is felony. By the antient law if the feoffee of a disseisor had continued a yeare and a day, the entry of the disseisor for his negligence had beene taken away. After judgement given in a reall action, the plaintife within the yeare and the day may have a habere facias seisinam, and in an action of debt, &c. a capias fieri facias, or a levari facias. A protection shall be allowed but for a yeare and a day, and no longer, and in many other cases.

(Post. 262. a.)

(Ant. 120. b.)

Vi. Sect. 385.

ET si son adversarie que occupia le terre, morust seisie en fee, ou en fee taile, deins l'an et le jour apres tiel claim, per que les tenemens descendont a son fits come heire a luy, uncore poit celuy que fist le claime entrer sur le possession le heire, † &c.

AND if his adversary who occupieth the land, dieth seised in fee, or in fee taile, within the yeare and a day after such claime, whereby the lands descend to his sonne as heire to him, yet may hee which make the claime enter upon the possession of the heire, &c.

But this time of a yeare and a day in case of continuall claime is, since our author wrote, altered by the said statute of 32. H. 8. ca. 33. as before it appeareth.

Sect.

* a added in L. and M. and Roh.

† a—et, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Even where a declaration in ejectment is delivered, though the defendant appears to it, and confesses lease, entry, and ouster, yet, to avoid a fine, there must be an actual entry. This was very solemnly determined in the king's bench, in the case of Berrington v. Packhurst; and by the lords on appeal in 1738. See 2. Stra. 1086. 4. Bro. Par. Cal. 353. This doctrine has been twice very expressly recognized;—first, in the case of Wigfall v. Brydon, 3. Burr. 1895; and since in the case of Goodright v. Cator, Doug. 460. In that case, lord Mansfield states the distinction to be, that where entry is necessary to complete the landlord's title, there the confession of lease, entry, and ouster, is sufficient; but that where it is requisite in order to rebut the defendant's title, actual entry must be made. The latter is the case where a fine is to be avoided.

Sect. 423.

MES en cest cas apres l'an et le jour que tiel claime fuit fait, * si le pere donques morust seisi ademaine procheine apres l'an et le jour, ou † un auter jour apres, &c. donques ne poit celuy que fist le claime entrer: et pur ceo si celuy que fist le claime voit estre sure a tous temps que son entre ne serra toll per tiel discent, &c. il covient a luy que deins l'an et le jour apres le primer claime ‡ fait, de faire un auter claime en le forme avantdit, et deins l'an et le jour apres le second claime || fait, de faire le tierce claime en mesme le maner, et deins l'an et le jour de le tierce claime de faire un auter claime, et issint ouster, cest asca-voir, de faire un claime deins chescun an et jour procheine apres chescun claime fait durant la vie son adversarie, et donques a quecunques temps que son adversarie morust seisi, son entrie ne serra tolle per nul tiel discent. Et tiel claime en tiel maner § fait, est pluis communement prise et nosme Continual Claime de luy que fist le claime.

BUT in this case after the yeare and the day that such claime was made, if the father then died seised the morrow next after the yeare and the day, or any other day after, &c. then cannot hee which made the claime enter: and therefore if hee which made the claime will be sure at all times that his entrie shall not be taken away by such discent, &c. it behoveth him that within the yeare and the day after the first claime made, to make another claime in forme aforesaid, and within the yeare and the day after the second claime made, to make the third claime in the same man-ner, and within the yeare and the day after the third claime to make another claime, and so over, that is to say, to make a claime within everie yeare and day next after everie claime made during the life of his adversarie, and then at what time soever his adversarie dieth seised, his entrie shall not be taken away by any discent. And such claime in such maner made, is most commonly taken and named Continuall Claime of him which ma-keth the claime, &c.

IT is to be observed, that the yeare and the day shall be so accounted, as the day whereon the claime was made shall be accounted one: as for example, if the claime were made
2. die Martii, that day shall be accounted for one; for Littleton saith in the Section next before (after the claime made) and then the yeare must end the first day of March, and the day after is the second day of March.

See for the computation of the yeare, de anno bisextili, and of the day naturall and arti-ficiall, and other parts of the yeare, [a] Bracton, [b] Britton, and [c] Fleta excellent matter.

Vid. Sect. 385.
(Ant. 46. b.)

[a] Bract. fol. 264. 344. 359
(2. Roll. Abr. 1521.)
[b] Britton, fol. 209.
[c] Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 11.
Statute de anno Bisextili.
21. H. 3. Dier 17. Eliz. 345.

Sect. 424.

MES uncore en le cas a-vantdit, lou son adver-

BUT yet in the case aforesaid, where his adversarie dieth sarie

* si nul auter clayme fust fait, added in L. and M. and Roh.
‡ fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† a added in L. and M. and Roh.

§ d'estre added in L. and M. and Roh.

sarie morust deins l'an et la jour within the yeare and the day next *procheine apres le * claime, ceo est* after the claime, this is in law a en ley un continuall claime, en- continuall claime, insomuch as tant que l'adversarie deins l'an et his adversarie within the yeare and le jour procheine apres mesme the day next after the same claime la claime morust. Car il ne be- dieth. For hee which made his soigne a celuy que fist son claime claime needeth not to make any de faire ascun auter claime, mes other claime, but at what time hee a quel temps que il † voit deins will within the same yeare and mesme l'an et jour, &c. day, &c.

Vid. Sect. 414.

This is evident.

Sect. 425.

Vid. Stat. 32. H. 8. c. 33.)

ITEM, si l'adversarie soit dis-seisie deins l'an et le jour a-pres tiel claime, et le disseifor ent morust seisie deins l'an et le jour, &c. tiel morant seisie ne grievera my celuy que fist le claime, mes que il poit enter, &c. Car quecunque soit que morust seisie deins l'an et le jour procheine a-pres tiel claime fait, ceo ne grievera my celuy que fist le claime, mes que il poit enter, &c. coment que fueront plusors morant seisie, et plusors discents deins mesme l'an et le jour, &c.

ALSO, if the adversarie be dis-seised within the yeare and the day after such claime, and the disseisor thereof dieth seised within the yeare and the day, &c. such dying seised shall not grieve him which made the claime, but that he may enter, &c. For whosoever hee be that dieth seised within the yeare and the day after such claim made, this shall not hurt him that made the claime, but that hee may enter, &c. albeit there were many dyings seised, and many discents within the same yeare and day, &c.

HERE it appeareth, that the continuall claime doth not only extend to the first dis-seisor, in whose possession it was made, but to any other disseisor, that dieth seised within the yeare and day after the continuall claime made. And whereas our author speaketh of a second disseisor, &c. herein is likewise implied not only abators and intruders, but the feoffees or donees of the disseisors, abators, or intruders, and any other feoffee or donee immediate or mediate, dying seised within the yeare and day, of such continuall claime made.

Sect. 426.

ITEM, si home soit disseisie, et le disseisor morust seisie deins l'an et le jour prochain apres le disseisin fait, per que les tenements descendent a son

ALSO, if a man be disseised, and the disseisor dieth seised within the yeare and day next after the disseisin made, whereby the tenements descend to his heire, in this heire,

* primer added L. and M. and Roh,

† voit not in L. and M. nor Roh.

heire, en cest case l'entrie le disseisee est toll, car l'an et le jour que aidroit le disseisee en tiel case, ne serra pris de temps de title d'entre a luy accrue, mes tantselement de temps del claime per luy fait en le manner avantdit. Et pur cel cause il serroit bone pur tiel disseisee pur faire son claime † en auxy breve temps que il puissoit apres le disseisin, &c.*

case the entrie of the disseisee is taken away, for the yeare and day which should aid the disseisee in such case, shall not bee taken from the time of title of entrie accrued unto him, but only from the time of the claime made by him in manner afore said. And for this cause it shall be good for such disseisee to make his claime in as short time
as he can after the disseisin, &c.

THIS in case of a disseisor is now holpen by the statute made since Littleton wrote; as hath beene said; for if the disseisor die seised within five yeares after the disseisin, though there be no continuall claime made, it shall not take away the entrie of the disseisee, but after the five yeares there must be such continuall claime as was at the common law: but that statute extendeth not to any feoffee or donee of the disseisor immediate or mediate, but they remaine still at the common law, as hath beene said.

32. H. 8. cap. 33.
Vide Sect. 383. 424.
(Ant. 238. a.)

Sect. 427.

*ITEM, si tiel disseisor occupia la terre per xl. ans, ou per † plusors ans, sans ascun claime fait per le disseisee, &c. § et le disseisee per petit space devaunt le mort del disseisor fait un claime en le forme avantdit, si issint fortunast que deins l'an et le jour apres tiel claime le disseisor morust, &c. l'entrie le disseisee est congeable, &c. Et pur ceo il serroit bone pur tiel home que ne fist claime, que ad bone title d'entrie ||, quant il oyet que son adversarie gist languishment, de faire son claime,
&c.*

ALSO, if such disseisor occupieth the lands fortie yeares, or more yeares, without any claime made by the disseisee, &c. and the disseisee a little before the death of the disseisor makes a claime in the forme afore said, if so it fortuneth that within the yeare and the day after such claime the disseisor die, &c. the entrie of the disseisee is congeable, &c. And therefore it shall bee good for such a man which hath not made claime, and which hath good title of entrie, when hee heareth that his adversarie lieth languishing, to make his claime, &c.

THIS is evident enough, and in respect of that which hath beene said, needeth not to be explained.

Sect. 428.

*ITEM, sicome est dit en les cases
mises, lou home*

ALSO, as it is said
in the cases put,
where a man hath

HERE title is taken in his large sense to include a right.
*Ascun auter title,
&c.*

* &c. added L. and M. † &c. added L. and M. ‡ plus added L. and M. § et not in L. and M. || &c. added L. and M.

Ec. Here is implied abators or intruders, and not only their disseisors, but the feoffees or donees of disseisors, abators, or intruders, or any other so long as the entrie is congeable.

ad title d'entre pur of entrie by cause of cause d'un disseisin, a disseisin, &c. the Ec. mesme la ley same law is where a est lou home ad droit man hath right to en-d'entre per cause de ter by cause of an-ascun auter title, Ec. other title, &c.

Sect. 429.

ITEM, de les dits * presidents
poies scarver (mon fits) deux choses. Un est, lou home ad title d'entre sur un tenant en le taile, s'il fist un tiel claime a la terre,
donques est l'estate taile defeat, car cel claime est come entre fait per luy, et est de mesme l'effect en ley, sicome il fuisset sur mesmes tenements, et ust entrer en mesmes les tenements, come devant est dit. † Et donques quant le tenant en le taile immediate puis tiel claime continua son occupation en les tenements, ceo est un disseisin fait de mesmes les tenements a celui que fist tiel claime, et sic per consequens, le tenant adonques ad fee simple.

ALSO, of the said foresaying thou mayst know (my sonne) two things. One is, where a man hath title to enter upon a tenant in taile, if he maketh such a claime to the land, then is the estate taile defeated, for this claime is as an entrie made by him, and is of the same effect in law, as if he had bin upon the same tenements, and had entred into the same, as before is said. And then when the tenant in taile immediately after such claime continue his occupation in the lands, this is a disseisin made of the same tenements to him which made such claime, and so by consequent, the tenant then hath a fee simple.

Presidents. This should be precedents, and so is the originall, and this agreeth with the right sence of Littleton.

(Ant. 233.)

And here it appeareth, that a continuall claime, which is an entrie in law, is as strong as an entrie in deed.

Vide Sect. 630. and 639, &c.

Title de entrie. Here title de entrie is taken in the large sence for right of entrie.

Sect. 430.

LE second chose est, que auxy sovent que il que ad droit d'entre fait tiel claime, † et ceo nient contristeant son adversary continua son occupation, § auxy sovent l'adversary fait tort et disseisin a celui que fist le claime. Et

THE second thing is, that as often as hee which hath right of entrie maketh such claime, and this notwithstanding his adversary continue his occupation, so often the adversary doth wrong and disseisin to him which made the claime.

pur

* dites precedents L. and M.

† Et not in L. and M. nor Roh.
§ Ec. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ et ceo—Ec. L. and M. and Roh.

*pur cel cause auxy souvent poit celuy que fist * mesme le claime pur chescun tiel tort et disseisin fait a luy, aver un brieve de trespasse, † Quare clausum fregit, &c. et recovera ses damages, &c.*

And for this cause so often may hee which makes the same claime for every such wrong and disseisin done unto him, have a writ of trespasse, Quare clausum fregit, &c. and recover his dammages, &c.

HEREBY also it appeareth, that an entry in law is equivalent to an entry in deed.
Avera breve de trespasse, quare clausum fregit, et recoversa ses damages. The disseisee shall have an action of trespasse against the disseisor, and recover his dammages for the first entry without any regresse, but after regresse he may have an action of trespasse with a continuando, and recover as well for all the meane occupation as for the first entry. And here note, that Littleton doth here include costs within dammages.

(2. Roll. Abr. 550. 1. Rep. 98.
1. Leo. 302. 20. H. 6. 15.
38. H. 6. 27.)

Sect. 431.

OU il poit aver un
brieve sur le statute le roy Richard le second, fait l'an de son raigne 5. supposant per son brieve que son adversary avoit entrer en les terres † ou tenements celuy que fist le claime, ou son entry ne fuit pas done per la ley, &c. et per tiel action il recove-ra ses dammages,
&c. Et si le case fuit tiel, que l'adversary occupiast les tenements ove force et armes, ou ove multitude de gents a temps
de tiel claime, &c. || immediate apres mesme le claime poit celuy que fist le claime pur chescun tiel fait aver un brieve de forcible entry, et reco-vera ses treble dam-mages, &c.

OR he may have a writ upon the statute of R. 2. made in the fifth yeare of his reigne, supposing by his writ that his adversarie had entred into the lands or tenements of him that made the claime, where his entry was not given by the law, &c. and by this action he shall recover his dammages, &c. And
if the case were such,
that the adversarie occupied the tenements with force and armes, or with a multitude of people at the time of such claime, &c. immediately after the same claime may hee which made the claim for every such act have a writ of forcible entry, and shall recover his treble dammages,
&c. (1)

Un brieve de forcible entrie, et recoversa ses treble dammages. This writ is

THIS is the statute of
5. R. 2. cap. 7.

(Dec. Pla. 381.)

37. H. 6. 35. 34. H. 6. 30.
13. H. 7. 15. 10. H. 6. 14.
2. E. 4. 18. 21. E. 4. 5. 74.
13. E. 2. 3. 27. Aff. 64.
38. Aff. 9. 44. E. 3. 20.
10. H. 7. 27. Keylwey 1. b.
5. R. 2. cap. 7.
(F. N. B. 248. 249.)

Per tiel action il recoversa ses dammages.

This is to be understood, that he shall recover damma-ges for the first torcious entry, but not for the meane profits in this action, though he made a regresse. And here note, that also he shall recover his costs of suit, expense litis, which Littleton doth include within these words (damma-ges, &c.)

2. E. 4. 24. b. 9. E. 4. 4. b.
16. H. 7. 6. a.

Dammages. Damna
in the common law hath a speciall signification for the recompence that is given by the jury to the plaintife or defendant, for the wrong the defendant hath done unto him. (2)

(2. Infl. 28). Post. 355. b.
10. Rep. 115. 116. 11. Rep. 56.)

Multitude. One or more may commit a force, three or more may commit an unlawfull assembly, a riot or a rout. A multitude here spoken of (as some have said) must be ten or more. Multitudinem decem faciunt. And so (say they) it is said de grege hominum. But I could never read it restrained by the common law to any certaine number, but left to the discretion of the judges. (3)

(3. Infl. 176. Hale's Pl. C. 127.

(See stat. 1. Geo. 1. c. 4.)

* mesme not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† Quare clausum fregit, &c. et recoversa ses damages, &c. ou il poit aver un brieve,
(the beginning of the next Section) not in L. and M. nor Roh. nor in MSS. before mentioned. It may be here observed, that the older copies of Littleton are not divided into Sections, which seem to have been first injudiciously marked by West in the edition 1585, though his divisions have been since retained for the convenience of citation. † ou—et, L. and M. and Roh. || immediate apres mesme le claime—donques, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Perhaps this passage is now quite accurate. Till the reign of Richard II. the party disseised, if his attempt were made soon after the disseisin, might recover his possession by force; but by a statute passed in the fifth year of that reign, it was enacted, that none from thenceforth should make any entry into lands and tenements, but in cases where entry was given by the law; and in that case, not with a strong hand, nor with a multitude of people, but only in a peaceable and easy manner; and that persons convicted of doing the contrary should be punished by imprisonment, to be ransomed at the king's pleasure. By a statute passed in the fifteenth year of the same reign, it was enacted, that upon complaint of any such forcible entries to the justices of peace, they should take sufficient power of the county, and go to the place where such force was made; and if they found any that held such place forcibly, after such entry made, they should be taken and put into the next gaol, there to abide convicted by the record of the same justices, until they had made fine and ransom to the king. By this it appears, that Littleton is equally wrong in his account of the punishment inflicted by that statute, and the offence it intended to correct. These statutes of the reign of Richard II. have been confirmed, explained, and in some respects extended by the stat. 4. H. 4. ch. 8. 8. H. 6. ch. 9. 23. H. 8. ch. 14. 31. Eliz. ch. 11. and 21. Jac. 1. ch. 15. See Burn. Just. vol. II. 181. It should be observed, that in case an action is brought on these statutes, if the defendant make himself a title, which is found for him, he shall be dismissed without any enquiry concerning the force; for howsoever he may be punishable at the king's suit, for doing what is prohibited by statute, as a contemner of the laws and disturber of the peace, yet he shall not be liable to pay any damages for it to the plaintiff, whose injustice gave him the provocation in that manner to right himself. See 1. Haw. 141.
3. Burr. 1698. 1731.

(2) Some observations on the progress of our law, with respect to damages, costs, and mesne profits, will be offered in a subsequent part of this work.

(3) By the common law there must be three persons at least to constitute a riot. By the 1. Geo. 1. c. 5. twelve persons at least must be unlawfully assembled, to be within that act. By the 13. Car. 2. st. 1. c. 1. not more than twenty names are to be signed to a petition to the king, or either house of parliament, for any alteration of matters established by law in church or state; and no petition is to be delivered by a company of more than ten persons. By the bill of rights, or declaration delivered by the lords and commons to the prince and princess of Orange, Feb. 13, 1688, and afterwards enacted in parliament, when they became king and queen, the fifth article is, "That it is the right of the subjects to petition the king, and that all commitments and prosecutions for such petitioning are illegal." Sir William Blackstone expressly says, that the right of the subject to petition, as declared by this statute, is under the regulations of the 13. Car. 2. But a question may be made, whether the declaration contained in the bill of rights was not, in this particular, a repeal of the 13. Car. 2.

Lib. 3. Cap. 7. Of Continuall Claime, Sect. 432, 433.

8. H. 6. cap. 9. 3. E. 4. 19. 24.
F. N. B. 218. 11. E. 4. 11. b.
6. H. 7. 12. b. 22. H. 6. 37.
19. H. 6. Register 97.
22. H. 6. 57. F. N. B. 249. a.
(2. Cro. 17. 19. 31. 148. 151.
199. 214. 633. 639. 1 Roll.
Rep. 406. Sid. 97. 149.
Noy 136. 1. Cro. 561.
2. Infl. 289. 4. Infl. 176. c. 15.
1. Leo. 317.)
(15. R. 2. c. 2. 8. H. 6. c. 9.
23. H. 8. c. 15. 31. El. c. 11.
21. Jac. c. 15.)

10. H. 7. 12.
33. H. 6. 20.

is grounded upon the statute of 8. H. 6. and lieth either where one entreth with force, or where he entreth peaceably and detaineth it with force, or where he entreth by force, and detaineth it by force. And in this action without any regresse the plaintife shall recover treble dammages, as well for the meane occupation as for the first entry by force of the statute. And albeit he shall recover treble dammages, yet shall he recover costs which shall be trebled also.

One may commit a forcible entry, as hath beene said, in respect of the armour or weapons which he hath that are not usually borne, or if he doe use violence, and threats to the terrour of another. And if three or foure goe to make a forcible entry, albeit one alone use the violence, all are guilty of force. If the master commeth with a greater number of servants than usually attend on him, it is a forcible entrie.

It is to be understood, that there is a force implied in law, as every trespassse and rescous and disseisin implieth a force, and is vi et armis; and there is an actuall force, as with weapons, number of persons, &c. and when an entry is made with such actuall force, an action doth lie upon the said statute. See before more of force and armes, Sect. 240.

Sect. 432.

ITEM, * il est a veier, si le servant d'un home que ad title d'enter, poit per le commandement son master faire continual claime pur son master ou non.

ALSO, it is to bee seene, if the servant of a man who hath title to enter, may by the commandement of his master make continuall claime for his master or not.

This needeth no explication.

Sect. 433.

ET il semble que en ascuns cases il poit ceo faire; car s'il per son commandement vient a ascun parcel de la terre, et la fait claime, &c. en le nosme son master, cest claime est assets bone pur son master, pur ceo que il fait tout ceo que son master covient faire † ou devoit faire en tiel cas, &c. ‡ Auxy si le master dit a son servant, que il ne oFAST vener a la terre, ne ascun parcel de la terre, pur faire son claime, &c. et que il ne oFAST approcher plus prochein a la terre forsque a tiel lieu appell Dale, et commanda son servant d'aler a mesme le lieu de Dale, et la faire un claime pur luy, &c. si le servant issint fait, &c. ceo semble auxy bone claime pur son master, sicome

AND it seemeth that in some cases he may doe this: for if he by his commandement commeth to any parcell of the land, and there maketh claime, &c. in the name of his master, this claime is good enough for his master, for that he doth all that which his master should or ought to doe in such case, &c. Also if the master faith to his servant, that hee dares not come to the land, nor to any parcell of it, to make his claime, &c. and that he dare approach no neerer to the land then to such a place called Dale, and command his servant to goe to the same place of Dale, and there make a claime for him, &c. if the servant doth this, &c. this also seemeth a good claime for his master, as if his master were there

* il-icy, L. and M. and Roh.

† ou devoit faire not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ Auxy not in L. and M. nor Roh.

son master la fuit en proper per-* there in his proper person, for that son, pur ceo que le servant fist the servant did all that which his tout ceo que son master ofast et master durst and ought to doe by devoit faire per la ley en tiel the law in such a case, &c.
case, &c.

HERE it appeareth that where the servant doth all that which he is commanded, and which his master ought to doe, there it is as sufficient as if his master did it himselfe; for the rule is, Qui per alium facit, per seipsum facere videtur.

Per commandement. If an infant or any man of full age have any right of entrie into any lands, any stranger in the name and to the use of the infant or man of full age may enter into the lands, and this regularly shall vest the lands in them without any commandement, precedent, or agreement subsequent. (*) But if a disseisor levy a fine, with proclamation according to the statute, an estranger without a commandement precedent, or an agreement subsequent within the five yeares cannot enter in the name of the disseisor to avoid the fine. And that resolution was grounded upon the construction of the statute of 4. H. 7. cap. 24. But an assent subsequent within the five yeares should be sufficient. Omnia enumeratio retrotrahitur, et mandato equiparatur, as hath beene said.

Auxi si le master dit a son servant que il ne ofast, &c. Here it appeareth, that where the servant pursueth the commandement of his master, and doth all that which his master durst and ought to doe by the law, this is sufficient. And although the master feareth more than the servant, or admit that the servant hath no feare at all, yet if he goeth as farre as his master durst, and as he commanded, it is sufficient. And this is implied in this Section.

Sect. 434.

AUXY, si home
soit cy lan-guissant, ou cy de-crepyte, que il ne poit per nul maner venter
a le terre, ne a ascun † parcel d'ycel, ou si un recluse soit, que ne poit per cause de son order aler hors de sa meason, ‡ si tiel maner || de person commaunda son servant
d'aler et faire claime pur luy, et tiel servant
ne ofast aler a le terre, § ne a ascun parcel de ceo, pur doubt de batery, mayhem, ou
mort, ¶ &c. et pur cel cause tiel servant vi-ent auxy pres a la terre come il ofast pur tiel

ALSO, if a man be so languishing, or so decrepite, that he cannot by any meanes come to the land, nor to any parcell of it, or if there bee a recluse, which may not by reason of his order goe out of his house, if such manner of person command his servant to goe and make claime for him, and such servant dare not goe to the land, nor to any parcell of it, for doubt of beating,
 mayhem, or death, &c.
 and for this cause the servant commeth as nere to the land as he dareth for such doubt

REGULARLY it is true, (Ant. 52. a.) that where a man doth lesse than the commandement or authority committed unto him, there (the commandement or authority being not pursued) the act is void. And where a man doth that which he is authorized to doe and more, there it is good for that which is warranted, and void for the rest;
 yet both these rules have divers exceptions and limitations. (1)

For the first, Littleton here putteth a case where the servant doth lesse than he is commanded, and yet it sufficeth; for that Impotentia excusat le-gem; for seeing the master cannot, and the servant dare not, enter into the land, it sufficeth that he come as neere to the land as he dare.

If a man makes a letter of attorney to deliver seisin to J. S. upon condition, and the attorney delivereth it absolute, this is void: and so some hold if the warrant bee absolute, and hee delivereth seisin

* son added in L. and M. and Roh.
 || de not in L. and M.

† parcel not in L. and M. nor Roh.
 § ne — ou, L. and M. and Roh.

¶ &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.
 ¶ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Where there is a complete execution of a power, and something, ex abundanti, added, which is improper, there the execution shall be good, and only the excess void; but where there is not a complete execution of a power, or where the boundaries between the excess and execution are not distinguishable, it will be bad. See Alexander v. Alexander, 2. Vez. 644.

7. E. 3. 69. a. b.
 45. E. 3. Release. 28.
 45. E. 3. tit. Briefe 289.
 20. E. 3. 62. per Thoup.
 11. Aff. p. 11. 39. Aff. p. 18.
 10. H. 7. 12. a.
 31. H. 8. tit. entr. Cong. et tit.
 Fawceter recovery 29.
 (*) Lib. 9. fo. 106. a. the Lord
 Awdleye's case.

(Hob. 154.)
 (1. Leo. 289.)

11. H. 4. 3.
 12. Aff. 24. 26. Aff. 19.
 (Perk. 38. b. Mo. 280.)

See before Sect. 419.

(a. Inst. 483.)
(Ant. 243. b.)

feisin upon condition, the liverie is void.

Pur battery, mayhem, ou mort. See the Second Part of the Institutes, W. 2. cap. 49. a diversity between the making of an entry or claime, and the avoidance of an act or deed.Auterment le master serroit en tresgrand mischiese. Argumentum ab inconvenienti est validum in lege, quia lex non permittit aliquod inconveniens. And as hath beene often observed before, Nilil quod est inconveniens est licitum.Recluse, Reclusus, Heremita, seu Anchorita, so called by the order of his religion; he is so mured or shut up, quod solus semper sit. et in clausura sua sedet; and can never come out of his place. Scorsim enim et extra conversationem civilem hoc professionis genus semper habitat. Note here, albeit the recluse or anchorite be shut up himseife, so as he by his order is not to come out in person, yet to avoid a discent, he must command one to make claime, and such a recluse shall always appeare by attorney in such cases where others must appeare in proper person, *Impotentia enim excusat legem. doubt, et fait † le and maketh the claime, claime, &c. Jurson master, il semble que tiel &c. for his master, it seemeth that such claime pur son master claime for his master est assés fort, et bon en is strong enough, and ley. Car auterment good in law. For otherwise his master son master serroit en should bee in a very tresgrand mischiese; great mischiese; for it car il bien poit estre may well be that such que tiel person que est person which is sicke, languissant, decre- decrepit, or recluse, pite, ou recluse, ne cannot finde any ser- poit trover ascun ser- vant which dare go to vant que oïst aler a the land, or to any par- la terre, ne ‡ ascun cell of it, to make the parcel de cel, pur faire claime for him, &c. *le claime pur luy, &c.*46. E. 3. Petition 18.
33. H. 6. 8.
43. E. 3. 8. b. 30. a.

Sect. 435.

MES si le master de tiel servant soit de bone sane, et poit et oïst bien aler a les tene-ments, ou a parcel de ceo, de faire son elaime, &c. si tiel master com-manda son servant d'aler a ascun parcel de la terre a faire claime pur luy, || et quant le servant est en alant de faire le commandement de son master, il oye per le voy tielx choses que il ne oïst vener a ascun parcel de la terre pur faire le claime pur son master, et pur cel cause il vient auxy pres la terre come il oïst pur doubt de mort, et la fait claime pur son master, et en le nosme de son master, &c. il semble que le doubt en le ley en tiel case serroit, si tiel claime availera son master ou nemy,BUT if the master of such servant bee in good health, and can and dare well goe to the lands, or to parcell of it, to make his claime, &c. if such master command his servant to goe to any parcell of the land to make claime for him, and when the servant is in going to doe the commandement of his master, he heareth by the way such things as he dare not come to any parcell of the land to make the claime for his master, and therefore he commeth as neere to the land as he dare for doubt of death, and there maketh claime for his master, and in the name of his master, &c. it seemeth that the doubt in law in such case shall be, whether such claime shall availe his master *pur doubt --- parvour, in L. and M. and Roh.
† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.† le---tiel, in L. and M. and Roh.‡ a added in L. and M. and Roh.

pur ceo que le servant ne fist tout or not, for that the servant did not ceo que son master al temps de all that which his master at the son commandement oſast faire, &c. time of his commandement durst Quære. have done, &c. Quære.

THIS continuall claime is void, for that the servant doth lesse than that which is ex- (9. Rep. 79.)
 precisely commanded, and there is no impotencie or feare in the master.

Sect. 436.

ITEM, ascuns ont
dit, que lou home est en prison et est
disseise, et le disseisor
morust seise durant le temps que le disseisee est en prison, per que les tenements descendont al beire del dis-seisor, ils ont dit, que ceo ne noiera my le disseisee que est en prison, mes que il bien poit enter, nient obstant tiel descent, pur ceo que il ne puissoit faire continual claime
quant il fuit en prison.

AL SO, some have said, that where a man is in prison and is disseised, and the disseisor dieth seised during the time that the disseisee is in prison, whereby the tenements descend to the heire of the disseisor, they have said, that this shall not hurt the disseisee which is in prison, but that he well may enter, notwithstanding such a di-scent, because hee could not make continuall claim when he was in prison.

QUANT home est en (1. Roll. Abr. 687.) prison et est dissei-

ſie. For if hee bee disseised when he is at large, and the descent is cast during the time of his imprisonment, this di-scent shall binde him. Excusa- tor autem quis quod clameum ſuum non appoſuerit, ſi tempore litigii in prifonâ detentus fu-erit, ita quod venire non poſſit, nec mittere, quia nulli vertitur in dubium, et ubi eadem ratio et idem juſerit, ideo videtur quod excusari debet quis ſi per vim majorem, vel per fraudem, extra prifonam detentus fuerit, ita quod venire non poſſit nec mittere, dum tamen hoc per certa judicia probari poterit.

9. H. 7. 24. Pl. Com. 360.

Bracton, lib. 5. fol. 436.
 Britton, fol. 116. b.
 Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 52. 53. & lib.
 6. cap. 7. & 14.

Pur ceo que il ne poit
faire continual claime
quant il fuit en prison.

Here it is to bee observed by the authoritie of Littleton, that he is not enforced in this case by law to doe it by his servant or any other by his warrant or commandement, for things done by deputie are seldome well done, but everie man will see his owne buſineſſe moſt effectually ſpeeded and performed: and that it may be once ſpoken for all, the reaſon that a man imprifoned ſhall not be bound in this and the like caſes is, for that by the intendment of law he is kept (as it is preſumed in law) without intelligence of things abroad, and alſo that he hath not libertie to goe at large to make entrie or claime, or ſeeke counſell. And ſo note a diverſitie betweene a recluſe who might have intelligence, and a man in priſon.

Pl. Com. 360. in Stowel's caſe,

* Sect. 437.

MES l'opinion de tous les juſtices, p. 11. H. 7. fuit, que ſi le diſſeiſin ſoit avant l'enpri-ſonnement, coment que le morant ſeiſie ſoit il eſteant en le priſon, ſon entrie eſt tolle.

BUT the opinion of all the juſ-tices, p. 11. H. 7. was, that if the diſſeiſin bee before the im-priſonnement, although the dying ſeiſed be he being in the priſon, his entrie is taken away.

THIS is of a new addition, and miſtaken, for there is no ſuch opinion, p. 11. H. 7.
 but it is, 9. H. 7. fol. 24. b.

II

* This Section is not in L. and M. nor Roh. nor in the edit. 1577. which is eſteemed more correct than the common copies.

Lib. 3. Cap. 7. Of Continuall Claime. Sect. 437, 438.

(Post. 269. a. Ant. 128. b.)
(F. N. B. 236. 11. Rep. 8.)
(2. Roll. Atr. 803. 814. 2. Inf. 665. 1. Leo. 22. 186.)
Mirror cap. 3. Britton, fol. 21.
Fleta, lib. 1. cap. 28. & lib. 2. cap. 59. Bracton, lib. 2.
2. E. 4. 1. 4. E. 4. 10. 21. E. 4. 73. 11. H. 7. 5. 21. H. 6. 50.
9. H. 4. 3. 21. H. 6. Utlary 36.
7. H. 6. 27. 21. E. 4. 88. 22. E. 4. 37. 18. E. 3. Villenage 47.
21. E. 4. 37. 33. H. 6. 45. 46.
44. E. 3. Villeine 41. 4. H. 4. 19. 11. H. 4. 34. 3. Eliz. Dyer 192. 2. Fliz. 176. 5. Fliz. ibid. 223. 19. H. 6. 2. 8. H. 6. 37. 37. H. 6. 19.
(Doc. Pl. 230. 398.)
(Ant. 248. b.)
8. H. 4. 7. 21. H. 7. 13. 10. H. 6. 53. 20. H. 6. 20. 21. H. 6. 53. 22. H. 6. 18. 39. H. 6. 1.
33. H. 6. 51. 45. 38. H. 6. 33. 21. E. 4. 91. 21. H. 7. 33. 5. H. 7. 1. 12. H. 6. 8. 11. H. 6. 67. 19. 1. E. 4. 2. 27. H. 8. 2. 38. Alf. pl. 17. Vide Sect. 439.

IL reversera tiel utlagarie. Nota, the originall is, reversera tiel utlagarie per briefe de error (1), and so it would bee amended: for outlawries may bee reversed two manner of wayes, viz. by plea, or by writ of error. By plea, when the defendant commeth in upon the capias utlagatum, &c. hee may by plea reverse the same for matters apparent, as in respect of a superfideat, omission of proceffe, variance, or other matter apparent in the record; and yet in these cases some hold, that in another terme the defendant is driven to his writ of error.

But for any matters in fact, as death, imprisonment, service of the king, &c. he is driven to his writ of error, unlesse it be in case of felonie, and there in favorem vite he may plead it.

But albeit imprisonment be a good cause to reverse an outlawrie, yet it must be by proceffe of law in invitum, and not by consent or covin, for such imprisonment shall not avoid the outlawrie, because upon the matter it is his owne act.

ET auxy, si tiel que est en prison soit utlage in action de debt ou trespasse, ou en appeale de robberie, &c. il reversera tiel utlagarie* envers luy pronounce, &c.

AND also, if hee which is in prison be outlawed in an action of debt or trespasse, or in an appeale of robberie, &c. hee shall reverse this outlawry pronounced against him, &c.

Sect. 438.

5. E. 3. 50. b. 7. H. 6. 38.

Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 67. & 24. Vide W. 2. cap. 48. and the exposition thereof, 2. part Instit. 4. E. 2. Discent 51.

THIS is evident enough.

Per briefe d'error.

For hee shall have no writ of discent, because the summons was according to the law of the land, by summoners and veiors, and the land taken into the king's hand by the pernor.

Per default.

Default is a French word, and desaltia is legally taken for non-appearance in court. There bee divers causes allowed by law for saving a man's default; as, first, by imprisonment, whereof Littleton here speaketh. 2. Per inundationem aquarum. 3. Per tempestatem. 4. Per pontem fractum. 5. Per navigium substractum per fraudem petentis, non enim debet quis se periculis et infortuniis gratis exponere, vel subiacere. 6. Per minorem etatem. 7. Per defensionem summotionis per legem. 8. Per mortem attornati si tenens in tempore non novit. 9. Si petens effonarius sit. 10. Si placitum mittatur sine die. 11. Per breve de sarrantia diei. But sicknesse (as one holds) is no cause of saving a default, because it may be so artificially counterfeited, that it cannot be knowne.

Bracton, lib. 5. tract. 3. Fleta, lib. 6. cap. 7. 14. 3. H. 6. 46. 38. E. 3. 51. H. 6. Barre. 66. 12. H. 4. 13. 50. E. 3. 9. 3. H. 6. 48. 2. H. 4. 8. 5. H. 7. 3. F. N. B. 17. Bract. lib. 4. fol. 367. 269. Glan. lib. 1. cap. 8. 28. H. 6. 11. 4. H. 5. Chalenge 153. Br. Saver. Def. 45.

(Cro. Eliz. 506.)

AUXY, si un recovery soit + per default vers tiel que est en prison, il avoidera le judgement per briefe de error, pur ceo que il fuit en prison al temps de le default fait, &c. Et pur ceo que tiels matters de record ne noyeront celuy que est en prison, mes que ils serront reversees, &c. a multo fortiori, il semble que un matter en fait, scilicet, tiel discent ewe quant il fuit en prison ne luy noyera, &c. specialment pur ceo que il ne puisse aler hors de prison pur faire continuall claime, &c.

ALSO, if a recovery bee by default against such a one as is in prison, he shal avoid the judgement by a writ of error, because he was in prison at the time of the default made, &c. And for that such matters of record shal not hurt him which is in prison, but that they shall bee reversed, &c. a multo fortiori, it seemeth that a matter in fact, scilicet, such discent had when hee was in prison shall not hurt him, &c. especially seeing he could not goe out of prison to make continuall claime, &c.

Record,

* per brief d'error, &c. pur ceo qu'il fuit en prison al temps d'utlagarie, added L. and M. and Roh. and in MSS.
+ ewe added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) A writ of error properly lies, where false judgment is given in any court which is a court of record. It was formerly held, that, by the common law, no amendment could be permitted, unless within the very term in which the judicial act so recorded was done. But the courts now allow of amendments at any time while the suit is depending.—After the termination of the suit the judgment can only be reversed by writ of error. From the inferior courts it lies to the king's bench and common pleas;—from the common pleas to the king's bench;—from the king's bench to the house of lords. To amend errors in a base court, not of record, a writ of false judgment lies.—A writ of error only lies upon matter of law. There is no method of reversing an error on the determination of facts but by an attainr or a new trial. See Bla. Com. 3. vol. c. 25. f. 3. F. N. B. 20. 4. Inf. 21.

Record, (1) Recordum, is a memoriall or remembrance in rolles of parchment, of the proceedings and acts of a court of justice which hath power to hold plea according to the course of the common law, of reall or mixt actions, or of actions quare vi et armis, or of personall actions, whereof the debt or damage amounts to fortie shillings or above, which wee call Courts of Record, and are created by parliament, letters patents, or prescription.

It is aptly derived of recordari, which is to keepe in memorie or record, as it is said, quod dicere nihil aliud est quam recordari; and in the same sense the poet useth it, si ritè audita recordor. But legally records are restrained to the rolles of such only as are courts of record, and not the rolles of inferiour, nor of any other courts which proceed not secundum legem et consuetudinem Angliæ. And the rolles being the records or memorialls of the judges of the courts of record, import in them such incontrollable credit and veritie, as they admit no averment, plea, or prooffe to the contrarie. And if such a record be alleged, and it be pleaded that there is no such record, it shall be tried only by it selfe: and the reason hereof is apparent, for otherwise (as our old authors say, and that truly) there should never be any end of controversies, which should be inconvenient. Of courts of record you may read in my Reports; but yet during the terme wherein any judiciall act is done, the record remaineth in the brest of the judges of the court, and in their remembrance, and therefore the roll is alterable during that terme, as the judges shall direct; but when that terme is past, then the record is in the roll, and admitteth no alteration, averment, or prooffe to the contrarie.

If a grant by letters patents under the great seale be pleaded and shewed forth, the adverse partie cannot plead nul tiel record, for that it appears to the court that there is such a record; but inasmuch as it is in nature of a conveyance, the partie may denie the operation thereof, therefore he may plead non concessit, and prove in evidence that the king had nothing in the thing granted, or the like, and so it was adjudged. But to returne to Littleton: What then? shall a man that is in prison be privileged from suits or outlawries? Nothing lesse; for if the tenant or defendant be in prison, he shall upon motion, by order of the court, be brought to the barre, and either answer according to law, or else the same being recorded, the law shall proceed against him, and he shall take no advantage of his imprisonment.

A multò fortiori. Here is an argument, à minori ad majus, and the force of our author's argument is this: If a man in prison shall not be bound by a recoverie by default for want of answer in court of record in a reall action, which is matter of record (the height and strength whereof hath beene somewhat touched) à multò fortiori, a discent in the countrey, which is matter of deed, shall not for want of claime binde him that is in prison. And as the argument à minori ad majus doth ever hold (as our author hath already told us) affirmatively, so the argument à majori ad minus doth ever hold negatively, as our author here teacheth us: and the reason hereof is this, quod in minori valet, valebit in majori; et quod in majori non valet, nec valebit in minori.

Pur ceo que il ne poit aler hors de prison, &c. By this it appeareth, that a man in prison by processe of law ought to be kept in salvâ et arctâ custodia, and by the law ought not to goe out, though it be with a keeper, and with the leave and sufferance of the gaoler: but yet imprisonment must be, custodia, et non pœna; for carcer ad homines custodiendos, non ad puniendos dari debet.

Glanvil. lib. 8. cap. 8. Brañon lib. 3. fol. 156. Britton in proemio & cap. 27.

Cicero, Virgil.

Pl. Com. 79. b. Mich. 7. & 8. Eliz. Dier 212.

17. E. 3. 49. 37. H. 6. 21. b. 11. H. 4. 26. b. 21. H. 6. 34. Error. Br. 73. 7. H. 7. 4. 19. Aff. 7. lib. 4. fol. 52. in Rawlin's case. Glanvil. lib. 8. cap. 8. Brañon lib. 3. fol. 156. Britton cap. 27. lib. 6. fol. 11. Gentleman's case. and 30. 45. lib. 7. fol. 30. lib. 8. fol. 60. b. and 67. a. 7. H. 6. 28. 19. H. 6. 9.

(Doc. Pl. 307. 308. 1. Len. 65.) 18. Eliz. Dier 3: 33. Mar. Di. 129. Pl. Com. 232. Seignior Berkeley's case. 16. H. 7. 11. b. 22. H. 8. Record. Br. 65. 19. H. 6. 4. 3. Eliz. Dier 187. lib. 6. fol. 15. Eden's case. Mich. 31. & 32. El. Rot. 365. In Banke le Roy, inter Eden, & Franklyn, & Browne. (4. Rep. Hind's case.) 7. H. 6. 38. 8. H. 6. 16. Vide Sect. 418.

Sect. 439.

EN mesme le manner il semble,
lou home est hors
du royaume en service le roy, pur be-soigne del royaume, si tiel * home soit disseise quant il est en service
le roy, † et le disseisor morust seise, le disseisee

IN the same maner it seemeth, where a man is out of the realme in the king's service, for the businesse of the realme,
if such a one be disseised when hee is in service of the king,
and the disseisor dieth

HORS du royaume, (id est) extra regnum; as much to say, as out of the power of the king of England, as of his crowne of England: for if a man be upon the sea of England, he is within the kingdom or realme of England, and within the ligeance of the king of England,
as of his crowne of England.
And yet altum mare is out of the jurisdiction of the common law, and within the jurisdiction

6. R. 2. Proct. 46.
Vide Sect. 198. 440. 441.
(Cro. Car. 365. 5. Rep. Con-stable's case. 1. Roll. Abr. 528.)

* home not in L. and M.

† et le disseisor morust seise, le disseisee estant en le service le roy, not in L. and M.

(1) The public records of the kingdom are considered to relate to the proceedings of the houses of parliament, the court of chancery the courts of common law, or the revenue. A general table of them, distinguished under these different heads, is to be found in the appendix to the report from the committee appointed to view the Cottonian library. See the report and appendix, page 183. The rolls or records of parliament have been published in the course of his present majesty's reign, in six volumes folio, under the immediate auspices of the house of peers. This extensive and laborious undertaking is executed with the greatest accuracy: it pre-supposes no common share of antiquarian and diplomatic learning in the gentlemen concerned in it. A part of it was the work of the late Mr. Morant; all the rest was completed by Mr. Astle, the keeper of the records in the Tower, and Mr. Topham, of Lincoln's-Inn. It should be observed, that the proceedings of the legislature till the reign of Edward I. were exceedingly irregular, and greatly defective in point of form. They are sometimes penned so as to appear to come from the king alone; sometimes as issued jointly by the king and lords; sometimes the assent of the commons is, and sometimes it is not, expressed; sometimes the authority for passing

Lib. 3. Cap. 7. Of Continual Claime. Sect. 440.

Rot. Pat. { 8. H. 3.
9. H. 3.
13. H. 3.
Temps E. 1. Avowrie 193. Rot.
Vafcon. 22. E. 1. m. 8. Pat.
23. E. 1. 1. pars Pat. 10. E. 2.
8. E. 2. Coron. 399. Stanf. Pl.
Coron. 51.

Vide Sect. 677.

(Hob. 212.)

3. R. 3. Cont. Claime 13.
4. E. 3. 46.

Brañ. lib. 5. fol. 436.

tion of the lord admirall, whose jurisdiction is verie antient, and long before the reign of Edward the third, as some have supposed, as may appeare by the lawes of Oleron, (so called, for that they were made by king Richard the first when he was there) that there had beene then an admirall time out of minde, and by many other antient records in the reignes of Henrie the third, Edward the first, and Edward the second, is most manifest.

See hereafter in another case, which Littleton put in his chapter of Remitter; there he saith, ouster le mere, beyond the sea. This great officer in the Saxon language is called Au mere al, (i.e.) over all the sea, praefectus maris, five classis, archiballastus: and in antient time the office of the admiraltie was called custodia marinae Angliae, or maritima Angliae.

And note Littleton saith not, beyond the sea, or extra quatuor maria, for a man revera may be intra quatuor maria, and yet out of the realme of England. But intra quatuor maria, or extra, is taken by construction to be within the realme of England, or the dominions of the same.

But here a question may be demanded, What if a man be out of the realme, and a recoverie is had against him in a praecipe by default, whether shall he avoid it in a writ of error, as well as he should doe the outlawrie, or if he had beene imprisoned at the time of such recoverie by default? And it seemeth that he shall not avoid the recoverie, for by that meanes a man might be infinitely delayed of his freehold and inheritance, whereof the law hath so great a regard. And few or none goe over, but it is either of their owne free will, or by suit, for what cause soever; and he is not in that case without his ordinarie remedie, either by his writ of higher nature, or by a quod ei de forceat. But outlawrie in a personall action shall be avoided in that case, quia de minimis non curat lex, and otherwise he should be without remedie. See Section 437. and note the diversitie betweene that case of the imprisonment, and this of being beyond sea. And Littleton putteth the case of imprisonment, and omitteth the being beyond sea here: neither have I seene any booke to warrant, that he that is beyond sea shall in this case avoid the recoverie by default.

En service le roy. Brañon sheweth, that the exception of being beyond sea is, quia fuit in servitio domini regis ultra mare, viz. apud talem locum, and that case is cleere: but you shall heare the opinion of Brañon in the next Section, where hee is not in the service of the king.

Sect. 440.

Brañ. lib. 5. fol. 436. b. & 163.
Brit. lib. 21. 216. 217. Flet.
lib. 6. cap. 52. 53. 13. H. 4.
Triall 6. 9. H. 4. 3. 21. H. 6.
Error 27. 33. H. 6. 1. 21. H. 6. 31.
26. H. 8. cap. 18. 5. & 6. E. 6.
cap. 11.

AND herewith the ancient law of England is agreeable with Littleton, and the law at this day. So as it is vetus & constans opinio. Excusatur etiam quis quod clameum

ITEM, auters ont dit, que si ascun soit hors du royaume, coment que il ne soit en service le roy, si feised, &c. the disseisee being in the king's service, that such discent shall not hurt the disseisee; but for that hee could not make continual claime, it seemes to them, that when hee cometh into England, he may enter upon the heire of the disseisor, &c. For such a man shal reverse an outlawrie pronounced against him during the time that hee was in the king's service, &c. therefore à multo fortiori, he shall have aid and indemnity by the law in the other case, &c.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† revient, L. and M.

‡ que est added L. and M.

the acts is mentioned; and sometimes the acts are in the form of charters.—The first summons of the knights of shires to parliament, extant on record, is in the 49th year of Henry III.—The first regular summons directed to the sheriff for the election of citizens and burgesses, is in the 23d of Edward I.—In that reign the proceedings of the legislature assumed a more regular form; but far removed from that in which they appear at present. The consent of the commons to the levying of taxes for the king gave them great weight. They took advantage of this circumstance to obtain a remedy for the grievances they had to complain of.—In the reign of Edward III. the mode of presenting their petitions, and of receiving their answers, was regularly practised. If the petition and the answer to it were of such a nature as to require an express and new provision to be made for it, the king, with the assistance of his council and of the judges, framed, from such petition and answer, an act, which was usually entered on the statute roll; but if an express and new provision were not required, the petition itself and the king's answer to it were entered on the parliament roll, and then usually filed an ordinance.—Alterations and improvements gradually took place; but it was not till the reign of Henry VI. that these petitions of the commons were reduced, in the first instance, into the body of the bill.

tiel home escant hors de le royaume est disseisee en terres ou tenements deins le royaume, et le disseisor devy seise, &c. le disseisee esteant hors du royaume, il semble a eux, que quant le disseisee vient deins le royaume, que il poit * enter sur l'heire le disseisor, et ceo semble a eux per deux causes. Un est, que celui que est hors du royaume ne poit aver conusans del disseisin fait a luy per entendement de ley, nient plus que chose fait hors du royaume poit estre try deins le royaume per le serement de 12. † et de compeller tiel home per la ley de faire continuall claime, lequel per l'entendement de le ley ne puit aver aucun notice ou conusance de tiel disseisin, ceo serra inconvenient, et nosmement quant tiel disseisin est fait a luy quant il est hors du royaume, et auxy le morant seise fuit quant il fuit hors du royaume: car en tiel case il ne poit per nul possibility selonque common presumption faire continuall claime; mes aster-

non appesuerit, ut si toto tempore litigii fuit ultra mare quacunque occasione. And this is also agreeable with our yeare bookes. (1)

Nient plus que chose fait hors del royaume poit estre trie deins le royaume per le serement de 12.

And in this rule of law there is warily and truly put by Littleton, these words (by the oath of twelve men) meaning by a jury. For by certificate a thing done beyond sea may be tried, as Littleton himselfe, Sect. 102. hath set downe. And all matters done out of the realme of England concerning war, combat, or deeds of armes, shall bee tried and termined before the countable and marshall of England, before whom the triall is by witness, or by combat, and their proceeding is according to the civill law, and not by the oath of twelve men, as Littleton here speaketh.

This rule here rehearsed by Littleton, is worthy of explanation. If an alien (for example borne in France) bring a reall action, and the tenant plead that the demandant is an alien borne under the obedience of the French king, and out of the leigeance of the king of England; shall this case want triall, because the matter alleged is out of the realme? then by the fiction of this plea, no demandant shall recover; therefore in this case, the demandant shall reply, that hee was borne at such a place in England, within the king's leigeance, and hereupon a jury of 12. shall be charged, and if they have sufficient evidence that hee was borne in France, or in any other place out of the realme, then shall they finde, that hee was borne out of the king's allegiance, and if they have sufficient evidence that he was borne in England, or Ireland, or Jersey, or Jersey, or elsewhere within the king's obedience, 42. E. 3. 2. & 3. Vide Sect. 102.

(Ant. 74. 2.)

(4. Inst. 123.)

1. H. 4. cap. 12. 13. H. 4. l. 4. 48. E. 3. 2. & 3.

(Doc. pla. 209.)

22. E. 3. averment. 21. 27. Aff. 24. 32. H. 6. 25. 15. E. 4. 15. 7. H. 6. 15. 1. R. 3. 4. 6. H. 7. 6. 7. H. 7. 8. F. N. B. 156. 29. Aff. 11. 13. E. 1. m. 10. 47. 12. H. 3. Ibid. 55. Lib. 7. fol. 26. 27. Calvin's case Li. 6. f. 47. Dowdale's case.

* Lien added in L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) A reference was made in a former part of this work to this place for some observations on the different points of law arising on the doctrine of the Four Seas. So far as it leads to an enquiry into our dominion of the sea, circumstances of a public nature now exist which make it a matter of too much importance and delicacy to be treated of here. In the note referring to this passage, sir Philip Meadows's treatise on the dominion and sovereignty of the seas is mentioned with great commendation. A copy of this work, which formerly belonged to lord chief baron Parker, has this note in his lordship's own hand-writing. "This is a most curious and excellent treatise; and though Mr. Selden's Mare Clausum is a learned and ingenious work, and will be ever popular with Englishmen, yet sir Philip Meadows's rules for ascertaining the limits of the sea seem to me to be founded on more solid and prudential reasons than Mr. Selden has offered in his book. T. Parker, 14th Sept. 1744." It has been a complaint among the learned, that in the treaties which have been written on the laws of war and peace, no regard is had to the intermediate time between the commencement of hostilities and actual war. Those whose studies may lead them to consider that subject, will hear with pleasure that the late sir Hans Bland, whose erudition and classic taste are well known, left behind him in manuscript, an elegant and accurate treatise upon it, entitled, De Jure Imperfecti Belli.

Lib. 3. Cap. 7. Of Continuall Claime. Sect. 440.

dience, they shall finde that he was born within the king's leigeance. And this hath ever bene the pleading and manner of triall in that case. And so it is in the case that Littleton here putteth, if a man, in avoydance of a fine or a discent, alleage that hee was out of this realme in Spaine, at the time of levying of the fine and at the time of the disseisin and discent, the adverse party may alleage that he was at such a place in England, &c. whereupon issue shall be taken, and then in evidence he may prove that he was out of the realme, &c. which, upon sufficient evidence, the jurie ought to finde. And in both these cases and the like, in a special verdict the jury may finde that he was borne beyond sea, or was beyond sea at that time, &c.

ment serroit si tiel disseisee fuit deins le royaume al temps de le disseisin, ou al temps del morant del disseisour. possibilitie after the common presumption make continuall claime; but otherwise it should be if the disseisee were within the realme at the time of the disseisin, or at the time of the dying seised of the disseisour.

[7. Rep. 26. 27. Calv. case.]

5. R. 2. triall. 34.

[*] 35. H. 8. cap. 2.
Stamford. pl. cor. 90.
(Cro. Car. 332.)

[a] 33. Eliz. case Orurke.
[b] 34. Eliz. case de Sir John Perots.
[c] Mich. 19. & 20. Eliz. Dier 360.
(20. H. 6. 8.)
48. E. 3. 11. H. 7. 16.
2. R. 3. 4.

(1. Roll. 532. Hob. 11.
4. Inf. 138. 140. 141. 7. Rep. 2. a.
Sid. 367. Lut. 700. 710. 950.)
Pach. 28. Eliz. in action de covenant inter Evangelist Constatine pl. & Hughgyn defendant in the king's bench. Li. 6. f. 47.
Dowdale's case. Vid. 32. H. 6. 25.
48. E. 3. 11. H. 7. 16. 2. E. 2. obligation 15.
(2. Cro. 76. Sid. 228. Hob. 11.)

Entendement de le ley.

Wide Sect. 269.

The statute of 25. E. 3. de prodicionibus doth declare, that it is treason by the common law to adhere to the enemies of the king within the realme, or without, if hee bee thereof proveablement attaint of overt fact, and that he shall forfeit all his lands, &c. A man must not imagine that seeing by the common law declared by authority of parliament, that adhering to the king's enemies without the realme, is high treason, and that the delinquent may be attainted thereof, &c. that this should want triall, for then the judgement of the common law, and declaration of the parliament, should be illusory, which no well advised man will thinke in a matter of so great consequence. But certaine it is, that for necessitie sake, the adherencie without the realme must be alleaged in some place within England. And if upon evidence they shall finde any adherencie out of the realme, they shall finde the delinquent guilty. But most commonly they indicted him (if he had lands) in some county where his lands did lie, that were to be forfeited; and this, as appeareth in our bookes, was the common use. And so it is declared by the statute (*) of 35. H. 8. and that it shall be tried by twelve men of the countie, where the king's bench shall sit, and be determined before the justices of that bench, or else before such commissioners, and in such shire of the realme, as shall be assigned by the king's majestie's commission, and this statute for this point remains in force at this day, and so it is resolved [a] by all the judges in my time, viz. in 33. Eliz. in the case of Orurke. And also [b] 34. Eliz. in sir John Perot's case done in Ireland, for that is out of the realme of England, and the case [c] in Mich. 19. & 20. Eliz. was utterly denied, and sir Christopher Wray himselfe (who is supposed to give his opinion in that case) protested that he never gave any such opinion, but did hold the contrary. When part of the act, especially the originall, is done in England, and part out of the realme, that part that is to be performed out of the realme, if issue be taken thereupon, shall be tried here by 12. men; and those twelve men shall come out of the place where the writ is brought. For example, (which ever doth illustrate) it was covenanted by indenture, by charter party, that a ship should sayle from Blackney haven in Norfolk, to Muttrell in Spaine, and there remaine by certaine dayes.

In an action of covenant brought upon this charter party, the indenture was alleaged to be made at Thetford in the county of Norfolk, and upon pleading, the issue was joyned, whether the said ship remained at Muttrell in Spaine by the said certaine dayes. And it was adjudged that this issue should be tried at Thetford, where the action was brought, because there the contract tooke his originall by making of the charter partie, and so hath it bene often adjudged in such like case.

An obligation made beyond the seas may be sued here in England, in what place the plaintiffe will. What then if it beare date at Bordeaux in France, where shall it be sued? And answer is made, that it may be alleaged to be made in quodam loco vocat' Burdeaux in France, in Ullington in the county of Middlesex, and there it shall be tried, for whether there be such a place in Ullington or no, is not traversable in that case. These points are necessary to be knowne in respect of the variety of opinions in our bookes. And of these thus much shall suffice, and now is Littleton worthy to be heard.

Per entendement de le ley. Vide, for intendement of law, Sect. 99, 100. 110. 293. 377. 393. 406. 367. 462. 463. &c. 439.

Ceo serra inconvenient. Here also, as hath bene often said, appeareth, that argumentum ab inconvenienti, is strong in law.

Auterment est si le disseisee fuit deins le royaume al temps del disseisin, &c. So as if a man be disseised before he goeth over sea, or cometh into the realme againe before the discent, the discent shall take away his entrie.

Sect.

Sect 441.

UN autre matter ils allegent ont pur prover que devant le statute fait en le temps de roy E. 3.
an. * 34. cap. 16.
de son raigne, per quel estatute nonclame est ouste, &c.
le ley fuit tiel, que si un fine soit levy de certaine terres ou tenements, si aucun que fuit estrange al fine avoit droit d'aver et recover mesmes les terres ou tenements, s'il ne venust et fist son clame a ceo deins l'an et le jour procheine apres le fine levie, il serra barre a tous jours, quia dicebatur, finis finem litibus imponebat.
Et que la ley fuit tiel,
il est prove per l'estatute de Westminster
2. De donis conditionalibus, lou il est parle que si fine soit levie de les tenements en taile, &c. quod finis ipso juresit nullus, nec habeant hæredes, aut illi ad quos spectat reversio, licet fuerint plenæ ætatis in Angliâ, et extra prisonam) neces-sitat apponere clameum suum, † &c. Issint ceo

ANOTHER matter they alleage for a prooffe that before the statute of king Edward the Third, made the 34th yeare of his reigne, by which statute non-claim is ousted, &c. the law was such, that if a fine were levied of certaine lands or tenements, if any that was a stranger to the fine had right to have and to recover the same lands or tenements, if he came not and made his clame thereof within a yeare and a day next after the fine levied, he shall be barred for ever, quia dicebatur quod finis finem litibus imponebat.
And that law was such, it is proved by the statute of West.
the 2. De donis condi-
tionalibus, where it is spoken if the fine bee levied of tenements
given in the taile, &c.
quod finis ipso jure sit nullus, nec habeant hæ-redes, aut illi ad quos spectat reversio (licet ple-næ ætatis fuerint in Angliâ, et extra prisonam) necessitat apponere clameum suum. Soe it is proved

HERE it appeareth, 84 E. 3. cap. 16.
what the common law was before the said statute, for non-clayme upon a fine levied. But now since Littleton wrote, by the statute of 4. H. 7. five yeares after proclamations made upon the fine are given to him that right hath to make his clame, or pursue his action, where the common law gave him but a yeare and a day. But this statute of 4. H. 7. extends only to fines, and not to nonclame upon a judgement in a writ of right, and therefore the said statute of 34. E. 3. here cited by Li- tleton, which ousteth nonclame only to fines levied, extendeth not to a judgement in a writ of right at this day, and therefore the common law in that case remaineth to this day, viz.
that clame must bee made within a yeare and a day after judgement. Also if a fine be levied without proclamations, or without so many as the law requireth, then the statute of nonclame doth extend to such a fine.

Dicebatur finis,
quia finem litibus imponebat. (1) Here you may observe the etymologie of a fine. And herewith a-greeth [a] antiquity: Finis ilico dicitur finalis concordia, quia imponit finem liti-bis. And after the example [b] of Littleton, it is good to search out the etymologie or right derivation of words; for ignoratis termi- nis ignoratur et ars, as hath beene often observed in other places. And the civilians call this judiciall concord, transactionem judicialem de re immobili.

Licet

* 34. cap. 16. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Every part of the law relating to fines and common recoveries has been stated and explained by Mr. Cruise, in his Essays upon those subjects, in a manner that equally recommends them to the student, and the most learned and experienced practi- tioners. Besides the obligations which the Editor has to him upon this account in common with the rest of the profession, he ac- knowledges with equal pleasure and gratitude the particular obligations he has to him for the assistance he has derived from them in the course of this work.

Stat. de anno. 13. E. 1.

[c] Pl. Com. Stowel's case, 359.

Braſton, lib. 5. fo. 436.
Britton, fo. 216. b.
Fleta, lib. 6. ca. 53.44. H. 7. c. 24.
32. H. 8. c. 26.
2. Inst. 516.)

Licet fuerit plenæ prove, que si un e- that if a stranger that tatis in Angliâ, et ex- strange home que a-tra prisonam. In this act hath right unto the te-of 13. E. 1. De donis condition- nements, if he were nals is one omitted, who is out of the realme at added in the statute De mo- the time of the fine le-do levandi fines, viz. et sanæ me- vied, &c. shall have no morie. [c] But a fem-covert dammage, though that had no privilege of non- hee made not his claime at the common law, claim, &c. though that as some have said, because she such fine was matter had a husband that might of record: by greater make claime for her. But reason it seemeth unto yet Braſton saith, Item excu- them, that a disseisin satur uxor quæ sub potestate viri and discent that is mat-supposita, quod clamcum non ter in deed, shall not so apposuerit licet mittere possit, grieve him that was and citeth a judgement in the disseised when he was point, Trin. 4. H. 3. in Cu- out of the realme at ſin's case. But Fleta saith, Ex- the time of that disseicusatur si fuerit uxor alicujus, si fin, and also at the fuerit per virum impedita, quod time that the disseisor non potuit apponere clamcum. died seised, &c. but Also they in reversion or that he may well enter, remainder expectant upon any notwithstanding such estate of freehold were barred discent.
by the common law; and yet
they could make no claime, because, as hath beene said, it belonged to the particular tenant, and not to them. because their entry was not lawfull;
which was one of the princi-pall causes of making of the said statute of 34. E. 3. which ousted non-claime. But these now without question holpen, titles, by the said statute of 4.

cases of coverture, and of them in reversion and remainder, are and just provision made for the saving of their rights and titles, by the said statute of 4. H. 7. as by the said act appeareth.

Sect. 442.

ARRAIGNE un afſiſe. To arraigne the aſſiſe is to cauſe the tenant to be called to make the plaint, and to ſet the cauſe in ſuch order as the tenant may bee enforced to anſwer thereunto; and is derived of the French word arraigner, which ſignifieth to order or ſet in right place. An arraignment is ſometime called an aſſitution, of the verbe aſſituo, compounded of ad and ſtuo, that is, to place or ſet in order one by another. In the ſame ſenſe that Littleton here uſeth it, it is uſed when an appeale is

IT E M, *quære ſi home ſoit diſſeiſiſe, et il arraigne un aſſiſe envers le diſſeiſor, et les recognitors de le aſſiſe † chaunta pur le plaintiſe, et les juſtices d'aſſiſe voyle eſtre adviſes de leur judgment, tanques al
prochein aſſiſe, &c.
et en ‡ le dementiers le diſſeiſor moruſt ſeiſiſe, &c. ſi le dit ſuit*

A I S O, inquire if a man be diſſeiſed, and he arraigne an afſiſe againſt the diſſeiſor, and the recognitors of the aſſiſe chante for the plaintiſe, and the juſtices of aſſiſe will bee adviſed of their judgements
untill the next aſſiſe, &c. and in the meane ſeaſon the diſſeiſor dieth ſeiſed, &c. yet the del

* &c., added in L. and M. and Roh.

† chaunta—chaunteront, in L. and M. and chanteront in Roh.

‡ le not in L. and M.

*del affise serra * pris en ley pur le dit disseisee un continuall claime, entant que nul default fuit en luy †, &c.*

said suit of the affise shall bee taken in law for the disseisee a continuall claime, in so much that no default was in him, &c.

arraigned, both which are arraigned in French, but entred in Latin. And it is to bee observed, that Littleton saith here arraigne un affise, and saith not that the tenant is arraigned; and so of the appeal; for these are the suits of the subject, and no man is said to be arraigned, but merely at the suit of the king, upon an enditement found against him, or other record wherewith he is charged. And there the arraignment of the prisoner is to take order that he appeare, and for the certainty of the person to hold up his hand, and to plead a sufficient plea to the enditement or other record, whereupon they which follow for the king may orderly proceed.

Justices d'affise. Justices of affise are assigned and constituted by the king of the judges and sages of the law, and are called justices of affise, for that the writs of affise of novel disseisin, (which in former times were accounted sestina remedia, and very frequent and common) were returnable before them to be taken in their proper counties twice every yeare at the least, whereupon they had authority to give judgment and award seisin and execution: and therefore both for the number of them in times past, and for the greater authority they had then as justices of nisi prius (which was to trie issues only, except in quare impedit, and affises de darrein presentment, in which cases the justices of nisi prius might give judgment) they were denominated justices of affises: and divers acts of parliament have given to them great authority both in criminall causes and common pleas. These justices of affise have also commissions of oyer and terminer, of gaole delivery and of the peace, of association, and si non omnes throughout their whole circuits, so as they are armed with ample, provident, but yet ordinary jurisdiction; for all their commissions are bounded with this expresse limitation, faciuri quod ad justitiam pertinet secundum legem et consuetudinem Angliæ. And in former time, according to the originall institution and their commission, both the justices joined both in common pleas and pleas of the crowne.

Si le dit suit del affise serra prise en ley, &c. un continual claime.

And it is holden at this day that it shall amount to a claime, for that there was no default in him, as Littleton saith. (d) Some have objected, that if the bringing of an affise should amount to continuall claime, and every continuall claime made by the disseisee vest the possession and freehold in him, therefore if bringing the affise, &c. should amount to a continuall claime, that then the writ should abate. But hereunto it hath bene answered in this chapter, that a continuall claime is an entry by construction of law for the advantage of the disseisee, but not for his disadvantage.

In a writ of entry sur disseisin against one, supposing that he had not entred but by S. who disseised him, the tenant said that S. died seised, and the land descended to him, and prayed his age; the plaintife counterpleaded his age, for that he arraigned an affise against S. who died hanging the affise, and he was ousted of his age, for that the bringing of the affise amounted to a claime.

If tenant in dower alien in fee with warranty, and the heire in the reversion bring a writ of entry in casu proviso, &c. and hanging the plea the tenant dieth, the heire shall not be rebutted or barred by this warranty, for that the præcipe did amount to a continuall claime. And herewith agreeth (e) antiquity: Et si clameum non apposuerit, sufficit tamen si ille vel antecessor suus faciat quod tantundem valeat, ut si placitum moverit tenentem vel fecerit rem litigiosam; quia sicut plus est facto appellare quàm verbo, ita plus est clameum apponere facto quàm verbo: et ad hoc facit de termino Sanctæ Trinitatis, anno regni regis H. 3. 15. in com. Hunt. de quâdam Guldeburgâ, cui obiectum fuit, quòd clameum non apposuit, et ipsa respondit, quòd fecit quod tantundem valet, quia tempore finis facti implacitavit tenentem per aliud breve, &c.

If the goods of a villeine (before any seisure made by the lord) be distreined, the lord may have a replevyn; and notwithstanding before the bringing of the writ he had no property, yet the very bringing of the writ doth amount to a claime of the goods, and vesteth the property in the lord.

Entant que nul default fuit en luy, &c. Hereby it is implied, that our author inclined to this opinion, that it should amount to a claime, for that no default was in him; et nemo debet rem suam sine facto aut defectu suo amittere, as the rule is,

2. & 3. E. 6. c. 24. towards the end. Stanf. pl. cor. 105. C. 3. H. 7. ca. 1.

Vid. Sect. 514. 233. 234. Magna Charta, 30. W. 2. ca. 3. 30. 39. Stat. de Ebor. ca. 7. 4. Artic. Sup. Cart. ca. 10. 4. E. 3. ca. 11. 7. R. 2. ca. 4. 27. E. 1. de finibus ca. 4. 28. E. 1. de appellatis. 4. E. 3. ca. 2. 2. H. 5. ca. 8. 3. H. 5. ca. 7. 13. H. 4. ca. 7. North. 2. E. 3. ca. 3. 2. E. 3. ca. 5. 14. H. 6. ca. 1. 21. H. 6. ca. 10. 3. H. 7. c. 1. 33. H. 8. c. 9. 34. & 35. H. 8. ca. 14. 2. & 3. E. 6. ca. 24. 1. E. 6. ca. 7. 2. Mar. Dier 99. 3. & 4. Eliz. Dier 205. (F. N. B. 240. c. 4. Inf. 161.)

(d) See before in this chapter, Sect. 419. Vide Sect. 416. (2. Ed. 3. 8. 14. Ed. 3. 14.) (Ant. 253. b.)

24. E. 3. 25. 9. E. 2. 2ge. 141. 15. E. 3. Counterplea de gar. 5.

3. E. 3. tit. garrantie 6a.

* Fleta, lib. 6. ca. 52. Bract. lib. 5. fo. 436.

33. E. 3. Replevin. 43. 4a. E. 3. 18. b. 9. H. 6. 25.

Sect.

* pris not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Sect. 443.

(Post. 331. a. 341. b. 345. a.)
(Dyer 71. a.)
(2. Roll. Abr. 339.)

Merleb. cap. 28.

(5. Rep. 21.)

(1. N. B. 34. m. W. 2. cap. 5.)

(8. Rep. 88. Ant. 252. b.)

HERE, first, it is to be observed, that albeit the freehold and inheritance is in this case in no person, but in abeyance or in consideration of law, yet an entrie and claime by one that hath no right shall gaine the inheritance by wrong. For here Littleton saith, and of such estate died seised, &c. And so it is in case of a bishop, parson, vicar, prebend, or any other sole corporation. And in the statute of Merlebridge it is called an intrusion.

Secondly, that seeing by the death of the abbot (which is the act of God) no person is able to make continuall claime, therefore a discent during that time shall not prejudice the successor; for, as hath beene said, Impotentia excusat legem. If an usurpation bee had to a church in time of vacation, this shall not prejudice the successor, to put him out of possession, but that at the next avoidance hee shall present.

Nient plus que ils sont able de suer action,

Ec. Here that which hath in this chapter beene said is confirmed, viz. That the entrie or continuall claime must pursue the action.

Car le covent n'est forsque un mort person,

Ec. This is ratio una, but not unica: for though the rest of the corporation be no mort persons, as the chapter in case of deane and chapter, or the commonaltie in case of mayor and commonaltie; yet cannot they when there is no deane or maior make claime, because they have neither ability nor capacitie to take or to sue any action, as our author here saith.

Car en temps de

ITEM, quære si un abbe de un monasterie morust, et durant le temps de vacation un home torciousement enter en certaine parcel de terre del monastery, claymant la terre a luy et a ses heires, et de tiel estate morust seisie, et la terre descendist a son heire, et puis apres un * est elect, et fait abbe de mesme la monasterie, si † mesme l'abbe poit enter sur le heire ou nemy. Et il semble a ascuns, que l'abbe bien poit enter en ceo cas, pur ceo que le covent en temps de vacance ne fuit ascun person able de faire continual claime; car nient plus que ils sont personable de ‡ suer action, nient plus ils sont able de faire continual claime, car le covent § n'est forsque || un mort corps sans teste; car en temps de vacation un graunt fait a eux, ou per eux, est void; et en cest case l'abbe ne poit aver brieve d'entre sur dissein envers

ALSO, inquire if an abbot of a monasterie die, and during the time of vacation a man wrongfully entred in certaine parcels of land of the monasterie, claiming the land unto him and his heires, and of that estate dieth seised, and the land descendeth unto his heires, and after that an abbot is chosen, and made abbot of the monasterie, a question is, if the abbot may enter upon the heire or not. And it seemeth to some, that the abbot may well enter in this case, for this, that the covent in time of vacation was no person able to make continuall claime; for no more than they be personable to sue an action, no more be they able to make continuall claime, for the covent is but a dead bodie without head; for in time of vacation a grant made unto them is void; and in this case an abbot may not have a writ of entrie upon dissein against the heire, for le

* abbe added L. and M. and Roh.
§ n'est—est, L. and M. and Roh.

† mesme not in L. and M. nor Roh.
|| come added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ suer—faire, L. and M. and Roh.

THE latter pages of the Chapter on Releases relate almost entirely to the useful, but abstruse and complicated, learning of Special Pleading. The Editor's professional studies having been directed to those branches of the law which relate to conveyancing, he finds himself unable to write any annotations either on the text or the commentary contained in those pages. He might fill them with notes; but he thinks it more honourable to confess his total ignorance of the subject, than, knowingly, to present the public with observations which must be uninteresting, and which might be of a nature to deceive and mislead the Student.

Lincoln's-Inn, Nov. 9, 1785.

Erratum, page 241, note 4, line 8, instead of grantor read grantee.

le beire, pur ceo que il ne fuit unques disfeise. Et si l'abbe ne pouvoit enter en ceo case, donques il ferra mis a son brieve de droit, * &c. lequel ferra trop dure pur le meason: per que semble a eux, que l'abbe bien poit enter, &c.

Quæras de dubiis, legem benediscere si vis:

Quærere dat sapere, quæ sunt legitima verè†.

life be made, the remainder to the maior and commonaltie of D. the remainder is good, if there be a maior elected during the particular estate.

Poit enter, &c. Here by this (&c.) is implied, or make his continuall claime in such sort as hath beene before expressed.

this, that hee was never disseised. And if the abbot may not enter in this case, then hee shall bee put into his writ of right, &c. which shall bee hard for the house: by which it seemeth to them, that the abbot may well enter, &c.

Quæras de dubijs, legem bene discere si vis:

Quærere dat sapere, quæ sunt legitima verè.

vacation ungraunt fait a eux ou pereux, est void,

&c. And the reason is, because the body politique which is capable, is not complete, but wanteth the head. But this is to be understood of an immediate grant; for if during the vacation of the abathie of Dale, a lease for life, or a gift in taile be made, the remainder to the abbot of Dale and his successors, this remainder is good, if there be an abbot made during the particular estate.

If there be maior and commonaltie of D. and the maior dieth, a graunt made to the maior and commonaltie of D. is void for the cause aforesaid; but in that case, if a lease for

2. H. 7. 13. 40. Aff. 26. 34. E. 3. Garrantie 69.

(Post. 378.)

(Ant. 239. a.)

(10. Rep. 1. Ant. 85. 250. a. 3. a. lib. 10. Lampett's case. lib. 6. Bishop of Wells's case. lib. 1. Rector of Caeddington's case.)

Quæras de dubiis, legem bene discere si vis:
Quærere dat sapere, quæ sunt legitima verè.

Here Littleton expresseth an excellent meanes to attaine to the reason of the law, by enquiring of, and conference had with, learned men, of doubtfull cases:

Inter cuncta leges, & per cunctabere doctos.

Horace.

For as collatio peperit artes, so collatio perficit artes: and this must bee continuall; for as knowledge increaseth, so doubts therewith increase also; Crescente scientiâ, cresunt simul et dubitationes.

And here Littleton citeth verie aptly two verses; for it is truly said, that Authoritates philosophorum medicorum et poetarum sunt in causis allegandæ et tenendæ: and our author doth cite a verse for memorie, but it is worthy of memorie.

CHAP. 8.

Of Releases. (1)

Sect. 444.

RELEASES

sont en divers manners, cestascavoir, releases de tout le droit que home ad en terres ou tenements, † et releases de actions personals et reals, et autres choses. Re-

RELEASES are in divers manners, viz. releases of all the right which a man hath in lands or tenements, and releases of actions

personalls and realls, and other things.

HERE our author beginneeth with a division of releases.

These words must be referred thus: releases are of two sorts, viz. a release of all the right which a man hath either in lands and tenements, or in goods and chattels: or there is a release of actions reall, of or in lands or tenements: or personall, of or in goods or chattels: or mixt, partly Vide Mir. cap. 2. sect. 17.

Vide Br. l. 101. Br. l. li. 5.
Tract. de Except. & lib. 4.
fol. 318. b.
Fleta, lib. cap. 14.

* &c. not in L. and M.
in L. and M.

† verè not in L. and M. nor is any part of these two verses in the Camb. MSS.

‡ &c. added

(1) At common law, lands could not be transferred by one person to another but by feoffment, with livery of the seisin. This produced a notoriety of the transmutation of the possession. This notoriety was in some measure effected by a disseisin; but that was only a tortious possession, liable to be defeated by the disseisee. Thus the disseisor had the possession; the disseisee the right. To complete the title of the disseisor, it was necessary he should acquire the right. This could not be done by a feoffment, as that was a transfer of the possession; but it was effected by a release, which in some respects operates as an actual transfer of the right; in others, as an acquittal or discharge from it. The different degrees of title in the disseisor, his heir, or feoffee, and the different natures of the rights of the disseisee, make it necessary that releases should be adapted to the different situation of the parties, and give them, as the circumstances of the parties vary, a different effect and operation.

Vide Sect. 439.

[a] Fleta, ubi supra.

partly in the realty, and partly in the personalty.

Release, Relaxatio. Of the etymologie of this word you have heard before. Fleta [a] calleth it charta de quieta clamantia.

leases de tout le droit releases of all the right which men have in lands and tenements, &c. are commonly made in this forme, or of this effect:

Sect. 445.

NO verint universi per presentes, &c.

Here Littleton sheweth presidents of releases of right: and presidents doe both teach and illustrate, and therefore our student is to be well stored with presidents of all kinds.

Remissione, relaxatio, et quietum clamatio. Here Littleton sheweth, that there be three proper words of release, and bee much of one effect: besides, there is renunciare, acquietare, and there bee many other words of release; as if the lessor grants to the lessee for life, that he shall be discharged of the rent, this is a good release. Vide Sect. 532.

And it is to bee understood, that there bee releases in deed, or expresse releases, whereof Littleton heere hath shewed an example. These expresse releases must of necessity be by deed. There be also releases in law, and they are sometime by deed, and sometime without deed. As if the lord disseise the tenant, and maketh a feoffment in fee by deed or without deed, this is a release of the feignorie. And so it is if the disseisee disseise the heir of the disseisor, and make a feoffment in fee by deed or without deed, this is a release in law of the right. And the same law it is of a right in action. (1)

If the obligor make the obligee his executor, this is a release in law of the action, but the duty remains, for the which the executor may retaine so much goods of the testator. If the feme obligee take the obligor to husband, this is a release in law. The like law is, if there be two femes obligees, and the one take the debtor to husband. (2)

If an infant of the age of seventene yeares release a debt, this is void; but if an infant make the debtor his executor, this is a good release in law of the action. (3)

But if a feme executrix take the debtor to husband, this is no release in law, for that should be a wrong to the dead, and in law worke a devastavit, which an act in law shall never worke. And so it was adjudged in the king's bench, Mich. 30. & 31. Eliz. in which case I was of counsell.

But it is to be observed, that there is a diversitie betweene a release in deed, and a release in law; for if the heir of the disseisor make a lease for life, and the disseisee release his right to the lessee for his life, his right is gone for ever. But if the disseisee doth disseise the heir of the disseisor, and make a lease for life, by this release in law the right is released but during the life of the lessee; for a release in law shall be expounded more favourable, according to the intent and meaning of the parties, than a release in deed, which is the act of the parties, and shall

NO verint universi per presentes, me A.

de B. remisisse, relaxatio, et omnino de me et hæredibus meis quietum clamasse: vel sic, quiet claimed: or thus, pro me et hæredibus meis quietum clamasse

C de D. totum jus, titulum, et clameum quæ habui, habeo, vel quovismodo in futurum habere potero, de et suage in uno messuagio cum pertinentiis in F. &c. And it is to bee understood, that these ceux verbs remisisse, words, remisisse, et et quietum clamasse, quietum clamasse, are sont de un tiel effect of the same effect as scome tiels verbs, re-laxatio.

Now all men by these presents, that I A.

of B. have remised, released, and altogether from me and my heires quiet claimed to C. of D. all the right, title, and claim which I have, or by any meanes may have, of and in one messuage with the appurtenances in F. &c.

And it is to bee understood, that these words, remisisse, et et quietum clamasse, quietum clamasse, are of the same effect as these words, relaxatio.

Bract. lib. 4. fol. 308. Fleta, ubi sup. 9. H. 6. 35. 24. E. 3. 27. 13. H. 4. entr. congrab. 57.

(1. Roll. Abr. 400. 403. 9. Rep. 52.)

27. H. 8. 29. of an use.
34. H. 6. 41. of an attain.
3. E. 3. 38. 21. E. 4. 81.
Pl. Com. Delamere's case.
(8. Rep. 136. Plo. 183. 186.
Hob. 10. 1. Sid. 79. 1. Roll.
Abr. 934. Plo. 36. 5. Rep. 29.)

8. E. 4. 3. 21. E. 4. 2.

11. H. 7. 4. 20. H. 7. 29.
8. E. 4. 3.

30. E. 3. 24. 32. E. 3. tit. seire fac. 102.
(Mo. 2. 6. 1. Leo. 320. 8. Rep. 152.
Plo. 183. 4. Finch. 294.)

(1) What sir Edward Coke observes respecting obligors and obligees holds equally between all other creditors and debtors; but it must be attended with the following observations. A debt is only a right to recover the amount of the debt by way of action; and as an executor cannot maintain an action against himself, or against a co-executor, the testator, by appointing the debtor an executor of his will, discharges the action, and consequently discharges the debt. Still, however, when the creditor makes the debtor his executor, it is to be considered but as a specific bequest or legacy, devised to the debtor to pay the debt, and therefore, like other legacies, it is not to be paid or retained till the debts are satisfied; and if there are not assets for the payment of the debts, the executor is answerable for it to the creditors. In this case, it is the same whether the executor accepts or refuses the executorship. On the other hand, if the debtor makes the creditor his executor, and the creditor accepts the executorship, if there are assets, he may retain his debt out of the assets, against the creditors in equal degree with himself; but if there are not assets, he may sue the heir, where the heir is bound. See Wankford v. Wankford, 1. Salk. 299. Selwin v. Brown, Bro. Cas. in Par. 179. Forr. 243. Vin. vol. 8. p. 198. 2. Eq. Cas. Abr. 46. 1. note at (Q).

(2) In the case of Smith v. Stafford, Hob. 216. the husband promised the wife before marriage that he would leave her worth 100l. The marriage took effect, and the question was, whether the marriage was a release of the promise. All the judges but Hobart were of opinion, that as the action could not rise during the marriage, the marriage could not be a release of it. The doctrine of this case seems to be admitted in the case of Gage v. Acton, 1. Salk. 325. 12. Mod. 290. The case there arose upon a bond executed by the husband to the wife before the marriage, with a condition making it void if she survived him, and he left her 1000l. Two of the judges were of opinion, that the debt was only suspended, as it was on a contingency which could not by any possibility happen during the marriage. But lord chief justice Holt differed from them: he admitted that a covenant or promise by the husband to the wife to leave her so much in case she survives him is good, because it is only a future debt on a contingency which cannot happen during the marriage, and that is precedent to the debt; but that a bond debt was a present debt, and the condition was not precedent, but subsequent, that made it a present duty, and the marriage was consequently a release of it. The case afterwards went into chancery. The bond was taken there to be the agreement of the parties, and relief accordingly decreed. 2. Vern. 481. A like decree was made in the case of Carnel v. Buckle, 2. P. W. 243.

(3) If the obligor make the obligee his executor, the obligee may retain; but that is not applicable to the case put here. Therefore he may make an executor at 17; tamen supra 89. b. it is said that it is at 18. It should seem that the case here is understood of 17 complete, et supra 89. of 18 beginning; and thus the passages agree. D'Avila Hist. King of France is major at 14 beginning. Thus it seems that puberty, which by the civil law holds from 14 to 18, is understood of 18 beginning; and thus our law agrees with the civil law, impuberi non licet testari before 17 complete, and 18 beginning. Lord Nott. MSS.

shall be taken most strongly against himselfe, and so in the case aforesaid, where the debtor is made executor.

Totum jus, titulum, et clameum. But note, that jus, or right, in generall (10. Rep. 47.) signification includeth not onely a right for the which a writ of right doth lie, but also any title or claime, either by force of a condition, mortmaine, or the like, for the which no action is given by law, but only an entry.

Sect. 446.

*ITEM, ceux parolx que sont communement mis en tielx faits de releases, * scilicet (quæ quovismodo in futurum habere potero) sont sicome voides en le ley; car nul droit passa per un release, forsque le droit que le releffor ad al temps de le releas fait. Car si soit pier et firs, et le pier soit disseisee, et le firs (vivant son pier) releffa per son fait a le disseisor tout le droit que il ad ou aver püssoit en mesmes les tenements sans clause de garrantie, &c. et puis le pier morust, &c. le firs soit loyalment enter sur la possession le disseisor, pur ceo que il n'avoit † droit en la terre ‡ en la vie son pier, mes le droit descendist a luy per discent apres le releas fait per le mort son pere, &c.*

ALSO, these words which are commonly put in such releases, scilicet (quæ quovismodo in futurum habere potero) are as void in law; for no right passeth by a release, but the right which the releasor hath at the time of the release made. (1) For if there be father and sonne, and the father bee disseised, and the sonne (living his father) releaseth by his deed to the disseisor all the right which he hath or may have in the same tenements without clause of warrantie, &c. and after the father dieth, &c. the sonne may lawfully enter upon the possession of the disseisor, for that hee had no right in the land in his father's life, but the right descended to him after the release made by the death of his father, &c.

NOTE, a man may have a present right, though it cannot take effect in possession, but in futuro. (2)

As hee that hath a right to a reversion or remainder, and such a right he that hath it, may presently release. But here in the case which Littleton puts, where the sonne release in the life of his father, this release is void, [a] because he hath no right at all at the time of the release made, but all the right was at that time in the father; but after the decease of the father, the sonne shall enter into the land against his owne release.

The baron make a lease for life and dieth, the release made by the wife of her dower to him in reversion is good, albeit shee hath no cause of action against him in presenti.

Sans clause de garrantie. For if there be a warrantie annexed to the release, then the sonne shall be barred. For albeit the release cannot barre the right for the cause aforesaid, yet the warranty may rebutt, and barre him and his heires of a future right which was not in him at that time: and the reason (which in all cases is to be sought out) wherefore a warrantie being a covenant reall should barre a future right, is for avoiding of circuitie of action (which is not favoured in law); as he that made the warrantie should recover the land against the ter-tenant, and he by force of the warrantie to have as much in value against the same person: yet is there a diversity betweene a warrantie and a feoffment; [b] for if there be grandfather, father, and sonne, and the father disseiseth the grandfather, and make a feoffment

[a] 39. H. 6. 43. 21. E. 4. 81. 15. E. 4. tit. Entr. Cong. 21. in 9. H. 7. 1. b. 2. E. 3. 38.

* scilicet. --- &c. in L. and M. and Roh. and M. and Roh.

† nil added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ quant il releffasset, added in L.

(1) To prevent maintenance, and the multiplying of contentions and suits, it was an established maxim of the common law, that no possibility, right, title, or any other thing that was not in possession, could be granted or assigned to strangers. — A right in action could not be transferred even by act of law; nor was it considered as transferred to the king by the general transferring words of an act of attainder. (See the marquis of Winchester's case, 3. Rep. 2. b.) — But a right or title to the freehold or inheritance of lands might be released in five manners. — 1. To the tenant of the freehold in fact, or in law, without any privy. — 2. To him in remainder. — 3. To him in reversion. — 4. To him who had right only in respect of privy; as if the tenant were disseised, the lord, notwithstanding the disseisin, might release his services to him. — 5. To him who had privy only, though he had not the right; as if tenant in tail made a feoffment in fee, after this feoffment no right remained in him; yet in respect of the privy only, the donor might release to him the rent and services. — 6. So if the terre-tenants and the person entitled to the right or possibility joined in a grant of the lands, it would pass them to the grantee discharged from the right or possibility. See 10. Rep. 49. b. — But the common law is altered in the above instances in many respects. — On the assignment of things in action, see ante note 1. to p. 232. b. A contingent remainder in real estates can only be transferred by a fine or a common recovery, in which the remainder man comes in upon the voucher. — Contingent interests in terms of years, and other personal estates, have been held to be assignable by deed for a valuable consideration. See Mr. Fearn's Essay on Contingent Remainders. The passage in the text was cited by lord chief-justice Trevor, in delivering his opinion on the case of Arthur v. Bokenham, (Fitzgib. 234.) with an observation, that the doctrine laid down there by Littleton had never been contradicted.

(2) This doctrine was fully investigated in the case of Dormer v. Fortescue, Vin. vol. 18. fol. 413. 3. Atk. 135. Bro. Par. Caf. v. 4. 353. 405. The case there was, that an estate was limited to the use of A. for 99 years, if he should live long; and after his decease, or the sooner determination of the estate limited to him for 99 years, to the use of trustees and their heirs, during his life, upon trust to preserve the contingent remainders; and after the end or determination of that term, to the use of A.'s first and other sons successively in tail male, with several remainders over. A. having a son, they joined in levying a fine and suffering a common recovery, in which the son was vouched. If the trustees took a vested estate of freehold during the life of A. the recovery was void, there not being a good tenant to the præcipe; but if they took only a contingent estate, the freehold was in the son, and of course there was a good tenant to the præcipe. Upon this point the case was argued in the court of king's bench, and afterwards on appeal before the house of lords, where all the judges were ordered to attend. Lord chief-justice Lee, when the cause was heard in the king's bench, and lord chief-justice Willes, in delivering the opinion of the judges in the house of lords, entered very fully into the distinction between contingent and vested remainders. — They seem to have laid down the following points. That a remainder is contingent, either where the person to whom it is limited is not in esse; or where the

(Post. 339. a.)
 10. E. 2. confirmation 24.
 8. E. 2. garr. 62. 11. H. 4. 33.
 41. E. 3. 17. 42. E. 3. 24. per Finchden. 17. E. 3. 67.
 Lib. 1. fol. 112, 113. in Alba-nie's case.
 (9. Rep. 75.)
 (1. Roll. Rep. 197.)

15. H. 7. 11.

(1. Rep. 111. a. 173. Ant. 215. a.
 218. b. 237. a.)

[m] Lib. 1. Albanie's case, ubi supra.
 Lib. 5. Hoe's case 70, 71.
 10. H. 6. 4.

25. Aff. p. 7. 27. E. 3. Execution 130. Pasch. 38. Eliz.
 Rot. 521. inter Borough et Gray.
 (2. Roll. Abr. 404. 408. Hob. 46.
 2. Cro. 401. 449.)

49. E. 3. 28.

(Doct. and Stud. 18. a.
 10. Rep. 48. b.
 Post. 276. a.)

[c] 7. E. 4. 13. 20. H. 6. 29.
 5. H. 7. 41. 18. E. 3. 12.
 8. H. 7. 5. E. 3. 36. 5. E. 3. 46.
 Vide Sect. 490. 491.
 (Post. 284. b.
 1. Rep. 87. b.
 3. Rep. 29. b.)

in fee, the grandfather dieth, the father against his owne feoffment shall not enter; but if he die, his sonne shall enter. And so note a diversity betwene a release, a feoffment, and a warrantie: a release in that case is void: a feoffment is good against the feoffor, but not against his heire; a warrantie is good both against himselfe and his heires. (1)

And here are three diversities worthy of observation, viz. First, betwene a power or an authority, and a right. Secondly, betwene powers and authorities themselves. Thirdly, betwene a right and a possibilitie.

As to the first, if a man by his last will deviseth that his executors shall sell his land, and dieth, if the executors release all their right and title in the land to the heire, this is void, for that they have neither right nor title to the land, but only a bare authority, which is not within Littleton's case of a release of a right. And so it is if cestuy que use had devised that his feoffees should have sold the land. Albeit they had made a feoffment over, yet might they sell the use, for their authority in that case is not given away by the livery.

As to the second, there is a diversity betwene such powers or authorities as are only to the use of a stranger, and nothing for the benefit of him that made the release (as in the case before) and a power or authority which respecteth the benefit of the releasor; as in these usuall powers of revocation, when the feoffor, &c. hath a power to alter, change, determine, or revoke the uses (being intended for his benefit), he may release; and where the estates before were defeasible, he may by his release make them absolute, and exclude himselfe from any alteration or revocation, as it hath bene resolved; which diversity you may read in [m] Albanie's case. (2)

As to the third, before judgement the plaintife in an action of debt releaseth to the baile in the king's bench all demands; and after judgement is given, this shall not barre the plaintife to have execution against the baile, because at the time of the release he had but a meere possibilitie, and neither jus in re, nor jus ad rem, but the duty is to commence after upon a contingent, and therefore could not be released presently. So if the comfess of a statute, &c. release to the comfessor all his right in the land, yet afterwards he may sue execution; for he hath no right in the land till execution, but only a possibilitie; and so have I knowne it adjudged. (3)

Se^ct. 447.DE tout le droit.

This must be intended of a bare right, and not of a release of right, whereby any estate passeth, as to a lessee for yeares, &c. as shall be said hereafter. Also it must be intended of a release of a right of freehold at the least, and not to a right for any terme for yeares or chattle reall; as if lessee for yeares bee ousted, and hee in the reversion disseised, and the disseisor maketh a lease for yeares, the first lessee may release unto him. All which is implied in the first &c. Also in some case a release of a right made to one that hath neither freehold in deed, nor freehold in law, is good and available in law, [c] as the demandant may release to the vouchee, and yet the vouchee hath nothing in the land; but the reason of that is, for that when the vouchee entereth into the warrantie, he becommeth tenant to the demandant, and may render the land to him, in respect of the privitie; but an estranger cannot release to the vouchee, because, in rei veritate, he is not tenant of the land.

ITEM, en releas de tout le droit que home ad en certain terres, &c. il covient a celui a que le releas est fait en * aucun cas, que il ad le franktenement en les terres + en fait, ou en ley, al temps de releas fait, &c. † Car en cheacun cas lou celui a que le releas est fait, ad franktenement en fait, ou franktenement en ley, al temps del releas, || &c. ¶ doncque le releas est bone.

ALSO, in releases of all the right which a man hath in certaine lands, &c. it behooveth him to whom the release is made in any case, that hee hath the freehold in the lands in deed, or in law, at the time of the release made, &c. For in every case where he to whom the release is made, hath the freehold in deed, or in law, at the time of the release, &c. there the release is good. (4)

[d] And

* aucun—iel, in L. and M. and Roh.
 || fait added in L. and M. and Roh.

+ &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.
 § doncque not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Ant. 186. it is laid down that a man may warrant more than passes from him. In Fitzg. 234. lord chief-justice Trevor observes, that the reason why the feoffment prevails against the father, is, that by the disseisin he had acquired possession, and might make a feoffment, and the operation of a feoffment is to bar future and contingent rights.

(2) See note 2. to page 113. The doctrine of the suspension and extinction of powers will be considered in a note to the chapter of Discontinuance.

(3) In the king's bench, where the proceeding is by bill, the bail is not bound in a certain sum to the plaintiff, but only undertakes that the defendant shall pay the condemnation money, or render his body to prison; so that they are but in the nature of jailors to the defendant: but in the common pleas, the bail are bound to the plaintiff in a certain sum. 5. Rep. 70. 10. Rep. 51.

(4) Ant. 1st note to this Section.

particular estate may determine before the remainder can take place: but that in every case where the person to whom the remainder is limited is in esse, and is actually capable, or entitled to take on the expiration, or sooner determination, of the particular estate, supposing that expiration, or determination, to take place at that moment, there the remainder is vested. That the doubt arose, by not adverting to the distinction between the different nature of the contingency, in those cases where the remainder is limited to a person in esse; but the title of the remainder man to take, depends on a collateral or extraneous contingency, which may or may not take place during the continuance of the preceding estate; and those cases where the preceding estate may endure beyond the continuance of the estate in remainder. Thus if an estate is limited to A. for life, and after the death of A. and I. S. to B. for life, or in tail; there, during the life of I. S. the title of B. depends on the contingency of I. S. dying in the lifetime of A. This being an event which either may or may not take place during the continuance of the preceding estate, B.'s estate is necessarily contingent. But then, supposing I. S. to die; still it remains an uncertainty whether B.'s estate will ever take place in possession; for if the remainder be limited to B. for life; there if B. dies in A.'s lifetime, A.'s estate would endure beyond the continuance of the estate limited in remainder. The same would be the case if the remainder over were limited to B. in tail, and B. was to die in A.'s lifetime without issue.—Yet, in both cases, it was agreed that B. took, not a contingent but a vested remainder. Hence they inferred that it was not the possibility of the remainders over never taking effect in possession, but the remainder man's not having a capacity or title to take, supposing the preceding estate at that instant to expire, or determine, and its being uncertain whether he ever will obtain that capacity or title, during the continuance of the preceding estate, that makes the remainder contingent. Upon these grounds they determined that the trustees took a vested remainder, and that the recovery therefore was void. The doctrine established in the case of Dormer and Fortescue is laid down by sir Edward Coke, 10. Rep. 85.; where he, with great accuracy of expression, observes, that where it is dubious and uncertain whether the use or estate limited in future shall ever vest in interest or not, then the use or estate, is in contingency; because, upon a future contingency, it may either vest or never vest, as the contingent happens. And see 1. Rep. 137. b.

[d] And so it is if the tenant alien hanging the præcipe, the release of the demandant to the tenant to the præcipe is good, and yet he hath nothing in the land.

In time of vacation an annuity, that the person ought to pay, may be released to the patron in respect of the privity; but a release to the ordinary only seemeth not good, because the annuity is temporall.

If a disseisor make a lease for life, the disseisee may release to him; for to such a release of a bare right there needs no privity, as shall be said hereafter. But if the disseisor make a lease for yeares, the disseisee cannot release to him, because he hath no estate of freehold. And yet in some case a right of freehold shall drowne in a chattell; as if a feme hath a right of dower she may release to the gardein in chivalry, and her right of freehold shall drowne in the chattell, because the writ of dower doth lie against him, and the heire shall take advantage of it. And it is to be observed, that by the antient maxime of the common law, a right of entrie, or a chose in action, cannot be granted or transferred to a stranger, and thereby is avoyded great oppression, injurie and injustice. Nul charter, nul vende, ne nul done vault perpetualment si le donor n'est seigneur al temps de contract de 2. droitz, s. del droit de possession, et del droit del proprietie. And therefore well saith Littleton, that he to whom a release of a right is made must have a freehold.

For the better understanding of transferring of naked rights to lands or tenements, either by release, feoffment, or otherwise, it is to be knowne, that there is jus proprietatis, a right of ownership, jus possessionis, a right of seisin or possession, and jus proprietatis & possessionis, a right both of property and possession: and this is antiently called jus duplicatum, or droit double. For example, if a man be disseised of an acre of land, the disseisee hath jus proprietatis, the disseisor hath jus possessionis; and if the disseisee release to the disseisor, hee hath jus proprietatis et possessionis. (1) And regularly it holdeth true, that when a naked right to land is released to one that hath jus possessionis, and another by a meane title recover the land from him, the right of possession shall draw the naked right with it, and shall not leave a right in him to whom the release is made. For example, if the heire of the disseisor being in by descent A. doth disseise him, the disseisee release to A. now hath A. the meere right to the land. But if the heire of the disseisor enter into the land, and regaine the possession, that shall draw with it the meere right to the land, and shall not regaine the possession only, and leave the meere right in A. but by the recontinuance of the possession, the meere right is therewith vested in the heire of the disseisor.

But if the donee in taile discontinue in fee, now is the reversion of the donor turned to a naked right. If the donor release to the discontinuee and die, and the issue in taile doth recover the land against the discontinuee, he shall leave the reversion in the discontinuee; for the issue in taile can recover but the estate taile onely, and by consequence must leave the reversion in the discontinuee, for the donor cannot have it against his release: but if the disseisee enter upon the heire of the disseisor, and infeoffe A. in fee, and the heire of the disseisor recover the whole estate, that shall draw with it the meere right, and leave nothing in the feoffee. Nota the diversity. Another diversity is observable when the naked right is precedent before the acquisition of the defeasible estate, for there the recontinuance of the defeasible estate shall not draw with it the preceding right. [e] As if the disseisee disseise the heire of the disseisor, albeit the heire recover the land against the disseisee, yet shall he leave the preceding right in the disseisee. So if a woman that hath right of dower disseise the heire, and he recover the land against her, yet shall he leave the right of dower in her.

Another diversity is to be noted, when the meere right is subsequent, and transferred by act in law; there, albeit the possession be recontinued, yet that shall not draw the naked right with it, but shall leave it in him: as if the heire of the disseisor be disseised, and the disseisor infeoffe the heire apparent of the disseisee being of full age, and then the disseisee dieth, and the naked right descend to him, and the heire of the disseisor recover the land against him, yet doth he leave the naked right in the heire of the disseisee. So if the discontinuee of tenant in taile infeoffe the issue in taile of full age, and tenant in taile die, and then the discontinuee recover the land against him, yet he leaveth the naked right in the issue. [e] But if the heire of the disseisor be disseised, and the disseisee release to the disseisor upon condition, if the condition be broken, it shall revert the naked right. And so if the disseisee hath entred upon the heire of the disseisor, and made a feoffment in fee, upon condition, if he entred for the condition broken, and the heire of the disseisor entred upon him, the naked right should be left in the disseisee. But if the heire of the disseisor had entred before the condition broken, then the right of the disseisee had bene gone for ever. But now let us heare what Littleton saith.

[d] 10. E. 4. 14. 12. Aff. p. 41.

8. E. 3. 21. 46. E. 3. 6. b.

8. H. 6. 23. 21. H. 7. 41.

(Poit. 284. a. 8. Rep. 148.

5. Rep. 24. b. 2. Cro. 151.)

(Dyer 30. b. 2. Cro. 105.)

Mirror, cap. 2. §. 17.

(2. Roll. Abr. 45. 46. 47. 48.

Ant. 214. a. 232. b. Poit. 280.)

Mirror ubi supra. Bracton, lib. 2.

fol. 32. Britton, fol. 89. 121.

Bracton, lib. 5. fol. 372.

(2. Rep. 56. Sect. 473.

Poit. 283. b. 286. a.)

(Poit. 319. a.)

[e] 5. Aff. 1. 10. Aff. 16.

50. E. 3. 7. 4. E. 3. Eilopp. 133.

30. Aff. 5. 11. E. 3. Entrie 56.

12. Aff. 41. 27. E. 3. 84. 488.

(6. Rep. 70. a.)

23. H. 8. tit. Restore al action.

Br. 5. 50. E. 3. 7. Vid. Sect. 473.

475. 478. 487.

[e] 38. E. 3. 16. 9. H. 7. 24.

(Poit. 279. a. 4. Rep. 9. b.)

Sect.

(1) These may be subdivided, with respect to the disseisor, into that bare, naked, possession which he acquires by the disseisin, and the estate by title which his heir acquires by the descent; and, with respect to the disseisee, into that right of possession which he can restore by entry, and the bare right which he can only recover by action.

Sect. 448.

(Doct. and Stud. 17. a.)

[a] Bract. li. 4. f. 206. 236.
Britton, fol. 83. b. Fleta, lib. 3.
cap. 15. Vid. Sect. 680.42. E. 3. 20. 10. H. 6. 14.
17. E. 3. 78. 2. E. 3. 33.
(5. Rep. 123. b.)

(Mo. 141.)

11. H. 4. 61. 21. H. 7. 12.

[g] 32. E. 3. barre 262.
41. Alf. 2. 13. H. 4. surrender, 10.

[h] 38. E. 3. 12.

17. E. 3. 77. 18. E. 4. 25.

HERE Littleton describeth what a freehold in law is, for he had spoke before in many places of freeholds in deed. This Bracton calleth [a] civilem et naturalem possessionem seu seisinam. The naturall seisin is the freehold in deed, and the civill the freehold in law. (1)

If a man levie a fine to a man sur consueance de droit come ceo que il ad de son done, or a fine sur consueance de droit tantum; these be feoffments of record, and the consuee hath a freehold in law in him before hee entereth.

Upon an exchange, the parties have neither freehold in deed, nor in law, before they enter; so upon a partition the freehold is not removed untill an entry.

[g] If tenant for life by the agreement of him in the reversion surrender unto him; he in the reversion hath a freehold in law in him before he enter. [h] Upon a livery within the view no freehold is vested before an entrie.

If a man doth bargain and sell land by deed indented and inrolled, the freehold in law doth passe presently. And so when uses are raised by covenant upon good consideration.

If a tenant in a præcipe being seised of lands in fee, confesse himselfe to be a villeine to an estranger, and to hold the land in villenage of him, the estranger by this acknowledgement is actually seised of the freehold and inheritance without any entry. But let us returne to Littleton.

FRanktenement en ley est, sicome as if a man disseiseth another, and dieth seised, whereby the tenements descend to his sonne, albeit that his sonne doth not enter into the tenements, yet hee hath a freehold in law, which by force of the discent is cast upon him, and therefore a release made to him, so being seised of a freehold in law, is good enough; and if he taketh wife being so seised in law, although he never enter in deed, and dieth, his wife shal be endowed. †

Sect. 449.

ITEM, en ascuns casés de releases de tout le droit, comment que celui a que le release est fait n'ad riens en le franktenement en fait ne en ley, uncore le release est assés bone. Sicome le disseisor lessa la terre que il ad per disseisin a un auter pur terme de sa vie, s'avant le reversion a luy, si le disseisee ou son beire release al disseisor tout le droit, &c.

ALSO, in some cases of releases of all the right, albeit (2) that he to whom the release is made hath nothing in the freehold in deed nor in law, yet the release is good enough. As if the disseisor letteth the land which hee hath by disseisin to another for terme of his life, saving the reversion to him, if the disseisee or his heire release to the disseisor all the right, &c. this

* ent added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It may not, perhaps, be improper in this place, to attempt a short explanation of some words familiar both in the ancient and modern law. Seisin is a technical term, denoting the completion of that investiture by which the tenant was admitted into the tenure, and without which no freehold could be constituted or pass. It is a word common as well to the French as to the English law. It is either in deed, which is, when the person has the actual seisin or possession; or in law, when after a discent the person on whom the lands descend, has not actually entered, and the possession continues vacant, not being usurped by another. Disseisin seems to imply the turning the tenant out of his fee, and usurping his place and relation. It has been observed in a preceding note, that persons, to avail themselves of the remedy by assise, frequently supposed or admitted themselves to be disseised, when they were not; and that this was called disseisin by election, in opposition to an actual disseisin. To constitute an actual disseisin, it was necessary that the disseisor had not a right of entry; (or, to use the old law expression, that his entry was not congeable;) that the person disseised was, at the time of the disseisin, in the actual possession of the lands; that the disseisor expelled him from them by some degree of constraint or force; and that he substituted himself to be tenant to the lord. But how this substitution was effected, it is difficult, perhaps impossible, now to discover. From what we know of the feudal law, it does not appear how a disseisin could be effected without the consent or connivance of the lord: yet we find, the relationship of lord and tenant remained after the disseisin. Thus, after the disseisin, the lord might release the rent and services to the disseisee; might avow upon him; and if he died his heir within age, the lord was entitled to the wardship of the heir. See Litt. Sect. 454. and the commentary upon it. It should be observed, that a disseisin did not disturb rent issuing out of land, the seisin of the rent being considered as a separate and distinct seisin from that of the land. 1. Rep. 133. b. A discontinuance is the effect of a disseisin, when, on certain events, the person disseised has lost his right of entry upon the disseisor, and can only recover by action. The word freehold is now generally used to denote an estate for life, in opposition to an estate of inheritance. Perhaps, in the old law it meant rather the latter than the former. It is known that fees were held originally at the will of the lord; then, for the life of the tenant; that afterwards they were descendible to some particular heirs of the body of the tenant; then, to all the heirs of his body; and that in succession of time the tenant had the complete dominion or power over the fee. The word freehold always imported the whole estate of feudatory, but varied as that varied. Hence we find the freeholder represented the whole fee, did the duty to the lord, and defended the possession against strangers. See Feud. l. 1. tit. 25. l. 2. t. 1. 2. Craig. lib. 2. tit. 2. 1. Inst. 31. 153. Litt. Sect. 59. 279. 592. Britton, cha. 32. and sir Ed. Coke's Commentary upon those Sections; and the case of Taylor on the demise of Atkins v. Horde, 1. Burrows 60.

(2) But a common recovery vests no freehold in deed or in law before execution served. See Moor 141.

cel release est bone, pur ceo que celuy a que le release est fait, avoit en luy un reversion al temps del release fait.

release is good, because hee to whom the release is made, had in law a reversion at the time of the release made (1).

(Plo. 352.)

HERE Littleton addeth a limitation to the next precedent Section, viz. that a release of all the right may be good to him in reversion, albeit he hath nothing in the freehold, because he hath an estate in him.

7. E. 4. 13. 14. H. 4. 32. b. ult. 41. E. 3. 17. 49. E. 3. 28. case

Tout le droit, &c. Or title, interest, demand, or the like; and so it is if he in the reversion hath an estate for life or in taile in reversion, as in the like case it appeareth in the next Section.

Sect. 450.

*EN mesme le maner est, lou leas est fait a un home pur terme de vie, le remainder a un autre pur terme de * autre vie, le remainder a le tierce en le taile, le remainder a le quart en fee, si un estranger que droit ad a la terre releffa tout son droit a aucun de eux en le remainder, tiel release est bone, pur ceo que chescun de eux ad un remainder en fait vestue en luy.*

IN the same manner it is, where a lease is made to a man for terme of life, the remainder to another for terme of another man's life, the remainder to the third in taile, the remainder to the fourth in fee, if a stranger which hath right to the land releaseth all his right to any of them in the remainder, such release is good, because everie of them hath a remainder in deed vested in him.

HERE is another limitation, that a release is good to him in the remainder, albeit hee hath nothing in the freehold in possession, because he hath an estate in him, as hath beene said. In both these limitations it is to be observed, that the state which maketh a man tenant to the præcipe, is said to be the freehold, as here the state of tenant for life, and not the reversion in fee.

7. E. 4. 13. 41. E. 3. 7. 17. E. 3. 54. 18. E. 2. Tit. Entrie 74. 3. E. 2. Tit. Entrie 7. F. N. B. 207. E.

Sect. 451.

MES si le tenant a terme de vie soit disseisfe, et puis celuy que ad droit (esteant le possession en le disseisor) releffa a un de eux a que le remainder fuit fait tout † son droit, cel release est void, pur ceo que il n'avoit ‡ un remainder en fait al temps de release fait, forsque tantselement un droit del remainder.

BUT if the tenant for terme of life be disseised, and afterwards he that hath right (the possession being in the disseisor) releaseth to one of them to whom the remainder was made all his right, this release is void, because hee had not a remainder in deed at the time of the release made, but only a right of a remainder.

Forsque tantselement un droit del remainder.

For a release of a right to one that hath but a bare right regularly is void; for, as Littleton hath before said, hee to whom a release is made of a bare right in lands and tenements, must have either a freehold in deed or in law in possession, or a state in remainder or reversion in fee or fee taile, or for life. Vide Sect. 454.

Sect.

* auter not in L. and M. nor Roh. nor in Cambr. MSS. † son—le, L. and M. and Roh. ‡ en luy added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Releases may enure four manner of ways. 1st, Per mitter le droit, where a person is disseised, and he releases to the disseisor his heir or feoffee.—2d, Per mitter le estate, viz. when two or more are seised by a joint title of the same estate, as by a contract, or by descent, as jointtenants or coparceners, and one of them releases to the other, this enures per mitter l'estate.—3d, Per Pelurger, is where the possession and inheritances are separated for a particular time, and he who hath the reversion or inheritance, releases to the tenant in possession all his right and interest. Such release is said to enlarge his estate, and to be equal to an entry and feoffment, and to amount to a grant and attornment.—4th, Per extinguishment, where the releasee cannot have the thing per mitter le droit, yet the release shall enure by way of extinguishment against all manner of persons; as when the lord grants the feignory to his tenant, such releases absolutely extinguish the rent, &c. although the releasee be only tenant for life. Ant. 193. b. and see post. 273. b.

Sect. 452.

BY this it appeareth, that as a release made of a right to him in reversion or remainder, shall aid and benefit him that hath the particular estate for yeares, life, or estate taile, so a release of a right made to a particular tenant for life, or in taile, shall aid and benefit him or them in the remainder.

If two tenants in common of land graunt a rent charge of 40s. out of the same to one in fee, and the grantee release to one of them, this shall extinguish but twentie shillings, for that the graunt in judgement of law was severall. (1) So it is if two men be seised of severall acres, and grant a rent ut supra. But there is a diversitie betwene severall estates in severall lands, and severall estates in one land; for if one be tenant for life of lands, the reversion in fee over to another, if they two joyne in a grant of a rent out of the lands, if the grantee releaseth either to him in the reversion, or to tenant for life, the whole rent is extinguished, for it is but one rent, and issueth out of both estates, and so note the diversitie. (2)

Si le tenant ad le fait en son poigne a pleader. And so it is in both cases: for albeit he in the reversion or remainder is a stranger to the deed, when the release is made to the tenant, and the tenant for life or in taile is a stranger to the deed, when the release is made to him in reversion or remainder, yet seeing they are privies in estate, none of them in pleading shall take benefit thereof, without shewing the same in court, which is worthy to be observed.

S'ils ceo poient monstre. The one cannot plead the release made to the other without shewing of it, for that they are privie in estate, as hath beene said. The residue of these two Sections needs no explication.

*ET nota, que chescun release fait a celuy que ad un reversion ou un remainder en fait, servira et aidera celuy que ad le franktenement, auxy bien come a celuy a que le release fuit fait, si le tenant avoit le release en son poigne * de pleader.*

AND note, that every release made to him which hath a reversion or a remainder in deed, shall serve and aid him who hath the freehold, as well as him to whom the release was made, if the tenant hath the release in his hand to plead.

Sect. 453.

ET en mesme le man- ner † est lou un release ‡ est fait al tenant pur terme de vie, ou al tenant en le taile, || ceo urera a eux en le reversion, ou a eux en le remainder, auxy bien come al tenant de franktenement, et averont auxy grand advantage de cel, s'ils ceo foyent monstre §.

IN the same manner it is where a release is made to the tenant for life, or to the tenant in taile, this shall enure to them in the reversion, or to them in the remainder, as well as to the tenant of the freehold, and they shall have as great advantage of this, if they can shew it.

Sect.

(2. Roll. Abr. 414. Post. 275. a. 279. b. 285. b. 297. a. Ant. 147. b. 197.)

(1. Rep. Mayoe's case.)

35. H. 6. 8.

(Ant. 232. a. Hob. 66. 2. Roll. Abr. 412.)

* de pleader not in L. and M. nor Roh. † est lou not in L. and M. nor Roh. ‡ est not in L. and M. nor Roh. || ceo not in L. and M. nor Roh. § &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) If they grant a rent-charge of 20s. which in law amounts to a rent-charge of 40s. as two grants, for otherwise non est casus. When two tenants in common grant a rent, that is, several estates in one land, and yet they are several grants, therefore quere of this diversity. Plo. Que. pl. 315. contra. Lord Nott. MSS.

(2) For Plover. in his Quere 315. if tenant for life grants rent, and the grantee purchases the reversion, the rent remains during the life of the tenant for life. Lord Nott. MSS.

Sect. 454.

ITEM, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant soit disseisee, et le seignior releffa al disseisee tout le droit que il avoit en le seigniorie ou en le terre, cel release est bone, et le seigniorie est extinct: et ceo est par cause del privitie que est perenter le seignior et le disseisee. Car si les avers le disseisee soient pris, et de eux le disseisee fust un replevin envers le seignior, il compellera le seignior d'avowrer sur luy; car s'il avowrer sur le disseisor, donques sur le matter monstre l'avowrie abatera, car le disseisee est tenant a luy en droit et en la ley.

ALSO, if there bee lord and tenant, and the tenant be disseised, and the lord releaseth to the disseisee all the right which he hath in the seigniorie or in the land, this release is good, and the seigniorie is extinct: and this is by reason of the privitie which is betweene the lord and the disseisee. For if the beasts of the disseisee be taken, and of them the disseisee sueth a replevin against the lord, hee shall compell the lord to avow upon him; for if hee avow upon the disseisor, then upon the matter shewn the avowrie shall abate, for the disseisee is tenant to him in right and in law. (1)

HEREUPON may bee collected and observed two diversities: first, betweene a seigniorie or rent service, and a rent charge: for a seigniorie or rent service may bee released and extinguished to him that hath but a bare right in the land. And the reason hereof is, in respect of the privitie betweene the lord and the tenant in right; for he is not only as tenant to the avowrie, but if hee die his heire within age, hee shall bee in ward; and if of full age, hee shall pay releefe; and if he die without heire, the land shall escheat. But there is no such privitie in case of a rent charge, for there the charge only lieth upon the land.

(3. Rep. 35. b.)

The second diversitie is betweene a seigniorie and a bare right to land; for a release of a bare right to land to one that hath but a bare right is void, as hath beene said. But here in the case of our author, a release of a seigniorie to him that hath but a right, is good to extinguish the seigniorie.

Vid. Sect. 451.

Nota, a seigniorie, rent, or right, either in presenti, or in futuro, may be released five manner of wayes, and the first three without any privitie. First, to the tenant of the freehold in deed or in law.

Lib. 10. fol. 48. Lampet's case.

(Post. 275. 2. Roll. Abr. 402.)

Secondly, to him in remainder. Thirdly, to him in the reversion. The other two in respect of privitie: as, first, here the lord releaseth his seigniorie to the tenant being disseised, having but a right, and no estate at all: secondly, in respect of the privitie, without any estate or right; as by the demandant to the vouchee, or donor to the donee, after the donee hath discontinued in fee, as appeareth hereafter in this chapter.

Sect. 455.

Per cause de privitie, &c. See for this word (privitie), Sect. 461.

Il compellera le seignior d'avowrer sur luy, &c. This is regularly true; but if the lord hath accepted services of the disseisor, then the disseisee cannot enforce the lord to avow upon him, though his beasts be taken, &c. (2)

If a man hath title to have a writ of escheat, if he accept homage or fealtie of the tenant, he is barred of his writ of escheat; but if he accept rent of the tenant, that is no bar to him, for it may be received by the hands of a baylife. [d] But some doe hold, that if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant be disseised, and the disseisee die without heire, the lord accepts rent by the hands of the disseisor, this is no barre to him. Contrarie it is, if he avow for the rent in court of record, or if he take a corporall service, as homage or fealtie, for the disseisor is in by wrong: but if the lord accept the rent by the hands of the heire of the disseisor, or of his feoffee, because they be in by title, this shall barre him of his escheat, which is to bee

20. H. 6. 9. b. 41. E. 3. 28.

48. E. 3. 9. 2. E. 4. 6. 2.

31. E. 1. Discent 17. 26. E. 3. 72.

4. H. 6. 21. F. N. B. 144. o.

[d] 7. E. 6. tit. Escheat. Br. 18.

(9. Rep. 22. 1. Roll. Abr. 316. b.)

(1) Here the release operates by way of extinguishment. See post. 279. b.

(2) But the opinion of the 48. E. 3. 9. seems to the contrary; because when the tenant pleads the disseisin, to compel the lord to avow upon him, it is strange that the lord, by his own act of acceptance, should maintain his avowry, and destroy the feudal contract. Gilb. Ten. 64. 65.

(c) 7. H. 4. 17. 3. R. 2. entr. bee understood of a discent or feoffment, after the title of escheat accrued: (c) for if the disseisor make a feoffment in fee, or die seised, and after the disseisee die without heire, then there is no escheat at all, because the lord hath a tenant in by title. And when Littleton wrote, the disseisee in the case here put, should have compelled the lord to have avowed upon him, as Littleton holdeth. But now this is altered by a latter statute of (f) 21 H. 8. For whereas by fines, recoveries, grants, and secret feoffments, &c. made by tenants to persons unknowne, the lords were put from knowledge of their tenants, upon whom by order of law they should make their avowrie, &c. it is by that statute enacted, that if the lord shall distreine upon the lands and tenements holden, &c. that he may avow, &c. upon the same lands, &c. as in lands, &c. within his fee or feignorie, &c. without naming of any person certaine, and without making avowrie upon a person certaine. Upon which statute these foure points are to be observed. First, that the lord hath still election either to avow according to the common law, by force of the statute, by reason of this word (may). Secondly, albeit the purview of the act be generall, yet all necessary incidents are to be supplied, and the scope and end of the act to be taken: and therefore, though he need not to make his avowrie upon any person certaine, yet he must allege seisin by the hands of some tenant in certaine, within fourte yeares. Thirdly, that if the avowrie be made according to the statute, everie plaintife in the replevin, or second deliverance, be he termor or other, may have everie answer to the avowrie that is sufficient; and also have aid, and everie other advantage in law (disclaimer only except); for disclaime he cannot, because in that case the avowrie is made upon no certaine person. Fourthly, where the words of the statute be, if the lord distreine upon the lands and tenements holden, yet if the lord come to distreine, and the tenant enchafe his beasts which were within the view out of the land holden, and there the lord distreine, albeit the distresse be taken out of his fee and feignorie in that case, yet is it within the said statute; for in judgment of law the distresse is lawfull, and as taken within his fee and feignorie; and this statute being made to suppress fraud, is to be taken by equitie (1).

(f) 21. H. 8. cap. 19.
(Hob. 242.)

Lib. 9. fol. 136. Ascough's case.

27. H. 8. fol. 4. 32. H. 8. cap. 2.
Lib. 9. fol. 36. Bucknall's case.

34. H. 8. Avowrie Br. 113.
27. H. 8. 4. & 20. Bucknall's case
ubi supra.

Lib. 9. fol. 22. in case d'avowrie.

44. E. 3. 20. 11. H. 7. 4. 21. H. 7. 40. 34. H. 6. 18. 16. E. 4. 10. 6. R. 2. Rescou. 11.
(Ant. 161.)

Sect. 455.

*ITEM, si terre soit done a un home en taile, reservant al donor et a ses heires un certaine rent, si le donee soit disseisee, et puis le donor releffa al donee et a ses heires tout le droit que il avoit en la terre, et puis le donee enter en la terre sur le disseisor; en cest case le rent est ale, pur ceo que le disseisee al temps de release fait, fuit tenant en droit et en la ley al donor, et avowrie a fine force covient de estre fait sur luy per le donor pur le rent aderere, &c. Mes uncore rien de droit de terres, scilicet, de le droit de le reversion, * passera per tiel release, pur ceo que le donee a que le release est fait, adonque n'avoit riens en la terre forsque tant-solement un droit, et issint le droit del terre ne pouvoit † adonques passer al donee per tiel release.*

ALSO, if land be given to a man in taile, reserving to the donor and to his heires a certaine rent, if the donee be disseised, and after the donor release to the donee and his heires all the right which hee hath in the land, and after the donee enter into the land upon the disseisor; in this case the rent is gone, for that the disseisee at the time of the release made, was tenant in right and in law to the donor, and the avowrie of fine (2) force ought to be made upon him by the donor for the rent behinde, &c. But yet nothing of the right of the lands, (scilicet) of the reversion, shall passe by such release, for that the donee to whom the release is made, then had nothing in the land but onely a right, and so the right of the land could not then passe to the donee by such release.

Si

* adonques ne added L. and M. and Roh.

† adonques not in L. and M.

(1) See the following page. Gilb. Distr. 189. Lord Raym. 257.

(2) That is, of necessity.

SI le donee soit disseise, &c. This is evident by that which hath bene said. But admit that the donee maketh a feoffment in fee, and the donor release unto him and his heires all the right in the land, this shall extinguish the rent, because the lord must avow upon him, and yet the tenant in taile after the feoffment hath no right in the land. But the reason is in respect of the privity, and that the [m] donor is by necessity compellable to avow upon him only; for if he should avow upon the discontinuee, then it should appeare of his owne shewing that the reversion whereunto the rent is incident should be out of him, and consequently the avowrie should abate; and so was it [n] resolved Trin. 18. Eliz. in the court of common pleas in fir Thomas Wiat's case, which I heard and observed. And Littleton saith here, that in case of the disseisin of fine force, the avowrie must be made upon the donee.

Vide Sect. 454. 1. H. 5. tit. grant. 43. 14. H. 4. 38. ii. 3. fol. 29. lib. 6. 58. Lampet's case ubi supra.
(Art. 46. Post. 318.)
[m] 10. E. 3. 26. 48. E. 3. 8. b. 31. E. 3. gard. 116. 5. E. 4. 3. 7. E. 4. 27. 15. E. 4. 13.
[n] Trin. 18. Eliz. fir Thomas Wiat's case in communi banco.

Uncore riens de droit, &c. de reversion, &c. Here the diversitie aforesaid betweene the rent service and a bare right to the land appeareth.

Sect. 456.

*EN mesme le manner est, si leas soit * a un pur terme de vie, reservant al lessor et a ses heires certaine rent, si le lessée soit disseise, et puis lessor releffa al lessée et a ses heires tout le droit que il ad en la terre, et apres le lessée enter, coment que en cest cas le rent est extincet, uncore rien del droit de la reversion passera, causâ quâ supra.*

IN the same manner it is, if a lease be made to one for terme of life, reserving to the lessor and to his heires a certaine rent, if the lessee be disseised, and after the lessor release to the lessee and to his heires all the right which he hath in the land, and after the lessee entreth, albeit in this case the rent is extincet, yet nothing of the right of the reversion shall passe, causâ qua supra.

HEREBY the diversity is made apparent betweene a release of a rent service out of land, and a release of right to land, in this Section.

Sect. 457.

MES si soit veray seignior et veray tenant, et le tenant fait un feoffment en fee, lequel feoffee ne unque devient tenant al seignior, † si le seignior releffa al feoffor tout son droit, &c. cest releas est en tout void, pur ceo que le feoffor ad nul droit en la terre, et il n'est tenant en droit al

BUT if there be very lord and very tenant, and the tenant maketh a feoffment in fee, the which feoffee doth never become tenant to the lord, if the lord release to the feoffor all his right, &c. this release is altogether void, because the feoffor hath no right in the land, and he is not tenant in right to the VERAY seignior et veray tenant.

This is to be understood of a lord in fee simple, and of a tenant of like estate.

There be foure manner of avowries for rents and services, &c. viz. 1. Super verum tenentem, as in the case here put. 2. Super verum tenentem in formâ prædictâ, as where a lease for life, or a gift in taile bee made, the remainder in fee. 3. Upon one as upon his tenant by the manor omitting (verie); and this is when the lord hath a particular estate in the seignorie, and so shall the donor upon

Vide Ascough's case, 1. 9. fo. 135. 136. 20. H. 6. 9. 2. H. 4. 21. 12. E. 4. 2. 26. H. 6. avowrie 17. 9. Eliz. Dier 257. 5. H. 7. 11. 7. E. 4. 24. 20. E. 3. avow. 131. (9. Rep. 135. b. 31. H. 8. c. 19.)

* fait added in L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

47. E. 3. fol. ultimo. 38. H. 6. 23.

(Doc. Pla. 33.)

21. H. 8. cap. 19.
(Post. 345.)

(Doc. Pla. 321.)

4. E. 2. 22. 7. E. 3. 8.
7. E. 4. 27. 29. H. 8. tit. avow-rie. Br. 111. li. 3. fol. 65. 66.
Pennant's case. 7. H. 4. 14.
2. E. 4. 6. 34. H. 6. 46.
3. H. 6. 29. H. 8. avowrie.
(6. Rep. 58. b.)

4. E. 3. 22. 47. E. 3. 4.

21. H. 8. cap. 19.

upon the donee, or lessor upon the lessee. 4. Sur le matter en la terre, as within his fee and seigniorie. As where the tenant by knights service maketh a lease for life reserving a rent, and die his heire within age, the gardeine shall avow upon the lessee, scilicet, super materiam prædictam in terris et tenementis prædictis ut infra feudum et dominium suum. Now by the statute the very lord may avow, as in lands within his fee and seigniorie, without avowing upon any person in certaine. (1)

Here appeareth the diversity betwene a tenant in taile, and a tenant in fee simple; for albeit tenant in taile make a feoffment in fee, yet the right of the entaile remaine, and shall descend to the issue in taile. But when the tenant in fee simple make a feoffment in fee, no right at all remaine of his estate, but the whole is transferred to the feoffee.

Also the lord is not compellable in that case to avow upon the feoffor; but if he will, as Littleton here saith, he may avow on the feoffee; but so it is not, as hath beene said, in case of tenant in taile.

Note a diversity betwene actions and acts which concerne the right, and actions and acts which concerne the possession only. For a writ of customes and services lieth not against the feoffor, nor a release to him shall extinguish the seigniorie. So if a rescous be made, an assise shall not lie against the feoffor, and him that made the rescous, because the feoffee is tenant, and in assise; the surplussage incroached shall be avoided. For these actions and acts concerne the right; but of a seisin and an avowrie which concerne the possession, it is otherwise. And if the lord release to the feoffor, this is good betwene them, as to the possession and discharge of the arrerages, but the feoffee shall not take benefit of it, for that, as hath beene said, it extendeth not to the right. But the feoffor shall plead a release to the feoffee, for thereby the seigniorie is extinct; as if lessee for life doth waste, and grant over his estate, and the lessor release to the grantee, in an action of waste against the lessee, he shall plead the release, and yet he hath nothing in the land. And so in waste shall tenant in dower or by the courtesie in the like case, and the vouchee, and the tenant in a præcipe after a feoffment made. And so in a contra formam collationis.

Le feoffee ne unques deveigne tenant. Nota here an excellent point of learning, viz. if there be lord and tenant, and the rent is behind by divers yeares, and the tenant make a feoffment in fee, if the lord accept the service or rent of the feoffee due in his time, he shall lose the arrerages due in the time of the feoffor; for after such acceptance he shall not avow upon the feoffor, nor upon the feoffee for the arrerages incurred in the time of the feoffor. But in that case if the feoffor dieth, albeit the lord accept the rent or service by the hand of the feoffee due in his time, he shall not lose the arrerages, for now the law compelleth him to avow upon the feoffee, (2) and that which the law compelleth him unto, shall not prejudice him.

So it is, and for the same reason, if there be lord, mesne, and tenant, and the rent due by the mesne is behinde, and after the tenant fore-judge the mesne, and the lord receive the services of the mesne which issue out of the tenancie, he shall not be barred of the arrerages which issued out of the mesnalty; and so if the rent be behinde, and the tenant dieth, the acceptance of the services by the hand of the heire shall not barre him of the arrerages; for in these cases albeit the persons be altered, yet the lord doth accept the services of him which only ought to doe them. (3)

But as long as the feoffor liveth, the lord shall not be compelled to avow upon the feoffee, unless he giveth the lord notice, and tender unto him all the arrerages.

But now by the statute the lord may avow upon the lands so holden, as in lands within his fee or seigniorie, without naming of any person certaine to bee tenant of the same, and without making of any avowrie upon any person certaine, as hath beene said, which hath much altered the common law in the cases abovesaid, for the benefit and safety of the lord.

But yet these cases are necessary to be knowne (for which purpose I have added them), for that the lord may avow still at the common law if he will.

Sect.

(1) On the continuance of the right of the entail in the tenant in tail after a feoffment made by him, see the case of lord Sheffield v. Radcliffe, Hob. 334. and see Duncombe v. Wingfield, ibid. 252.

(2) For the lord could not introduce the heir into the feud contrary to the express alienation of the ancestor. Gilb. Ten. 67.

(3) By acceptance of rent from the assignee, the lessor loses his action of debt against the first lessee, but he may still maintain an action of covenant against him. 1. Saund. 240. 241. 2. Saund. 302.

Sect. 458.

AUTERMENT est lou le veray tenant est disseise, come en le cas avantdit; car si le veray tenant que est disseise, teigne del seignior per service de chivaler et morust (son heire esteant deins age), le seignior avera et seisera le garde del heire, et issint n'avera il my le gard del feoffor que fist le feoffment en fee, &c. issint il est graund diversity enter les deux cases, &c.

OTHERWISE it is where the very tenant is disseised, as in the case aforesaid; for if the very tenant who is disseised, hold of the lord by knights service and dieth (his heire being within age), the lord shall have and seize the wardship of the heire, and so shall he not have the ward of the feoffor that made the feoffment in fee, &c. so there is a great diversitie betweene these two cases.

(Ant. 76. b.)

Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 459.

ITEM, si un home lessa a un auter son terre pur terme d'ans, si le lessor releasa al lessée tout son droit, &c. devant que le lessée avoit enter en mesme le terre per force de mesme le leas, tiel releas est void, pur ceo que le lessée n'avoit possession en la terre al temps del releas fait, mes tantselement un droit d'aver mesme la terre per force de mesme le leas. Mes si le lessée enter en mesme la terre, et ent eit possession per force de mesme le leas, donque tiel releas fait a luy per le feoffor, ou per son heire, est *sufficient a luy per cause del privitie que per force del leas est perenter eux, &c.

ALSO, if a man letteth to another his land for terme of yeares, if the lessor release to the lessee all his right, &c. before that the lessee had entered into the same land by force of the same lease, such release is void, for that the lessee had not possession in the land at the time of the release made, but only a right to have the same land by force of the lease. But if the lessee enter into the land, and hath possession of it by force of the said lease, then such release made to him by the feoffor, or by his heire, is sufficient to him by reason of the privitie which by force of the lease is between them, &c. (1)

DEVANT que le lessée avoit enter,

&c. For before entry the lessee hath but interesse termini, an interest of a terme, and no possession, and therefore a release which enure by way of enlarging of an estate cannot worke without a possession, (2) for before possession there is no reversion; and yet if a tenant for twenty yeares in possession make a lease to B. for five yeares, and B. enter, a release to the first lessee is good, for he had an actual possession, and the possession of his lessee is his possession. And so it is if a man make a lease for yeares, the remainder for yeares, and the first lessee doth enter, a release to him in the remainder for yeares is good to enlarge his estate. (3)

12. H. 4. 13. 36. E. 3. tit. gard.
10. 6. H. 7. 9. 37. H. 6. 1.
32. H. 6. 27. 7. E. 6. tit. gard. Br.
(Post. 345. b.)

49. E. 3. 28. 22. H. 6. 8.
37. H. 6. 18. 22. E. 4. 37.
4. H. 7. 10. 15. H. 7. 14.

22. E. 4. Surrender. 6.
(Post. 273. a.)

But if a man make a lease for yeares to beginne presently, reserving a rent, if before the lessee doth enter the lessor releaseth all the right that hee hath in the land, albeit this release cannot enlarge his estate, yet it shall in respect of the privity extinguish the rent. And so it is if a lease be made to beginne at Michaelmas, reserving a rent, and before the day the lessor release all the right that hee hath in the land, this cannot enure to enlarge

(Ant. 46. b.)

* bon et added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) On releases which operate by enlargement, see post. 273. a.

(2) But this must be understood of a lease at common law; for if it be so framed as to be a bargain and sale under the statute, the possession is immediately executed in the lessee, so that no entry is necessary. See the note page 71. b. and Cro. Car. 110. 2. Ventris 35.

(3) By this passage it appears, that what sir Edward Coke observes a few lines before, that a release which enures by enlargement cannot work without a possession, must be understood to mean, not that an actual estate in possession is necessary, but that a vested interest suffices, for such a release to operate upon. By comparing this with what is said in note 1. 271. b. of the operation of a lease and release, it will be seen, that not only estates in possession, but estates in remainder and reversion, and all other incorporeal hereditaments, may be effectually granted and conveyed by lease and release: but it is an inaccuracy to say, that the releasee, in these cases, is in the actual possession of the hereditaments; the right expression is, that they are actually vested in him, by virtue of the lease of possession, and the statute.

[h] Mich. 39. & 40. Eliz. in Seccario, betweene sir Henrie Woodhouse and sir William Palton.

[c] Pasch. 38. Eliz. in quare impedit per Bennet, vers. l'evêque de Norwich in communi banco.

Pl. Com. 423.

25. E. 3. 53. 31. E. 3. Confirmat. 14. 31. Ail. Pl. 13.

enlarge the estate but to extinguish the rent in respect of the privity, as it was resolved [h] in the exchequer, which I observed.

A man granteth the next avoidance of an advowson to two, the one of them may before the church become void release to the other; for although the grantor cannot release to them to increase their estate, because their interest is future, and not in possession, yet one of them to extinguish his interest may release to the other in respect of the privity. But after the church become void, then such a release is void, because then it is (as it were) but a thing in action. And this was resolved [c] by the whole court of common pleas, which I myselfe heard and observed. And by consequent in the case of Littleton, if a lease for yeares be made to two, albeit the lessor before they enter cannot release to them to enlarge their estate, yet one of them may before entry release to the other.

Mes tantseulement un droit, &c. Which is not so to be understood that he hath but a naked right, for then he could not grant it over; but seeing he hath interesse termini, before entrie, he may grant it over, albeit for want of an actuall possession he is not capable of a release to enlarge his estate.

Mes si le lessée enter en mesme le terre, &c. This is evident. And herein note a diversity betweene a lease for life, and for yeares, for before the lessee for yeares enter, a release cannot be made unto him: but if a man make a lease for life, the remainder for life, and the first lessee dieth, a release to him in the remainder and to his heires is good before hee doth enter to enlarge his estate, for that he hath an estate of a freehold in law in him, which may be enlarged by release before entrie.

And where our author speaketh only of a lessee for yeares, the same law it is of a tenant by statute merchant or staple, or tenant by elegit, or the like.

Sect. 460.

21. H. 6. 37. 2. E. 4. 6. b. 7. E. 4. 27. 3. E. 4. 16. 29. H. 6. Release 6. (5. Rep. 13. 2. Sid. 153. Ant. 47. Cro. Jac. 169.)

BY these two Sections is to be observed, a diversity between a tenant at will, and a tenant at sufferance; for a release to a tenant at will is good, because between them there is a possession with a privity; but a release to a tenant at sufferance is void, because he hath a possession without privity. As if lessee for yeares hold over his terme, &c. a release to him is void, for that there is no privity between them; and so are the books that speake of this matter to be understood. (1)

Sed contrarium tenetur, &c. This is of a new addition, and the booke here cited ill understood, for it is to be understood of a tenant at sufferance.

EN mesme le maner est, come il semble, ou lease est fait a un home a tener de le lessor a sa volunt, per force de quel leas le lessée eit possession: si le lessor en cest casé fait un releas al lessée de tout son droit, &c. cest releas est assés bon pur le privity que est perenter eux; car en vain serra de faire estate per un liverie de seisin a un auter, lou il ad possession de mesmes les tenements per le leas de mesme celui devant, &c.

* Sed contrarium tenetur, P. 2. Ed. 4. per tous les justices.

IN the same manner it is, as it seemeth, where a lease is made to a man to hold of the lessor at his will, by force of which lease the lessee hath possession: if the lessor in this case make a release to the lessee of all his right, &c. this release is good enough for the privity which is between them; for it shall bee in vaine to make an estate by a livery of seisin to another, where he hath possession of the same land by the lease of the same man before, &c.

But the contrarie is holden, Pasch. 2. E. 4. by all the justices. *

Sect.

* This paragraph is not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) A tenant at will is he who enters and enjoys the land by the expresse or implied consent of the owner, without there being any obligation on the part either of the lessor or lessee to continue it for any certain or determinate term. A tenant by sufferance is he who, having entered and obtained possession by title, continues the possession, after his title is ended, by the laches of the lessor. The former is in by the consent of the owner of the lands; this creates a privity between them. A tenant by sufferance is in only by the laches of the owner, so that there is no privity between them. Both these estates differ from that of a tenant from year to year, the tenant of which may determine it at the end of any year; but after a new year is begun, the tenure cannot be determined either by the lessor or lessee till the end of the year. See 1. lord Raymond, 707. 708. 2. Salk. 413. 3. Salk. 222. If a person holds by lease, and the term expires, the lease itself is notice of the expiration of the term, and the lessor may enter on the lessee without further notice, unless for double rent, under the 4. Geo. 2. sect. 1. in which case there must be a previous demand in writing. Where the tenant holds by will, the modern determinations are, that there must be a previous notice; but this notice varies according to the custom of the place, and the nature of the hereditaments in lease.

Sect. 461.

MES lou home de de sa teste demesne occupia terres ou tene-ments a la volunt celuy que ad* le franktene-ment, et tiel occupier ne claima riens forsque a volunt, &c. si celuy que ad le franktene-ment voile releaser tout son droit al occupier, &c. tiel release est void, pur ceo que nul privitie est perenter eux per lease fait al occupier, ne per auter manner, &c.

BUT where a man of his owne head occupieth lands or tene-ments at the will of him which hath the freehold, and such occupier claimeth nothing but at will, &c. if hee which hath the freehold will release all his right to the occupier, &c. this release is void, because there is no privitie betweene them by the lease made to the occupier, nor by other manner, &c.

DE sa teste demesne occupia.

Hee doth not say, de sa teste demesne enter, &c. so as this is to bee understood of a tenant at sufferance, viz. where a man commeth to the possession first lawfully, and holdeth over.

(m) For if a man entred into land of his owne wrong, and take the profits, his words to hold it at the will of the owner cannot qualifie his wrong, but hee is a disseisor, (1) and then the release to him is good; or if the owner consented thereunto, then hee is a tenant at will, and that way also the release is good. But there is a diversitie when one com-

Vide Sect. 68.
(1. Roll. Abr. 658. Ant. 57.
Cro. Car. 3. 3.)

(n) Temps H. 8. tit. tenant a volunt. Br. 15. 2. E. 4. 38.
18. E. 4. 25. 39. E. 3. 28. 12. E. 3. Aff. 86. 11. E. 3. ibid. 87.
12. Aff. 21. 13. E. 3. Aff. 92.
28. Aff. 11. 34. Aff. 10.
10. E. 3. 41. 8. E. 3. 63.
(1. Roll. Abr. 662. Pol. 277.)

Vide 2. part of the Institutes.
Matlb. cap. 16. 10. E. 4. 9. 10.
(1. Roll. Abr. 861. Ant. 56. 2.)

Old N.B. 117. 137. Lib. 3. fo. 23.
Walker's case. Lib. 4. fol. 123.
124.
Vide Sect. 454.

(8. Rep. 42. b.)

(Ant. 242. a.)

meth to a particular estate in land by the act of the partie, and when by act in law; for if the garden hold over, he is an abator, because his interest came by act in law.

Nul privitie. Privitie is a word common aswell to the English as to the French, and in the understanding of the common law is fourefold.

1. As privies in estate, whereof Littleton here speaketh; as betweene the donor and donee, lessor and lessee, which privitie is ever immediate.

2. Privies in blood; as the heire to the ancestor, or betweene coparceners, &c.

3. Privies in representation; as executors, &c. to the testator.

And fourthly, privities in tenure; as the lord and tenant, &c. which may be reduced to two generall heads, privies in deed, and privies in law.

Sect. 462, 463.

ITEM, si home enfeoffe auters homes de sa terre sur confidence, et al entent de performer sa darreine volunt, et le feoffor occupiast mesme la terre a la volunt de ses feoffees, et puis les feoffees releffont per leur fait a leur feoffor tout leur droit, &c. ceo ad este un question, si tiel release soit bon ou non. Et ascuns ont dit, que tiel release

ALSO, if a man enfeoffe other men of his land upon confidence, and to the intent to performe his last will, and the feoffor occupieth the same land at the will of his feoffees, and after the feoffees release by their deed to their feoffor all their right, &c. this hath beene a question if such release be good or no. And some have said, that

HERE is a question moved, and the reasons of both sides shewed, and as it hath beene observed, the latter opinion is the better, being Littleton's owne opinion.

Il serra entendue per la ley que le feoffor doit maintenant occupie la terre a la volunt de les feoffees.

For intendments of law mentioned by our author, see the Section in the margin.

Here is to bee observed the intendment of law, that when a feoffment is made to a future use, as to the performance of his last will, the feoffees

12. E. 4. 12. b. 15. E. 4.
9. H. 7. 25.
Vide Sect. 392. 176. 349.

4. E. 4. 8. b. 9. H. 7. fol. ultimi.
15. H. 7. 2. b. 14. H. 8. 9. a.

Sect. 99. 100. 110. 367. 377. 393.
406. 440.

35. H. 6. Subpena 22. 15. H. 7.
12. b. 37. H. 6. 36. 11. H. 4. 52.
7. H. 4. 22. 1. Mar. 111. Dicr.
(6. Rep. 18. a.) (Ant. 111. b. 112. a.)

* ent added L and M. and Roh.

(1) This is to be understood when there is no particular estate in the land; but if there be a term in esse, and one enters claiming the term, he shall not be a disseisor, but an action of debt or waste shall be against him, and one may be executor de son tort of a term.

3. Lev. 35.

(2) P. 9. Car. C. B. on the argument of the case of Blundell or Baugh, commonly called the Earl of Nottingham's case, justice Barclay said, that he whom lord Coke calls in this place an abator, must be taken for a disseisor, as he had actual possession by the possession of the guardian. Lord Nott. MSS.—See Cro. Ca. 302. Litt. Rep. 372. 1. Vent. 55. 80.

(1. Rep. 58.)

feoffees shall bee seised to the use of the feoffor and of his heires in the meane time.

Ipsæ etenim leges capiunt ut jure regantur.

(1. Roll. Abr. 859, Sid. 458. Dyer. 186. a.)

And reason would that seeing the feoffment is made without consideration, and the feoffor hath not disposed of the profits in the meane time, that by construction and intendment of law the feoffor ought to occupie the same in the meane time. And so it is when the feoffor disposeth the profits for a particular time in presenti, the use of the inheritance shall be to the feoffor and his heires, as a thing not disposed of; wherein it is to be observed, that lands and tenements conveyed upon confidences, uses, and trusts, are to be ruled and decided, if question groweth upon the confidences, uses or trusts, by the judges of the law; for that it appeareth by this and the next Section, they are within the entendment and construction of the lawes of the realme (1).

And it is to be observed (as hath beene said) that there is a diversitie betweene a feoffment of lands at this day upon confidence, or to the intent to performe his last will, and a feoffment to the use of such person and persons, and of such estate and estates, as hee shall appoint by his last will: for, in the first case, the land passeth by the will, and not by the feoffment; for after the feoffment the feoffor was seised in fee simple, as he was before; but in the latter case, the will pursuing his power is but a direction of the uses of the feoffment, and the estates passe by execution of the uses, which were raised upon the feoffment; but in both cases the feoffees are seised to the use of the feoffor and his heires in the meane time: and all this and much more concerning this matter hath beene adjudged.

Lib. 6. fol. 17. 18. Sir Edward Clere's case.
Dillon & Frayn's case, l. 1. &c.
fol. 113.

(1. Roll. Abr. 797. 1. Rep. 129. b. 392. b. Stat. 27. H. 8. c. 10. Plow. 348. 1. Rep. 127. Sid. 26.)

Note, uses are raised either by transmutation of the estate, as by fine, feoffment, common recoverie, &c. or out of the state of the owner of the land, by bargain and sale by deed indented and inrolled, or by covenant upon lawfull consideration, whereof you may read plentifully in my Reports.

A feoffee to the use of A. and his heires, before the statute of 27. H. 8. for money bargaineth and selleth the land to C. and his heires, who hath no notice of the former use; yet no use passeth by this bargain and sale, for there cannot be two uses in esse, of one and the same land; and seeing there is no transmutation of possession by the terre-tenant, the former use can neither be extinct nor altered. And if there could be two uses of one and the same land, then could not est voyd, par ceo que nul privitie fuit pe-renter les feoffees et leur feoffor, entant que nul lease fuit fait apres tiel feoff-ment per les feoffees al feoffor, a tener a leur volunt. Et ascuns ont dit le contrarie, et ceo per deux causes.

such release is void, because there was no privitie betweene the feoffees and their feoffor, insomuch as no lease was made after such feoffment by the feoffees to the feoffor, to hold at their will: and some have said the contrarie, and that for two causes.

Sect. 463.

*UN est, que quant
tiel feoffment est fait sur confidence a performer la volunt del feoffor, il serra intendue per la ley, que le feoffor doit maintenant occuper la terre a la volunt de ses feoffees; et issint il est tiel manner de privitie enter eux, si-come home fait un
feoffment as auters, et ils incontinent sur
le feoffment voylent et granteront, que leur feoffor occupiera la terre a leur volunt,
&c.*

ONE is, that when such feoffment is made upon confidence to performe the will of the feoffor, it shall bee intended by the law, that the feoffor ought presently to occupie the land at the will of his feoffees; and so there is the like kinde of privitie betweene them, as if a man make a feoffment to others, and they immediately upon the feoffment will and grant, that their feoffor shall occupy the land at their will, &c.

(1) Many references have been made, in the foregoing notes, to this part of the work, for some observations on conveyances at common law, and those which derive their effect from the statute of uses. It appeared advisable to collect them into one continued note, that the difference between the two modes of conveyance might appear in a stronger light; and to prevent a necessity of frequently repeating those general principles and illustrations, which otherwise must have been introduced on every occasion, where any point of this nature seemed to require an explanation. On the same ground it seemed advisable to anticipate some passages which otherwise would have had a place in a subsequent part of the notes.—Feoffments and grants were the two chief modes used in the common law for transferring property. The most comprehensive definition which can be given of a feoffment seems to be, a conveyance of corporeal hereditaments, by delivery of the possession upon or within view of the hereditaments conveyed. The delivery of the possession was made on or within view of the land, that the other tenants of the lord might be witnesses to it. No charter of feoffment was necessary: it only served as an authentication of the transaction; and when it was used, the lands were supposed to be transferred, not by the charter, but by the livery, which it authenticated. Soon after the Conquest, or perhaps towards the end of the Saxon government, all estates were called fees. The original and proper import of the word feoffment is, the grant of a fee. It came afterwards to signify, a grant with livery of seisin of a free inheritance to a man and his heirs; more respect being had to the perpetuity, than the feudal tenure of the estate granted. In early times, after the Conquest, charters of feoffment were various in point of form. In the time of Edward I. they began to be drawn up in a more uniform style. The more ancient of them generally run with the words dedi, concessi, or donavi. It was not till a later period that feoffment came into use. The more ancient feoffments were also usually made in consideration of, or for, the homage and service of the feoffee, and to hold of the feoffor and his heirs. But after the statute quia emptores, feoffments were always made to hold of the chief lords of the fee, without the words pro homagio et servitio. Sir Edward Coke mentions in page 6. a. that there are eight necessary parts in a feoffment. The fifth, sixth, and seventh of these are not to be found in many of the ancient charters. When the land comprised in the feoffment descended from the ancestor, or by usage retained the property of the ancient bock-land, of not being alienable from the kindred, the ancient feoffments were often expressed to be made with the assent of the feoffor's wife, his heir or his heirs. In ancient charters there was inserted a general warranty: in that, the phrase was much varied. The oath of the party was often added to it, and sometimes a clause, that if the feoffor's title was evicted, he should give other lands of equal value. Sometimes these clauses extended to a second eviction; and sometimes the feoffor obliged himself, if he should make default in warranting the lands granted, to make restitution to the feoffee. The proper limitation of a feoffment is to a man and his heirs; but feoffments were often made of conditional fees (or of estate tail, as they are now called) and of life estates; to which may be added, feoffments of estates given in frankmarriage and frankalmoigne. To make the feoffment complete, the feoffor used to give the feoffee seisin of the lands: this is what the feudists called investiture. It was often made by symbolical tradition; but it was always made upon or within view of the lands. When the king made a feoffment, he issued his writ to the sheriff, or some other person, to deliver seisin: other great men did the same. This gave rise to powers of attorney. (See the preface to Mr. Madox's Formulare.)

not the said statute execute either of them for the uncertainty. But if A. disseise one to the use of B. and A. doth bargain and sell the land for money to C. C. hath an use; and here be two uses of one land, but of severall natures; the one, viz. upon the bargain and sale to be executed by the statute, and the other not.

But since Littleton wrote, all uses are transferred by act of Parliament [c] into possession, [c] 27. H. 8. cap. 10. so as the case which Littleton here puts is thereby altogether altered. Yet it is necessarie to bee knowen, what the common law was before the making of the statute, and may serve for the knowledge of the law in like case. (Dr. and Stud. 98. a.)

Incontinent sur le feoffment. Quæ incontinenti sunt in esse videntur.

A leur volunt, &c. Here is implied, everie tenancie at will is at the will of both parties, as before in his proper place hath been shewed.

Sect. 464.

*UN autre cause ils allegeont, que si tiel terre vault xl. s. per an, &c. donquetiel feoffor sera jure en assises et en auters enquests en plees realx, et auxy en plees personals, de quel graund sum que les plaintives voient counter, * &c. Et ceo est per le common ley de la terre. Ergo, ceo est pur un graund cause. Et la cause est, que la ley voet que tiels feoffors et leur heires deient occuper, &c. et prender et enjoyer tous maner de profits, issues, et revenues, &c. sicome les tenements fueront leur mesmes, sans interruption de les feoffees, nient obstant tiel feoffment. Ergo, mesme la ley done privitie perenter tiels feoffors et*

ANOTHER cause they alleage, that if such land bee worth fortie shillings a yeare, &c. then such feoffor shall be sworn in assise and other enquests in plees realx, and also in plees personals, of what great sum soever the plaintiffe will declare, &c. And this is by the common law of the land. Ergo, this is for a great cause. And the cause is, for that the law will that such feoffors and their heires ought to occupie, &c. and take and enjoy all manner of profits, issues, & revenues, &c. as if the lands were their own, without interruption of the feoffees, notwithstanding such feoffment. Ergo, the same law giveth a privitie between such feoffors and the feoffees upon confidence,

BY the statute of 2. H. 5. cap. 3. statute 2. it is enacted, that, in three cases, he that passeth in an enquest, ought to have lands and tenements to the value of fortie shillings, viz. First, upon trial of the death of a man. Secondly, in plea reall betweene partie and partie. And thirdly, in plea personall, where the debt or the damages in the declaration amount unto fortie marks. (1) And it is worth the noting, that the judges that were at the making of that statute did construe it by equitie: for where the statute speaks in the disjunctive debt or damages, they adjudged that where the debt and damages amounted to fortie marks, that it was within the statute. Fortescue [f] saith, Ubi damna vel debitum in personalibus actionibus non excedunt quadraginta marcas monetæ Anglicanæ, hinc non requiritur, quod juratores in actionibus busmodi tantum expendere possint: habebunt tamen terram vel redditum ad valorem competentem, juxta discretionem justiciariorum, &c. And forasmuch as at the time of the making of this statute, the greater part of the lands in England in those troublesome and dangerous times (when that unhappie controversie betweene the houses of Yorke and Lancaster was begun) were in use; and the statute was made to remedie a mischief, that the sheriffe used to return

(Ant. 156. b.)

28. H. 8. Dy. fol. 9.

Vid. W. 2. cap. 38. L'etat. de 21. E. 1. de juratis ponendis in assis, &c.

(Fortescue 62. a. 27. El. c. 6. Ant. 157. a.)

9. H. 5. fol. 5.

[f] Fortesc. cap. 15.

les

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Rob.

(1) By 32. H. 8. inhabitants of corporate towns worth 40 s. in goods, may try felonies in sessions and gaol deliveries for such towns, and this is not repealed by subsequent statutes concerning jurors. 1. Ven. 366. The 4th and 5th W. and M. c. 24. requires that all trials in the courts at Westminster, or before the judges of nisi prius, oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or general sessions of the peace, must be by jurors, each worth 10 l. per annum, of freehold or copyhold in the same county, if the trial be in England; and by jurors worth 6 l. per annum, if in Wales; and taleinen must have 5 l. per annum in England, and 3 l. per annum in Wales, excepting fireymen returned propter medietatem lingue.—But by the 14th and 15th Ann. c. 16. no hundreders are required except in prosecutions criminal, and on penal statutes, because in other cases the venire shall be de corpore comitatûs.

A grant, in the original signification of the word, is a conveyance or transfer of an incorporeal hereditament. As livery of seisin could not be had of incorporeal hereditaments, the transfer of them was always made by writing, in order to produce that notoriety in the transfer of them, which was produced in the transfer of corporeal hereditaments, by delivery of the possession. But, except that a feoffment was used for the transfer of corporeal hereditaments, and a grant was used for the transfer of incorporeal hereditaments, a feoffment and a grant did not materially differ. — Such was the original distinction between a feoffment and a grant. But, from this real difference in their subject matter, a difference was supposed to exist in their operation. A feoffment visibly operated on the possession; a grant could only operate on the right of the party conveying. Now, as possession and freehold were synonymous terms, no person being considered to have the possession of the lands but he who had, at least, an estate of freehold in them; a conveyance which was considered as transferring the possession, must necessarily be considered as transferring an estate of freehold; or, to speak more accurately, as transferring the whole fee. But this reasoning could not apply to grants; their essential quality being that of transferring things which did not lie in possession; they therefore could only transfer the right; that is, could only transfer that estate which the party had a right to convey. It is in this sense we are to understand the expressions which frequently occur in our law-books, where they describe a feoffment to be a tortious, and a grant to be a rightful, conveyance. Thus, from a difference in the quality of the hereditaments conveyed by those two modes of conveyance, a difference has been considered to exist in their operation. A great part of Mr. Knowler's celebrated argument in the case of Taylor on the demise of Atkins v. Horde, turns on this distinction. See 1. Burr. 92. This appears to have been the outline of conveyances at the common law. The introduction of uses produced a great revolution in this respect. Without entering into a minute discussion of the difference between uses at common law, and uses since the statute of 27. H. 8. it is sufficient to state the following circumstances. Uses at the common law were, in most respects, what trusts are now. When a feoffment was made to uses, the legal estate was in the feoffee. He filled the possession, did the feudal duties, and was, in the eye of the law, the tenant of the fee. The person to whose use he was seized, called by the law-writers the cestuy

13. H. 7. 13. b. 13. H. 7. 7. b.
6. E. 4. 7. a.

simple men of small or no understanding; and therefore the statute provided, that hee should returne sufficient men: and albeit in law the land was the feoffees, yet for that they had it but upon trust, and cestuy que use tooke the whole profits, as our author here saith, and in equity and conscience the land was his, therefore the judges, for advancement and expedition of justice, extended the statute (against the letter) to cestuy que use, and not to the feoffees. (1)

[u] 3. H. 6. 39. Challeng. 19.
21. H. 6. 3.
(Ant. 157. 4.)

[u] But note, if a man hath a freehold pur terme d'auter vie, or is seised in his wife's right, and is returned on a jurie, yet if after he be returned, cestuy que vie, or his wife die, hee may be challenged; and so it is if after the returne the lands be evicted.

[g] 27. H. 8. cap. 10.

Et ceo est per le common ley. Here three things are to be observed. First, that the surest construction of a statute is by the rule and reason of the common law. Secondly, that uses were at the common law. Thirdly, that now seeing the statute [g] of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. which hath bene enacted since Littleton wrote, hath transferred the possession to the use, this case holdeth not at this day; but this latter opinion before that statute was good law, as Littleton here taketh it.

(8. Rep. 42. b.)

Mesme la ley done privitie, &c. Hereof it followeth, that when the law gives to any man any estate or possession, the law giveth also a privitie and other necessities to the same: and Littleton concludeth it with an illative, ergo, mesme la ley done privitie, which is verie observable for a conclusion in other cases.

(Ante 156. b.)

And the (quære) here made in the end of this Section is not in the original, but added by some other, and therefore to be rejected.

27. El. cap. 6.

Also since Littleton wrote, the said statute of 2. H. 5. is altered: for where that statute limited fortie shillings, now a latter statute hath raised it to foure pounds, and so it ought to be contained in the venire facias.

Pl. Com. 352. b. in Delamere's case, and 349. b. Lib. 1. fol. 121.
122. 127. 140. in Chudley's case.
Lib. 2. fol. 58. 78.
Lib. 6. fol. 64.
Lib. 7. fol. 13. & 34.

Nota, an use is a trust or confidence reposed in some other, which is not issuing out of the land, but as a thing collateral, annexed in privitie to the estate of the land, and to the person touching the land, scilicet, that cestuy que use shall take the profit, and that the terre-tenant shall make an estate according to his direction. So as cestuy que use had neither jus in re, nor jus ad rem, but only a confidence and trust, for which he had no remedie by the common law, but for breach of trust his remedie was only by subpœna in chancery: and yet the judges, for the cause aforesaid, made the said construction upon the said statute.

Fortesc. cap. 25, 26, 27.

Now how jurors shall be returned, both in common pleas, and also in pleas of the crowne, and in what manner evidence shall be given to them, and how they shall be kept, untill they give their verdict, you may read in Fortescue, and therefore need not to be here inserted.

Sect. 465.

Flet. lib. 5. cap. 34.
15. H. 7. 14. 22. E. 4. 4.

IT is a certaine rule, that when a release doth enure by way of enlarging of an estate, that there must be privitie of estate, as betweene lessor and lessee, donor and donee. For if A. make a lease to B. for life, and the

ITEM, releases
*solonque le matter en fait, ascun
foits ont leur effect per force d'enlarger l'estate celuy a que*

ALSO, releases according to the matter in fact, sometimes have their effect by force to enlarge the state of him to le

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† This paragraph not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) See lord Bacon's reading on the statute of uses, p. 8. accord. edit. 1785.

cestuy que use, had the beneficial property of the lands; had a right to the profits; and a right to call upon the feoffee to convey the estate to him, and to defend it against strangers. This right at first depended on the conscience of the feoffee: if he withheld the profits from the cestuy que use, or refused to convey the estate as he directed, the feoffee was without remedy. To redress this grievance, the writ of subpœna was devised, or rather adopted from the common-law courts, by the court of chancery, to oblige the feoffee to attend in court, and disclose his trust, and then the court compelled him to execute it. Thus uses were established. — They were not considered as issuing out of, or annexed to the land, as a rent, a condition, or a right of common; but as a trust reposed in the feoffee, that he should dispose of the lands, at the discretion of the cestuy que use, permit him to receive the rents, and in all other respects have the beneficial property of the lands. Yet an use, though considered to be neither issuing out of nor annexed to the land, was considered to be collateral to it, or rather as collateral to the possession of the feoffees in it, and of those claiming that possession under them. Hence the disseisor, abator, or intruder of the feoffee, or the tenant in dower, or by the courtesy of a feoffee, or the lord entering upon the possession by escheat, were not seised to an use, though the estates in their hands were subject to rents common, and conditions. They were considered as coming in by a paramount and extraneous title; or, as it is called in the law, in the post, in contradistinction from those who, claiming under the feoffee, were said to be in the per. Thus, between the feoffee and cestuy que use, there was a confidence in the person, and privacy in estate. (See Chudleigh's case, 1. Rep. 120. and Burges's and Wheat, 1. Bla. 123.) But this was only between the feoffee and cestuy que use. To all other persons the feoffee was as much the real owner of the fee, as if he did not hold it to the use of another. He performed the feudal duties; his wife was intitled to dower; his infant heir was in wardship to the lord; and, upon his attainder, the estate was forfeited. To remedy these inconveniencies, the statute of 27. H. 8. was passed, by which the possession was divested out of the persons seised to the use, and transferred to the cestuys que use. For by that statute it is enacted, that when any person shall be seized of any lands to the use, confidence, or trust of any other person or persons, by reason of any bargain, sale, feoffment, fine, recovery, contract, agreement, will, or otherwise; then, and in every such case, the persons having the use, confidence, or trust, should from thenceforth be deemed and adjudged in lawful seisin, estate, and possession of and in the lands, in the same quality, manner, and form, as they had before in the use. There seems to be little doubt, but that the intention of the legislature, in passing this act, was utterly to annihilate the existence of uses, considered as distinct from the possession. But they have been preserved under the appellation of trusts. The courts hesitated much before they allowed them under this new name. On the one hand, it had clearly been the intent of the legislature to destroy them, while they continued uses at the common law; on the other hand, motives of equity, or rather of compassion, and the general bent of the nation, pleaded strongly in their favour. The latter prevailed. Thus (to use the expression of lord Hardwicke, 1. Atk. 591.) a statute made upon great consideration, and introduced in a solemn and pompous manner, has had no other effect than to add, at most, three words to a conveyance. Besides this; — one of the chief inconveniencies produced by trusts, was, the secret method they afforded for the transfer of property. The statute intended to restore the notoriety of the old common-law conveyances. So far from effecting it, the existence and transfer of fiduciary, or trust estates has continued. Secret modes of transferring the possession itself have

*le release est fait. Si come jeo lessa certain terre a un home pur terme des ans, per force de que il est en possession, et puis jeo relef-fa a luy tout le droit que jeo aye en le terre sans plus parolx mitter en le fait, et deliver a luy le fait, donques il ad estate forsque pur terme de sa vie. Et la cause est, pur ceo que quant le reversion ou le remainder est en un home lequel voile enlarger per son releas l'estate le tenant, &c. il n'avera plus greinder estate, mes en * tiel manner et forme sicome † tiel feoffor fuit seise en fee, et volloit per son fait faire estate a un en certaine forme, et deliver a luy seisin per force de mesme le fait: si en tiel fait de feoffement ne soit ascun parol de enheritance, ‡ donques il ad forsque estate pur terme de vie; et issint il est en tiels releases faits per || eux en la reversion ou en le remainder. Car si jeo lessa la terre a un home pur terme de sa vie, et puis jeo relef-fa a luy tout mon droit sans plus dire en le releas,* whom the release is made. (1) As if I let certaine land to one for terme of yeares, by force whereof hee is in possession, and after I release to him all the right which I have in the land without putting more words in the deed, and deliver to him the deed, then hath hee an estate but for terme of his life. And the reason is, for that when the reversion or remainder is in a man who will by his release enlarge the estate of the tenant, &c. hee shall have no greater estate, but in such manner and forme as if such lessor were seised in fee, and by his deed will make an estate to one in a certain forme, and deliver to him seisin by force of the same deed: if in such deed of feoffement there be not any word of inheritance, then he hath but an estate for life; and so it is in such releases made by those in the reversion or in the remainder. For if I let land to a man for terme of his life, and after I release to him all my right without more saying in the release, his estate is not lessee maketh a lease for yeares, and after A. releaseth to the lessee for yeares, and his heires, this release is void (Post. 296. a.) to enlarge the estate, because there is no privity between A. and the lessee for yeares.

If a man make a lease for twenty yeares, and the lessee (Ant. 270. a.) make a lease for ten yeares, if the first lessor doth release to the second lessee, and his heires, this release is void for the cause aforesaid.

For the same cause, if the donee in taile make a lease for his owne life, and the donor release to the lessee and his heires, this release is void to enlarge the estate.

And as privity is necessarie in this case, so privity only is not sufficient. As if an (Ant. 264. a. Post. 285. b. Sect. 490. 491.) infant make a lease for life, and the lessee granteth over his estate with warranty, the infant at full age bringeth a dum fuit infra etatem, the tenant voucheth his grantor, who entereth into warranty, the demandant releaseth to him and his heires; here is privity in law, and a tenancie in supposition of law: and yet because hee in rei veritate hath no estate, it cannot enure to him by way of enlargement; for how can his estate be enlarged, that hath not any.

If a tenant by the courtiesie grant over his estate, yet he is tenant as to an action of waste, attornment, &c. (Ant. 53. a. 54. a.) and yet a release to him and his heires cannot enure to enlarge his estate that hath no estate at all.

But if a man make a lease for yeares, the remainder for life, a release by the lessor to the lessee for yeares, and to his heires, is good, for that he hath both a privity and an estate; and the release also to him in the remainder for life and his heires, is good also. (2. Roll. Abr. 400.)

If I grant the reversion of my tenant for life to another for life, now shall not I have an action of waste: (2) but if I release to the grantee for life, and his heires, now hee hath

* tiel—La, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ per eux not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† fi added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Here Littleton treats of releases which operate by enlargement of the estate of the releasee. To make releases operate in this manner, it is necessary that the releasee, at the time the release is made, should be in actual possession of, or should have a vested interest in, the lands intended to be released; that there should be a privity between him and the releasor; and that the possession of the releasee should be notorious. Hence a tenant by elegit, or statute-merchant, is not capable of a release that is to operate by enlargement. But a tenant in dower or by the courtiesie are, as they have the notoriety of possession, and privity of estate, with respect to the releasor. See Roll. Abr. 400. 401. and Gilb. Ten.

(2) Because no person is entitled to an action of waste, but he who has an estate immediate in remainder or reversion, expectant on the estate of the person committing waste. See ant. note 2. to page 218. b.

have been discovered, and have totally superseded that notorious and public mode of transferring property, which the common law required, and the statute intended to restore; and many modifications or limitations of real property have been allowed, which the common law did not admit. An attempt will be made to give the reader a succinct view of these points, by some observations. First, on the nature of the estates of the feoffee and the cestuy que use, since the statute of uses. Secondly, on the limitations and modifications of landed property unknown to the common law, which have been introduced under the statute of uses. Thirdly, on the mode by which conveyances to uses operate. Fourthly, on the doctrine of powers deriving their effect from the statute of uses. Fifthly, on uses not executed by the statute. It is to be premised, that what is here said of a feoffee to uses, is equally to be understood of a releasee, donee, or recoveror, who stands seised to uses.—1. As to the estates of the feoffee and the cestuy que use;—the statute unites the possession to the use, so that the very instant the use is raised, the possession is joined to it; and the use and the possession are thereupon immediately consolidated, and become convertible terms. Thus, had all uses been vested either in possession or in right, no estate or interest of any kind could have been left in the feoffee. But uses are frequently limited in contingency; to serve which, as they come in esse, it is necessary that there should be a seisin somewhere. When this case was first considered by the lawyers, it was found difficult to discover any mode of reasoning consistent with the system generally received on the doctrine of uses, by which that seisin could be supposed to exist any where; or what the precise nature of it was. This was the great difficulty in Chudleigh's case. There the following case was put: Suppose a feoffment is made to the use of A. during his life, remainder to the use of his sons successively in tail; and, for want of such issue, to the use of B. in fee; is there any, and what seisin, to serve the uses limited to the sons of A.?—in whom does that seisin exist?—and how does it operate? Upon this point the judges seem, by the accounts which have come to us of that case, particularly sir Edward Coke's and lord chief-justice Popham's, to have held very different opinions. All agreed, that to the execution of an use under the statute, it was indispen-hath the fee simple, and shall punish the waste done after (1).

It is further to be observed, that to a release that enureth by way of enlargement of the estate, there is not only required privity, as hath been said, and an estate also, but sufficient words in law to raise or create a new estate. If a man make a lease to A. for terme of the life of B. and after release to A. all his right in the land, by this, A. hath an estate for terme of his owne life; for a lease for terme of his owne life is higher in judgement of law, than an estate for terme of another man's life.

If a feme covert be tenant for life, a release to the husband and his heires is good, for there is both privity and an estate in the husband, whereupon the release may sufficiently enure by way of enlargement (a); for by the entermarriage he gaineth a freehold in his wife's right.

Tout le droit. Vide Sect. 650.

Pur terme des ans. So it is if a release be made to tenant by statute, staple or merchant, or tenant by elegit, as hath been said; and so likewise to gardeine in chivalrie which holdeth in for the value, by him in the reversion of all his right in the land, by this a freehold passeth for the life of him to whom the release is made, for that is the greatest estate that can passe without apt words of inheritance.

If a man make a lease for ten yeares, the remainder for twenty yeares, he in the remainder releaseth all his right to the lessee, he shall have an estate for thirty yeares; for one chattle cannot drowne another, and yeares cannot be consumed in yeares.

Mes si jeo releasé a luy et a ses heires, &c. Here it is to be observed, that when a release doth enure by way of enlargement of an estate, no inheritance either in fee simple or fee taile, can passe without apt words of inheritance.

But there is a diversity betwene a release that enureth by way of enlargement of the state and by way of mitter l'estate (2); for when an estate passeth by way of mitter l'estate, there sometime there need not any words of inheritance. As if a joynt estate be made to the husband and to his wife, and to a third person and to their heires, the third person releaseth all his right to the husband, this shall enure by way of mitter l'estate, and not by way of enlargement of the estate, because the husband had a fee simple, and needeth not to have any words of inheritance. So it is if the release had been made to the wife.

(b) If there be three joyntenants, and one release to one of the other all his right, this enureth by way of mitter l'estate, and passeth the whole fee simple without these words (heires). But if there be two joyntenants, and the one of them release all his right to the other, this doth not to all purposes enure by way of mitter l'estate, for it maketh no degree, and hee to whom the release is made shall for many purposes be adjudged in from the first feoffor, and this release shall vest all in the other joyntenant without these words (heires).

But if there be two coparceners, and the one release all his right to the other, this shall enure by way of mitter l'estate, and shall make a degree, and without these words (heires) shall passe the whole fee simple. And it is to be observed, that to releases that enure by way of mitter l'estate, there must be privity of estate at the time of the release.

If two coparceners be of a rent, and the one of them take the ter-tenant to husband, the other may release to her, notwithstanding the rent be in suspense, and it shall enure by way of mitter l'estate, and she may release also to the ter-tenant, and that shall enure by way of extinguishment: but if she release to her sister and to her husband, it is good to be seen how it shall enure.

Littleton having now spoken of releases that enure by way of enlargement of the estate, and of releases that enure by way of mitter l'estate, proceedeth to releases that enure by way of mitter le droit. So as of that which hath been said and shall be said by our author of releases, it appeareth that some doe enure by way of enlargement of estate, some by way of mitter l'estate, some by way of mitter le droit, by way of entrie and feoffment, and some by extinguishment.

Sect.

(1) By the release the tenant for life in remainder obtains the immediate remainder in fee.

(2) Here the release operates by mitter l'estate; which is, where two persons come in by the same feudal contract, as joint-tenants or coparceners, and one of them releaseth to the other the benefit of it. In releases which operate by this last mode, the releasee being supposed to be already seised of the inheritance by virtue of the former feudal contract, and the release only operating as a discharge from the right or pretension of another seised under the same contract, words of inheritance in the release are useless; but where the release operates by enlargement, the releasee having no such previous inheritance, and seifs being either for life or in fee, as they are originally granted, the release gives the estate to the releasee for his life only, unless it be expressly made to him and his heirs.

necessary that there should be a person seised to the use; an use in possession, reversion, or remainder; and a cestuy que use in esse. From these positions some of the judges in that case inferred, that the whole use was executed in A. and B. in a manner that left nothing of the ancient seisin in the feoffees; and that the contingent use, when it came in esse, was executed out of the first livery, and the original estate, of the feoffees. Others held, that an actual estate in remainder was vested in the feoffees, to serve the contingent uses as they arose. But both these systems were found to be open to unanswerable objections. For, with respect to the first, one of the requisites indispensably necessary to the execution of an use, under the statute, is, that there must be a person seised to the use, at the time of the execution of it. Now, if the whole original seisin was divested out of the feoffees, there would not, when the son of A. was born, be any person seised to his use;—or, in other words, there could be no seisin to that use. This would make the estates limited to the sons of A. and all other contingent remainders, void in their creation, for want of a seisin to support them, when they come in esse.—With respect to the latter system,—it is to be observed, that under the limitations upon which the case arose, A. took an estate for life in possession, and B. took an estate in remainder in fee;—and that, previous to the birth of A.'s children, there was no use vested in any person which separated those two estates. Those uses, therefore, were commensurate to the whole fee, and admitted no opening for any intermediate vested use. Besides, the feoffor neither limited, nor intended to limit, any such intermediate use to the feoffees. Thus, on one hand, the objection to supposing that nothing of the old seisin remained in the feoffees; on the other, the objection to supposing that any use or legal estate remained in them, made it difficult to conceive what estate or seisin could be in them, to serve the contingent use. To clear up this difficulty it was observed, that the possession was not executed by the statute, but in the same manner, and to the same extent, in which the use was limited. Now, in the case we have mentioned, the use was limited, and consequently the possession executed, to the use of A. during his life, remainder to B. in fee, but subject to the possibility of A.'s having sons, and their becoming intitled to the use, and consequently to the possession, for an estate or estates in tail. Thus, during the suspense of the contingent use, the feoffees had a possibility of possession, untouched and unaffected by the statute, as there was

Sect. 466.

IT E M, ascuns foits releases urera de mitter, et vester le droit celuy que fait le releas a celuy a que le releas est fait. Si come un home est disseisi, et il releffa a son disseisor tout le droit que il ad, en cest cas le disseisor ad son droit, issint que lou son estate adevant fuit torcions, ore per tiel releas il est fait loyal et droiturel.

ALSO, sometimes releases shall enure de mitter, and vest the right of him which makes the release to him to whom the release is made. As if a man be disseised, and he releaseth to his disseisor all his right, in this case the disseisor hath his right, so as where before his state was wrongfull, now by this release it is made lawfull and right. (1)

ET il releffa a son disseisor, &c. This release so putteth the right of the disseisee to the disseisor, that it changeth the quality of the estate of the disseisor; for where his estate was before wrongfull, it is by this release made lawfull. But how farre, and to what respects his estate is changed, shall be said hereafter in this chapter in his proper place.

Sect. 467.

MES hic nota, BUT here note, that que quant home when a man is seised in fee simple of any lands or tenements, and another will release to him all the right which he hath in the same tenements, he needeth not to speake of the heires of him to whom the release is made, for that he hath a fee simple at the time of the release made. For if the release was made to him for a day, or an houre, this shall bee as strong to him in law, as if he had released to him and his heires. For when his right was once gone from him by his release without any con-

IL ne besoigne a parler de les heires,

&c. And the reason of Littleton hereof is, for that the disseisor hath a fee simple at the time of the release made. And this appeareth by that which hath beene said before, so as regularly hee that hath a fee simple at the time of the release made of a right, &c. needeth not speake of his heires. (Post. 280. 2.)

Car si releas fuit fait a luy pur un jour, Vide 6. E. 3. 17. 12. E. 4. 124. Descent. F. 29.

&c. For the diversity is betweene a release of part of the estate of a right, and between a release of a right in part of the land. And therefore Littleton here saith, that a release of a right for a day or an houre is of as good force, as if he had released his right to him and his heires. But if a man be disseised of two acres, he may release his right in one of them, and yet enter into the other. (Ant. 252. 2.)

Sans ascun condition,

* et a ses heires added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Here Littleton treats of releases which operate by mitter le droit. Releases of this kind must be made either to the disseisor, his feoffee, or his heir. In all these cases the possession is in the releasee; the right in the releasor; and the uniting the right to the possession completes the title of the releasee: but the different degrees of title in the disseisor, his feoffee, or his heir, give the releases made to them different operations. They all agree in this respect, that no privity is required, or indeed can, from the nature of the case, exist between them and the releasor.

no use in esse to which it could be executed. The moment the use came in esse, the feoffees would be entitled at common law to the possession, to the use, or, as we should now call it, in trust for the cestuy que use; but by the operation of the statute, the possession is instantaneously divested from the feoffees, and executed in the cestuy que use. Thus, by supposing a possibility of seisin, but no actual seisin or use to remain in the feoffees during the suspense of the contingent use, a sufficient seisin is provided to serve the contingent use when it comes in esse, without interfering with, or breaking in upon, the legal fee.—II. With respect to the limitations and modifications of landed property, unknown to the common law, which have been introduced under the statute of uses; the principal of these are known by the general appellation of springing or secondary uses. No estate could be limited upon or after a fee, though it were a base or a qualified fee; nor could a fee or estate of freehold be made to cease as to one person, and to vest in another, by any common-law conveyance. But there are instances where, even by the common law, these secondary estates seem to have been allowed when limited, or rather when declared, by way of use. See Jenk. Cent. 8. case 52. After the statute of uses, the judges seem to have long hesitated whether they should receive them. In Chudleigh's case it was strongly contended, that it would be wrong to make "any estate of freehold and inheritance lawfully vested, to cease as to one, and to vest in others" against the rule of law, and that no estates should be raised by way of use but those which could be raised by livery of seisin at the "common law." The courts, however, admitted them. After they were admitted, it was found necessary to circumscribe them within certain bounds; because when an estate in fee simple is first limited, there is no method by which the first taker can bar or destroy the secondary estate, as it is not affected either by a fine or common recovery. It is now settled, that when an estate in fee simple is limited, a subsequent estate may be limited upon it, if the event upon which it is to take place be such, that if it does happen, it must necessarily happen within the compass of one or more life or lives in being, and 21 years and some months over. It was long before the courts agreed upon this period. In the late case of Buckworth v. Thirkill, lord Mansfield mentioned that it was not settled till his time. It is observed in note 5. to p. 20. a. "that this period was not arbitrarily prescribed by our courts of justice with respect to the limitation of personal estates, but wisely and reasonably adopted in analogy to the cases of freehold and inheritance, which cannot be

[c] 4. E. 2. Release 50.
43. Aff. 12. 17. Aff. 2.
31. Aff. 13. 21. H. 24.

(6. Rep. 62. 2. Post. 297. 2.
300. b.)

Rot. Parliament 18. H. 6.
num. 29. Ap. Gwilliam's case.
30. E. 3. cap. 2. 3. H. 7. f. 6.

tion, &c. Herein is implied two diversities: first, betweene the quantity of the estate in a right, and the quality thereof; for albeit the disseisee cannot release part of the estate, as hath beene said, yet may he release his right upon condition, as here it appeareth by Littleton, [c] and it agreeth with our bookes.

Also here is another diversity betweene a right, whereof Littleton putteth his case, which is favoured in law, and a condition created by the party which is odious in law, for that it defeateth estates. And therefore if a condition be released upon condition, the release is good, and the condition void.

What things may be done upon condition, is too large a matter to handle in this place, our author having treated of Conditions before: only to give a touch of some things omitted there, shall suffice. An expresse manumission of a villeine cannot be upon condition, for once free in that case, and ever free; also an attornment to a grantee upon condition, the condition is void because the grant is once settled. But this is to be understood of a condition subsequent, and not of a condition precedent; for in both those cases, the condition precedent is good. But letters patents of denization made to an alien, may be either upon condition subsequent or precedent; and so may the king make a charter of pardon to a man of his life upon condition, as is above said.

Sect. 468.

(2. Roll. Abr. 400.)

MES lou * home ad un reversion en fee simple, ou un remainder en fee simple, al temps de releas fait, la s'il voyle releaser al tenant pur terme d'ans, ou pur terme de vie, ou al tenant en le taile, il covient a determiner l'estate que celui a que le releas est fait avera per force de mesme le releas, pur ceo que tiel releas enurera pur enlarger l'estate de celuy a que le releas est fait. †

BUT where a man hath a reversion in fee simple, or a remainder in fee simple, at the time of the release made, there if he will release to the tenant for yeares, or for life, or to the tenant in taile, hee ought to determine the estate which he to whom the release is made shal have by force of the same release, for that such release shall enure to enlarge the estate of him to whom the release is made. (1)

Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 469.

MES autrement est lou home ad forsque droit a la terre, et n'ad riens en le reversion ne en le remainder en fait. Car si tiel home releassa tout son droit a un que est tenant de le franktenement, tout son droit est ale, coment que nul mention soit fait de les heires celui a que le releas est fait. Car si jeo lessa terres ‡ a un home pur terme

BUT otherwise it is where a man hath but a right to the land, and hath nothing in the reversion nor in the remainder in deed. For if such a man release all his right to one which is tenant in the freehold, all his right is gone, albeit no mention be made of the heires of him to whom the release is made. For if I let lands to one for terme of his life, if I after release
de

* home—un, L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ ou tenements added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) All releases per mitter le droit also agree in this, that words of inheritance are not necessary in releases which operate by mitter le droit; as the disseisor, to whom, or to whose feoffee, or heir, that release is made, acquires the fee by the disseisin, and therefore cannot take it under the release. In this respect they differ from releases by enlargement.

be limited by way of remainder, so as to postpone a complete bar of the entail, by fine or recovery, for a larger space. The same analogy has been observed with respect to these secondary fees, when limited upon an estate in fee simple. But the reason which induced the courts to adopt this analogy, with respect to these estates when limited upon an estate in fee simple, does not hold when they are limited upon or after an estate in tail; because, when they are limited upon or after an estate in tail, the tenant in tail, by suffering a common recovery before the event takes place, bars or defeats the secondary estate, and acquires the fee simple absolutely discharged from it. See Page v. Haywood, 2. Salk. 570. And see 1. Lev. 35. Goodman v. Cook, 2. Sid. 102. Hence if the secondary estates we are speaking of, are limited upon or after an estate in tail, they may be limited generally, without restraining or confining the event or contingency upon which they are to take place, to any period. Thus, if an estate be limited to A. and his heirs; and if B. (a person in esse) dies, without leaving any issue of his body living at the time of his decease; or having such issue, if all of them die before any of them attain the age of 21 years, then to C. and his heirs; here the limitation to C. is limited after a previous limitation in fee simple; and it is a good limitation, because the event upon which it is to take place, must, if it does take place, necessarily take place within the period of a life in being, and 21 years and a few months. But if the estate were limited to A. and his heirs; and after the decease of B. and a total failure of heirs or heirs male of the body of B. to C. and his heirs; here, as the secondary use is limited after a previous limitation in fee simple, and the event on which the fee limited to C. is to take place is not such as must necessarily happen within the period we are speaking of (for B. may have issue, and that issue not fail till many years after the expiration of 21 years after B.'s decease), the limitation to C. and his heirs is void. But suppose the estates were limited to A. for life, then to trustees and their heirs during his life, for preserving contingent remainders; then to A.'s first and other sons successively in tail male; with several remainders over; with a proviso, that if B. dies, and there should be a total failure of heirs or heirs male of his body, the uses limited to A. and his sons, and the remainders over, shall determine, and the lands remain and go over to C. and his heirs; here the limitation to C. and his heirs is limited upon or after previous limitations for life, or in tail; and the event upon which it is to take effect, may possibly not happen till after a period of one or more life or lives in being, and 21 years. But so far as it is limited on an event which may happen during the continuance either of one or more life or lives in being, it is within the bounds we have mentioned; and so far as it is limited upon an event which may happen during the continuance of the estate of the tenants in tail, or after them, the first tenant in tail in possession by suffering

*de sa vie, si jeo puis release a luy pur enlarger son estate, il covient que jeo releffa a luy et a ses heires de son corps engender, * ou a luy et a ses heires, ou per tiels parols, Aaver et tener a luy et a ses heires † de son corps engendres, ‡ ou a les heires males de son corps engendres, ou tiels semblables estates, ou autrement il n'ad plus greinde estate que il avoit adevant.*

to him to enlarge his estate, it behoveth that I release to him and to his heires of his body engendered, or to him and his heires, or by these words, To have and to hold to him and to his heires of his bodie engendered, or to the heires males of his bodie engendered, or such like estates, or otherwise hee hath no greater estate than hee had before.

A Un que est tenant de franktenement. Here it appeareth, that to a release of (Ant. 266.) a right, made to any that hath an estate of freehold in deed or in law, no privitie at all is requisite. As if a disseisor make a lease for life, if the disseisee release to the lessee, this is good, and directly within the rule of Littleton, because the lessee hath an estate of freehold, albeit there be no privitie. And so it is if a disseisor make a lease to A. and his heires during the life of B. and A. dieth, a release by the disseisee to his heire, before hee doth actually enter, is good.

Sect. 470.

MES si mon tenant a terme de vie lessa mesme la terre ouster a un auter pur terme de vie de son lessee, le remainder a un auter en fee, ore si jeo releffa a celuy a que mon tenant lessast pur terme de vie, § ceo serra barre a tous jours, comment que nul mention soit fait de ses heires, pur ceo que al temps de release fait jeo avoy nul reversion, mes tantselement un droit d'aver la reversion. Car per tiel leas, et le remainder ouster, que mon tenant fist en ceo cas, mon reversion fuit discontinue, || &c. et tiel release urera a celuy en le remainder, d'aver advantage de ceo, auxibien come al tenant a terme de vie.

BUT if my tenant for life letteth the same land over to another for terme of the life of his lessee, the remainder to another in fee, now if I release to him to whom my tenant made a lease for terme of life, I shall bee barred for ever, albeit that no mention be made of his heires, for that at the time of the release made I had no reversion, but only a right to have the reversion. For by such a release, and the remainder over, (Post. 327.) which my tenant made in this case, my reversion was discontinued, &c. and this release shall enure to him in the remainder, to have advantage of it, aswell as to the tenant for terme of life (1).

LITTLETON having before spoken of releases which enure by way of enlargement, by way of mitten l'estate, and by way of mitten le droit, here speaketh of a release of a right which (Post. 279.) in some respects enureth by way of extinguishment; as in this case which Littleton here putteth, the release to the lessee doth not enure by way of mitten le droit, for then should he have the whole right, but as it were by way of extinguishment, in respect of him that made the release, and that it shall enure to him in the remainder, which is a qualitie of an inheritance extinguished.

* ou not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† males added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ ou a les heires males de son corps engendres

not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ ceo—jeo, L. and M. and Roh.

|| &c. not in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Here Littleton shews the operation of a release per mitten le droit, when made to the feoffee of the disseisor. The feoffee is in by title; his estate cannot be divested, or disaffirmed, but by an act equal to that which created it. A release does not affect his possession or title, but discharges it from the right of the releasor; so that whether the whole fee is in the feoffee, or carved out into particular estates, it remains unaltered by the release, except as it is discharged by it from the right of the releasor.

suffering a recovery, before the event happens, may bar the limitations over, and thereby acquire an estate in fee simple; and therefore the limitation over to C. and his heirs, is good.—III. With respect to the mode by which conveyances to uses operate. It is to be observed, that to raise an use under the statute, the possession or seisin to serve the use must be in some person distinct from the cestuy que use; the statute requiring that the person seised to the use, and the person to whom the use is limited, should be different persons; so that if the possession is conveyed, and the use limited to the same person, at least if the use is limited in fee simple, that is not an use executed by the statute, but the party is in by the common law. For the statute of uses mentions those cases only, where "any person or persons stand seised to the use of any other person or persons." Thus, in the case of Jenkins v. Young, Cro. Car. 231. 245. lands were given to two, habendum to the use of them and the heirs of their two bodies. It was argued, that the estate out of which the use should rise, was but for their lives, and that therefore, on the death of the cestuys que vie, the use limited upon their estate was determined: but the court held, that where an estate is limited to one, and the use to a stranger, the use should not be more than the estate out of which it was derived; but that when the limitation is to two, habendum to the use of them and the heirs of their bodies, it was no limitation of the use, nor was the use to be executed by the statute. So in Gilb. Rep. p. 17. it is expressly said, that if a fine be levied to a man and his heirs, to the use of him and his heirs, he shall take by the common law, and not by way of use. And see Dyer 186. and ant. 22. b. and Bac. uses, ed. 1785. p. 63. Com. 313. Skin. 209. Now the possession or seisin on which the use is declared, must either remain in the party, or be transferred to some third person. This is the meaning of those passages in the books, where it is said that uses are either raised by transmutation of the possession, or without such transmutation. A bargain and sale, and a covenant to stand seised, operate on the possession of the bargainor or covenantor. A feoffment, fine, and common recovery, operate on the possession of the feoffee, conveyee, or recoveror. A lease and release has a mixt operation; the lease having the operation of, and being in fact, a bargain and sale under the statute, and the estate of the releasee being extended or enlarged to an estate of inheritance by the operation of the release at the common law. For with respect, first, to a bargain and sale, and a covenant to stand seised; a bargain and sale is considered as a real contract, whereby the bargainor for some pecuniary consideration bargains and sells, that is, contracts to convey the lands to the bargainee. A covenant to stand seised to uses, is where a man covenants to stand seised of them to the use of his wife, his child, or kinsman. Here, in the first instance, the bargainor stands seised to the use of the bargainee; in the second, the covenantor stands seised to the use of the parties intended to be benefited.

extinguished. But yet the right is not extinct in deed, as shall be said hereafter in this chapter.

(Post. 327. b.)

Mon reversion suit discontinue, &c. Here discontinue is in a large sense taken for devested, though the entrie of the lessor be not taken away, which is implied in this (&c.)

Se^{ct}. 471.

SONT come un tenant en ley. Which is certainly true in this case of remainder, and so it is also in case of a reversion; as if a disseisor make a lease for life, and the disseisee doth release all his right to the lessee, this release shall enure to him in the reversion, albeit they have severall estates, as hath been said, which is implied in this (&c.)

But if a disseisor make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, albeit they to some purposes (as here is said) are as one tenant in law, yet if the disseisee release all actions to the tenant for life, after the death of the tenant for life, he in the remainder shall not take benefit of this release, for it extended only to the tenant for life, as it is holden [a] in Edward Altham's case. And in like manner, if the disseisor make a lease for life, and the disseisee release all actions to the lessee, this inureth not to him in the reversion; and so our author is to be understood of a release of rights, and not of a release of actions, to the tenant for life, as to or for the benefit of him in the remainder or reversion.

[a] Lib. 8. fol. 148. Edw. Altham's case.
(Post. Se^{ct}. 494.)

CAR a cel intent le tenant a terme de vie et celuy en le remainder sont si come un tenant en ley, et sont si come un tenant fuit sole seisie en son demesne come de fee al temps de tiel release fait a luy, &c.

FOR to this intent the tenant for terme of life and he in the remainder are as one tenant in law, and are as if one tenant were sole seised in his demesne as of fee at the time of such release made unto him, &c.

Se^{ct}. 472.

SI home soit disseisie, &c. This is to be understood where tenant in fee simple is disseised and release; for if tenant for life be disseised by two, and he releaseth to one of them, this shall inure to them both; for he to whom the release is made, hath a longer estate than hee that releaseth, and therefore cannot inure to him alone, to hold out his companion, for then should the release inure by way of entrie and grant of his estate; and consequently the disseisor, to whom the release is made, should become tenant for life, and the reversion reversioned in the lessor, [b] which strange transmutation and change of estates in this case the law will not suffer. But if lessee for yeares be ousted, and he in the rever-

*ITEM, si home soit disseisie per deux, s'il releassa a un d'eux, il tiendra son compaignon hors de terre, et per tiel release il avera le sole possession et estate en la terre. Mes si un disseisor enseossa deux en fee, et le disseisee releassa a l'un des feoffees, ceo urera a ambideux de les feoffees, et la cause de diversity entre ceux deux cases est assets preignant. * Pur*

ALSO, if a man be disseised by two, if he release to one of them (1), hee shall hold his companion out of the land, and by such release hee shall have the sole possession and estate in the land. But if a disseisor infeoffe two in fee, and the disseisee release to one of the feoffees, this shall inure to both the feoffees, and the cause of the diversity between these two cases is pregnant e-

ceo

* The remainder of this Section not in L. and M. nor Rob.

(1) Here the release is to the disseisors themselves. They have only a bare possession, preceded by no previous conveyance, and founded on no right or title, and therefore the release of the disseisee who has the right, passes the right to the disseisor to whom it is made, and his holding out his companion is an act of notoriety equal to that by which the joint estate by disseisin was originally acquired. Thus the possession of each of the estates being founded on an equal degree of title, the disseisor to whom the release is made, having the right, must be preferred to him who has none: so that, in this case, the release is tantamount to an actual entrie and feoffment.

benefited. In both, the possession or seisin remains in the party; and the statute draws it from them, and executes it in the cessuys que use. Secondly, with respect to a feoffment, fine, and common recovery; the transfer or transmutation of the possession from the lessor, conveyer, and recoverer to the feoffee, conveyee, or recoveror, is effected solely by the operation of these conveyances or assurances at the common law; and if the use is declared to the feoffee, conveyee, or recoveror, in fee simple, the conveyance is completed at the common law, in the same manner as if the statute of uses had never passed. It is only when the use is declared to a third person, that the statute has any operation; and then, by the operation of the statute, the possession previously transferred or transmuted to the feoffee, conveyee, or recoveror, by the operation of the feoffment, fine, and common recovery, at the common law, is divested from the feoffee, conveyee, or recoveror, and vested in the cessuys que use by the statute. Thirdly, as to the conveyance by lease and release. The form of that conveyance is originally derived to us from the common law, and it is necessary to distinguish in what respect it operates as a common-law conveyance, and in what it operates under the statute of uses. At the common law, where the usual mode of conveyance was by feoffment with livery of seisin, if there was a tenant in possession, so that livery could not be made, the reversion was granted, and the tenant attorned to the reversioner. As by this mode the reversion or remainder of an estate might be conveyed without livery, when it depended on an estate previously existing, it was natural to proceed one step further, and to create a particular estate for the express and sole purpose of conveying the reversion; and then, by a surrender or release, either of the particular estate to the reversioner, or of the reversion to the particular tenant, the whole fee vested in the surrenderee or releasee. It was afterwards observed, that there was no necessity to grant the reversion to a stranger; and that if a particular estate was made to the person to whom it was proposed to convey the fee, the reversion might be immediately released to him; which release, operating by way of enlargement, would give the releasee the fee. In all these cases, the particular estate was only an estate for yeares; for at the common law, the ceremony of livery of seisin is as necessary to create even an estate of freehold, as it is to create an estate of inheritance. Still an actual entrie would be necessary on the part of the particular tenant; for, without actual possession, the lessee is not capable of a release, operating by way of enlargement. But this necessity of entrie for the purpose of obtaining the possession, was superseded, or made unnecessary, by the statute of uses: for by that statute, the possession was immediately transferred to the ceo que ils veignent nough. For that they cins per feoffment, et come in by feoffment, l'auters per tort, &c. and the others by wrong, &c.

cessuys

disseisor hath a freehold, whereupon the release of tenant for life may enure; but the disseisor hath no terme for yeares, whereupon the release of the lessee for yeares may enure.

And so it is if donee in taile be disseised by two, and releaseth to one of them, it shall enure to them both. But if the king's tenant for life be disseised by two, and he releaseth to one of them, he shall hold out his companion, for the disseisor gained but the estate for life. So if two joyntenants make a lease for life, and after doe disseise the tenant for life, and he release to one of them, he shall hold out his companion, for the disseisin was but of an estate for life.

If tenant for life be disseised by two, and he in the reversion and tenant for life joyne in a release to one of the disseisors, he shall hold his companion out, and yet it cannot enure by way of entrie and feoffment. But if they severally release their severall rights, their severall releases shall enure to both the disseisors.

But here in Littleton's case, where tenant in fee simple is disseised by two, and releaseth to one of them, this for many purposes enureth by way of entrie and feoffment, and therefore he to whom the release is made shall hold out his companion, and be made sole tenant of the fee simple. And this holdeth not only in case of a disseisin, but also in case of intrusion and abatement: but necessarily he to whom the release is made must bee in by wrong, and not by title.

If two men doe gaine an advowson by usurpation, and the right patron releaseth to one of them, he shall not hold out his companion, but it shall enure to them both; for seeing their clerke came in by admission and institution, which are judicall acts, they are not merely in by wrong: for an usurpation shall cause a remitter, as it appeareth in P. N. B. 31. m.

But if a lease for life be made, the remainder for life, the remainder in fee, and he in remainder for life disseiseth the tenant for life, and then tenant for life dieth, the disseisin is purged, and he in the remainder for life hath but an estate for life. And so note a diversitie where the particular estate for life is precedent, and when subsequent.

Where our author putteth his case of one disseised, put the case that two joyntenants in fee be disseised by two, and one of the disseises release to one of the disseisors all his right, he shall not hold out his companion, because the release is but of the moytie, without any certainment. If a man be disseised by two women, and one of them take husband, and the disseisee release to the husband, this shall enure to the advantage of both the disseisors, because the husband was no wrong doer, but in a manner in by title.

Il avera le sole possession et estate. If two disseisors be, and they make a lease for life, and the disseisee release to one of them, this shall enure to them both, and to the benefit of the lessee for life also: for he cannot by the release have the sole possession and estate, for part of the estate is in another.

And so it is (as it seemeth) if the disseisors make a lease for yeares, and the disseisee release to one of them, this shall enure to them both, for by the release he cannot have the sole possession: and it appeareth by Littleton, that he must have the sole possession, and hold his companion out. But the mortgagee upon condition, having broken the condition, is disseised by two, the mortgagor having title of entrie for the condition broken, release to the one disseisor, albeit they be in by wrong, yet the release shall enure to them both for two causes: first, for that they are not wrong doers to the mortgagor, but to the mortgagee; and by Littleton's case it appeareth, that wrong is done to him that made the release: secondly, that hee that makes the release hath but a title by force of a condition, and Littleton's case is of a right. Like law of an entrie for mortmaine, or a consent to ravishment, &c.

Mes si un disseisor infeoffa deux, &c. And the reason of this diversitie is, for that the feoffees are in by title, and are presumed to have a warrantie, which is much favoured in law, and the disseisors are merely in by wrong. And the equitie of the law doth preserve in this case the benefit of the estranger to the release comming in by one joynt title.

Pur ceo que ils veignent cins per feoffment, et l'auters per tort. This is of a new addition, and not in the originall, and therefore I passe it over.

Sect.

cestuy que use; so that a bargainee under that statute is as much in possession, and as capable of a release before or without entrie, as a lessee is at the common law after entrie. All, therefore, that remained to be done to avoid, on the one hand, the necessity of livery of seisin from the grantor; and to avoid, on the other, the necessity of an actual entrie on the part of the grantee; was, that the particular estate (which, for the reasons abovementioned, should be an estate for yeares) should be so framed, as to be a bargain and sale within the statute. Originally it was made in such a manner as to be both a lease at the common law, and a bargain and sale under the statute. But as it is held, that where conveyances may operate both by the common law and statute, they shall be considered to operate by the common law, unless the intention of the parties appears to the contrary; it became the practice to insert, among the operative words, the words bargain and sale (in fact, it is more accurate to insert no other operative words), and to express that the bargain and sale or lease is made to the intent and purpose, that thereby, and by the statute of uses, the lessee may be capable of a release. The bargain and sale, therefore, or the lease for a year, as it is generally called, operates, and the bargainee is in the possession, by the statute. The release operates by enlarging the estate or possession of the bargainee to a fee: this is at the common law, and if the use be declared to the releasee in fee simple, it continues an estate at the common law; but if the use is declared to a third person, the statute again intervenes, and annexes or transfers the possession of the releasee to the use of the person to whom the use is declared. It has been said, that the possession of the bargainee, under the lease, is not so properly merged in, as enlarged by the release: but, at all events, it does not, after the release, exist distinct from the estate passed by the release. As the operation of a lease and release depends upon the lease, or bargain and sale, if the grantor is a body corporate, the lease will not operate under the statute of uses; for a body corporate cannot be seised to an use, and therefore the lease of possession, considered as a bargain and sale under the statute, is void; and the release, then, must be of no effect, for want of a previous possession in the releasee. In cases of this nature, therefore, it is proper to make the conveyance by feoffment, or by a lease and release, with an actual entrie by the lessee, previous to the release; after which the release will pass the reversion. It may also be observed, that in exchanges, if one of the parties die before the exchange is executed by entrie, the exchange is void. Ant. 506. But if the exchange be made by lease and release, this inconvenience is prevented, as the statute executes the possession without entrie, and all incidents annexed to an exchange, at common law, will be preserved.—IV. The next consideration is, upon the doctrine of powers deciding their effect from the statute of uses; but the nature of these notes requires, that what is said on this head should be confined to some general observations upon the mode by which powers operate; and the relation which the deeds by which they are executed, bear to the deeds by which they are created. As to the first all powers of this kind are, in fact, powers of revocation and appointment: indeed, every declaration of an use may, in some respect, be considered as an appointment of the use or uses to which the feoffee is to stand seised: but the word appointment is generally applied to those cases, where either the power of appointment is first referred, or given, with a subsequent limitation of uses, to take place until, and in default of the appointment; or where the uses are first limited, and a power is afterwards given to some person to limit other uses. As the uses limited under this power cannot operate but by the appointing, abridging, or defeating the prior uses, it is usual in some cases, to precede the power of appointment by a power of revocation. But this is immaterial. The powers of leasing, jointuring, charging, selling, and exchanging, usually inserted in marriage settlements, are powers of revocation and appointment. All of them postpone, abridge, or defeat, in a greater or less degree, the pre-

Se^{ct}. 473.

*ITEM, si jeo sue disseisie, et mon disseisor est disseisie, si jeo release a le disseisor de mon disseisor, jeo n'avera a unque assise ne entra sur * le disseisor, pur ceo que son disseisor ad mon droit per mon release, &c. † Et issint il semble en tiel cas, si soyent xx. disseisors, chescun apres auter, et jeo releffa a le darreine disseisor, ‡ celui disseisor barrera tous les auters de lour actions et lour titles. Et la cause est, § come il semble, pur ceo que en mults cases, quant un home ad loyal title d'entre, || coment que il n'entra pas, il defeatera tous meane titles per son release, &c. Mes ceo n'est ¶ my en chescun case, come serra dit apres.*

ALSO, if I bee disseised, and my disseisor is disseised, if I release to the disseisor of my disseisor, I shall not have an assise nor enter upon the disseisor, because his disseisor hath my right by my release, &c. And so it seemeth in this case, if there be xx. disseised one after another, and I release to the last disseisor, this disseisor shall barre all the others of their actions and their titles. And the cause is, as it seemeth, for that in many cases, when a man hath lawfull title of entrie, although he doth not enter, hee shall defeat all meane titles by his release, &c. But this holds not in everie case, as shall be said hereafter (1).

HERE it is to be observed, that a release by one whose entry is lawfull to him that is in by wrong, shall purge and take away all meane estates and titles. And where our author first putteth his case of two estates by wrong, and after of twentie disseisins, all estates be wrong.

If A. disseise B. who enfeoffeth C. with warrantie, who enfeoffeth D. with warrantie, and E. disseiseth D. to whom B. the first disseisee releaseth, this doth defeat all the meane estates and warranties, because the release of B. is made to a disseisor, and his entrie is lawfull.

(Post. 277. b. 278. 2.)
21. H. 6. 41. 11. H. 4. 37.
9. H. 7. 25. 2. E. 4. 16. 21. E. 4.
78. 12. Aff. 22. Vide 3. H. 6.
38.

Se^{ct}. 474.

ITEM, si mon disseisor leffa, &c. If the disseisor make a lease for life, and the lessee maketh a feoffment in fee, and the disseisee releaseth to the feoffee, the disseisor shall not enter upon the feoffee; for albeit the release to one joynt feoffee of a disseisor, as hath beene said, shall not exclude the other, yet a release to the feoffee of a tenant for life in this case shall take away the entrie of the disseisor for the alienation which was made to his

ITEM, si mon disseisor leffa les tenements dont il moy disseisist a un  auter home pur terme de vie, et puis le tenant a terme de vie aliena en fee, et jeo releffa al alienee, &c. dunque mon disseisor ne poit enter, causâ quâ supra, coment que a un

ALSO, if my disseisor letteth the tenements wherof he disseised mee to another for terme of life, and after the tenant for terme of life alieneth in fee, and I release to the alienee, &c. then my disseisor cannot enter, causâ quâ supra, albeit that at one foits

* le—son, L. and M. and Roh. † et not in L. and M. nor Roh. ‡ celui disseisor—il, L. and M. and Roh.
§ come il semble not in L. and M. nor Roh. || coment que il n'entra pas—et entre, L. and M. and Roh. ¶ my—pas, L. and M. and Roh.  auter not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) This is upon the same principle, that where the title to the possession is equal, the party who obtains the right shall be preferred.—So, by the modern law, where the equity of the parties is equal, he who has the law, is to be preferred.

vious uses and estates, and appoint new uses in their stead. As soon as the uses created by them spring up, they draw to them the estate of the feoffee; and the statute executes the possession. But it must be observed, that these powers do not operate as a conveyance of the possession or estate, but as a limitation of the use. Hence, if a person, having a power of appointment, appoints the estate to A. and his heirs, to the use of B. and his heirs, the use is executed in A. and his heirs, and B. takes only an equitable fee. Thus, suppose a marriage settlement framed in the usual manner, and with the usual power of selling and exchanging reserved to the feoffees; in these cases, it is sometimes expressed, that it shall be lawful for the feoffees to grant, bargain, sell, and convey. But whatever are the words made use of, they can only operate as a limitation of the use; and the vendee will take the legal estate. If the feoffees make a conveyance by lease and release, there is no doubt but it will be effectual; it will operate, however, as an appointment; the releasee will take the legal estate, and if the release is made to uses, the intended cestuys que use will have only equitable estates.—Secondly, as to the relation which the deed by which the power of appointment is executed, has to the deed by which the power is created. It is frequently said in the books, that when a power is executed, from that time the feoffee, conusee, recoveror, or releasee, is seised to the use created by the power, in the same manner as if in the original deed in which the power is contained, not the power, but the use raised under the power had been inserted. And this is true, so far as the use thus appointed derives its effect from, and is served by or out of the original seisin of the conusee, recoveror, feoffee, or releasee; and as it precedes and takes place of all the uses limited subsequent or subject to the power. In this sense, it clearly has a relation to the deed by which it is raised. But it has no other relation in point of time. In the case of the duke of Marlborough v. lord Godolphin, 2. Vez. 61. lord Sunderland left the interest of 30,000l. to his wife for her life, and the principal, after her decease, to such of her children as she should by deed or will appoint. By her will she appointed 2000l. to Mr. Spencer and 1500l. to lady Morpeth, who both died in her life-time. It was contended, that the appointment related back to the time of lord Sunderland's will, which relation would overreach the death of the two parties, who were alive at the time of the death of the testator, lord Sunderland; and then it would be considered as vesting in them in their lives. But lord Hardwicke denied this. He admitted that an use taking effect by virtue of an execution of a power, was taken under the authority of that power, but not from the time of its creation; and he exemplifies this distinction by appointments of uses; in which case, says his lordship, if a feoffment is executed to such uses as the feoffor shall foits l'alienation fuit time the alienation a son disinheritance, was to his disinheri-

Et. tance, &c.

estate. But if the entry of the disseisee were not lawfull, it is otherwise. As if a man make a lease for life, and the lessee for life is disseised, and that disseisor is disseised, and he in the reversion releaseth to the second disseisor, the first disseisor shall enter upon the second disseisor, and his entry is lawfull; and if the lessee for life re-enter, he shall leave the reversion in the first disseisor; and the cause is, for that the entry of the disseisor at the time of the release made was not lawfull. And the booke of [m] 9. H. 7. 25. is to be intended of an estate taille mutatis mutandis.

If, in the case aforesaid, the disseisor make a lease for life, and the lessee infeoffeth two, and the disseisee release to one of the feoffees, this shall barre the disseisor, as hath beene said; but yet he shall not hold out his companion for the cause aforesaid.

Sect. 475.

ITEM, si home soit disseise, lequel be disseised, who ad firs deins age et hath a sonne within morust, et esteant le age and dieth, and the firs deins age le disseisor morust seisi, et sonne being within la terre descendist a seised, and the land son heire, et un estrange descend to his heire, (1) abate, et puis le firs and a stranger abate, and le disseisee, quant il after the sonne of the vient a son plein age, disseisee, when hee releffa tout son droit commeth to his full a l'abator; en cest case age, releaseth all his l'heire le disseisor n'a-vera assise de mor-d'ancestor envers l'abator, mes serra bar, pur ceo que l'abator ad le droit del firs le disseisee per son releas, et l'entry le firs fuit congeable, † pur ceo of the sonne of the disseisee by his release, al temps del discent, and the entry of the sonne was congeable, &c. for that hee was within age at the time of the discent, &c.*

THE reason of this case is, for that the entry of the heire is congeable, and the abator is in the land by wrong.

Abate is both an English and French word, and signifieth in his proper sense to diminish, or take away, as here by his entrie he diminisheth and taketh away the freehold in law descended to the heire; and so it is said to abate an account, signifying subtraction or withdrawing, &c. and to abate the courage of a man. In another sense it signifieth to prostrate, beat downe, or overthrow, as to abate castles, houses, and the like, and to abate a writ; and hereof commeth a word of art, abatamentum, which is an entrie by interposition. Now the difference inter disseisinam, abatamentum, intrusionem, deforciammentum, et usurpationem, et purpresturam, is this.

A disseisin is a wrongfull putting out of him that is actually seised of a freehold. And abatament is when a man died seised of an estate of inheritance, and betwene the death and the entry of the heire, an estranger doth interpose himselfe, and abate.

Vet. N. B. 115. Britten cap. 51.
 Bracon lib. 4. cap. 2.
 F. N. B. 203. f. W. 1. ca. 17.

Intrusion first properly [n] is, when the ancestor died seised of any estate of inheritance expectant upon an estate for life, and then tenant for life dieth, and betwene the death and the entry of the heire an estranger doth interpose himselfe and intrude.

Secondly, [o] he that entreth upon any of the king's demesnes, and taketh the profits, is said to intrude upon the king's possession.

[n] F. N. B. 203. Fleta li. 4. cap. 30.
 [o] Pl. Com. case de mynec.

Thirdly,

* d'assise added in L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Littleton having treated of releases per mitter le droit, when made to the disseisors themselves and their feoffees, now treats of their operation when made to the heir of the disseisor. In note 1. to page 239, it was observed, that a disseisor has a mere naked possession, unsupported by any right, and that the disseisee may restore his possession, and put a total end to the possession of the disseisor, by entry. But though the feoffee of the disseisor comes in by title, still the right of possession remains in the disseisee, and he may equally enter on the feoffee as on the disseisor; so that a release per mitter le droit gives both to the disseisor and his feoffee the right of possession and the right of property: but if the disseisor dies, the entry of the disseisee is taken away, and a presumptive right of possession is in the heir; so that the release of the disseisee only passes the right of property.

shall appoint by will; when the will is made, it is clear the appointee is in by the feoffment, but has nothing from the time of the execution of the feoffment, so as to vest the estate in him; and he thereupon decreed these legacies to have lapsed by the death of the legatee in the life-time of the testator. This shews how much it is necessary to qualify the general expressions above alluded to. It also reconciles them with a known circumstance attending powers of this nature, with which it is otherwise difficult to reconcile them, viz. that by an execution of a power, a person may limit estates which he could not limit by the deed in which the power is contained; for by an execution of a power of appointment, a life-estate may be limited to a person not in esse at the time when the deed giving the power was executed, with remainders over. Now, if we consider these limitations as inserted in the original deed, the remainders over would be void; for though a person may limit an estate for life to a person not in esse, he cannot limit a remainder upon it. But these limitations under powers of appointment are in every day's practice; and estates for life, with remainders over, are limited under them to persons not in esse at the time of the execution of the original deed, in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if instead of being derived out of the seisin of the feoffees of the original deed, and in that point of view, as making a part of that deed, the uses and estates so limited were created by an original, substantive, independent, and integral conveyance.—V. The remaining subject for observation is, what uses are not executed by the statute. First, as to uses created by wills, it is to be observed, that lands were not devisable at common law, except through the medium of a previous feoffment to uses. The cestuy que use might dispose of the use by will: but the court of chancery considered the will as a declaration of the use, and compelled the feoffees to convey the lands accordingly. But when by the statute of the 27th Henry VIII. the possession was annexed to the use, as the use thereby became merged in the land, this indirect power of devising lands was absolutely lost. The 32. and 34. Hen. VIII. gave a power to devise the whole of lands held in socage, and two-thirds of lands held by knights service. The 12. Car. II. converted knights service into socage; so that now all landed property, except that which is of the tenure of copyhold, is devisable. But as the statute of uses preceded the statutes of wills, it does not necessarily extend to them. It is true, that the statute of uses speaks of persons seised to uses by virtue of wills; but this must apply

[p] F. N. B. 141. f. g. h.

Thirdly, [p] when the heire in ward entreth at his full age without satisfaction for his marriage, the writ saith, quid intravit.

Deforciammentum comprehendeth not only these aforementioned, but any man that holdeth land whereunto another man hath right, be it by descent or purchase, is said to be a deforceor.

Usurpation hath two significations in the common law: one, when an estranger that no right hath presenteth to a church, and his clerke is admitted and instituted, hee is said to be an usurper, and the wrongfull act that he hath done is called an usurpation.

Secondly, when any subject doth use, without lawfull warrant, royal franchises, he is said to usurpe upon the king those franchises.

Purprestura, or pourprestura, a purpresture. [q] Purprestura est, &c. generaliter quoties aliquid fit ad nocumentum regii tenementi, vel regie viae (vel aliquarum publicarum) vel civitatis, &c. And because it is properly when there is a house builded, or an enclosure made of any part of the king's demelines, or of an high way, or a common street or publike water, or such like publike things, it is derived of the French word pourpris, which signifieth an inclosure, but specially applied, as is aforesaid, by the common law.

[q] Glanvil. lib. 9. cap. 11.
Britton fol. 28. 29.
(Cro. Car. 17. 2. Inst. 278.)

Sect. 476.

HERE the entry of the disseisee is congeable, and yet the release doth not avoid the condition, because the feoffee is in by title, as hath bene said, and may have a warranty. (2) And herein our author expresth a diversitie betweene a condition in law, and a condition in deed; for in the case before when the disseisee releaseth to the feoffee of the tenant for life, the condition in law is taken away, but otherwise it is in this case of a condition in deed.

But if the feoffee upon condition make a feoffment in fee over without any condition, and the disseisee release to the second feoffee, the condition is destroyed by the release before the condition broken or after. For the state of the second feoffee was not upon any expresse condition, as Littleton here putteth his case, and he may have advantage of the release, because it is not against his owne proper acceptance, as Littleton speaketh in the next Section.

But if it be a wrongfull title, such a title is taken away by a release; as if A. disseised B. to the use of C. B. release to A. this shall take away the agreement of C. to the disseisin, because it should make him a wrong doer: as if the disseisor be disseised, the disseisee releaseth to the second disseisee, this taketh away the right the first disseisor had against the second, and a relation of an estate gained by wrong shall never defeat an estate subsequent gained by right, against a single opinion, not affirmed by any other in one of our bookes.

9. H. 7. 25.

(Sect. 415.)
Lib. 1. f. 147. Mayowe's case.

14. H. 8. 18. per Port.
(Ant. 271. a. 276. b.)

*MES si * home* BUT if a man be disseised, and the disseisor fait feoffment sur condition, cestascavoir, de rendre a luy certaine rent, et par default de payment un re-entre, &c. if the disseisee releaseth to the feoffee upon condition, yet this shall not amend the estate of the feoffee upon condition; for notwithstanding such release, yet his estate is upon condition, as it was before (1).

‡ Et cum hoc concordat opinio omnium justiciariorum, P. 9. H. 7. And with this agreeeth the opinion of all the justices, Pasch. 9. H. 7.

Sect. 477.

ET le disseisor grant un rent-charge, &c. Here is implied commons or any other ET mesme le maner est lou home soit disseise de certaine terre, et le disseisor IN the same manner it is where a man is disseised of certain lands, and the disseisor * of un added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ avidera, Vell. M.S.

† n'amendra---ne obatera, L. and M. and Roh. ne alicraft, Pap. M.S.
‡ This paragraph not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) The observations made on note 1. to page 275. a. note 1. to page 276. b. and the note to the preceding page, apply to the cases put by Littleton in this and the following Section, and by sir Edward Coke in his commentary. The whole of the chapter contained in this chapter is particularly well explained by lord chief-baron Gilbert in his treatise on tenures.

(2) The reason of this case in the book here cited is, that the condition is like a covenant between them; and he is stopped from claiming it otherwise; and the diversity following seems to warrant this. Post. 278. b. — Lord Nott. MS.

apply either to those lands which were deviseable by custom; — as when a person seised of lands deviseable by custom, devised them to A. and his heires, to the use of B. and his heires: — or to uses at common law; — as where a feoffment was made to A. and his heires, to the use of B. and his heires, and B. devised the use. To uses of this description the statute extended; but it is difficult to conceive how uses created under the testamentary power given by the statutes of wills can be within the statute of uses. It is said, that tho' the law will not force the operation of the statute of uses upon devises to which it is the testator's intention it should not extend; yet it will apply it to those cases to which it is his intention it should extend. This opinion makes it depend entirely on the will of the testator, whether the statute of uses shall or shall not operate upon the devises of his will. Thus, if a devise is made to the use of A. for life, with remainders over, if it were to be considered as a limitation under the statute of uses, it would be void, for want of a seisin to serve the uses. It cannot therefore be the testator's intention that it should operate under that statute; consequently the law will not force it under that statute, but leave it solely to its effect under the statutes of wills. But suppose a devise to A. and his heires, to the use of B. and his heires, that would be good to give the legal fee to B. as a limitation under the statute of uses. The testator therefore might intend, and the form of the devise shews he did intend, to raise an use under that statute, and the law, in conformity to his intentions, extends its operation to the devise. But against this it may be argued, that a statute can never be considered as relating to any thing which did not exist at the time of its passing; and therefore, as lands were not deviseable till some years after the statute of uses, the statute of uses cannot extend to uses created by devise: that in wills the testator's intention is chiefly considered; and as by a devise to A. and his heires, to the use of B. and his heires, the testator shews it to be his intention that B. should have the legal fee, the law will for grant un rent-charge hors de mesme la terre, &c. coment que apres le disseisee releffa al disseisor, &c. uncore le rent-charge demurt en sa force. Et la cause en ceux deux cases est ceo, que home n'avera advantage per tiel releas que serra encounter son proper acceptance, et encounter son grant demesne. Et coment que ascuns ont dit, que lou l'entre de home est congeable sur un tenant, s'il releasist a mesme le tenant, que ceo availeroit a le tenant, sicome il usten-ter sur le tenant, et puis luy enseoffa, &c. ceo n'est pas voier en chescun cas. Car en le primer cas de ceux deux avantdits cases, si le disseisee usten-ter sur le feoffee sur condition, et puis luy enseoffa, donques est le condition tout defeat et avoid. Et isint en le second case, si le disseisee entraist et enseoffa celuy que grantalerent-charge, donques est le rent-charge anient et avoid, mes il n'est pas void per seun tiel releas sans entry fait, &c.

grant a rent-charge out of the same land, &c. albeit the disseisee doth afterwards release to the disseisor, &c. yet the rent-charge remaynes in force. And the reason in these two cases is this, that a man shall not have advantage by such release which shall bee against his proper acceptance, and against his own grant. And albeit some have said, that where the entry of a man is congeable upon a tenant, if hee releases to the same tenant, that this shall availe the tenant, as if he had entred upon the tenant, and after enseoffed him, &c. this is not true in every case. For in the first case of these two cases aforesaid, if the disseisee had entered upon the feoffee upon condition, and after enseoffed him, then is the condition wholly defeated and avoided. And so in the second case, if the disseisee entereth and enseoffeth him who granted the rent-charge, then is the rent-charge taken away and avoided, but it is not void by any such release without entrie made, &c.

And the reason is, because he shall not avoid his owne grant by a release hee himselfe hath acquired since the grant: but if the disseisor in that case be disseised, and the disseisee release to the second disseisor, he shall avoid it, as by that which hath beene said, Sec. 473. appeareth. So likewise if A. and B. bee joint disseisors, and B. grant a rent-charge, and the disseisee release to A. all his right, A. shall avoid the rent-charge, because it was not granted by him, and so not within the reason of our author. (6. Rep. 78. b.) (7. Rep. 38.) (Post. 349. a.) (Mo. 95.)

If there bee two femes joint disseisors, and the one taketh husband, and the disseisee release to the other, there is sole seised, and shal hold out the husband and wife. (Ant. 276. a.)

If two disseisors bee, and they infeoffe another, and take backe an estate for life or in fee, albeit they remaine disseisors to the disseisee as to have an assise against them, yet if he release to one of them, he shall not hold out his companion, because their state in the land is by feoffment.

If there be two disseisors, and they be disseised, and they release to their disseisor, and after disseise him, and then the disseisee release to one or both of them, yet the second disseisor shall re-enter, for they shall not hold the land against their owne release; for Littleton here saith, that they shall not avoid their owne grant, and by like reason they shall not avoid their owne release, et sic de similibus.

Come s'il uft enter sur le tenant et luy enseoffe.

Here is another kinde of release, viz. a release which enureth by way of entry and feoffment; for if a disseisee release to one of the disseisors to some purpose, this shall enure by way of entry and feoffment, viz. as to hold out his companion. But as to a rent-charge granted will put that construction on the devise, and give it that operation. At the end of Mr. Hillyard's edition of Shepherd's Touchstone, there is a very learned opinion of the late Mr. Booth on the doctrine of uses. In two copies which the Editor has seen of this opinion, made immediately under the eye of Mr. Booth, and delivered by him to the persons in whose custody they now are, and also in a copy of it bequeathed by Mr. Booth, with his other valuable law manuscripts, to Mr. Holliday, the following note is added to it:—"P. S. Powers under wills are not like powers under conveyances, operating by way of use. The execution of a power under a devise, is not the limitation of a use; no, not where the devise is to uses: as where there is a devise to I. S. and his heirs, to the use of A. for life, remainder to B. in tail, with power for A. to limit a jointure, or lease, or charge; here, there will be no seisin in I. S. consequently no such use in A. or B. as is executed by the statute of uses; consequently, the execution of the power is no use; it operates as a devise under the statute of wills."—See also Popham v. Bamfield, 1. Vin. 79. Burchett v. Durdant, 2. Vent. 312. Broughton v. Langley, Salk. 679. Gilb. Uses, 281. —But whether a devise to uses operates solely by the statute of wills, or by that statute jointly with the statute of uses, is a matter rather of speculation than of use; as it is now settled, that an immediate devise to uses, without a seisin to serve those uses, is good; and that where the estate is devised to one for the benefit of another, the courts execute the use in the first or second devisee, as appears to suit best with the intention of the testator. 2dly, With respect to copyhold estates, the statute of uses does not extend to them, as it is against the nature of the copyhold tenure, that any person should be introduced into the estate without the consent of the lord. Gilbert's Tenures, 179. 3dly, With respect to leases for years; —these estates are not executed by the statute. But this must be understood of leases actually in existence, at the time of their being assigned to the use. Therefore, if A. possessed of a lease for years, grants it over, or assigns it, to B. and C. to the use of D.; all the estate is in B. and C. and D. only takes a trust, or equitable estate. But if A. being seised of lands in fee, makes a feoffment to the use of B. and C. for a term of years, this term is served out of the seisin of the feoffee, and is executed by the statute.—It is the same if he bargains and sells the estate, of which he is seised in fee, for a term of years. Gilb. Uses, 198. Dyer 369. 2. Inst. 671.—Such are the general outlines of the doctrine of uses; one of the most important parts of the law, as all the landed property of the kingdom is, either directly or indirectly, regulated by it. It is to be observed, that one of the chief objects, both of the legislature and the judicature of this kingdom, in their regulations upon this subject, has been, on the one hand, to guard against those restraints upon alienation, which are incompatible with the welfare of a free and commercial people; and on the other, to admit of reasonable settlements and provisions being made for wives and children, and the general wants of families. Experience seems to shew that they have accomplished their object. This fully answers the objections which foreigners make to the nature of our family-settlements, that we exclude the ancestor, whose character is known to us, from the disposal of the property; and intrust it to the children, with whom we cannot but be perfectly unacquainted.—So detrimental has an unqualified and unlimited power of settlement been found even in France, that it has been made a question there, whether it would not be for the advantage of the nation at large, that all settlements and trusts should be abrogated. This question, so far as it related to moveables, was by the order of Louis XV. proposed in the year

ed by him, it shall not enure by way of entrie and feoffment; for if the disseisee had entred and enfeofed him, the rent-charge had bene avoided. But it is a certaine rule, that when the entrie of a man is congeable, and he releaseth to one that is in by title, (as hereto the feoffee upon condition is) it shall never enure by way of entrie and feoffment, either to avoid a condition with which he accepted the land charged, or his owne grant, or to hold out his companion.

(Dr. and Student, 50. a.)

And where it appeareth by our author, that acts done by the disseisor shall not be avoided by the release of the disseisee, it is to be noted, that acts made to the disseisor himselfe shall not be avoyded by the alteration of his estate by the release of the disseisee; as if the lord before the release had confirmed the estate of the disseisor to hold by lesser services, the disseisor shall take advantage of it, and so of cistovers to be burnt in the house, and the like law of a warrantie made unto him.

If the heire of the disseisor indow his wife ex assensu patris, and the disseisee release to the disseisor, he shall not avoide the indowment, for that is like the case put by Littleton of the rent-charge.

If an alien be a disseisor, and obtaine letters of denization, and then the disseisee release unto him, the king shall not have the land, for the release hath altered the estate, and it is as it were a new purchase; otherwise it is if the alien had bene the feoffee of a disseisor.

If the lord disseise the tenant, and is disseised, the disseisee release to the second disseisor, yet the feignorie is not revived, for betweene the parties the release enures by way of entrie and feoffment as to the land; but not having regard to the feignorie, and for that the possession was never actually removed or revented from the disseisor, who claimeth under the lord, the feignorie is not revived. But if the lord and a stranger disseise the tenant, and the disseisee release to the stranger, there the feignorie by operation of law is revived, for the whole is vested in the stranger which never claimed under the lord: and in that case, if the lord had died, and the land had survived, the feignorie had bene revived. But if the lord had disseised the tenant, and bene disseised by two, and the disseisee released to one of them, the feignorie is not revived, because he claimed (as hath bene said) under the lord.

Sect. 478.

(Ant. 45. a.)
Vid. Sect. 514.

28. E. 3. 98. 9. E. 4. 46.
21. E. 4. 55. 41. E. 3. 10.
2. H. 4. 12.

*QUEL brieve de eux
il esliera, &c.*

Note, many times in one case the law doth give a man severall remedies, and of severall kindes, as in this case by action and by entrie; by action, either a writ of right, or dum fuit infra ætatem.

Et puis le disseisor porta brieve de droit, &c. Here it appeareth, that there is a great art and knowledge for a man that hath divers remedies to chuse his aptest remedie; as in this case, if he bring his writ of right, the disseisor shall be barred, but if he had entred upon the heire of the alienee, he should have enjoyed the land for ever. For in that case the heire of the alienee after such an entrie shall never have a writ of right, no more then if the disseisee entred upon the heire of the disseisor, and make a feoffment in fee, if the heire of the disseisee

*ITEM, si home soit
disseise per un enfant * lequel aliena en fee, et alienee devie seisie, et son heire enter, estant † le disseisor deins age, ore est en election ‡ le disseisour d'aver un brieve || de dum fuit infra ætatem, ou brieve de droit envers le heire del alienee, et quel brieve de eux que il esliera, il
doit recover per la ley, § &c. Et auxi il poit enter en la terre sans ascun recoverie, et en cest case l'entre le dis-seisie est tolle, &c. Mes en cest cas si le disseisie releffa son droit al*

*ALSO, if a man bee disseised by an infant who alien in fee, and the alienee dieth seised, and his heire entreth, the disseisor being within age, now is it in the election of the disseisor to have a writ of dum fuit infra ætatem, or a writ of right against the heire of the alienee, and which writ of them
hee shall chuse, hee ought to recover by the law, &c. And also he may enter into the land without any recovery, and in this case the entrie of the disseisee is taken away.
heire*

* deins age added in L. and M. and Roh.

† le disseisor—d'alienour, L. and M. and Roh.
nor Roh.

‡ le disseisor—l'alienour, in L. and M. and Roh.

§ de not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| &c. not in L. and M.

1744 by the Chancellor D'Aguesseau to all the parliaments and superior councils of France. See Questions concernant les Substitutions, avec les Responses de tous les Parlemens et Cours Souverains du Royaume, et les Observations de M. le Chancelier d'Aguesseau sur les dits Responses. Toulouse, 1770. And see also Commentaire de l'Ordonnance de Louis XV. sur les Substitutions, par Mons. Furgole. Paris, 1767.

It is hoped, that the importance of the subject, and the want of a comprehensive and systematic treatise upon it, will be thought a sufficient apology for the great length of the foregoing note. Lord chief-baron Gilbert's Essay upon Uses and Trusts, considered in the only light in which it can be considered with justice to its author, as an unfinished sketch, is intitled to great commendation. It certainly contains several most profound and learned observations, but in many instances is very defective and erroneous.

In a future part of this work an attempt will be made to explain the leading points of the doctrine of trusts. --- The suspension and extinction of powers; --- the destruction of contingent remainders; --- and the difference between the operations of feoffments, fines, common recoveries, bargains and sales, releases, and wills, will be considered in a note on the chapter of Discontinuance.

*beire del alienee, et puis le disseisor porta briefe de droit envers l'heire d'alienee, et il joynele mise sur le mere droit, &c. le graunde assise doit trouver per la ley, que le tenant ad plus mere droit * que ad le disseisor, † &c. pur ceo que le tenant ad le droit le disseise per son release, lequel est plus ancien et plus mere droit: car per tiel leas tout le droit le disseisee passa a le tenant, et est en le tenant. Et a ceo que ascuns ont dit, que en tiel case lou home que ad droit al terres ou tenements (mes son entrie n'est pas congeable) s'il releffa al tenant ‡ tout son droit, &c. que tiel release urera per voy d'extinguishment. Quant a ceo il puit estre dit, que ceo est § voyer quant a ce luy que releffa; car per son release il ad luy demise || quietment de ¶ son droit, quant a son person, mes uncore  le droit que il avoit bien poit passer a le tenant per son release. Car inconvenient serroit que tiel ancien droit serroit extinct tout ousterment, &c. car il est communement dit, que*

&c. But in this case if the disseisee release his right to the heire of the alienee, and after the disseisor bringeth a writ of right against the heire of the alienee, and hee joyne the mise upon the meere right, &c. the great assise ought to finde by the law, that the tenant hath more meere right than the disseisor, &c. for that the tenant hath the right of the disseisee by his release, the which is the most ancient and most meere right: for by such release all the right of the disseisee passeth to the tenant, and is in the tenant. And to this some have said, that in this case where a man which hath right to lands or tenements (but his entrie is not congeable) if he release to the tenant all his right, &c. that such release shal enure by way of extinguishment. As to this it may bee said, that this is true as to him which releaseth; for by his release hee hath dismissed himselfe quite of his right as to his person, but yet the right which hee hath may well passe to the tenant by his release. For it should bee inconvenient that such an ancient right should bee extinct altogether, re-enter he shall detain the land for ever, and the feoffee shall not maintaine any writ of right; for a bare right shall never be left in the feoffee, but shall ever follow the possession, as hath beene said: but if the disseisee entreth upon the heire of the disseisor, and make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entreth for the condition broken before the heire of the disseisor enter, hee is restored to his right againe.

A man maketh a gift in taile, the remainder in fee, tenant in taile dieth without issue, an estranger intrude, and he in the remainder brings a formedon, and recovereth by default, and maketh a feoffment in fee, the intruder reverse the recoverie in a writ of disseit and entreth, he shall detain the land for ever, and the feoffee shall not have a writ of right.

And so likewise if a disseisor die seised and a stranger abate, and the disseisee release to him, the heire of the disseisor shall enter and detain the land for ever. For the right to the possession shall draw the right of the land to it, and shall not leave a right in him to whom the release is made, as hath beene said before in the 447. Section.

Le droit del disseisee passa al tenant, et est en le tenant.

For seeing the tenant hath the whole fee simple, he is capable of the whole right of the disseisee, and, as Littleton here saith, the right is in the tenant.

Inconvenient serroit. Here againe, as hath beene often observed, an argument ab inconvenienti is forcible in law; and that judges by the authoritie of our author are to judge of inconveniences as of things unlawfull, as hereby and by

(Ant. 266. a.)
38. E. 3. 16. 24. H. 8. Restore al primer action. 5.
Vide Sect. 447.

9. H. 7. 24.

9. H. 7. 24.

Vide Sect. 87. 138. 139. 231.
269. 440. 722.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
§ voyer—verite, L. and M. and Roh.
L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| quietment not in L. and M. nor Roh.—nettement, MSS.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

 le droit que il avoit bien poit passer a le tenant per son release, not in the Vell. MS. but omitted most probably through mistake.

by many other places it ap-peareth.

Un droit ne poit rier.

pas morier. Dormit ali-

quando jus, moritur nunquam. For of such an high estimation is right in the eye of the law, as the law preserveth it from death and destruction: trodden downe it may bee, but never trodden out. For where it hath beene said, that a release of right doth in some cases enure by way of extinguishment; it is so to be understood, either (as Littleton doth here) in respect of him that makes the release, or in respect that by construction of law it enureth not alone to him to whom it is made, but to others also who be estrangers to the release, which, as hath beene said, is a qualitie of an inheritance extinguished.

As if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant maketh a lease for life, the remainder in fee, if the lord release to the tenant for life, the rent is wholly extinguished, and he in the remainder shall take benefit thereof; even so when the heire of a disseisor is disseised, and the disseisor make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, if the first disseisee release to the tenant for life, this is said to enure by way of extinguishment, for that it shall enure to him in the remainder, who is a stranger to the release; and yet in truth the right is not extinct, but doth follow the possession, viz. the tenant for life hath it during his time, and he in the remainder to him and to his heires, and the right of the inheritance is in him in the remainder; for a right to land cannot die or be extinct in deed; and therefore if, after the death of tenant for life, the heire of the disseisor bring a writ of right against him in the remainder, and he joine the mise upon the meere right, it shall be found for him, because in judgment of law he hath by the said release the right of the first disseisee.

Sect. 479.

24. H. 8. fol. 5. 6. 11. H. 7. 25.
30. H. 6. tit. barre, 39. 38. E. 3.
20.

HERE Littleton putteth a diversity betwene releases which enure by way of extinguishment against all persons, and whereof all persons may take advantage, and releases which in respect of some persons enure by way of extinguishment, and of other persons by way of mitter le droit: or betwene releases which in deed enure by extinguishment, for that hee to whom the release is made cannot have the thing released, and releases which, having some quality of such releases, are said to enure by way of extinguishment, but in troth doe not, for that he to whom the release is made may receive and take the thing released. And here Littleton putteth cases where releases do absolutely enure by extinguishment without exception, having respect to all persons. And first of the lord and tenant: secondly, of the rent-charge: thirdly, of the common of pasture.

MES releases que enurera per voy d'extinguishment envers tous persons, sont lou celui a que le releas est fait, ne poit aver ceo que a luy est releas. Si come si soyent seignior et tenant, et le seignior releas al tenant tout le droit que il ad en la seigniorie, ou tout le droit que il ad en le terre, &c. tiel releas va per voy de extinguishment envers tous persons, pur ceo que le tenant ne poit aver *service pur prender de luy mesme.

BUT releases which enure by way of extinguishment (1) against all persons, are where hee to whom the release is made, cannot have that which to him is released. As if there bee lord and tenant, and the lord release to the tenant all the right which hee hath in the seigniorie, or all the right which he hath in the land, &c. this release goeth by way of extinguishment against all persons, because that the tenant cannot have service to receive of himselfe.

Sect. 480.

FIRST, of the lord and tenant, and the lord release to the tenant his seigniorie,

EN mesme le maner est de re-

IN the same manner is it of a release leas

* service pour prender—ceo, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Here Littleton returns to releases by extinguishment. See ant. 263.

*leas fait al tenant del terre de un rent-charge ou common de pasture, &c. pur ceo que le tenant ne poit aver ceo que a luy est releffe, &c. issint tiels releases urera * per extinguishment en tous voyes.*

made to the tenant of the land of a rent-charge or common of pasture, &c. because the tenant cannot have that which to him is released, &c. so such releases shall enure by way of extinguishment in all wayes.

this must of necessity enure by way of extinguishment to all men; for the tenant cannot have service to be taken of himselfe, nor one man can be both lord and tenant. The second is of a rent-charge; a man cannot have land and a rent issuing out of the same land. Thirdly, a man cannot have land and a common of pasture issuing out of the same land, et sic de ceteris. For in all these cases and the like he to whom the release is made cannot have and enjoy the thing that is released. But in the case of the right of the land, the tenant of the land may take and enjoy it for strengthening his estate therein.

The mesne being a feme entermarrie with the tenant peravale, if the lord release to the feme, the feignorie only is extinct; but if hee release to the husband, both feignorie and mesnaltie are extinct. And in this case, if the lord release to the husband and wife, it is a question how the release shall enure; but it is no question but that a release may be made to a mesnaltie or a feignory suspended in part of the estate.

But here observe a diversity where a release enureth by way of extinguishment of an inheritance, which is in possession and may be granted over, and a release of a right, or an action to lands which cannot be granted over. [r] For the lord may release his feignorie to the tenant of the land for life or in taile, et sic de ceteris. But so cannot one release a right or an action; for if it be released but for an houre, it is extinct for ever, as hath bene said.

And two things are to be observed here. First, that by the release of all the right in the land the feignorie is extinct, as well as by the release of all the right in the feignorie, for the feignorie issueth out of the land. Secondly, that by the release of all his right in the feignorie or the land, the whole feignorie is extinct without any words of inheritance. If the tenancie be given to a lord and to a stranger, and to the heires of the stranger, the lord release to his companion all the right in the land, this release doth not onely passe his estate in the tenancie, but extinguisheth also his right in the feignorie, and so one release enures to extinguish severall rights in one and the same land.

If there be lord and tenant by fealty and rent, the lord granteth the feignorie for yeares, and the tenant attorneth, the lord releaseth his feignorie to the tenant for yeares, and to the tenant of the land generally, the whole feignorie is extinct, and the state of the lessee also. But if the release had bene to them and their heires, then the lessee had had the inheritance of the one moitie, and the other moitie had bene extinct. And the reason of this diversity is, because when the release is made generally, it can enure to the lessee but for life, because it enureth by way of enlargement of estate, and being made to the tenant of the land, it enureth by way of extinguishment, as Littleton here saith, and then there cannot remaine a particular estate in the feignorie for life. But when the release is made to them and their heires, each one takes a moitie, the one by way of encreasing of the state, and the other by extinguishment.

Sect. 481.

ITEM, de prover que le graund assise doit passer pur le demandant, en le case avantdit, jeo aye oye sovent † la lecture de l'estatute

ALSO, to prove that the graund assise ought to passe for the demandant, in the case aforesaid, I have often heard the reading of the statute of West. 2.

JE O aye oye sovent la lecture de West. 2. Here it is to be observed, of what authoritie antient lectures or readings upon statutes were, for that they had five excellent qualities. First, they declared what the common law

* per extinguishment en tous voyes, — toutz faitz per voie d'extientissement envers toutes persons, L. and M. and Roh.
† en added L. and M. and Roh.

law was before the making of the statute, as here it appeareth. Secondly, they opened the true sense and meaning of the statute. Thirdly, their cases were briefe, having at the most one poynt at the common law, and another upon the statute. Fourthly, plaine and perspicuous, for then the honour of the reader was to excell others in authorities, arguments, and reasons for prooffe of his opinion, and for confutation of the objections against it. Fifthly, they read, to suppress subtile inventions to creepe out of the statute. But now readings having lost the said former qualities, have lost also their former authorities: for now the cases are long, obscure, and intricate, full of new conceits, liker rather to riddles than lectures, which when they are opened they vanish away like smoke, and the readers are like to lapwings, who seeme to bee neere their nests when they are farthest from them, and all their studie is to find nice evasions out of the statute.

By the authority of Littleton, antient readings may be cited for prooffe of the law; but new readings have not that honour, for that they are so obscure and darke.

L'estatute de W. 2. Which is the third chapter.

Le remainder ouster en fee. Here is to be observed, that although the statute speaketh of a reversion [a], yet by the authority of Littleton a remainder is within the statute.

See the statute of 14. Eliz. cap. 8. which provideth fully for him in the remainder.

Feint action. Feint is a participle of the French word feindre, which is to feigne or falsly pretend, so as a feint action is a false action.

N'avoit aucun remede devant l'estatute. [b] Here it appeareth by Littleton, that if a man maketh a lease for life, the remainder in fee, and tenant for life suffereth a recovery by default, that he in the remainder should not have a formedon by the common law: for Littleton saith, that he hath not any remedy before the statute. Neither is there any such writ in that case in the Register, albeit in some bookes mention is made of such a writ.

Sect. 482.

38. E. 3. 3. Tit. Juris Utrum 1.

H E R E a disseisin gotten by wrong, and defeated by the entrie of him that right hath, is sufficient to maintaine a writ of right against the recoveror in this case, for albeit

M E S si celuy en le remainder BUT if he in the remainder had entered upon the tenant der ust enter sur le ed upon the tenant tenant a terme de vie, for life, and disseised et luy disseisist, et apres him, and after the tele

^a mesme not in L. and M. nor Roh. † a une home— al tenant, L. and M. and Roh. ‡ le tenant not in L. and M. nor Roh.

[a] 24. E. 3. 35. 28. E. 3. 96.
18. E. 2. Entrie 74.
3. E. 2. Entrie 7. 6. E. 3. 24.
7. E. 3. Ent. 62. 7. E. 3. 54, 55.
15. E. 4. 15. F. N. B. 217. d.
Register 241.

[b] W. 2. cap. 5.
Vide 34. E. 3. Formdon 31.
21. E. 3. ibid. 31. 8. E. 3. 59.
F. N. B. 217. d. 7. H. 7. 13.

*le tenaunt entra sur luy, et apres le tenant a terme de vie per tiel recovery per-de per default et morust, ore celuy en le remainder bien poit aver brieve de droit envers celuy que recovera, pur ceo que le mise sera joine sole-ment sur le mere droit,
Ec. Uncore en cest case, le seisin de celuy en le remainder fuit defeat per entree del
tenant a terme de vie.
Mes peradventure ascuns vellent argue et dire, que il n'avera brieve de droit en cest case, pur ceo que quant le mise est joine, il est joine entiel maner, (scilicet) si le tenant ad plus mere droit en le terre en le maner come il tyent, que le demandant ad en le maner come il demanda, et pur ceo que le seisin del demandant fuit defeat per l'entry de le tenant a terme de vie, Ec. don-que il ad nul droit en le maner come il demaund.*

required a more actuall seisin, and a seisin to maintaine a writ of right. And hereby also are the (Ec.) in this Section explained.

nant enter upon him, and after the tenaunt for life by such recovery lose by default and die, now he in the remainder may well have a writ of right against him which recovers, because the mise shal be joined only upon the mere right, &c. Yet in this case the seisin of him in the remainder was defeated by the entry of the tenant for life. But peradventure some will argue and say, that hee shall not have a writ of right in this case, for that when the mise is joined, it is joined in this manner, (scilicet) if the tenaunt hath more mere right in the land in the manner as he holdeth, than the demandant hath in the maner as hee demandeth, and for that the seisin of the demandant was defeated by the entry of the tenant for term of life, &c. then he hath no right in the maner as he demandeth.

the seisin is defeated betweene the lessee for life and him in the remainder, yet having regard to the recoveror, who is a meere stranger, and hath no title, it is sufficient against him. But otherwise it is against the party himselfe that defeated the seisin, and the law is prone to give remedie to him that right hath. And where some have thought, that there is no authority in law to warrant Littleton's opinion herein, they are greatly mistaken, for Littleton hath good warrant for all that he hath written.

Lands are letten to A. for life, the remainder to B. for life, the remainder to the right heirs of A. A. dieth, B. entreth and dieth, a stranger intrudeth, the heire of A. shall have a writ of right of the seisin which A. had as tenant for life.

Lands are letten to A. and B. and to the heirs of A. A. dyeth, a recovery is had against B. the heire of A. shall have a writ of right of the whole, for every joyntenant is seised per my et per tout.

If lands be given in taylor, the remainder to A. in fee, the donee dyeth without issue, his wife privement enseint, A. entreth, the issue is borne and entreth upon him and dyeth without issue, A. shall have a writ of right, of the seisin which he had.

If lands be given in taylor to A. the remainder to his right heirs, A. dieth without issue, the collateral heire of A. shall have a writ of right of the seisin of A.

And so note a diversity betweene a seisin to cause possessionis fratris, &c. for there is

7. E. 3. 6. 38. E. 3. 37.
tit. Jur. Utr. 1.

(Post. 315. a.)

(Ant. 184. a. b.)

4. E. 3. 16. 17.

(Ant. 14. b. 15. a.)
40. E. 3. 8. 42. E. 3. 20.
37. Af. 4. 24. E. 4. 24. 7. H. 5. 4.
11. H. 4. 11.

Sect. 483.

A CEO poit estre dit, que ceux parols (modo et formâ prout, &c.) in mults des cases sont prout, Ec.) TO this it may bee said, that these words (modo et formâ in many cases are words parols *parols de forme de pleder, et ne-my parols de substance. Car si home port briefe d'entre in casu proviso, del alienation fait per le tenant en dower a son disinherit-tance, et counta del alienation fait en fee, et le tenant dit, que il ne aliena pas en le manner come le demaundant ad declare, et sur ceo sont a issue, et trove est per verdict, que le tenant alyenast en le taile, ou pur terme d'auter vie, le demaundant recovers: uncore l'alienation ne fuit en le manner come le demaundant avoit declare,

&c.*

(Yelv. 148. Hob. 73. 105.)
(6. Rep. 24.)

[c] 9. H. 6. 1. 40. E. 3. 35.
21. E. 4. 22. F. N. B. 206. g.
40. E. 3. 5. 32. H. 8. issue.
Br. 80. Vid. Sect. sequent.

12. E. 4. 4.
(Doc. Pla. 175. 199. 344. 345.)

of forme of pleading, and not words of substance. For if a man bring a writ of entrie in casu proviso, of the alienation made by the tenant in dower to his disinherit-tance, and counteth of the alienation made in fee, and the tenant saith, that he did not alien in maner as the demaundant hath declared, and upon this they are at issue, and it is found by verdict, that the tenant aliened in taile, or for tearme of another man's life, the demandant shall recover: yet the alienation was not in manner as the demaundant hath declared, &c.

WHERE modo et forma are of the substance of the issue, and where but words of forme, this diversity is to be observed. [c] Where the issue taken goeth to the point of the writ or action, there modo et forma are but words of forme, as here in the case of the writ of entrie in casu proviso, and so is the (&c.) well explained in this Section. But otherwise it is when a collateral point in pleading is traversed; as if a feoffment be alleadged by two, and this is traversed modo et forma, and it is found the feoffment of one, there modo et forma is materiall. So if a feoffment be pleaded by deed, and it is traversed absque hoc quod feoffavit modo et forma upon this collateral issue, modo et forma are so essentiall, as the jury cannot find a feoffment without deed.

Sect. 484.

Vid. Sect. preced.
(8. Co. 89. Sid. 15.)

10. E. 4. 7. 8. E. 4. 15.
20. E. 4. 3. 21. E. 4. 3.
Merlebr. cap. 3.

(Doc. Pla. 191. 344.)

(9. Rep. 33.)

*TROVE est per verdict, que il
tient per fealtie tantum.* Here is another diversitie to be observed: That albeit the issue bee upon a collaterall point, yet if by the finding of part of the issue, it shall appeare to the court that no such action lieth for the plain-tiffe no more than if the whole had been found, there modo et forma
are but words of forme, as here in the case which Littleton putteth of the lord and tenant ap-peareth.

*Car le matter
del issue est lequel il
tient de luy ou nemy,
&c.*

Here it appeareth, that

*AUXR, si soient seig-nior et tenant, et le tenant tient del seignior per fealtie solement, * et le seignior distreine le tenant pur rent, et le tenant porta briefe de trespas envers son seignior de ses avers issint prises, et le seignior plede que le tenant tient de luy per fealtie et certain rent, et pur le rent arere il vient a distreiner, &c.
et demaunde judgement
de briefe port vers luy, quare vi et armis, &c.
et l'auter dit, que il ne tient de luy en le maner come il suppose, et sur*

ALSO, if there bee
lord and tenant, and the tenant hold of the lord by fealty only, and the lord distreine the tenant for rent, and the tenant bringeth a writ of trespasse against his lord for his cattell so taken, and the lord plead that the tenant holds of him by fealty and certaine rent, and for the rent behinde he came to distreine, &c.
and demand judgement of the writ brought against him, quare vi et armis, &c. and the other saith, that hee doth not ceo

* et—si, L. and M. and Roh.

ce sont a issue, et treuve est per verdict que il tient de luy per fealtie tantum; en cest case le briefe abatera, et uncore il ne tient de luy en le maner come le seignior avoit dit. Car le matter de l'issue est, lequel le tenant tient de luy ou nemy; car s'il tient de luy, coment que le seignior distreina le tenant pur auter services que ne doit aver, uncore tiel briefe de trespasse, quare vi et armis, &c. ne gist envers le seignior, mes terra abate.

quare vi et armis, &c. doth not lie against the lord, but shall abate.

he pleadeth that in his visitation he deprived him as ordinary, and it is found that he deprived him as patron, the ordinary shall have judgement, for the deprivation is the substance of the matter.

The lessee covenant with the lessor not to cut downe any trees, &c. and bind himself in a bond of forty pounds for performance of covenants, the lessee cut downe ten trees, the lessor bringeth an action of debt upon the bond, and assigneth a breach that the lessee cutteth downe twenty trees, whereupon issue is joined, and the jury finde that the lessee cut downe ten, judgement shall be given for the plaintife; for sufficient matter of the issue is found for the plaintife.

hold of him in the manner as he suppose, and upon this they are at issue, and it is found by verdict that he holdeth of him by fealty onely; in this case the writ shall abate, and yet hee doth not hold of him in the manner as the lord hath said. For the matter of the issue is, whether the tenant holdeth of him or no; for if hee holdeth of him, although that the lord distreine the tenant for other services which he ought not to have, yet such writ of trespasse doth not lie against the

if the matter of the issue be found, it is sufficient. And this rule holds in criminall causes. For if A. be appealed, or indicted of murder, viz. that hee of malice prepened killed I. A. pleadeth that he is not guilty modo et forma, yet the jury may find the defendant guiltie of manslaughter without malice prepened, because the killing of I. is the matter, and malice prepened is but a circumstance.

In assise of darreine presemment, if the plaintife alleage the avoydance of the church by privation, and the jury find the avoydance by death, the plaintife shall have judgment; for the manner of voydance is not the title of the plaintife, but the voydance is the matter.

[d] If a gardeine of an hospitall bring an assise against the ordinary, whereupon issue is taken, (Doc. Plz. 191. Ant. 227.

2. Roll. Abr. 704. 708.
Sid. 5. Hob. 18. 73. 81.
Doc. Plz. 355. 344. 345.)
Pl. Com. 101.

(9. Rep. 348. 1. Cro. 14. 18.
Haw. P. C. 266.)

6. E. 3. 41. b. 25. E. 3. 50.
9. H. 7. 3. 13. H. 7. 14.
29. E. 3. 38.
(Sid. 21. 22.)

(Doc. Plz. 348.)

[d] 8. E. 3. 70. 8. Aff. 29. & 39.
9. E. 3. 338. 24. E. 3. 34.
5. H. 4. 2. 7. H. 4. 11.
Pl. Com. 92. 3. Mar. Dier 116.
40. E. 3. 35.
Dier 2. & 3. Ph. & Mar. 115. b.
Trin. 22. Eliz. Rot. 920. Wol-man's case. 41. E. 3. 28.
34. Aff. 3. 30. Aff. 5.
35. E. 3. verdict 27.
22. E. 3. 1. b. 18. E. 3. 48.
31. E. 3. account 58. 28. Aff. 43.
(2. Roll. Abr. 704. 719.)

Sect. 485.

*AUXRY, * en briefe de trespasse de batterie, ou des biens emports, si le defendand plede de rien culpable, en le maner come le plaintife suppose, et treuve est que le defendand est culpable en auter ville, ou a auter jour que le plaintife suppose, uncore il recovers.*

A L S O, in a writ of trespasse for batterie, or for goods carried away, if the defendand plead not guiltie, in manner as the plaintife suppose, and it is found that the defendand is guiltie in another towne, or at another day than the plaintife supposes, yet hee shall recover.

EN briefe de trespasse de batterie, et des biens emports, &c.

(11. Rep. 5.)

Here Littleton speaketh of actions brought for things transitory. In which cases the wrong being done in one towne, the plaintife may not only alledge it in another towne, as Littleton here saith, but also in another county, and the jurors upon not guilty pleaded are bound to find for the plaintife.

Neither can the assault, battery, or taking of goods, &c. alledged in another county, be traversed without speciall cause

(7. Rep. 2. b. 2. Roll. Abr. 688.
Doc. Plz. 93. 369. 386.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 335. Hob. 103. 104.
Doc. Plz. 367. 5. Rep. 77.)

* en—un, L. and M. and Roll.

(1. Rep. 1. 396. 6. Rep. 6. b.)

(Doc. Pla. 367. 2. Cro. 45. 372.
Noy 57. 3. Cro. 353. Doc.
Pla. 361.)

(1. Leo. 39. Sid. 234. 294.
3. Rep. 52. b. Ant. 145. b.
Dor. Pla. 43. 2. Sid. 118.
Cro. El. 99.)

Trin. 30. Eliz. in the king's bench, betwene Inglebert and Jones. And herewith agreeth a judgement in the court of com.
pleas, Pasch. 38. Eliz. Rot. 1656.

[c] 18. E. 3. 1.
(1. Cro. 105. Ant. 72. Mo. 350.
2. Cro. 372.)
[f] 2. H. 4. 18. 31. E. 3.
Gager. deliver. 5.
[*] 42. Aff. 12. 4. E. 3. ca. 5.
18. E. 3. ca. 1. & ca. 6.
4. H. 4. ca. 2.
[d] Li. 6. fo. 46. 47. Dowdale's calc. 3. E. 3. Aff. 446. 27. E. 3.
86. 1. Aff. 16. 3. Aff. 4.
6. Aff. 4. 5. Aff. 7. 18. E. 3. 38.
21. Aff. 8. 29. Aff. 5. 44. E. 3. 6. b.
14. H. 4. 35. 5. H. 5. 2.
10. H. 6. 13. 21. H. 6. 51.
27. H. 6. 2. 7. E. 4. 45.
18. E. 4. 1. 22. E. 4. 19.
13. H. 7. 17. 2. Mar. Br. at-taint. 104. 10. Eliz. Dier 171.
[i] 19. H. 6. 48. 11. H. 6. 16.
4. E. 3. 23. b. 46. E. 3. 3. a.
9. H. 6. 62. 21. H. 6. 27.
14. H. 8. 24. 18. E. 4. 1.
20. H. 6. 2. 34. H. 6. 42.
14. H. 6. 21. 22. 4. H. 6. 13.
3. H. 6. 25. 12. E. 4. 12.
28. H. 8. Dier. 29.
21. E. 4. 19. 80. 27. H. 8. 19.
12. H. 8. 1. 11. H. 4. 65.
19. H. 8. 6.
(Hob. 134. 1. Leo. 301. Cro.
Car. 514. Cro. Ja. 366.)

cause of justification which extendeth to some certaine place; as if a constable of a towne in another county arrest the body of a man that breaketh the peace, there he may traverse the county (but he must not rest there) but all other places saving in the towne whereof hee is constable. And so it is of taking of goods, if the defendant jus-tific for damage feasant in another county, he must traverse as before. But where the cause of the justification is not restrained to a certaine place, that is so locall as it cannot be alledged in any other town, as in the cases before alledged, and the like, then albeit the action bee brought in a forraigne coun-tie, yet he must alledge his justification in the county where the action is brought.

As if a man be beaten in the county of Middlesex, and hee bringeth his action in the county of Buck, the defendant cannot pleade that the plaintife assaulted him in the county of Midd. &c. and traverse the county; but he must pleade his justification in the county of Buck, for that the cause of his justification is good in any place.
And so it is in case of bailement of goods, and other cases for transitory things; as for example.

In an action upon the case the plaintife declared for speaking of slanderous words, which is transitory, and laid the words to be spoken in London, the defendant pleaded a concord for speaking of words in all the counties of England, saving in London, and traversed the speaking of the words in London: the plaintife in his replication denied the concord, whereupon the defendant demurred, and judgment was given for the plaintife. For the court said, that if the concord in that case should not be traversed, it would follow, that by a new and subtil invention of pleading, an ancient principle in law (that for transitorie causes of action the plaintife might alledge the same in what place or county he would) should be subverted, which ought not to be suffered; and therefore the judges of both courts allowed a traverse upon a traverse in that case: and the wisdom of the judges and sages of the law have alwayes suppressed new and subtil inventions in derogation of the common law. And therefore the judges say in one booke [c], We will not change the law which alwayes hath been used. And another saith [f], It is better that it be turned to a default, than the law should be changed, or any innovation made.

A man did grant a rent, with a new invented clause of distress, viz. that the grantee should hold the distress against gages and pledges; and yet by the whole court he shall gage deliverance, for otherwise by this new invention all replevies shall be taken away.

[*] See many other new inventions in derogation of the common law disallowed by the judges, and by the court of parliament.

[b] Where the jury is bound to finde aswell locall things in many cases as transitory in other counties, see at large in my Reports.

By this which hath bene said you shall know the law as it is now in use in these cases, and the better understand our [i] books, when you shall reade them concerning as well locall as transitory things, wherein you shall finde great variety of opinion in our bookes.

Si le defendant plead de rien culpable. This is a good issue, if the defendant committed no battery at all; but regularly by the common law if the defendant hath cause of justification or excuse, then can he not pleade not guilty, for then upon the evidence it shall be found against him, for that he confesseth the battery, and upon that issue cannot justifie it, but he must pleade the speciall matter, and confesse and justifie the battery.

The like law is in other cases, and therefore this is a learning necessary to be knowne, for that the losse of most causes dependeth thereupon. As if in battery the defendant may justifie the same to be done of the plaintife's owne assault, he must pleade it specially, and must not pleade the generall issue, and so of the like. In trespass of breaking his close, upon not guilty
he

*Et * issint en † plusors autres cas ceux parols, scilicet, en le maner come le demaundant ou le plaintife ad supposé, ne font ascun † matter de substance del issue: car en brieve de droit, lou le mise est joyne sur le mere droit, il est a tant a dire, et a tiel effect, scilicet, lequel ad plus mere droit, le tenant ou le demaundant al chose en demand.*

And so in many other cases these words, viz.
in manner as the demandant or the plaintife hath supposed, do not make any matter of substance of the issue:
for in a writ of right,
where the mise is joyned upon the meere right, that is as much as to say, and to such effect, viz. whether the tenant or demaundant hath more meere right to the thing in demand.

* issint not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† moltes added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ matter—manner, L. and M. and Roh.

he cannot give in evidence, that the beasts came thorow the plaintife's hedge, which he ought to keep, nor upon the generall issue justifie by reason of a rent-charge, common, or the like.

In detinue the defendant pleadeth non detinet, he cannot give in evidence, that the goods were pawned to him for money, and that it is not paid, but must pleade it; but he may give in evidence a gift from the plaintife, for that proveth he detaineth not the plaintife's goods.

[d] So in an action of waste, upon the plea nul wast fait, he may give in evidence any thing that proveth it no waste, as by tempest, by lightening, by enemies, and the like; but he cannot give in evidence justifiable waste, as to repaire the house, or the like. [e] If one doth waste, and before the action brought the lessee repaireth it, and after the lessor bringeth an action of waste, and the lessee pleade quod non fecit wadium, he cannot give in evidence the especiall matter.

If two men be bound in a bond jointly, and the one is sued alone, he may plead this matter in abatement of the writ; but he cannot plead non est factum, for it is his deed, though it be not his sole deed. [f] See in Whelpdale's case, where a man may safely plead non est factum, and where not, and the former books that treat of that matter well reconciled.

[g] Upon plend administravit pleaded by an executour, et issint riens inter maines, if it be proved that he hath goods in his hands which were the testatour's, he may give in evidence that he hath paid to that value of his owne mony, and need not plead it specially. (1)

In an assise, if the tenant plead nul tort nul disseisin, he cannot give in evidence a release after the disseisin; but a release before the disseisin he may, for then there is no disseisin upon the matter.

In a writ of right, if the tenant joyne the mise upon the meere right, he cannot give in evidence a collateral warranty; for he hath not any right by it, and therefore it ought to have been pleaded.

Of this learning you shall reade plentifully in our bookes, and in my Reports. This little taste shall here suffice to make the reader capable of the rest. Regularly whensoever a man doth any thing by force of a warrant or authority, he must plead it.

But all that hath been said must be under two cautions: first, that whensoever a man cannot have advantage of the speciall matter by way of pleading, there he shall take advantage of it in the evidence. For example, the rule of law is, that a man cannot justifie in the killing or death of a man; and therefore in that case, he shall be received to give the especiall matter in evidence, as that it was se defendendo, or in defence of his house in the night against thieves and robbers, or the like.

Secondly, that in any action upon the case, trespassse, battery, or of false imprisonment against any justice of peace, maior, or bailife of city or towne corporate, headborough, port-reve, constable, tithingman, collector of subsidy or fifteen, in any his majesty's courts in Westminster, or elsewhere, concerning any thing by any of them done by reason of any of their offices aforesaid, and all other in their aide or assistance, or by their commandement, &c. they may plead the generall issue, and give the speciall matter for their excuse or justification in evidence.

In an action of trespassse or other suit against any person for taking of any distresse or other act doing by force of the commission of sewers, the defendant in any such action shall and may make avowry, conuſance, or justification generally, that it was done by authority of the commission of sewers for lotte or taxe assessed by that commission, &c. and the plaintife shall reply he did it of his owne wrong without such cause. And both these acts were made for avoiding of prolixity and captiousnesse of pleading, tending to the great charge and danger of officers and ministers of justice, &c. Evidence, evidentia. This word in legall understanding doth not only containe matters of record, as letters patents, fines, recoveries, inrolments, and the like, and writings under seale, as charters and deeds, and other writings without seale, as court rolles, accounts, and the like, which are called evidences instrumenta, but in a larger sense it containeth also testimonia, the testimony of witnesses, and other proofes to be produced and given to a jury, for the finding of any issue joined betweene the parties. And it is called evidence, because thereby the point in issue is to be made evident to the jury. Probationes debent esse evidentes (id est) perspicuae et faciles intelligi. But let us now returne to Littleton.

Ou a auter jour que le plaintife suppose. [b] As if the trespassse were done the fourth of May, and the plaintife alledgeth the same to be done the fifth of May, or the first of May, when no trespassse was done; yet if upon the evidence it falleth out that the trespassse was done before the action brought, it sufficeth: and this is warranted by Littleton, who speaketh indefinitely, that the jury may find the defendant guilty at another day than the plaintife supposeth.

Et a tiel effect. Here is to be observed, that the law of England respecteth the effect

25. H. 8. Br.
(Doc. Pla. 197.)

22. H. 6. 33.
(4. Rep. 33. 2. Roll. Rep. 491.
Foll. 303. 1. Lco. 228.)

[d] 12. H. 8. 1. 19. E. 3.
Walt. 30. 20. E. 3. Walt. 32.
[e] 10. Eliz. Dier 276.
2. Mar. Dier 212.

(1. Sid. 450. Doc. Pla. 198.)

[f] Lib. 5. fo. 119. Whelpdale's case. 7. E. 4. 5. 7. E. 6.
Br. non est fact. 14. 1. H. 7. 15.
14. H. 8. 28. Pl. Com. Dive and Man case. 36. H. 8. Dier 59.
2. Mar. Dier 112. 1. Eliz. Dier 167.

[g] Hill. 10. H. 8. Rot. 323.
in com. banc. et Mich. 6. E. 6. in
com. banco. Bendloes. 7. H. 5. 9.
6. H. 7. 10. 34. E. 3. Droit 29.
9. E. 3. 32. 8. E. 3. 24. 33. E. 3.
Verd. 18. H. 6. 24. 39. H. 6. 38.
18. E. 3. 19. Pl. Com. 81. 173.
21. H. 7. 76. 16. Kielw.

21. E. 4. 11. 22. E. 4. 45.
13. H. 7. 13. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 15.
22. Aff. 55. 37. H. 6. 21.
(Doc. Pla. 198. Ant. 227. a.
Hob. 174. Foll. 303. b.)

7. Ja. ca. 5.

23. H. 8. ca. 5.

[h] 19. H. 6. 47. 5. E. 4. 5.
21. E. 4. 66.
(Cro. Jac. 366. 1. Cro. 501. 514.
515. 228. 229. 2. Cro. 202.
Sid. 308.)

(1) Yet if the matter be pleaded specially, that is not cause of demurrer, though it amounts to the general issue, because it has no colour of matter in law, as was adjudged by justice Walmesley. Hob. 127. Lord Nott. MSS.

effect and substance of the matter, and not every nicety of forme or circumstance: Qui hæret in literis, hæret in cortice, et apices juris non sunt jura.

Sect. 486.

ITEM, si home soit disseise, ALSO, if a man be disseised, and et le disseisor devie seise, the disseisor dyeth seised, &c.
 &c. et son firs et heire est eins and his sonne and heire is in by dis-per discent, et le disseisee en- cent, and the disseisee enter upon ter sur l'heire disseisor, lequel the heire of the disseisor, which entrie est un disseisin, &c. si l'heire entrie is a disseisin, &c. if the port assise, ou brieve * de en- heire bring an assise, or a writ of tre en nature de assise, il reco- entrie in nature of an assise, hee vera. shall recover.

AND the reason hereof is, for that in the writ of right mentioned in the next Section, the charge of the grand assise upon their oath is upon the meere right, and not upon the possession.

Sect. 487.

(Ant. 266. a.)

CAR si le heire
 le disseisor, &c.

Here is a diversity to be observed concerning that which hath been said, when the possession shall draw the right of the land to it, and when not. And therefore when the possession is first, and then a right commeth thereunto, the entry of him that hath right to the possession shall gaine also the right which, as before it appeareth in those cases there put, followeth the possession, and the right of possession draweth the right unto it; but when the right is first, and then the possession commeth to the right, albeit the possession be defeated, (as here in Littleton's case it is by the heire of the disseisor) yet the right of the disseisee remaineth.

6. E. 3. 7.

Vid. Sect. 447.

4. Aff. 1. 10. Aff. 16.

Brieve d'entrie en le per. A. dyeth seised, and the land descendeth to B. his sonne; before he entreth, an estranger abateth and dyeth seised, B. entreth, against whom the heire of the abator recovereth in an assise, B. may have a writ of mort d'an-

MES si l'heire
 port brieve de

droit envers le disseisee, il serra barre, pur ceo que quant le graund assise est jure, leur serement est sur le mere droit, et nemy sur le possession. Car si l'heire le disseisor † fust un assise de novel disseisin, ou brieve d'entrie en nature d'assise, et recoverast vers le disseisee, et fust execution, uncore poit le disseisee aver brieve d'entrie en le per envers luy de le disseisin fait a luy per son pere, ou il poit aver envers l'heire brieve de droit.

BUT if the heyre bring a writ of right against the disseisee, he shall bee barred, for that when the graund assise is sworne, their oath is upon the meere right, and not upon the possession. For if the heyre of the disseisor sue an assise of novel disseisin, or a writ of entrie in nature of an assise, and recover against the disseisee, and sueth execution, yet may the disseisee have a writ of entrie in the per against him, for the disseisin made to him by his father, or he may have against the heire a writ of right.

cesser

* de entre en nature de assise il recovera. Mes si l'heire port (the beginning of next Section) not in L. and M. nor Roh. but in both MSS.

† fust—porta, L. and M. and Roh.

*cefter, and recover the land againſt him. And if the diſſeiſin had beene done to A. &c. then after the recovery in the aſſiſe, B. ſhould have had a writ of entrie in the per, becauſe the heyre that is in by diſcent is in the per.*

Sect. 488.

*MES ſi le heyre doit recover envers le diſſeiſee en le caſe avantdit per brieſe de droit, donque tout ſon droit ſerroit clerement ale, pur ceo que judgement final ſerroit done envers luy, que ſerroit encounter reaſon lou le diſſeiſee ad le plus meere droit,
&c.*

BUT if the heire ought to recover againſt the diſſeiſee in the caſe aforeſaid by a writ of right, then all his right ſhould be cleerely taken away, for that judgement finall ſhall bee given againſt him, which ſhould bee againſt reaſon where the diſſeiſee hath the more meere right.

Judgement final. The forme whereof you ſhall ſee in the laſt Section of this chapter.

Que ſerra encounter reaſon. Argumentum ab inconvenienti.

Vid. Sect. 87. &c.
(Poit. 295. b.)

Sect. 489.

ET ſaches, mon ſits, que en brieſe de droit, apres ceo que les quater chivalers ont eſlie le grand aſſiſe, donques il n'ad plus greinder delay que en un brief de forme-don, apres ceo que les parties ſont a iſſue, &c. Et ſi le miſe ſoit joyne ſur le bataille, donques il ad meindre delay.

AND know (my ſonne) that in a writ of right, after the foure knights have choſen the grand aſſiſe, then he hath no greater delay than in a writ of formedon, after the parties be at iſſue, &c.
And if the miſe bee joyned upon bataille, then hee hath leſſer delay.

BATTLE. See for this word in the laſt Section of this chapter.

(Poit. 294. b.)

Issue, &c. Or demurrer, which is an iſſue in law.

(5. Rep. 104.)

Sect. 490.

*ITEM, releaſe de tout le droit,
&c. en aſcun caſe eſt bone, fait a celui que eſt ſuppoſe tenant en ley, coment que il n'ad riens en les tenements. Sicome en præcipe quod reddat, ſi le tenant aliena la terre pendant le brieſe, et puis le demaundant releſſa a*

ALSO, a releaſe of all the right, (2. Infl. 244.)
&c. in ſome caſe is good, made to him which is ſuppoſed tenant in law, albeit he hath nothing in the tenements. As in a (Ant. 266. 267.)
præcipe quod reddat, if the tenant alien the land hanging the writ, and after the demandant releaſeth luy

luy tout son droit, &c. cel release est bone, pur ceo que il est suppose d'estre tenant per le fuit del demandant, et uncore il n'ad riens en la terre al temps de release fait.

to him all his right, &c. this release is good, for that he is supposed to be tenant by the fuit of the demandant, and yet hee hath nothing in the land at the time of the release made.

Sect. 491.

*EN mesme le manner est si en præcipe quòd reddat le tenant vouche, et le vouchee entre en le garrantie, si apres le demandant releffa al vouchee tout son droit , ceo est assets bone, pur ceo que le vouchee apres ceo que il avoit enter en le garrantie, est tenant en ley al demandant,† &c.

IN the same manner it is in a præcipe quòd reddat the tenant vouch, and the vouchee enters into warranty, if afterward the demandant release to the vouchee all his right, this is good enough, for that the vouchee after he hath entred into warranty, is tenant in law to the demandant, &c.

[47] 10. E. 4. 13. 12. Af. 41.
22. Af. 13. 23. E. 3. 21. 25. E. 3.
40. 38. E. 3. 10. 11. 7. E. 3. 6.
19. E. 3. tit. Resceit. 34. E. 3.
tit. Resceit. 9. E. 4. 16. 39. H. 6.
40. 17. Af. 24. 8. H. 7. 5.
20. Af. 2. 14. E. 3. Procedo 4. 9. E. 3. 17. 32. E. 3.
Quare Imp. 2. Dyer. 17. Eliz.
341. Sect. 447.
* Vi. devant Sect. 447.
(Ante 265. b. 273. a.)

HERE it doth appeare, that there is a tenant in deed and a tenant in law, and Littleton in this and the next Section putteth two examples of tenants in law, viz. (b) the tenant to a præcipe after alienation, and of the vouchee, whereof somewhat hath been said before.

And it is observable, that Littleton saith, that in both cases hee is tenant in law to the demandant, and yet he hath nothing in the land. And therefore if after the vouchee hath entered into warranty, and become tenant in law, an ancestor collaterall of the demandant releaseth to the vouchee with warranty, he shall not plead this against the demandant, for that the release by the estranger is void, which, besides the authorities before vouched, appeareth by Littleton himselfe; * for he saith, that he is tenant in law to the demandant, whereby he excludeth that he is tenant in respect of any estranger.

Sect. 492.

Glan. li. 1. ca. 1. Braët. li. 3.
fo. 101. Brit. fo. 71. Flet. li. 1.
ca. 15. & 16.

Mir. ca. 2. §. 1. Braët. ub. sup.
Flet. li. 1. ca. 1.

NOTA, there be two kind of actions, viz. one that concern the pleas of the crowne, placita coronæ, or placita criminalia; another that concerne common pleas, placita communia, seu civilia. Of that which concerneth pleas of the crowne, Littleton speaketh hereafter in this chapter. Of actions concerning common pleas, Littleton speaketh in this place. And these are threefold (that is to say), reall, personall, and mixt. Placitorum aliud personale, aliud reale, aliud mixtum. Or, Actionum quedam sunt in

ITEM, quant al releases d'actions, realls et personals, il est issint, que ascuns actions sont mixt en le realty et en le personaltie: si come un action de waste sue envers tenant a terme de vie; cest action est ‡ en le realtie, pur ceo que le lieu waste serra recover; et auxy en le realty and in the personaltie: as an action of waste sued against tenant for life; this action is in the realty, because the place wasted shall bee recovered; and also in the personaltie, because

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ en not in L. and M. nor Roh.

*personalitie, pur ceo que treble damages serront recovers pur le * tortious wast fait per le tenant; et pur ceo en cest action un releas d'actions reals est bon plee en barre, et issint est un releas d'actions personals.*

treble damages shall bee recovered for the wrongfull waste done by the tenant; and therefore in this action a release of actions reals is a good plea in barre, and so is a release of actions personals.

rem, quædam in personam, et quædam mixte. And generally, actio is defined, [i] Actio nihil aliud est quam jus prosequendi in judicio quod sibi debetur. Or, Action n'est autre chose que loyall demande de son droit. (Flo. 484)

[k] And by the release of all actions, causes of action be released; but within a submission of all actions to arbitrement, causes of action are not contained. [l] Lib. 8. 153. Altham's case. 35. H. 8. Dier 57. 5. Mar. 217. Vide 36. H. 6. 8. Vid. 42. E. 3. 22. 23. (5. Rep. 8. a. 103. 77. b.)

Tenant pur vie. And so it is if it be brought against tenant for yeares, because it agreeth with the reason of Littleton here rendred, viz. that the place wasted shall be recovered, and therefore foundeth in the realty.

Auxy en le personaltie, pur ceo que treble damages serra recovers, (Cro. Car. 171.) which doe found in the personaltie. Wherefore Littleton concludeth, that in an action mixt a release of all actions reals is a good barre, and so is a release of all actions personals.

And here is to be observed a diversity betweene the act of the party, and an act in law; for a man by his owne act cannot alter the nature of his action; and therefore if the lessee for life or lessee for yeares doe waste, now is an action of waste given to the lessor, wherein he shall recover two things, viz. the place wasted, and treble damages: in this case if the lessor release all actions reals, he shall not have an action of waste in the personalty only; and if he release all actions personals, he shall not have an action of waste in the realty only.

[l] And so it is if the lessee doth waste, and after surrendreth to the lessor his estate, and the lessor accept thereof, the lessor shall not have an action of waste. [l] 19. H. 6. 66. 14. H. 6. 14. 11. R. 2. Wals. 99. 14. H. 8. 14. 23. H. 8. Br. Wals. (5. Rep. 75.) (Noy 118.)

But by act in law the nature of the action may be changed; as if a man make a lease pur terme d'auter vie, and the lessee doth waste, and then cessy que vie dyeth, an action of waste shall lye for damages only, because the other is determined by act in law.

And againe, hereupon is another diversity to be observed, that in case when an action is well begun, and part of the action determineth by act in law, and yet the like action for the residue is given, there the writ shall not abate, but proceed. But where by the determination of part the like action remaineth not for the residue, there the action well commenced shall abate. As if an action of waste be brought against tenant pur terme d'auter vie, and hanging the writ cessy que vie dyeth, the writ shall not abate, but the plaintife shall recover damages only, because if cessy que vie had died before any action brought, the lessor might have an action of waste for the damages. So if an ejectione firme be brought, and the terme incurreth hanging the action, yet the action shall proceed for damages only, because an ejectione doth lye after the terme for damages only. But if tenant pur auter vie bring an assise, and cessy que vie dyeth hanging the writ, albeit the writ were well commenced, yet the writ shall abate, because no assise can be maintainable for damages only.

So if an action of waste be brought by baron and fem in remainder, in especiall tayle, and hanging the writ the wife dieth without issue, the writ shall abate, because every kind of action of waste must be ad exheredationem. 2. H. 4. 22. 6. E. 2. briefe 807. (Ant. 53. b. Flo. 18. b.)

If a writ of annuity be brought, and the annuity determineth hanging the writ, the writ faileth for ever, because no like action can be maintained for the arrerages only, but for the annuity and arrerages. 34. H. 6. 10. 9. E. 4. 39. 14. H. 7. 31. 18. E. 3. Scire facias 10. (Wm. Jones 215. Cro. Car. 171. 5. Rep. 48. b.)

But where damages only are to be recovered, there albeit by act in law the like action lyeth not afterwards, yet the action well commenced shall proceed; [m] as if a conspiracy be brought against two, and one of them dyeth hanging the writ, it shall proceed. [m] 22. R. 2. briefe 888. 18. E. 4. 1. (Doc. Pla. 47.)

And in an assise of novel disseisin, a writ of annuity, quare impedit, and other mixt actions (1), a release of actions reals is a good plea, and so it is of a release of actions personals. (Ray. 18. 1. and 176. S. C.)

But if three joyntenants be disseised, and they arraigne an assise, and one of them release to the disseisor all actions personals, this shall barre him, but it shall not barre the other plaintife; for having regard to them the realty shall bee preferred, et omne majus trahit ad se minus dignum. [n] And in a writ of ward brought by two, the release of the one shall not grieve the other, but shall enure to his benefit, for he shall recover the whole ward, and hold his companion out. (1. Saun. 228. S. C. 1. Vent. 12. & 18. 2. H. 4. 13. 9. H. 6. 57. Mo. 133. contra.)

But here a diversity is to be observed betweene reall actions, wherein damages are to bee reco- 30. H. 4. Barre 59. (2. Roll. Abr. 411. 2. Co. 68. a. Ant. 197. b.)

* tortious wast—tort et wast, L. and M. and Reh.

(1) 5. Car. B. R. Sir John Bodvill's case. Resolved contra; scilicet, that it was a mere personal action, and not mixt; et ideo, annuity in Wales by bill lies well; where, if it had been mixt, the action ought to have been brought by original, per 34. H. 8. ca. 6. upon argument by the court on error brought. Cro. 170. L. Nott. MSS.

[e] Merton cap. 1. in dower.
Gloc. cap. 1.

recovered at the common law, as in an assise, &c. and reall actions where damages are not to be recovered by the common law, but are given by the [e] statute, for there a release of all actions personals is no barre; as in the writ of dower, entrie sur disseisin in le per, &c. mord'anc', aiel, &c.

* Sect. 493.

(5. Rep. 97.)

ET en quare impedit, un releas d'actions personals est bone plea, et issint est un release d'actions reals, per Martin, quod fuit concessum. Hill. 9. H. 6. 57.

AND in a quare impedit, a release of actions personals is a good plea, and so is a release of actions reals, per Martin, quod fuit concessum. Hill. 9. H. 6. fol. 57.

9. H. 6. 57.
22. H. 6. 27. b.

THIS is an addition to Littleton, which although it be law, and the booke truly cited, yet I passe it over. But yet note by the way, that a release of actions personals is also a good barre in a quare impedit, because it is an action mixt.

Sect. 494.

(Post. 303. b.)
(1. Roll. Rep. 36. 57.)
(Ant. 180. b.)
(Hob. 103.)

[e] 11. Aff. 9. 18. E. 3. 2.
23. 24. 31. E. 3. quare
imp. 161. 7. E. 3. 5. 9. E. 3. 6.
39. E. 3. 30. 22. E. 3. 2.
13. H. 4. 7. 3. E. 2. quare
imp. 44. 38. E. 3. 30. 31.
5. F. 3. 26. 21. E. 3. 16. 17.
5. H. 7. 54. 8. H. 5. 14.
22. H. 6. 28. 29. 1. H. 7. 34.
27. E. 3. 81. 32. H. 6. 15. b.
17. Aff. 25. 2. H. 7. 14.
13. H. 8. 13. 14. 44. E. 3. 12.
46. E. 3. 13. 16. E. 4. 11.
24. E. 3. 31. 4. E. 4. 18.
7. H. 4. 34. 2. R. 2. encumbent. 4. 33. E. 3. quare imp.
194.
(8. Rep. 151. b.)
(Sect. 278)

13. H. 4. 2. 2.
(7. Rep. 26. 2.)

(Sect. 471.)

(10. Rep. 51. b.)

[7] 10. H. 6. 22. 2.
(2. Rep. 152.)

LE disseisor bien poet pleder, &c.

Nota, every man shall plead such pleas as are proper for him, and apt for his defence to be pleaded. [7] As a disseisor that hath nothing in the land may pleade a release of actions personals, because damages are to be recovered against him, and therefore for his defence hee may plead it; but a release of actions reals he cannot plead (1), because he hath no estate in the land, and none shall plead a release of actions reals in an assise, but the tenant of the land. Et sic de ceteris. But the tenant in an assise shall plead a release of actions personals to the disseisor, for that plea proveth that the plaintife hath no cause of action against him.

If the disseisee release to the disseisor all actions reals, and the disseisor maketh a feoffment in fee, and an assise is brought against them, the feoffee shall not plead the release to the disseisor, for that he is not privie to the release, for a release of actions shall only extend to privies.

If a disseisor make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, and the disseisee release all actions to the tenant for life, after the death of tenant for life, he in the remainder shall not plead the said release.

If the disseisee release all actions to the disseisor, and die, this doth barre him but for his life, for after his decease his heire shall have an action [7], as some have said. And hereby may appeare a manifest diversity between a release of a right, and a release of actions.

ET mesme le maner est en assise de novel disseisin, pur ceo que il est mixt en le realtie et en le personalty. Mes si un tiel assise soit arraigne enter le disseisor et le tenant, le disseisor bien poet pleder un releas d'actions personals pur barrer l'assise, mes nemy un releas d'actions reals, car nul pledera releas d'actions reals en assise forsque le tenant.

IN the same manner it is in an assise of novel disseisin, for that it is mixt in the realtie and in the personalty. But if such an assise be arraigned against the disseisor and the tenant, the disseisor may well plead a release of actions personals to barre the assise, but nota release of actions reals, for none shall plead a release of actions reals in an assise but the tenant.

Sect.

* This Section is not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Hob. 162. accord. whether the action be brought against the disseisor only, or against him and the tenant; but if the same person be disseisor and tenant, then he may plead a release of actions real. L. Nott. MSS.

Sect. 495.

ITEM, en tiels actions reals que covient d'estre sue envers le tenant del franktenement, si le tenant ad un releas d'actions reals del demandant fait a luy devant le brieve purchase, et il plede ceo, il est bon plee pur le demandant a dire, que celui que pleda le plee n'avoit rien en le franktenement al temps del releas fait, car adonque il n'avoit cause d'aver aucun action real envers luy.

ALSO, in such actions reals ^(8. Rep. 140.) which ought to bee sued against the tenant of the freehold, if the tenant hath a release of actions reals from the demandant made unto him before the writ purchased, and he plead this, it is a good plea for the demandant to say, that hee which plead the plea had nothing in the freehold at the time of the release made, for then he had no cause to have an action reall against him.

THIS is evident enough by that which hath beene said, that a release of all actions reals must bee made to him that is tenant of the land, because a reall action must be brought against such a tenant. ^(8. Rep. 151. b.)

Sect. 496.

ITEM, en tiel cas ou home poet enter en terres ou tenements, et auxy poet aver un action real de ceo, que est done per la ley envers le tenant*; si en cest case le demandant releffa al tenant tous maners de actions reals, uncore ceo ne tolle le demandant de son entrie, mes le demandant bien poet enter nient contristiant tiel releas, pur ceo que nul chose est releffe forsque l'action, &c.

ALSO, in such case where a man may enter into lands or tenements, and also may have an action reall for this, which is given by the law against the tenant; if in this case the demandant releaseth to the tenant all maner of actions reals, yet this shall not take the demandant from his entrie, but the demandant may well enter notwithstanding such release, for that nothing is released but the action, &c.

POET enter. Here ^(8. Rep. 152.)

it appeareth, that where a man may enter, a release of all actions doth not barre him of his right, because he hath another remedy, viz. to enter. And this is agreeable with the authoritie of our [f] bookes. But where [f] 18. E. 3. 34. 19. E. 3. title 35. his entry is not lawful, there a release of all actions is by consequence a barre of his right, because he hath released the mean whereby he might recover his right. As if the disseisee release all actions to the heire of the disseisor, which is in by descent, he hath no remedy to recover the land; but yet the disseisee hath a right, for that hee hath released his action, and not his right, as shall be said hereafter in the chapter of Remitter in his proper place. If the heire of the disseisor make a feoffment in fee to two, and the disseisee releaseth to one of the feoffees all actions, and he dieth, the survivour shall not plead this release for the causes abovesaid. And hereby also again appeareth another diversity between a release of a right, and a release of actions.

It

* &c. added L. and M. and Rob.

Lib. 3.

Cap. 8. Of Releases. Sect. 497, 498, 499.

(8. Rep. 150.)
19. Aff. 3. 30. E. 3. 19. 6.
19. H. 6. 4. 6. 21. H. 7. 23. b.
7. H. 6. 6.

It is to be observed, when a man hath severall remedies for one and the selfe same thing, be it reall, personall, or mixt, albeit he releaseth one of his remedies, he may use the other.

Sect. 497.

(9. Rep. 53.)

EN mesme le maner est de choses PERSONALS; sicome home a PERSONALL; as if a man by wrong tort prent mes biens, si jeo re- take away my goods, if I release lessa a luy tous actions personals, to him all actions personals, yet I uncore jeo puisse per le ley pren- may by the law take my goods der mes biens hors de son possession. out of his possession.

This of it selfe is evident.

Sect. 498.

(Coke's Ent. 170. b.)
(10. Rep. 119. b. 2. Cro. 681.)
Glanvil. lib. 10. cap. 13.
(F. N. B. 138. a.)
(1. Roll. Abr. 606.)
(2. Roll. Abr. 505.)
(Doc. Pla. 124. 125.)

41. E. 3. 2.
(1. Roll. Ab. 5. Noy

[1] 41. E. 3. 2. 8. H. 6. 18.
28. 29. 21. E. 3. 28. 3. H. 6. 19.
30. H. 6. 4. 9. H. 6. 18.

(9. Rep. 18. 78. b. F. N. B. 138.)
(10. Rep. 51. b.)

[u] 10. H. 6. 20. 21. H. 6. 1.
14. H. 6. 4. 14. H. 4. 23. 24. 27.
(Post. 295.)

[x] 20. H. 6. 45. 19 E. 3.
Severance 14. 31. E. 3. ib. 32.
42. E. 3. 13. 40. E. 3. 25.
(10. Rep. 135.)
(Doc. Pla. 125.)

BRIEF de detinue.

Breve de detentione dicitur à detinendo, because detinet is the principall word in the writ. And it lyeth where any man comes to goods eyther by delivery, or by finding. In this writ the plaintife shall recover the thing detained, and therefore it must bee so certaine as it may be knowne, and for that cause it lyeth not for money out of a bagge, or chest; and so of corn out of a sacke, and the like, these cannot be knowne from other. [1] A man shall have an action of detinue of charters which concern the inheritance of his land if hee know the certainty of them, and what land they concerne, or if they be in bagge sealed, or chest locked, though he knoweth not the certainty of them: and it is good policie (if possibly he can) in that case to declare of one charter in especiall, [u] and then the defendant shall not wage his law. [x] An action of detinue for charters doth sound in the realty, for therein summons and severance lyeth; and in detinue of goods a capias doth lye; but for charters in speciall a capias lyeth not, and yet a release of actions personals in a writ of detinue of charters is a good barre.

*AUX*Y, si jeo ay * ascun cause d'auter

briefe de detinue de mes biens vers un auter, coment que jeo releffa a luy tous actions personals, uncore jeo puisse † per le ley prendre mes biens hors de son possession, pur ceo que nul droit de les biens est releffe a luy, mes solement l'action, &c.

ALSO, if I have any cause to have a writ of detinue of my goods against another, albeit that I release to him all actions personals, yet I may by the law take my goods out of his possession, because no right of the goods is released to him, but only the action, &c.

Sect. 499.

PER cause del statute.

That is to say, the statute of 4. H. 4. ca. 7. and 11. H. 6. ca. 4.

Car s'il vost pleder le release generalment. Here it appeareth, that when the statute had given the action reall a-

ITEM, si home soit

disseise, et le disseifor fait seoffment a divers persons a son use †, et le disseisor continualment prist les profits, &c. et le disseisee releffa a luy

ALSO, if a man be disseised, and the disseisor maketh a seoffment to divers persons to his use, and the disseisor continually taketh the profits, &c. and the disseisee release

touts

* ascun not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† per le ley not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

touts actions reals, et puis il fust vers luy breve d'entre en nature d'assise per cause de le statute, pur ceo que il prent les profits, &c. Quære, comment le disseisor sera aide per le dit releas; car s'il voile pleader le releas generalment, donques le demandant poit dire, que il n'avoit riens en le franktenement al temps del releas fait; et s'il pleda releas specialment, donques il covient * conuistre un disseisin, et donques puit le demandant enter en le terre, &c. per son conusans de le disseisin, &c. mes per adventure per especial pleader il luy poit barrer de l'action † que il fust, &c. coment le demandant poit enter.

to him all actions reals, and after hee sueth against him a writ of entrie in nature of an assise by reason of the statute, because hee taketh the profits, &c. Quære, how the disseisor shall bee ayded by the said release; for if hee will plead the release generally, then the demandant may say, that hee had nothing in the freehold at the time of the release made; and if hee plead the release specially, then he must acknowledge a disseisin, and then may the demandant enter into the land, &c. by his acknowledgment of the disseisin, &c. but per adventure by special pleading he may barre him of the action which he sueth, &c. though the demandant may enter.

gainst the pernor of the profits, it enableth him to take and pleade a release of all actions reals, and yet he hath neither ius in re, nor ius ad rem, which point is worthy of observation for manifestation of the equity of the law.

Donques il covient conuistre un disseisin, &c. In a writ of dower the tenant pleaded that before the writ purchased A. was seised of the land, &c. untill by the tenant himselfe hee was disseised, and that hanging the writ A. recovered against him. &c. judgment of the writ, and adjudged a good plea, in which plea the tenant confessed a disseisin in himselfe.

Donques poit le demandant enter. So might hee have done in this case that Littleton putteth, albeit the tenant confessed no disseisin. And therefore it is no prejudice to the tenant to confesse a disseisin in himselfe, &c. and then, as Littleton here holdeth, the action shall be barred.

But the reader is to observe, that now by the statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. which execute the possession to the use, all the statutes against cestuy que use, or pernor of the profits, have lost their force.

(5. Rep. 77.)
3. H. 7. 2.
(8. Rep. 150.)
15. E. 4. 4. b.
(Doc. Pla. 343.)

28. H. 8. Dier 32. 27. H. 8. c. 10.

Sect. 500.

ITEM, si home fust appeale de felony del mort son ancester envers un auter, coment que l'appellant releffa al defendant tous maners d'actions reals et personals, ceo ne aidera my le defendant, pur ceo que cest appeal n'est pas

ALSO, if a man sue an appeale of felony of the death of his ancester against another, though the appellant release to the defendant all manner of actions reall and personall, this shall not aide the defendant, for that this appeale is not

OUR author having spoken of common pleas, now treateth of certaine pleas criminall, or pleas of the crowne, whereof it is said, [a] Item, criminalium alia majora, alia minora, alia maxima, secundum criminum quantitatem; sunt enim crimina majora et dicuntur capitalia eo quod ultimum inducunt supplicium, &c. Minora vero, quæ suffigationem inducunt, vel pœnam pillorem, vel tumboralem, vel carceris

(c) Bracl. lib. 3. fo. 101. b.

* de added in L. and M. and Roh.

† que il fust, &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

[3] Flet. lib. 1. cap. 15.

[c] Mir. ca. 1. §. 4. & ca. 4.
des paines en divers maners.

carceris inclusionem, &c.

[b] Criminalium quædam sententialiter mortem inducunt, quædam vero minimè. [c] De peche est brieve division, car est mortal ou venial selonque ceo que appiert es paines. And that crime is called mortall or corporall: mortall, because it deserveth death; and such crimes are called veniall, as may be redeemed or satisfied by some other punishment than by death.

Appeale de felo-

nie. [x] Appellum signifieth accusatio, an accusation, and therefore to appeale a man is as much as to accuse him; and in [y] ancient bookes he that doth appeale is called accusator, and is peculiarly in legall signification applied to appeales of three sorts. First, of wrong to his ancestor, whose heire male he is, and that is onely of death, whereof our author here speaketh. The second is of wrong to the husband, and is by the wife only of the death of her husband to be prosecuted. The third is of wrongs done to the appellants themselves, as robbery, rape, and mayhem. The word appellum is derived of appeller, to call, because appellans vocat reum in judicium, he calleth the defendant to judgement, and the plaintife is called the appellant.

Appeale, Appellatio, is a removing of a cause in any ecclesiastical court to a superior; but of this there needeth no speech in this place.

De mort. Appeale of death is of two sorts, of murder and of homicide. Murder is when one is slaine with a man's will, and with malice prepenfed or forethought. Homicide, as it is legally taken, is when one is slaine with a man's will, but not with malice prepenfed. Chance-medly, or per infortunium, is when one is slaine casually, and by misadventure, without the will of him that doth the act, whereupon death insueth; but of this no appeale doth lye. Murder commeth of the Saxon word mordreu.

Were is an old Saxon word sometime written wera, and signifieth the price of the life of a man, estimatio capitis, that is, so much as one paid for the killing of a man; by which it appeareth, that such government was in those dayes, as slaughters of men were most rarely committed, as master Lambard collecteth. And you shall not reade of any insurrection or rebellion before the Conquest, when the view of frankpledge and other ancient lawes of this realme were in their right use.

Mes s'il release al defendant tous maners d'actions, &c. And the reason is, for that then all actions, as well criminall as reall, personall and mixt, be released. But a release of all actions reall and personall cannot barre an appeale of death, because that release extendeth to common or civill actions, and not to actions criminall: but releases of all actions criminall or mortall, or concerning pleas of the crowne, are good barres in an appeale of death, and so the (&c.) in the end of the Section is well explained.

[x] Mir. ca. 2. §. 7. Bract. lib. 3. fo. 137. Brit. ca. 22. 23. Flet. lib. 1. ca. 31, 32, 33. (4. Rep. 39.) (3. Infl. 131.) [y] Glanv. lib. 7. cap. 9. et lib. 14. ca. 1. et 3.

24. H. 8. ca. 12. 1. El. ca. 1.

(4. Rep. 40. 43. 3. Infl. 47.)

Lamb. Expos. verb. Estimatio. Flet. lib. 1. ca. 42. Hoved. o. 344.

(4. Rep. 45. 47.) (Doc. Pla. 97.) 21. H. 6. 16.

Sect. 501.

ITEM, en appeale de robbrie, si le defendant voile pleader un release de l'appellant de tous actions personals, ceo semble nul plee; car action de l'appeale, lou l'appellee aura judgement de mort, &c. est plus hault que action personal est, et n'est pas proprement dit action personal: et pur ceo si le defendant voiloit plead un release del appellant de barrer luy d'appeale, en cest case il covient d'aver un release de tous manners * d'appeals, ou tous manners d'actions, come il semble, &c.

ALSO, in an appeale of robbrie, if the defendant will plead a release of the appellant of all actions personals, this seemeth no plea; for an action of appeal where the appellee shall have judgment of death, &c. is higher than an action personal is, and is not properly called an action personal: and there if the defendant will plead a release of the appellant to barre him of the appeale, in this case hee must have a release of all manner of appeales, or all manner of actions, as it seemeth, &c.

Robberie, Robberia, properly is when there is a felonious taking away of a man's goods from his person: and it is called robbery, because the goods are taken as it were de la robe, from the robe, that is, from the person; but sometimes it is taken in a larger sense. 22. Aff. 33. W. 1. cap. 20.

Judgement de mort, &c. By this (&c.) is implied appeales of rape, of arson or burning, of felony or larceny, for therein also is judgment of death, and are within our author's reason. (3. Inst. 68. Dy. 39. a. Cro. Car. 531.)

Come il semble, &c. It is to be understood, that, first, a release of all actions criminall, mortall, or concerning pleas of the crowne; secondly, a release of all actions generally; thirdly, a release of all appeales; and lastly, a release of all demands, are good barres in all these kinds of appeales. V. Sect. 508. (Post. 291. b.)

Sect. 502.

MES en appeale de maibem un release de tous manners d'actions personals est bone plea en barre, pur ceo que en tiel action il ne recovra forsque damages, &c.

BUT in appeale of mayhem a release of all manner of actions personals is a good plea in barre, for that in such an action hee shall recover nothing but damages.

MAYHEM, maibemium, membri mutilatio, or obtruncatio, commeth of the French word maibaigne, and signifieth a corporall hurt, whereby hee loseth a member, by reason whereof hee is lesse able to fight; as by putting out his eye, beating out his foreteeth, breaking his skull, striking off his arme, hand, or finger, cutting off his legge

Mir. ca. 1. §. 9. Glan. li. 14. ca. 7. Bract. lib. 3. Tract. 2. ca. 24. Brit. fo. 48. ca. 25. Flet. lib. 1. ca. 38. Stanf. Pl. Cor. fo. 38. b.

(3. Inst. 118. 4. Rep. 43. 45. Ant. 126.)

28. E. 3. 94. 8. H. 4. 21.

or foot, or whereby he loseth the use of any of his said members.

Damages, &c. Vide Sect. 194.

Release de tous manners actions personals est bone plea, &c. And the reason is, for that every action wherein damages only are recovered by the plaintife, is in law taken for an action personal. 21. H. 6. 16. (Ant. 127. a. 9 Rep. 52.)

Sect.

* d'actions added L. and M.

Sect. 503.

V. R. 11. fo. 39. 41. in Metcalfe's case upon what judgments and awards a writ of error doth lie.

(Cro. Car. 66.)

(3 Rep. 1. Cro. Jac. 5.)

Li. 5. fo. 111. Foxley's case.
Li. 7. fo. 11. 12. Gentleman's case.

(Cro. Car. 63. Noy 68.
1. Roll. 750. 11. Rep. 38.
F. N. B. 17. Ant. 117. b.
8. Rep. 141.)

15. Eliz. Dyer. 317.
(Ant. 123. b.)

Lib. 9. fol. 119. 8. Zanchar's case.
(5. Rep. 111.)
(Ant. 114.)

28. A. 49. 12. E. 3. Utlag. 3.
38. E. 3. 13. Mich. 4. & 5. El.
Dyer to. 222. Vid. Sect. 197.
(5. Rep. 25. F. N. B. 20. b. 22. b.)

2. H. 4. 6.

(1. H. 4. 6. 8. Rep. 150. 156.
8. H. 6. c. 12. 32. H. 8. 30.
18. Eliz. 14. Cro. Car. 272. 878.
5. Rep. 41. 42.)

BRIEFE de error.

This writ lyeth when a man is grieved by any error in the foundation, proceeding, judgment, or execution, and thereupon it is called breve de errore corrigendo. But without a judgment, or an award in nature of a judgment, no writ of error doth lie; for the words of the writ be, si iudicium redditum sit: and that judgment must regularly be given by judges of record, and in a court of record, and not by any other inferior judges in bote courts, for thereupon a writ of false judgment doth lye. In this case of outlawry upon proceſſe, the judgment is given (in the county court, which is no court of record) by the coroners (ſaving in London judgment is given by the recorder, and not by the maior, who is coroner by the cuſtome of the city): for after the defendant is quinto excludus, and maketh default, the judgment is, ideo utlagetur per iudicium coronatorum; and in London, per iudicium recordatoris: ſo as by the outlawry, the plaintife recovers nothing, but the king taketh the whole benefit thereof; for the law did intend, that the defendant would rather appeare and answer the plaintife, &c. than to forfeit all his goods and chattels, debts and duties to the king, by his default and contumacie. But Littleton is to be intended, that the ſherife doe returne the exigent whereby the outlawry appeares of record, or that the outlawry be removed by certiorari, for before that time that the outlawry appeares of record, the defendant doth not forfeit his goods, nor the plaintife can be diſabled, nor any writ of error doth lye in that caſe. And this is the cauſe that the goods of outlaws cannot be claimed by preſcription, becauſe they are not forfeited untill the outlawry appeares of record. Vide Sect. 197. where it appeareth by Littleton, that the plaintife cannot be diſabled by outlawry, unleſſe it appeareth of record.

Car per le dit action il recovers rien en le perſonaltie. Hereupon is to be obſerved a diverſity, when by the writ of error the plaintife ſhall recover, or be reſtored to any perſonall thing, as debt, damage, or the like; for then by the reaſon that Littleton, here yeeldeth, the releaſe of all actions perſonals is a good plea, for that the plaintife is to recover, or to be reſtored to ſomething in the perſonality. And ſo likewiſe when land is to be recovered, or to be reſtored in a writ of error, a releaſe of all actions reals is a good barre. But where by a writ of error the plaintife ſhall not be reſtored to any perſonall or reall thing, then a releaſe of all actions reall or perſonall is no barre; and therefore Littleton here putteth his caſe with great caution. If a man (ſaith he) by proceſſe upon the originall be outlawed, there in deed he ſhall be reſtored to nothing in the perſonality againſt the plaintife. But where by the outlawry he forfeited all his goods and chattels to the king, he ſhall be reſtored to them; alſo thereby he ſhall be reſtored to the law, and to be of ability to ſue, &c. But if the plaintife, in a perſonall action, recover any debt, &c. or damages, and be outlawed after judgment, there in a writ of error brought by the defendant upon the principall judgment, a releaſe of all actions perſonals is a good plea. And ſo it is where a judgment is given in a reall action, a releaſe of all actions reals is a good barre in a writ of error brought thereupon.

ITEM, si home
ſoit utlage en action perſonal per proceſſes ſur le original, et port breve d'error, si celuy a. que ſuit il ſuit utlage, voile pleader envers luy un releas de tous maners d'actions perſonals, ceo ſemble nul plea; car per le dit action il ne recovers rien en perſonaltie forſque tantſolement de reverſer le utlagarie: mes un releaſe de briefe d'error eſt bone plea.

ALSO, if a man bee outlawed in an action perſonall by proceſſe upon the originall, and bringeth a writ of error, if he at whoſe ſuit he was outlawed, will pleade againſt him a releaſe of all manner of actions perſonals, this ſeemeth no plea; for by the ſaid action, hee ſhall recover nothing in the perſonaltie, but only to reverſe the outlawrie: but a releaſe of the writ of error is a good plea.

If the tenant in a reall action release to the demandant after recovery his right in the land, 9. H. 6. 47. he shall not have a writ of error, for that he cannot be restored to the land.

And so it is if debt, &c. or damages be recovered in a personall action by false verdict, and the defendant bringeth a writ of attaint, a [a] release of all actions personal is a good barre of the attaint; for thereby the plaintife is to be restored to the debt, &c. or damages which he lost: the like law is if a judgement be given upon a false verdict in a reall action, a release of all actions real is a good barre in an attaint. For both the writ of error and the writ of attaint doe infue the nature of the former action, &c.

And so it is if a writ of audita querela be brought by the defendant in the former action to discharge himselfe of an execution, a release of all actions personal is a good barre, because he is to discharge himselfe of a personall execution.

Mes un release de briefe de error est bone plea, &c. So as in this speciall case here put by L. iiii. ton, wherein the plaintife is to recover or be restored to nothing against the party; yet for that the plaintife in the former action is privy to the record, a release of a writ of error to him is sufficient to barre the plaintife in the writ of error of the suit, and vexation by the writ of error. And so note that an action reall or personall doth imply a recovery of something in the realty or personalty, or a restitution to the same, but a writ (1) implyeth neither of them, which is worthy of observation.

Sect. 504.

ITEM, si bone recovera debt ou damages, et il release al defendant tous maners d'actions, uncore il puit loialment fuer execution per capias ad satisfaciendum, ou per elegit, ou fieri facias: car execution per tiel briefe ne poit estre dit action.

ALSO, if a man recover debt or damages, and he releaseth to the defendant all manner of actions, yet hee may lawfully sue execution by capias ad satisfaciendum, or by elegit, or fieri facias: for execution upon such a writ cannot bee said an action.

HERE appeareth a diversity betweene an action and an execution. For regularly an action is said in its proper sense to continue until judgement bee given, and after judgement then doth processe of execution begin; and therefore a release of all actions regularly is [b] no barre of execution, for the execution doth beginne when the action doth end. And therefore the foundation of the first is an originall writ, and doth determine by the judgement; and writs of execution are called judiciall, because they are grounded upon the judgement.

Per cap. ad satisfaciendum. This is a judiciall writ for the taking of the body in execution untill hee hath made satisfaction: where a capias ad satisfaciendum lyeth at the common law; and where it is given by statute, you may reade at large in my Reports.

I have read two ancient records touching the taking of the body in execution, whereof, to my remembrance, I never read any touch in our bookes, yet will I recite them, and leave them to the judicious reader. William de Walton brought an action of trespassse of breaking his close against John Martin, and upon not guilty pleaded, hee was found guilty and damages assessed; whereupon judgement was given that the plaintife should recover his damages, et quoddam predictus Johannes capiatur. And the record saith, Quoddam predictus Johannes venit coram domino rege et reddidit se prisonem, et quia constat curie per inspectionem corporis ipsius Johannis, quoddam idem Johannes est talis etatis quoddam penam imprisonmenti subire non potest, ideo dictum est ei, quoddam eat inde sine die. The other record is, That Ellen Allot brought an appeal of robbery against John Boskiseleke clerke, Richard Charta, and others, who pleaded not guilty, and were not found guilty: whereupon judgement was given that they should goe quite, et predicta Elena pro falso appello suo committatur prisonem, &c. (for [b] by the statute she ought to be imprisoned in that case for a yeare.) But the record saith, Quia eadem Elena pregnant fuit, et in periculo mortis, ipsa dimittitur per manucaptionem, &c. ad habendum corpus usque quind. Michaelis, &c. (2)

Vide Sect. 233.
(5. Rep. 88, 89.
8. Rep. 153. a)

8. E. 3. 9. 4. E. 3. Attorney 18. 33. H. 6. 29.
34. H. 6. 51.
[b] 13. H. 4. Release 53.
19. H. 6. 3. 26. H. 6. Execution 7.

Sir William Herbert's case, lib. 3. fol. 11, 12.

Pasch. 14. E. 3. Rot. 106.
coram Rege in Thesaur. Surrey.
(Cro. Jac. 356.)

Mich. 41. E. 3. Rot. 27. coram Rege Cornub. in Thesaur.

[b] W. 2. cap. 12.
(Siderf. 236. Hutton 118.)

7 I

There

(1) That is, a writ of error.

(2) The record at large is stated in 12 Rep. fol. 126.

There be certaine maximes in the law concerning executions, as taking some instead of many. Ea quæ in curiâ nostrâ ritè acta sunt, debitæ executioni demandari debent. Parum est latam esse sententiam nisi mandetur executioni. Executio juris non habet injuriam. Executio est fructus et finis legis. Juris effectus in executione consistit. Prosecutio legis est gravis ex-atio, executio legis coronat opus. Boni judicis est judicium sine dilatione mandare executioni. Favorabiliores sunt executiones aliis processibus quibuscunque. But now let us heare what Littleton saith.

(5. Rep. 88. a.)

[c] W. 2. cap. 18.
(Plowd. 178. b.)

Per elegit. This is also a judicall writ, and is given by the statute eyther upon a recovery for debt or damages, or upon a recognizance in any court. And it is called a writ of elegit, for that according to the statute that saith, [c] Sit de cæterò in electione illius, &c. sequi breve quoddam vicecomes fieri faciat, &c. vel quod liberet ei, &c. The words of the writ bee, Elegit sibi liberari, &c. And thereupon it is called an elegit. By this writ the sherife shall deliver to the plaintife omnia catalla debitoris, (exceptis bobus & asinis caruæ) et medietatem terræ. And this must be done by an inquest to be taken by the sherife.

[d] 11. E. 1. Stat. de Action
Burnell. 13. E. 1. de mercatoribus. 27. E. 3. cap. 22. Vide Fleta, li. 2. cap. 57. 25. E. 3.
53.
(6. Rep. 44.)
[*] 23. H. 8. cap. 6.

[e] 32. H. 8. cap. 5.
(5. Rep. 86. b.)
2. Iust. 677. b.)

When Littleton wrote, by force of certaine acts [d] of parliament, execution might bee had of lands (besides by force of the elegit) upon statutes merchant, statutes staple, and recognizances taken in some court of record; and since he wrote, upon a recognizance or bond taken by force of the statute [*] of 23. H. 8. before one of the chief justices, or the maior of the staple, and recorder of London out of terme, which hath the effect of a statute staple. The manner of the executions upon body, lands, and goods, appeareth in the statutes quoted in the margin.

Since Littleton wrote, a profitable statute hath been made [e] concerning executions of lands, tenements, and hereditaments, whereby it is provided, that if after such lands, &c. be had and delivered in execution upon a just or lawfull title, wherewithall the said lands, &c. were liable, tied, or bound at such time, as they were delivered or taken into execution, shall be recovered, devided, taken, or evicted out of, or from the possession of any such person, &c. before such times, as the said tenants by execution, their executors or assignees, shall have fully levied their debt and damages, for the which the said lands, &c. were taken in execution; then every such recoveror, obligee, and recognizee, shall have a scire facias out of the same court from whence the former execution did proceed, against such person or persons as the former execution was pursued, their heires, executors or assignes, to have execution of other lands, &c. liable and to be taken in execution for the residue of the debt or damages. Sed opus est interprete.

Lib. 4. fol. 66. Fulwood's case.

(4. Rep. 81. 2. Inst. 678.)

(Cro. 338.)

Therefore, first, it is to be knowne, that where the tenant by execution hath remedy given to him by law after eviction, there the statute extendeth not to it; for the act saith, by reason whereof the said recoverors, obligees, and recognizees, have been clearly set without remedy, &c. and the body referreth to the preamble, and the party ought not to have double satisfaction, one by the former lawes, and another by this statute.

And therefore if part of the land, &c. be evicted from the tenant by execution, this statute extendeth not to it; because he should hold the residue, till he be fully satisfied, and he must be contented if all be evicted saving one acre to hold that, though it be but a poore remedy: for no new execution in that case hee can have upon this statute. Therefore if the conusee hath remedy in presenti for part, or in futuro for all, or part, this statute extendeth not to it.

Secondly, if a man be bound to A. in a statute of a thousand pounds, and by a latter statute to B. in a hundred pounds, and B. first extendeth, and then A. extendeth and taketh the land from B. yet B. shall have no aide of the statute, because after the extent of A. B. shall re-enjoy the land, by force of his former execution.

Thirdly, If the wife of the conusor recover dower against the tenant by execution, he shall hold over, and shall have no aide of this statute.

Fourthly, If a man put out his lessee for yeares, or disseise his lessee for life, and after knowledge a statute and execution is sued against him, and the lessee re-enter, the tenant by execution after the leases ended, shall hold over, and have no aide of this statute.

Fifthly, This statute must not be taken literally, but according to the meaning; therefore where the letter is untill he, &c. or his assignes shall fully and wholly have levied the whole debt or damages; if he hath assigned severall parcels to severall assignes, yet all they shall have the land but till the whole debt be paid.

Sixthly, where the words be, for the which the said lands, &c. were delivered in execution. A disseisor conveys lands to the king, who granteth the same over to A. and his heires to hold by fealty, and twenty pound rent, and after granteth the feignior to B. B. knowledgeth a statute, statute, and execution is sued of the feignory. A. dieth without heire, and the conusee entereth, and is evicted by the disseisee; he shall have the aide of this statute; and yet it is out of the letter of the law, for the feignory was delivered in execution and not the tenancy; but he was tenant by execution of those lands, and therefore within the statute. But the perquisite of a villeine being evicted is out of the statute, for he is tenant in fee simple thereof, and not tenant by execution.

Seventhly, Where the words be (delivered and taken in execution), yet if after the liberate, the conusee entereth (as he may) so as the land is never delivered, yet is he within the remedy of this statute, for he is tenant by execution.

Eighthly, Where the statute saith, then every such recoveror, obligee, and recognizee shall, &c. and saith not, their executors, administrators, or assigns, but they are omitted in this material place, yet by a benigne interpretation this statute shall extend to them, because they are mentioned in the next precedent clause of the eviction, and the remedy must by construction be extended to all the persons that appear by the act to be grieved; a point worthy the observation. (Ant. 268. b.)

Ninthly, Where the statute giveth a scire fac' out of the same court, &c. if the record be removed by writ of error into another court, and there affirmed, the tenant by execution that is evicted shall have a scire fac' by the equity of this statute out of that court, because the scire fac' must be grounded upon the record. Et sic de similibus. (F. N. B. 265. d.)

Tenthly, Where the statute giveth the scire fac' against such person or persons, &c. that were parties to the first execution, their heires, executors or assigns, &c. this must not be taken so generally as the letter is; for if the first execution were had against a purchaser, &c. so as nothing was liable in his hands but the land recovered; if this land be evicted from tenant by execution, no scire fac' shall be awarded against him, his heires, executors, or assigns. But if he hath other lands subject to the execution, then a scire fac' lyeth against him or his assigns, but not against his executors; neither in that case can he have a scire fac' upon this statute against the first debtor or recognizor, because it giveth it onely against him, &c. that was party to the first execution, his heires, executors, or assigns. But if there be severall assigns of severall parcels of lands subject to the execution, one scire fac' upon this statute shall lye against all the assigns. Sed est modus in rebus. This little taste shall give a light to the diligent reader, not only to see into the secrets of this statute, but to others also of like nature.

And by the statute of 23. H. 8. cap. 6. it is provided, that the obligee, &c. shall have in every point against such recognisor, &c. like proces, execution, commodity and advantage in every behalfe, as hath been had or made upon the statute staple, and under such maner and forme, as is for the same statute staple provided: by force of which branch, if the tenant by execution by force of the act of 23. H. 8. be evicted, he shall have the remedy provided for tenants by execution upon a statute staple by the act of 32. H. 8. In like manner by force of that clause of 23. H. 8. if the extendors upon a statute staple, &c. doe extend the lands, &c. at too high a rate, the obligee may pray that the extendors themselves may take the lands, &c. at that rate, &c. by force of the said statutes of Aston Burnel and De Mercatoribus. Also no execution shall be sued against the heire within age.

But note, that upon a writ of elegit the plaintife cannot make any such prayer, because those ancient statutes doe extend to a statute merchant, or a statute staple only, and neither to a recovery of debt or damages, nor to a recognizance in court; and so hath it been resolved [f].

Nota, it appeareth by the preamble of the said act of 32. H. 8. and by divers [g] bookes, that after a full and perfect execution had by extent returned and of record, there shall never be any re-extent upon any eviction; but if the extent be insufficient in law, there may goe out a new extent.

[b] If a man have a judgement given against him for debt or damages, or be bound in a recognizance, and dieth his heire within age, or having two daughters, and the one within age; no execution shall be sued of the lands by elegit during the minority, albeit the heire is not specially bound, but charged as terre tenant [i]; and so against an heire within age no execution shall be sued upon a statute merchant or staple, nor upon the obligation or recognizance upon the statute of 23. H. 8. for it is excepted in the proces against the heire. Neither if the heire within age indow his mother shall execution be sued against her during his minority. (1)

Note, that by the statute [k] of 27. E. 3. the execution of lands upon a statute staple is referred to the statute merchant, and by the statute De Mercatoribus no execution shall be had against the heire so long as he is within age.

Also since Littleton wrote, there is a right profitable statute [l] made against fraudulent feoffments, gifts, grants, &c. judgements, and executions, as well of lands and tenements, 40. E. 3. 26. b. 44. E. 3. fol. 10.

2. H. 4. 17. 15. H. 7. 15.

[f] Mich. 4. & 5. Ph. and Mar. Bendloes, by all the Justices of the Common Pleas.

(Plowd. 82. b. 205. b.)

[g] 15. E. 3. Extent. 7.

22. E. 3. Recovery in value 22.

31. E. 3. Extent. 13. 17. E. 3. 76.

15. E. 3. scire fac. 115.

7. H. 4. 19. 22. Aff. 44. 22. E. 3.

fol. ult. 44. E. 3. 10. 9. H. 7. 9.

15. H. 7. 15. 13. Eliz. Dier 299.

29. H. 8. Stat. Merchant Br. 40.

(2. Cro. 13.)

[h] 11. E. 3. age 4. 15. E. 3.

age 95. 24. E. 3. 28. 29. Aff. 37.

29. E. 3. 50. 47. Aff. 4. 47. E. 3. 7.

lib. 3. fol. 13. Sir William Herbert's case. Brooke, age 33.

(2. Cro. 838. 694. Siderf. 184.)

[i] Temps E. 1. Aff. 402. 417.

16. H. 7. 6. Livre d'enr. 545.

Brooke, age 33.

(1. Cro. 295.)

[k] 27. E. 3. cap. 22.

[l] 13. E. 3. cap. 5.

Li. 3. fo. 80. &c. Twyne's case.

Li. 5. fo. 60. Gooche's case.

(1) B. R. Crevill and Bracebridge's case.—Nota, p. 1656, the point of a special verdict was as follows: The conuser leased for years, and died, his heir within age, whether the execution (which was admitted on all sides to be void against the infant), was good to bind the term for years. Glyn, chief justice, and the court, and also Windham, at the bar, denied peremptorily the case of lord Coke to be law, unless it is understood that the marriage was held before the statute; for then it is true that it shall not be extended, sed non quia est privilegium for the infancy of the heir; but because the wife is in by her husband, and therefore has the better possession, and thus comes in paramount to the statute; but if the statute was before the marriage, then clearly the dower of the wife is extendible; for the endowment breaks the descent, and she is in by her husband of a possession charged, and there is no prejudice to the infant heir; so that the freehold is out of him, without any rent being incident to his reversion. Nota, the possibility that the wife might die during the minority, and before the extent was satisfied, was not regarded. And nota, M. 6. 7. Eliz. C. B. in Egerton's Reports (cited by Noy in his lecture in Lincoln's-Inn), a like case was adjudged. Feme tenant in tail confessed a judgment, took husband and died. The baron was tenant by the curtesy, and the statute was extended, and then he surrendered to the heir, and was extended still, and well, per curiam, for the reversion was not prejudiced. And afterwards Trin. 1656. resolved, that an extent lay well against the lessee, because the infancy of the heir is a personal privilege. (Query, if the rent is gone. It seems so; but the rent was not regarded.) Lord Nott. MSS.

Lib. 6. fo. 18. Pakeman's case.
Lib. 10. fo. 56. the Chanc. of Oxford's case. See the Statutes of 3. H. 7. cap. 4. & 50. E. 3.
cap. 6. Mich. 12. & 13. Eliz.
Dier 295. 18. Eliz. 351. Dier.
(8. Rep. 132.)

W. 2. cap. 18.

[m] Lib. 3. fo. 11. fir William Herbert's case.
(Hob. 283.)
(F. N. B. 104.)

ments, as of goods and chattels, to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors and others of their just and lawfull actions, suites, debts, damages, penalties, forfeitures, heriots, mortuaries, and releases, for the exposition of which and other statutes, see the authorities quoted in the margin. (1)

And it is to be observed, that the words of the said act of 13. Eliz. are, Be it therefore declared, ordained, and enacted; and therefore like cases in semblable mischief shall be taken within the remedy of this act, by reason of this word (declared); whereby it appeareth, what the law was before the making of this act. But let us now returne to Littleton.

Fieri facias. This is a writ mentioned in the said statute, but is a writ of execution at the common law. And it is called a fieri facias, because the words of the writ directed to the sherife be, quod fieri facias de bonis & catallis, &c. and of those words the writ taketh its denomination.

But note, that a capias ad satisfaciendum is not mentioned in the said statute, because no capias ad satisfac' did lye at the common law upon a judgement for debt, &c. or damages, but only when the originall action was quare vi & armis, &c. But latter statutes have given a capias ad satisfac' where debt, &c. or damages are recovered; as it appeareth at large [m] in fir William Herbert's case, whereunto I referre the reader.

And it is to be observed, that these three writs of execution ought to be sued out within the yeare and the day after judgement; but if the plaintife sueth out any of them within the yeare, he may continue the same after the yeare untill he hath execution. And to none of these writs of executions the defendant can pleade; but if he hath any matter since the judgement to discharge him of execution, he may have an audita querela, and relieve himselfe that way, but pleade he cannot. As if the plaintife after release unto the defendant all executions, yet in none of these three writs he shall pleade it, but is driven to his audita querela, as hath been said.

Sect. 505.

SCIRE facias.

This is a judiciall writ, and properly lyeth after the yeare and day after judgement given; and is so called, because the words of the writ to the sherife be, quod scire facias prefat' T. (being the defendant) quod sit coram, &c. ostensurus si quid pro se habeat aut dicere sciat, quare, &c. So as by the writ it appeareth, that the defendant is to be warned to plead any matter in barre of execution; and therefore albeit it be a judiciall writ, yet because the defendant may thereupon pleade, this scire facias is accounted in law to be in nature of an action; and therefore [n] a release of all actions is a good barre of the same, and likewise a release of executions is a good barre in a scire facias. This writ was gi-

MES si apres l'an et jour le plaintife voit suer un scire facias, * a sacher si le defendant poit rien dire pur que le plaintife n'avera execution, donques il semble que tiel releas de tous actions ferra bon plee en barre. Mes ascuns ont semble contrary, entant que le brieve de scire facias est un brieve d'execution, et est d'aver execution, &c. Mes uncore entant que sur mesme le brieve le defendant poit pleader divers matters puis le judgement rendue de luy ouster d'execution, come utlagary, † &c. et divers au-

BUT if after the yeare and day the plaintife will sue a scire facias, to know if the defendant can say any thing why the plaintife should not have execution, then it seemeth that such release of all actions shall be a good plea in barre. But to some seemes the contrary, in as much as the writ of scire facias is a writ of execution, and is to have execution, &c. But yet in as much as upon the same writ the defendant may plead divers matters after judgement given to oust him of execution, as outlawry, &c. and divers other matters, this ters

* a sacher si le defendant poit rien dire pur que le plaintife n'avera—d'aver, L. and M. and Roh. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M.

(1) It was observed before, that one of the principal objects of the legislature, in passing the statute of uses, was to restore in some measure the notoriety of the old common law conveyances; but that their views in this respect were almost totally defeated, by the introduction of conveyances by lease and release, and by the preservation of uses, under the appellation of trusts. The legislature has, at different times, attempted to remedy the mischief arising from the secret transfer of property to such conveyances by lease and release has given rise. Among these attempts may be reckoned the statutes against fraudulent conveyances and devises, 13. Eliz. c. 5. 27. Eliz. c. 4. and 3. W. & M. c. 14. but particularly the statute of 29. Car. 2. c. 3. commonly called the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, which provides against conveying any lands or hereditaments for more than three years, or declaring trusts of them, otherwise than by writing. See ant. 48. a. not. 3. With the same views have been passed the acts for registering deeds respecting lands in the West, East, and North Ridings of the county of York, and in the county of Middlesex.—2. & 3. Ann. c. 4. 6. Ann. c. 35. 7. Ann. c. 20. and 8. G. 2. c. 6. Upon a similar principle was passed, the salutary and beneficial act of the 17th of his present Majesty, c. 26. for registering the grants of life annuities. With respect to the last statute, it is to be wished, that the legislature would enable persons redeeming or repurchasing annuities granted by them, to enter an account of such redemption or repurchase upon the register; for as it is an impeachment of a person's credit that annuities of this nature should be recorded against him, it is but reasonable, that when he has redeemed or repurchased them, that should be as publicly known and ascertained as his grant of them. But for want of some regulation of this kind, persons lie under the imputation of being subject to the payment of annuities, after they are liberated from them. On the statute of the 29. Car. 2. c. 3. the courts have decided, that as it was made with a design to prevent, either in marriage or in any other treaties, uncertainty, perjury, and contrariety of evidence, the cases not liable to these inconveniences are not within it. See 1. Eq. Ca. Ab. 19. The courts seem to have favoured a like equitable construction of the statutes for the registration of deeds. Thus in the case of Le Neve v. Le Neve, 1. Vez. 64. lord Hardwicke decreed, that if a deed respecting lands in any of the register counties is not registered, and afterwards the same lands are sold or mortgaged, by a deed properly registered; if the person claiming under the second deed has notice of the first deed, the person claiming under the first deed, tho' it is not registered, shall be preferred to him. The general doctrine of these decisions is founded on principles both just and equitable, when applied to particular cases; yet it may be doubted whether a more rigid adherence to the letter of these statutes, particularly that of the 29. Car. 2. c. 3. would ters matters *, ceo bien may bee well said an poit estre dit action, &c. action, &c.

had surceased to sue execution by feri facias, or levari facias, a yeare and a day, hee had been driven to his new originall.

Ceo bien poit estre dit action. Here is to be observed, that every writ whereunto the defendant may plead, be it originall or judiciall, is in law an action.

ven in this case by the statute of W. 2. for at the common law if the plaintife William Herbert's case. Fleta li. 2. cap. 12.

Sect. 506.

ET jeo croy, que en un scire facias hors d'un fine, un releas de tous maners d'actions est bon plee en barre.

AND I take it that, in a scire facias upon a fine, a release of all manner of actions is a good plea in barre.

This upon that which hath been said, is evident of it selfe.

Sect. 507.

MES lou home recouvrera debt ou damages, et est accorde perenter eux que le plaintife † ne suera execution, donques il covient que le plaintife fait un releas a luy de tous maners d'executions ‡.

BUT where a man recovereth debt or damages, and it is agreed betweene them that the plaintife shall not sue execution, then it behoveth that the plaintife make a release to him of all manner of executions.

IL covient. Albeit Littleton here saith, hee ought or must, &c. yet there bee other words which will release an execution without expresse words of a release of execution.

As if a man release all suites, the execution is gone; for no man can have execution without prayer and suit, but the king only; and therefore if the king releaseth all suites, it is no barre of his execution, because in the king's case the judges ought to award execution ex officio without any suite; but a release of executions doth barre the king in that case. And so note a diversity between a release of all actions, and a release of all suites.

19. H. 6. 4. 26. H. 6. Execution 7. Li. 8. fo. 153. Ed. Altham's case. Vid. Brooke, tit. Releases, 87.

So if the body of a man be taken in execution; and the plaintife releaseth all actions, yet shall he remaine in execution; but if he release all debts or duties, he is to be discharged of the execution, because the debt or duty it selfe is discharged.

In the same manner if execution be sued upon a recognizance by elegit, and the consuee by deed make a defeasance, that if the consuee doth such an act, that then the recognizance shall be void; by this the execution is discharged.

So it is if judgement be given in an action of debt, and the body of the defendant is taken in execution by a capias ad satisfaciendum; and after the plaintife releaseth the judgement, by this the body shall be discharged of the execution.

If the plaintife after judgement release all demands, the execution is discharged, as shall appeare by that which next hereafter shall be said.

If A. be accountable to B. and B. releaseth him all his duties, this is no barre in an action of account, for duties extend to things certaine, and what shall fall out upon the account is incertaine; and albeit the Latine word is debita, yet duties doe extend to all things due that is certaine, and therefore dischargeth judgements in personall actions, and executions also.

26. H. 6. tit. Executi in 7.

20. Aff. p. 7. (6. Rep. 13. b.) (10. Rep. 47.)

26. H. 6. ubi supra.

20. H. 6. 6. per Passor.

Sect.

* et per added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M.

‡ ne suera execution—ferrois ouste d'action, L. and M. and Roh.

would not have been more beneficial to the public. The French have shewn a much more rigid and pertinacious adherence to the letter of their laws respecting the registration of deeds and wills. By laws of that kingdom as ancient as the 16th century, particularly an ordonnance of Henry II. of the year 1553, it was ordered, that all wills and deeds, containing substitutions of estates, should be registered within a particular period of time. If they were not registered within that time, the courts seem to have doubted whether they were binding even on the parties, in whose favour the substitutions were made; but it was always settled, that the substitutions were of no force against creditors or purchasers. Several points of the laws respecting substitutions being unsettled, and the laws respecting them being different in different parts of the kingdom, they were all reduced into one law, by the celebrated ordonnance of August 1747. That ordonnance was framed by the chancellor D'Aguesseau, after taking the sentiments of every parliament in the kingdom upon forty-five different questions proposed to them upon the subject. The thirty-ninth question is, "Whether a creditor or purchaser, having notice of the substitution, before his contract or purchase, is to be admitted to plead the want of registration?" All the parliaments, except the parliament of Flandres, agreed, that he was; that to admit the contrary doctrine would make it always open to argument, whether he had or had not notice of the substitution; that this would lead to endless uncertainty, confusion, and perjury; and that it was much better that the right of the subject should depend upon certain and fixed principles of law, than upon rules and constructions of equity, which must be arbitrary, and consequently uncertain. The ordonnance of August 1747 was framed accordingly. Those who have commented upon that ordonnance lay it down as a fixed and undeniable principle, that nothing, not even the most actual and direct notice, countervails the want of registration; so that if a person is a witness, or even a party, to the deed of substitution, still, if it is not registered, he may safely purchase the property substituted, or lend money upon a mortgage of it. See Questions concernant les Substitutions, Toulouse 1776, and Commentaire de l'Ordonnance de Louis XV. sur les Substitutions, par Mr. Fargoles a Paris, 1767.—The preservation of uses, under the appellation of trusts, is another circumstance that has contributed to defeat the intended effect of the statute of uses. This is not the place for a discussion of every branch of the law of trusts. But some observations will be offered to shew in what manner the courts have remedied the mischiefs arising from the secret nature of that species of property, both with respect to the cestuy que trust, and the public at large.—I. As to the manner in which the courts have remedied the mischief arising from the admission of trusts, with respect to the cestuy que trust. This has been effected in some degree by the courts of equity having held, that persons paying money to trustees, with notice of the trust, are, generally speaking, obliged to see it properly applied. Lord Mansfield, in his very distinguished argument in the great case of Burgess v. Wheate, observes, "that the cestuy que trust is actually and absolutely seized of the freehold, in the consideration of a court of equity; that the trust is the land, in that court; and that the declaration of the trust is the disposition of the land." It is, perhaps, to be wished, that the operation and consequences of trusts had been confined to the trustee and cestuy que trust. There is no doubt but the doctrine in question is in many instances of great service to the cestuy que trust, as it preserves his property from the speculations and other disasters to which, if it were left

Sect. 508.

(5. Rep. 56. a.)
(Cro. Jac. 623.)
(Sid. 141.)

TOUTS manners de demands.

Demande, Demandum, is a word of art, and in the understanding of the common law is of so large an extent, as no other one word in the law is, unless it be clameum, whereof Littleton maketh mention Señ. 445. And here is to be observed, that there be two kinde of demands or claimes, viz. a demand or claime in deed, and a demand or claime in law; or an expresse, and an implied demand or claime.

Lit. Sect. 445. Brañt. li. 1. cap. 10. Pl. Com. Steill's case, 399, &c.

(8. Rep. Altham's case, fol. 151.)

Littleton here putteth examples of both: and first he speaketh of reall actions, wherein hee that bringeth his action maketh his demand, and therefore hee is properly called a demandant; and hee that defendeth is called tenant, because hee is tenant of the freehold of the land.

(2. Cro. 487.)

38. H. 8. tit. Releas. Br. 9.
6. H. 7. 15. 19. H. 6. 3. 4.
20. Aff. Pl. 5. 40. E. 3. 22.
49. E. 3. 7. b. 50. Aff. Pl. 6.
14. H. 4. 8. 13. R. 2. tit.
Avow. 89. Lib. 8. fo. 153. Ed.
Altham's case.
Lit. 170. Sect. 748.
Dyer 5. El. 217.
(Yelv. 214.)
(Cro. Jac. 170, 171.)
(10. Rep. 51. b.)

Of demands implied, or in law, Littleton putteth examples: First, of all actions personals: secondly, of appeales: for in both those cases he that bringeth the suit is called plaintiff, and not demandant, and he that defendeth is called defendant. Thirdly, of executions. Fourthly, of title or right of entry, eyther by force of a condition, or by any former right, which merely is a demand or claime in law; but otherwise it is in the king's case. Fifthly, of a rent service, rent charge, common of pasture, &c. which also are meere demands or claimes in law. (1) All which Littleton here, and in the two next Sections following, putteth but for examples; for by the release of all demands, other things also be released, as rents seck, all mixt actions, a warranty which is a covenant reall, and all other covenants reall and personall, estovers, all manner of commons and profits apprender, conditions before they be broken or performed, or after, annuities, recognizances, statutes merchant or of the staple, obligations, contracts, &c. are released and discharged. (2)

Sect. 509.

ET si home ad title de entry en ascuns terres ou tenements, per tiel release son title est ale.

|| Sed quære de hoc; car Fitz-James chiefe justice de Engleterre tient le contrary, pur ceo que entre ne poit properment estre dit demande, P. 19. H. 8. *

(10. Rep. 47.)
(1. Lev. 99.)
(3. Lev. 274.)

AND if a man hath title of entry into any lands or tenements, by such a release his title is taken away.

Sed quære de hoc; for Fitz-James chiefe justice of England holdeth the contrary, because an entrie cannot be properly said a demand.

Title

* de not in L. and M. nor Roh.
§ de not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† a luy—que celuy. L. and M. and Roh.
|| This paragraph not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† que il, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Nota the diversity. If A. releases to B. all his demands generally, or all his demands out of the manor of D. there, rent and common is released, whether present or future: but if he releases to B. all demands which he has upon him, there, no rent or common, present or future, is released, quia release est tantum personel. Trin. 5. Ja. Hancock v. Field.—Adjudged contra, that a release of all demands is not a bar to a covenant before breach;—but it is agreed, that it bars warranty, for that lies properly on demand, because he may have warrantia chartæ. So also reservation of rent, by indenture, is a covenant in law, viz. covenant real; for it runs with the land, and does not lie, after a duration, but against the tenant of the land: and it is agreed that by a release of all demands a covenant real is released; for the rent itself, upon which the covenant in law rises, is released.—So 14. H. 8. 9. But however the law may be of covenants real, it seems to be contrary of covenants personel;—and so there is good difference. Sed forsan, these passages are not to be understood of covenants before the breach, though covenants before the breach are expresse. Ld. Nott. MSS.

(2) But a release of all demands does not discharge rent before it is due, if it be a rent incident to the reversion; for the rent at the time was not only not due, but the consideration, viz. the future enjoyment of the lands, for which the rent was to be given, was not executed. 1. Sid. 141. 1. Lev. 99. 3. Lev. 274. Note to the 12th edition.

left solely to the discretion of the trustee, it would necessarily be subject. Yet it may be questioned, whether the admission of it is not in general productive of more inconvenience than real good; for if the cestuy que trust is a married woman, an infant, or otherwise incapable of giving assent to the payment of the money to the trustee, the persons paying it cannot be indemnified against the trustee's misapplication of it, but by paying it under the sanction of a court of equity. This retards, and often absolutely impedes the progress of the business, involves the parties in an expensive and intricate litigation, and puts them to a very great, and, in other respects, an useless expence. To avoid this, it is become usual to insert a clause in deeds or wills, that the receipts of the trustees shall, of themselves, discharge the persons to whom they are given, from the obligation of seeing to the application of the money paid by them. In some instances, without any clause of this nature, a person paying money to a trustee is not answerable for the misapplication of it, tho' he has notice of the trust. Perhaps the following distinctions and observations will be found of use towards obtaining an accurate knowledge of the rules of equity upon this complex subject.—1stly, With regard to personal estate, it is every where admitted, that if a testator, possessed of personal estate only, dies indebted, having by his will directed his estates to be sold for the payment of his debts, whether he specifies them or not, the mortgagee or purchaser of any part of his personal assets, is not bound to see to the application of his mortgage, or purchase-money. See Elliott and Merryman, Barnardiston Rep. in Cha. page 78. But TITLE. Here title is taken in the largest sense, including right also.

34. H. 8. 41. Release. B. 9.
Chauncey's case. Lib. 8. 10. 153.
Ed. Altham's case.

* Sed quære, &c. This is an addition, and no part of Littleton, and the opinion here cited cleerely against law.

Sect. 510.

ET si home ad rent service AND if a man hath a rent service or rent charge, or common de pasture, &c. per tiel mon of pasture, &c. by such a release de tous manners de lease of all manner of demands fait al tenaunts de la made to the tenants of the land terre dont le service ou le rent out of which the service or the rent est issuant, ou en † que le common is, the service, the rent, and common est, le service, le rent, et the common, is taken away and le common, est ale et extinct, &c. extinct, &c.

This upon that which hath been said, needeth no further explication.

Sect. 511.

ITEM, si home ALSO, if a man releaseth to another all manner of quarrels, or all controversies or debates entre eux, &c. quære, betweene them, &c. a quel matter et a quære, to what matter quel effect tiels parols soy extendont, and to what effect such words shall extend &c. themselves, &c.

QUARRELS, Quærela, à querendo. This properly concerneth personall actions, or mixt, at the highest; for the plaintife in them is called querens, and in most of the writs it is said, queritur. And yet if a man release all querels (a man's deed being taken most strongly against himself) it is as beneficiall as all actions; for by it all actions, reall and personall, are released. And by the release of all quarrels, all causes of actions are released thereby, albeit no action be then depending for the same.

Quarrels. Controversies and debates are synonima, and of one signification. Litis nomen omnem actionem significat, sive in rem, sive in personam sit. If a man release omnes loquelas, it is as large as omnes actiones; for omnis actio est loquela, and it extendeth as well to actions in courts of record, as base courts; for the writ of error saith, in recordo et processu, &c. loquela quæ fait inter, &c. And so the writ of false judgement saith, recordari facias loquelam, where the judgement was given in the county court. Omnes actiones seeme to be large words; for ex actio derivatur ab exigendo, and exigere signifieth to enquire or demand.

Sect. 512.

ITEM, si home per ALSO, if a man by RELESSA al ob- (Dyer. 307. a. Cro. Car. 496.) son fait soit ob- his deede bee ligor tous aclige a un auter en bound to another in a tions, &c. The reason of † que—quelle terre, L. and M. and Roh.

But if he charges a specific part of his personally with the payment of a specific debt or legacy, it is a matter of doubt how far the purchaser of that specific part is answerable. In the case of Bell v. Humble, 2 Vern. 444. the master of the rolls decreed, that a mortgagee of a term of years from an executor (which term of years was specifically bequeathed) was not answerable for the misapplication of his purchase-money.—This decree was reversed in the house of lords in 1703-4. Two cases in Peere Williams, Ever v. Corbett, and Bunting v. Stonard, vol. 2. p. 148. & 150. coincide with the master of the rolls against the house of lords. And see Gilbert's Reports, 113. It should, however, be observed, that the principle on which the courts have founded their opinion, that the purchaser or mortgagee of any part of the testator's assets specifically bequeathed is not answerable for the misapplication of his purchase or mortgage money, is, that the whole of the personal estate being bound to pay the debts of the testator, that specific part (though specifically charged) is liable with the rest: it has therefore been held, that the purchaser must not have notice that there are no debts, or that the debts are paid. Yet it seems clear from Ever v. Corbett, that though by such notice of there being no debts, or of the debts being paid, he makes himself answerable for his purchase or mortgage money; yet he is not bound, previously, to enquire and satisfy himself, that there are debts unpaid, or that the parts of the assets not specifically bequeathed are sufficient to pay the debts and legacies. 2dly, With respect to the devise of a real estate for the payment of debts: It must first be observed, on the authority of the cases of Cutler and Coxeter, 2 Vern. 302. French and Chichester, 2 Vern. 568. and 2. Vez. 590. that if a person charges both his real and personal estates with the payment of his debts, the personal estate must be first applied; and that it is therefore immaterial, whether the testator charges the personal estate in the first instance, or not.—Now, if a person devises to trustees to sell for the payment of his debts, all the books agree (see particularly the case above cited of Elliott v. Merryman, Spalding and Shalmer, 1. Vern. 301. Culpepper v. Aston, 2. Chan. Cases 115. 221. 1. Vez. 173. and 215. Cottrell v. Hampson, 2. Vern. 5. Smith v. Guyon, Bro. Ca. in Cha. 186.) that if the debts are specified or scheduled, the purchaser or mortgagee is bound to see to the application of his money; but that if they are not specified, or scheduled, he is not bound to see to such application; it being considered, that his specifying them is an evidence of his intention that the purchaser should be obliged to see to the application; and that his not specifying them is an evidence of the contrary. For this distinction is not to be considered as taking its rise from any fundamental principle of equity or justice, that when the testator devises in one manner, the purchasers or mortgagees should be answerable; and that if he devises in another manner, they should not be answerable; but merely as a rule of construction: for it is clearly in the testator's power to make the purchaser or mortgagee either answerable or not answerable. Where there is not any positive clause, or expression, to denote his intention one way or the other, recourse must be had to implication; and when there is no contrary implication, the courts consider the modes of the devise in this respect, to amount to an implication. As to legacies, they, from their nature, must be considered so far as specified or scheduled debts, that the purchaser or mortgagee from a devise of a real estate in trust

(2. R. II. 410. 412.)
 41. H. 4. 41. 43.
 (9. Rep. 37, 38. 2. Inst. 398.)

[5] Trin. 2. Ja. in Com. Banco, inter Middleton & Rinnot.
 18. H. 6. 23. b. Pl. Com. 277.
 278. in Greibroke's case per Weston.

5. Eliz. Dier. 217.

Altham's case ubi supra.

(10. Rep. 51. b. 1. Rep. 112. b.
 2. Cro. 222. 571. Sid. 85.
 Hob. 216.)

of this case is, for that the debt is a thing consisting merely in action; and therefore albeit no action lyeth for the debt, because it is debitum in presenti, quatenus sit solvendum in future, yet because the right of action is in him, the release of all actions is a discharge of the debt it selfe. [6] And so may an executor before probate release an action; and yet before probate he can have no action, because the right of the action is in him, and so it was adjudged. And some say, that an ordinary may release an action, and yet he can have none. But if a man by deed doth covenant to build an house or make an estate, and before the covenant broken, the covenantee releaseth to him all actions, suits, and quarrels, this doth not discharge the covenant it selfe, because at the time of the release, nihil fuit debitum, there was no debt or duty, or cause of action in being. But in that case a release of all covenants is a good discharge of the covenant before it be broken.

*certainne somme de certaine somme of money, a payer al money, to pay at the feast de S. Michael feast of Saint Michael prochain ensuant, * el next ensuing, if the si le obligee devant le obligee before the dit feast releffa al said feast release to obligor tous ac- the obligor all actions, tions, il serra barre del he shall be barred dutie a tous temps, of the duty for ever, et uncore il ne puis- and yet hee could not soit aver action al have an action at the temps de release time of the release fait. made.*

Sect. 513.

RELEASE tous actions.

This release shall not barre the lessor of his rent, because it was neither debitum nor solvendum at the time of the release made; for if the land be evicted from the lessee before the rent become due, the rent is avoyded; for it is to be paid out of the profits of the land, and it is a thing not merely in action, because it may be granted over. But the lessor before the day may acquite or release the rent. But if a man be bound in a bond or by contract to another to pay a hundred pounds at five severall daies, he shall not have an action of debt before the last day be past: and so note a diversity between duties

MES si home leffa terre a un auter pur terme d'un an, rendant a luy al feast de S. Michael prochain ensuant 40 s. et puis devant mesme le feast il releffa al lessee tous acts, uncore apres mesme le feast il avera act de debt pur non payment de les 40 s. nient obstant le dit releas. Stude causam diversitatis enter les deux cases.

BUT if a man letteth land to another for a yeare, to yeeld to him at the feast of S. Mich. next insuing 40s. and afterwards before the same feast hee releaseth to the lessee all actions, yet after the same feast hee shall have an action of debt for the non payment of the 40 s. notwithstanding the said release. Stude causam diversitatis betweene these two cases.

which touch the realty, and the meere personalty. But if a man be bound in a recognizance to pay a hundred pound at five severall dayes, presently after the first day of payment he shall have execution upon the recognizance for that summe, and shall not tarry till the last be past, for that it is in the nature of severall judgements. And so note a diversity between a debt due by recognizance, and a debt due by bond or contract. And so it is of a covenant or promise, after the first default an action of covenant, or an action upon the case doth lie, for they are severall in their nature. Lastly, note a diversity between debts and covenants, or promises.

If a man hath an annuity for terme of yeares, or for life, or in fee, and he before it be behind doth release all actions, this shall not release the annuity, for it is not merely in action, because it may be granted over.

Sect.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

trust to sell it for the payment of debts and legacies, must see his money applied in the discharge of them, unless there is an expresse clause, or sufficient implication from other parts of the will, that the deviser intended to free him from that obligation.—11. As to the manner in which courts of equity have attempted to prevent the mischiefs arising from the admission of trusts, with respect to the public at large:—This has been effected in some measure, by its having been laid down as a general rule, that in any competition of claims, where the equity of the parties is equal, he who has the law shall prevail. See Francis's Maxims of Equity, 61. If a person has the legal estate or interest of the subject matter in contest, he must necessarily prevail at law over him whose right is only equitable, and therefore not even noticed by the courts of law. This advantage he carries with him, so far, even into a court of equity, that if the equitable claims of the parties are of equal force, equity will leave him who has the legal right in full possession of it, and not do any thing to reduce him to an equality with the other, who has the equitable right only.—Perhaps the following illustration of this very important rule of equity, by an enquiry into the doctrines of courts of equity respecting terms of years, attendant upon the inheritance, will not be unacceptable to the reader.—At common law, leases for years were not supposed to transfer any property to the lessee, and were generally of very short duration; for, as they tended to prevent the crown of its forfeitures, and the lord of the fruits of his tenures, they were considered with a very jealous eye. Besides, the possession of the lessee was considered as the possession of the freeholder; and if his lease was defeated or disturbed, though he could recover for damages, he had no means to recover the possession. Moreover, leases for years were subject to be absolutely defeated, either by a real or fictitious recovery against the freeholder; but in the reign of Henry IV. or, at least, in that of Henry VII. the courts resolved, that the lessee should not only recover damages, as a recompence for the loss of the possession, but should also recover the possession itself. Afterwards the 21st Hen. 8. c. 15. protected the lessee against the effect of fictitious recoveries. These alterations of the common law gave the lessee for years an interest and stability which he had not before. Still, in the eye of the law, particularly before the demolition of the feudal tenures, terms of years were in every respect but pecuniary emolument, far inferior to estates of freehold. This stability on the one hand, and subordinate state of property on the other, made them very proper and convenient modifications of property, for securing money or any other charges upon the fee, or for giving a partial or temporary right to the profits or beneficial property of the land, in those cases where the owner wished to have, not only the remainder or reversion,

Sect. 514.

*ITEM, ou home voile suer brieve de droit, il covient que il counta del seisin de luy, ou de ses ancestors, et auxy que le seisin fuit en temps de mesme le roy, come il counta en son count.
Car cest un ancien ley use, come appiert per le report d'un plee en le eire de Nottingham *, titulo Droit en Fitzherbert, cap. 26. entiel serme que ensuist. John Barre port son brieve de droit envers Reynold de Assington, et demaunda certaine tenements, &c. † ou le mise est joyne en le bank, et originall et le proces fueront demandes de-vant justices errants,
oules parties viendront, et les ‡ 12 chiva-
lers fieront leur serement sans challenge des parties, d'estre allowes, sur ceo que election fuit fait per assent des parties, ove
les quater chivalers, et le serement fuit tiel:
Que jeo verity dirre,
&c. lequel R. de A. ad plus mere droit a tener les tenements que
John Barre demanda vers luy per son brieve de droit, ou John de*

*ALSO, where a man will sue a writ of right, it behoveth that he counteth of the seisin of himselfe, or of his ancestors, and also that the seisin was in the same king's time, as he pleadeth in his plea. For this is an ancient law used, as appeareth by the report of a plea in the eire of Nottingham, tit. Droit in Fitzherbert, cap. 26 in this forme following.
John Barre brought his writ of right against Reynold of Assington, and demanded certaine lands, &c. where the mise is joyned in banke, and the originall and the processe were sent before the justices errants, where the parties came,
and the twelve knights were sworne without challenge of the parties, to be allowed, because that choise was made by assent of the parties, with the four knights, and the oath was this: That I shall say the truth, &c. whether R. of A. hath more meere right to hold the tenements which John Barre demandeth against him by his writ of right, or John to have*

IL covient que il counta del seisin de luy ou de ses auncestors.

For (Ant. 279. a.) if neyther hee nor any of his ancestors were seif-ed of the land, &c. within the time of limitation, hee cannot maintaine a writ of right; for the seisin of him of whom the demaundant himselfe purchased the land, &c. availeth not.

And so it is in a writ of right of advowson. (8. Rep. 65. Hob. 240.)
F. N. B. 30. a. 2. E. 3. 27.
Litl. 112. a.

Auxy que le sei-sin fuit en temps de mesme le roy come il counta. Hereby it appeareth, that not onely
a seisin (as hath beene said) is requisite, but also that the seisin be had in the time of the same king, according to his count.

Report commeth of the Latine word Reportare, à re et porto, id est, referre, à re et fero. And in the common law, it signifieth a pub-like relation, or a bringing againe to memory cases judicially argued, debated, resolved, or adjudged in any of the king's courts of justice, together with such causes and reasons as were delivered by the judges of the same; and in this sense Littleton useth the word in this place.

*En le eire de Nottingham. Eire,
Iter.* And it signifieth (4. Inst. 184.)
the court of the justices in eire, and thereupon they were called justitarii itinerantes, in respect that the justices residing at West-

* titulo Droit en Fitzherbert, cap. 26. not in L. and M. nor Roh.
L. and M. nor Roh.

† ou not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ 12 not in reversion, but the actual freehold. Hence we find mortgages for long terms of years very frequent in the reign of queen Elizabeth. Now, according to our notions of mortgages, if the mortgage debt is not paid at the time appointed, the estate mortgaged is absolutely forfeited to, and becomes the property of, the mortgagee, at law; but courts of equity permit the mortgagor to redeem, on payment to the mortgagee of his principal, interest and costs. Still this is merely a right in equity, the legal estate continuing in the mortgagee. Thus if an estate be demised for a term of years, with a proviso making the term void on payment of a sum of money with interest, before or upon a certain day, the condition is not considered at law as complied with, unless the money is paid on or before that very day; if it is not paid then, the estate belongs at law to the mortgagee, for the remainder of the term. And though a court of equity allows the mortgagor to redeem it, by paying the principal, interest and costs, after that time, this subsequent payment, though it gives the mortgagee the equitable right to the estate, does not affect the legal continuance of the term. In this respect our law differs from the civil law; in which a mortgage is considered only as an accessory of the debt; and payment at any time, by annulling the debt, extinguishes the mortgage. To apply this doctrine to terms of years. After payment of the mortgage debt, the term of years for which the mortgage is made, is in law in the mortgagee; but, in equity, the mortgagor is entitled to the benefit of it. By an analogy to the case of mortgages, when terms of years are created for securing the payment of jointures, portions for children, or for any other purpose, they do not determine (unless there is a special proviso) by the performance of the trusts for which they are raised. Thus in all these cases, the legal interest during the continuance of the term, is in the trustee; but the owner of the fee is entitled to the equitable interest, or rather to all the benefit or advantage which can be made of the term during its continuance. As the courts of common law had determined, that the possession of the lessee for years was the possession of the owner of the freehold, courts of equity determined, that where the tenant for years was but a trustee for the owner of the inheritance, he should not oust his cestuy que trust, or obstruct him in doing any act of ownership, or in making any assurances of his estate. In these respects, therefore, the term is consolidated with the inheritance. It follows the descent to the heir, and all the alienations made of the inheritance, or of any partial estate or interest carved out of it by deed, by will, or by act of law. Whitchurch v. Whitchurch, 2. P. W. 236. 9. Mod. 124. Gilb. Rep. 168. Villiers and Villiers, 2. Atk. 7. Hoole v. Sales, 2. Will. 329. Still, tho' the trust or benefit of the term is annexed to the inheritance, yet the legal interest of the term remains distinct and separate from it at law, and the whole benefit and advantage to be made of the term arises from this separation. For if two persons, or more, have claims upon the inheritance under different titles, a term of years attendant upon it is still so distinct from it, that if any one of them obtains an assignment of it, then (unless he is affected by any of the circumstances which equity considers as fraudulent) he will be entitled, both at law and in equity, to the estate for the whole continuance of the term, to the utter exclusion of all the other claimants. This, if the term is of long duration, absolutely deprives all the other claimants of every kind of benefit in the land. Supposing, therefore, A. purchases an estate, which, previous to his purchase, had been sold, mortgaged, leased, and charged with every kind of incumbrance to which

[p] Mirror cap. 2. sect. 3. and sect. 15. and ca. 4. le office des Justices in Eire. Glanv. li. 9.
cap. 11. Li. 8. cap. primo. Britt.
fol. 1. b. 7. 8. &c. Braet. lib. 3.
fo. 115. &c. Flet. li. 1. ca. 15.
&c. 4. E. 3. 32. 6. E. 3. 35.
23. E. 3. 21. 15. H. 7. 5.
Vide Sect. 442. 233. 234.

Westminster were called justitiiarii residentes, and were much like in this respect to the justices of assise at this day, although for authority and manner of proceeding (whereof you shall reade
[p] in the ancient authors of the law) farre different. And as the power of the justices of assises by many acts of parliament and other commissions increased, so these justices itinerant by little and little vanished away. And it is certaine, that the authority of justices of assises itinerant through the whole realme, and the institution of justices of peace in every county being duely performed, are the moit excellent meanes for the preservation of the king's peace, and quiet of the realme, of any other in the Christian world.

De Nottingham.

This should bee Northampton, according to the originall.

This report whereof Littleton here maketh mention, you shall finde an abstract of it in 3. E. 3.
since Littleton's time,
put in print by Fitzherbert when he was serjant in 11. H. 8. and is not in the Reports or bookes at large. And yet here it appeareth, that they be of great authority, and vouched by Littleton himselfe for the prooffe of a maine point in law. And hereby it also appeareth how necessary it is to reade records and pleas reported or recorded, though they were never printed. For those and the like records are veritatis et iustitias vestigia.

Tit. droit in enquires ouster del †† And after the grand as-Fitzherbert, 26. is briefe. Et puis le life came in with their

* ne—jeo, L. and M. and Roh.
‡ vous—home, L. and M. and Roh.
†† briefe—droit, L. and M. and Roh.

† en—le, L. and M. and Roh.
§ John not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ al entent—et ceo fert, L. and M. and Roh. and in MSS.
 vous—home, L. and M. and Roh. and MSS.

real property is subject; in this case A. and the other purchasers, and all the incumbrancers, have equal claims upon the estate. This is the meaning of the expression, that their equity is equal. But if there is a term of years subsisting in the estate, which was created prior to any of the purchases, mortgages, or other incumbrances, and A. procures an assignment of it in trust for himself, this gives him the legal interest in the lands during the continuance of the term, absolutely discharged from, and unaffected by, any of the purchases, mortgages, and other incumbrances, subsequent to the creation of the term, but prior to his purchase. This is the meaning of the expression in assignments of terms, that they are to protect the purchaser from all mesne incumbrances. But it is to be observed, that A. to be entitled in equity to the benefit of the term, must have all the following requisites: he must be a purchaser for a valuable consideration; his purchase must in all respects be a fair purchase, and free from every kind of fraud; and at the time of his purchase he must have no notice of the prior conveyance, mortgage, charge, or other incumbrance. It is to be observed, that mortgages, annuities, judgment creditors, lessees, and all other incumbrancers, are purchasers in this sense, to the amount of their several charges, interests, or rights. If any person of this description, unaffected by notice or fraud, takes a defective conveyance or assignment of the fee, or of any estate carved out of it, defective either by reason of some prior conveyance, or of some prior charge or incumbrance; and if he also takes an assignment of a term to a trustee for himself, or to himself, where he takes the conveyance of the inheritance to his trustee; in each of these cases, he is entitled to the full benefit of the term; that is, he may use the legal estate of the term to defend his possession during the continuance of the term, or, if he has lost the possession, to recover it at common law, in preference to all claimants prior to his purchase, but subsequent to his term. All this was laid down and explained by lord Hardwicke, in the case of Willoughby and Willoughby in Cha. Trin. 30. Geo. 2. 1756. Upon the same principles was decided the case of Stanhope v. earl Verney, before lord Northington, in chancery, July 27, 1761. The case there was, that Henry Sayer, being seised in fee of certain estates subject to an outstanding term of years, in Rigby and Eyre, by indenture of lease and release, bearing date the 4th and 5th days of June 1732, conveyed them to lady Dyfart and her heirs, for securing the payment of 1000*l.* and interest, and covenanted to produce the deeds respecting the terms of years. Afterwards Rigby and Eyre assigned the term to Cunningham and Clayton in trust for Sayer, his heirs and assigns; and then Sayer, by indenture dated the 19th day of Dec. 1732, conveyed the same estates to mrs. Nash (under whom lord Verney claimed) by way of mortgage, for securing to her 3000*l.* and interest, with a declaration that Cunningham and Clayton should stand possessed of the term in trust for her, and the deeds respecting it were delivered to her, and neither she nor the trustees had notice of the mortgage to lady Dyfart. Lady Dyfart brought an ejectment; lord Verney defended, and set up the term, with a declaration of the trust of it in favour of mrs. Nash, under whom he claimed. Upon this lady Dyfart brought her bill in equity. The question was, which should be preferred? lady Dyfart, who had the first declaration of the trust of the term, or lord Verney, graund assise reviendrait ove lour verdict, et di-font, que Rafe * ne fuit pas seise en temps le roy H. per que fuit agard que Reynold tiendrait les tenements vers luy demandes, a luy et ses heires quites de John Barre et ses heires a remnant. Et John en le mercie, &c. Et le cause pur que jeo aye monstre icy a toy, mon fils, cest plee, est, pur prover le matter precedent que est dit en brieve de droit, &c. car il semble per cest plee, que si Reynold n'avoit pas ten-due demy marke pur enquiere del temps, &c.

donques le graund assise duisoit estre chargetant-selement del mere droit, et nemy del possession,
&c. † Et issint que tous
foits en brieve de droit, si le possession dont le demandant counta soit en temps le roy, come il avoit counte, donques le charge del grande assise serra tantselement sur le mere droit, coment que le possession fuit encounter le ley, come il est dit adevant en cest chapter, &c.

verdict, and said, that Rafe was not seised in the time of king Henry, whereby it was awarded that Reynold should hold the tenements demanded against him, to him and his heires quite of John Barre and his heires to the remnant.
And John in mercy, &c.
And the reason why I have shewed to thee, my son, this plea, is, to prove the matter precedent which is said in a writ of right; for it seemeth by this plea, that if Reynold had not tendred the halfe marke to enquire of the time, &c.
then the grand assise ought to be charged onely to enquire of the meere right, and not of the possession, &c. And so alwayes in a writ of right, if the possession wherof the demandant counteth bee in the king's time, as hee hath pleaded, then the charge of the grand assise shall be only upon the meere right, although that the possession were against the law, as it is said before in this chapter,
&c.

of a new addition; and therefore though it bee true, yet not to bee allowed.

Et le original et le proces fuera de-mande devant justices itinerants. For it is to be understood, that all pleas either in the realty or personalty that were begunne and not determined before justices in cire, were adjourned by them into the court of common pleas.

4. E. 3. 41. Peverel's case.
Mirror,
Glanvil,
Bracton,
Britton,
Fleta; } ubi supra.

Les 12 chivalers fieront lour serement sauns challenge, &c. pur ceo que le election fuit fait per assent des parties ove les 4 chivalers.

Here are foure things to be observed.

First, that omnis consensus tollit errorem, and against his owne consent he cannot challenge the twelve.

Secondly, that the foure knights electors of the grand assise are not to be challenged, for that in law they bee
judges to that purpose, and judges or justices cannot bee challenged.
And that is the reason that noblemen, that in case of high treason are to passe upon a peere of the realme, cannot be challenged, because they are judges of the fact,
and the Magna Charta saith, per judicium parium suorum.

30. E. 1. tit. challenge 172.
21. E. 4. 77. 39. E. 3. 1.
44. E. 3. 6. 11 H. 6. 13.
(Cro. El. 664.)

4. E. 3. 13.

Magna Charta cap. 29.

Thirdly, that the twelve before any assent

39. E. 3. 2. 7. H. 4. 20.

7. H. 4. 20.

may be challenged before the foure knights electors, but after assent or return of the pannell before the justices, there shall be no challenge to the pannell nor to the polles.

Fourthly, if there be not foure knights for electors in that county, the next to them in that county shall be taken; ne curia regis deficeret in justitiâ exhibendâ.

Sauns dire a lour escient. And here it appeareth, that where the judgement is finall, there the oath of the grand assise or jury is absolute, and not to their knowledge, as here

* ne not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Verney, who had the subsequent declaration of the trust, but had the custody of the deed.—Lord Northington held, that a declaration of trust in favour of an incumbrancer, was tantamount to an actual assignment, unless a subsequent incumbrancer, bona fide, and without notice, procured an assignment; and that the custody of the deeds respecting the term, with a declaration of the trust of it in favour of a second incumbrancer, was equivalent to an actual assignment; and therefore gave him an advantage over the first incumbrancer, which equity would not take from him. Such being the advantages to be derived from terms of years, it is an object of great consequence to ascertain, when it is safe for the purchaser to leave them in the trustee in whom he finds them, and when it is necessary or prudential to require them to be assigned to a trustee of his own.—But it is more easy to say where it is unsafe, than to say where it is safe, for him to be satisfied without such an assignment of it.—1st, It may be laid down, as a general rule, that whenever a term has been raised for securing the payment of money, as the assignment of it by the trustee for the person intitled to receive, to a trustee for the person obliged to pay, the money, is the best possible evidence of the payment of the money, it may be reasonably required as such.—2dly, In case a term of years has been assigned to attend the inheritance, if, upon a purchase (taking it in the above

here in the writ of right, in the attainr, and in wager of law, for the judgement in every of these three is final.

Vide Sect. 193.

Reg. from.

33. H. 8. ca. 13. 3. E. 6. ca. 36.

10. E. 3. 20. 31. E. 3. droit 11.
22. E. 3. 17. 18. H. 3. droit 62.
33. E. 3. 1b. 39. Lamb. explicat.
verborum verbo Mancusa.

F. N. B. 31. c. 3. 1. E. 3.
droit 15. 6. E. 3. ibid. 24.

Mirror, ca. 1. §. 17. ca. 3. de Attaint. ca. 5. §. 1. Bract. fo.
288, 289. &c. 292. Brit. fol. 241.
245, 246. &c. Flet. li. 5. ca. 21.
& 34. Fortescue ca. 26.

(3. Inst. 163. 222.)

[a] 23. H. 8. ca. 7. 3. Eliz.
Dyer. 201. 7. E. 6. ibidem 81.
3. Mar. ibidem 129. 7. Eliz. ibidem 235. 24. H. 8. Br. Attaint.
96. 4. Mar. ib. 127. 20. H. 7. 5.
42. E. 3. 26.
F. N. B. 107. D.
Mirror ca. 1. §. 3. ca. 3. §. ca. 5.
4. 1. Bracton lib. 3. 141. b. &
fo. 320. 331. Glanvil. lib. 2.
cap. 3. 4. 5. Lib. 8. ca. 9. Lib. 4.
ca. 1. Brit. fo. 40. 42, 43. 81.
175. 190. Fleta lib. 1. ca. 32. &
lib. 2. cap. 48.
[b] 4. E. 3. 41. 17. E. 3. 19. H. 6.
35. 1. H. 4. 3. 30. E. 3. 20.
29. E. 3. 12. 12. H. 4. 4. Stan.
174. 178. 17. Eli. Dyer. 9. E. 4.
35. 1. H. 6. 6. 3. H. 6. 55.
Vid. li. 9. fo. 32. b. & 33. b.
Mirror ca. 4. del office des justices, &c.
Glanvil. li. 1. cap. 9. lib. 8.
cap. 8.

Le mise est joyne. Mise is a word of art appropriated only to a writ of right, so called because both parties have put themselves upon the mere right to be tried by grand assise or by bataille: so as that which in all other actions is called an issue, in a writ of right in that case is called a mise. And in this sense Littleton taketh it here. But in a writ of right if a collateral point is to be tried, there it is called an issue; and is derived of this word (missum), because the whole cause is put upon this point. It is also taken for expences, as mise & castagia. And sometime it signifieth a customary grant to the king, or lord's marchers of Wales by their tenants at their first coming to their lands.

Tender di marke al roy. Master Lambard saith, that mancusa & marca Saxonic Mancup. 7. Meare. Nominus 30 vaicns denarios. And this meare, now called a marke, being an old Saxon word, is the cause that England most commonly reckoned by markes. Libra Saxonica is a pund, à pondo, which is called so until this day. Solidus, qui apud nos est pars librae vicesima, denarios per id temporis continebat quinque. nunc duodecim; and scilling is a Saxon word, and with us used to this day. Pennye, Saxonice pennig, i atinè denarius; but the value of these have not been alwayes one.

In a writ of right of advowson brought by the king, the tenant shall not tender the di-marke, because nullum tempus occurrit regi; and therefore the king shall alledge, that hee or his progenitor was seised, without shewing any time.

En attainr. Attinela is a writ that lyeth where a false verdict in court of record upon an issue joyned by the parties is given. And of ancient writers it is called brevé de convictione; and is derived of the participle vinctus, or attinens, for that if the petty jury be attainted of a false oath, they are stained with perjury, and become infamous for ever; for the judgement at the common law in the attainr importeth eight great and grievous punishments. 1. Quòd amittat liberam legem imperpetuum, that is, he shall be so infamous as he shall never be received to be a witnesse, or of any jury. 2. Quòd foris faciant omnia bona & catena sua. 3. Quòd terræ et tenementa in manus domini regis capiantur. 4. Quòd uxores & liberi extra domus suas ejicerentur. 5. Quid domus suæ profrentur. 6. Quòd arbores suæ extirpentur. 7. Quòd prata sua aventur. Et 8. Quòd corpora sua carceri mancipentur. So odious is perjury in this case in the eye of the common law, and the severity of this punishment is to this end, ut pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat; for there is misericordia puniens, and there is crudelitas parcens. And seeing all tryals of reall, personall, and mixt actions depend upon the oath of 12 men, prudent antiquity inflicted a strange and severe punishment upon them, if they were attainted of perjury.

But since Littleton wrote, a statute hath beene made in mitigation of the severity of the common law, in case when the petite jury is attainted, and therefore it is taken by equity. For where the statute saith, that the party grieved shall have an attainr against the party which shall have judgement upon the verdict, yet an attainr shall be maintained upon that statute against the executors of the party. Et sic de similibus. [a] But see the statute and authorities quoted in the margent. Only I thought good to observe three things.

First, that no attainr can be maintained upon this statute but between party and party.

Secondly, that no confuance can be granted upon any attainr, because all attainrs are to be taken either before the king in his bench, or before the justices of the common place, and in no other courts, &c.

Thirdly, consider what pleas may bee pleaded in an attainr by force of this act, and what not.

En bataille. Duellum, monomachia, and it signifieth in the common law a tryall by single fight, by bataille or combat, monomachia (1). [b] And in the writ of right neither the tenant or demandant shall fight for themselves, but finde a champion to fight for them: because if either the demandant or tenant should be slaine, no judgement could be given for the lands or tenements in question. But in an appeale the defendant shall fight for himselfe, and so shall the plaintife also; for there if the defendant be slaine, the plaintife hath the effect of his suite, that is, the death of the defendant; the order and solemnity whereof you may reade in our ancient and latter bookes. And this the law did institute when the tenant failed of his wittnesses, or evidences, or other proofes; and the presumption of law is, that God will give victory to him that hath right.

Ley gager, Vadiare legem; and there is also facere legem, by making of his law. That is, to take an oath (for example) that hee oweth not the debt demanded of him upon a simple contract, nor any penny thereof. And it is called wager of law, because of ancient time

* ne not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† Et, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Upon this subject, see 3. Black. ch. 22. sect. 5. and 6. and the notes to the 1st vol. of Dr. Robertson's History of Charles the Vth.—The reader will also find some curious and interesting particulars upon this head, in Pere le Brun, Traité de quelques pratiques superstitieuses qui ont séduit le peuple, et embarrassé les juges.

above extensive sense) all the deeds (as well originals as counterparts) by which the term was created or assigned, are delivered to the purchaser, and he is satisfied, that the trustee in whom it is then said to be vested, has made no prior assignment of it; it is difficult to say what possible use can be made of the term against him, or what good end can be answered by requiring an assignment of it to a trustee of his own, unless it be to satisfy the requisitions of those to whom he may afterwards have occasion to mortgage or sell the estate.—3dly, But if any of the deeds respecting the term are not delivered to the purchaser, or if he is not satisfied of the trustee's not having previously assigned it; it seems prudent to require an actual assignment of it to a trustee for him.—Few general rules, besides these, can be laid down upon this subject.—And these must from their nature be subject to an endless variety of modifications. In all cases of this description, it is infinitely better to err by an excess of care, than to trust any thing to hazard. There is no doubt but the precautions used for the security of purchasers appear sometimes to be excessive, and satisfactory reasons cannot always be given for requiring some of them: yet the more a person's experience increases, the more he finds the reason and real utility of them; and the more he will be convinced that very few of the precautions required by the general practice of the profession are without their use, or can be safely dispensed with.

time he put in surety to make his law at such a day; and it is called making of his law, because the law doth give such a special benefit to the defendant to barre the plaintife for ever in that case. [r] But he ought to bring with him eleven persons of his neighbours that will avow upon their oath, that in their consciences he saith truth, so as he himselfe must bee sworne de fidelitate, and the eleven de credulitate.

And wayer of law lieth not when there is a specialty, or deed to charge the defendant, but when it groweth by word, so as he may pay or satisfie the party in secret, whereof the defendant having no testimony of witnesses may wage his law, and thereby the plaintife is perpetually barred; as Littleton here saith; for the law presumeth that no man will forswear himselfe for any worldly thing; but mens consciences doe grow so large (specially in this case passing with impunity) as they choose rather to bring an action upon the case upon his promise, wherein (because it is trespasse sur le case) hee cannot wage his law, than an action of debt.

A man outlawed or attainted in an attainr, or upon an inditement of conspiracy; or of perjury, or otherwise, whereby he become infamous, shall not wage his law.

A man under the age of 21 yeares shall not wage his law; but a feme covert, together with her husband, shall wage her law.

When the suite is for the king, or for his benefit, as in a quo minus, the defendant shall not wage his law.

If an infant be plaintife, the defendant shall not wage his law. An alien shall wage his law in that language he can speake.

In no case where a contempt, trespassse, deceit, or injury is supposed in the defendant, he shall wage his law, because the law will not trust him with an oath to discharge himselfe in those cases; only in some cases in dett, detinue, accompt, the defendant is allowed by law to wage his law.

In an action of account against a receiver, upon a receipt of money by the hand of another person for account render (unlesse it be by the hands of his wife, or of his commoigne) the defendant shall not wage his law, because the receipt is the ground of the action, which lyeth not in privity betweene the plaintife and defendant, but in the notice of a third person, and such a receipt is traversable. [d] But in an action of debt upon an arbitrament, or in an action of detinue by the bailement of another's hand, the defendant shall wage his law, because the debet and the desinet is the ground of those actions, and the contract or bailement, though it be by another hand, is but the conveyance, and not traversable. In an action of account against a bailife of a mannor, the defendant cannot wage his law, because it foundeth in the realty. In an action of debt which concerns the realty, as for debt for a rent upon a lease for yeares, or an action of detinue for detaining an indenture of a lease for yeares, the defendant shall not wage his law, much lesse for charters or deedes which concerne inheritance.

In an action of debt for a fine or amerciament in a leete, the defendant shall not wage his law, because the leete is a court of record; but in an action of debt for an amerciament in a court baron the defendant shall wage his law, for that it is no court of record.

In debt upon an account, before auditors, the defendant shall not wage his law, and this by construction of the statute of W. 2. cap. 11. which giveth them great authority, and saith, coram auditoribus, and therefore of an account before one auditor the law lyeth. So if the lord before auditors be found in surplussage, in an action of debt brought by the accomptant, the lord shall not wage his law by construction also upon this statute, as an incident rising upon the account.

In an action of debt by a gaoler against the prisoner for his victuals, the defendant shall not wage his law, for he cannot refuse the prisoner, and ought not to suffer him to die for default of sustenance; otherwise it is for tabling of a man at large.

In an action of debt brought by an attorney for his fees, the defendant shall not wage his law, because he is compellable to be his attorney. And so if a servant be retained according to the statute of labourers in an action of debt for his salary, his master shall not wage his law, because he was compellable to serve; otherwise it is, if he be not retained according to the statute. (1)

Wheresoever a man is charged as executor or administrator, he shall not wage his law, for no man shall wage his law of another man's deed, but in case of a successor of an abbot, for that the house never dyeth.

In debt upon a penalty given by statute, the defendant shall not wage his law. There is another kinde of wayer of law in a reall action, of non summons, but thereof Littleton speaketh not.

Et sur ceo Herle justice dit, &c. Hereby it appeareth, that it is the office of

Lib. 10. cap. 5. Braet. li. 3. traet. 2. ca. 37. & li. 5. fol. 410. Britton fol. 56. Fleta lib. 2. ca. 56. 63. [r] Magna Carta ca. 28. Bracon lib. 5. fol. 410. Fleta lib. 2. ca. 63. Diversities des Courts. 33. H. 6. 8. (4. Rep. Slade's case 93.)

33. H. 6. 32.

11. H. 6. 40. 15. E. 4. 2. (Cro. Eliz. 161.)

32. H. 6. 24. 8. H. 5. Ley 66. 35. H. 8. Ley. Br. 102.

26. E. 3. 63. b. 21. H. 6. 42.

44. E. 3. 32. 18. E. 3. 4. 24. E. 3. 39. (4. Rep. 95. b.)

15. E. 4. 16. 10. E. 4. 5. (3. Cro. 790. 919.)

[d] 33. H. 6. 24. 13. H. 7. 3. 2. 22. H. 6. 41. 1. H. 6. 1. b. 8. H. 6. 11. 18. H. 8. 3. 3. E. 3. 28. 11. H. 4. 54. 5. H. 5. 13. 21. H. 6. 30. 24. E. 3. Ley 63. 30. E. 3. 19. 9. E. 4. 1.

34. H. 8. Ley Gager. Br. 97.

10. H. 6. 7. 1. H. 7. 25. 6. Eliz. Bendloes.

9. H. 5. 5. 8. H. 6. 15. 22. H. 6. 35. 38. H. 6. 6.

14. H. 6. 62. 38. H. 6. 6.

28. H. 6. 4. 19. H. 6. 20. 22. H. 6. 13. 39. H. 6. 18.

21. H. 6. 4.

38. H. 6. 22. 39. H. 6. 18.

5. H. 6. 38. 1. H. 7. 25. 13. H. 7.

10. H. 7. 18.

(1) Otherwise of a counsellor at law, for he cannot bring any action; for he is not compellable to be counsellor, and his fee is honorarium, not a debt. Ammianus, lib. 3.—Lord Nott. MSS.

(2) At Rome the functions of the bar were divided between, I. The Patrons, or Orators: II. The Advocates, who attended to inform or instruct the patrons upon the points of law, which arose in the cause: III. The Procurators: And, IV. the Cognitors. The two last nearly resembled the Attornies of our courts. Besides these, were the Juris-consulti, who gave their opinions and advice upon matters of law. Till the time of Augustus every person had this liberty; but he confined it to some particular individuals selected by him, and made a regulation, that in future no one should enjoy that privilege but under the authority of the prince. The opinions of the Juris-consulti, called the Responsa Prudentum, were of great weight; and a considerable part of the Roman law is founded upon them. See Gravina de Ortu et Progressu Juris Civilis, lib. 1. sect. 42, 43, 44. In the Summary of the Roman Law, taken from Dr. Taylor's Elements of the Civil Law, page 26, it is observed, that the Responsa Prudentum seem to amount to what we call Precedents, or Reports; that it is common to them both to be the determinations of lawyers to explain the law: but that there is this difference between them, that our precedents owe their authority to their being the judgment of the court; but the Responsa Prudentum, though admitted as law, were nothing more than the private opinions of lawyers. See Cod. lib. 1. tit. 17. and the Cod. Theo. lib. 1. tit. 4. with the notes of Gothofred. It is supposed, that, in the early days of the Roman Empire, the practice of the law was merely honorary; but it soon became an object of gain. The Cincian law, which was passed about the time of the second Punic war, was intended to revive the primitive custom of honorary advocacy. But it was so often evaded, that the emperor Claudius thought it more advisable to moderate, than to attempt to destroy entirely, the salaries or emoluments of advocates. He accordingly inhibited them from taking a larger fee than ten sesterces, about 80l. 14s. 7d. English. The advocates, however, thought it an indignity, that their fees should be considered as wages, and therefore dignified them by the honourable title of presents, or gratuities; but as they might demand, and even maintain an action for their fees, this distinction was merely nominal. See Gothofred de Salario, and Doctor Bever's History of the Civil Law, page 444. In England the fees of counsel are honorary, in the strict acceptation of the word. Thus in Moor v. Row, Cha. Rep. 38. a counsellor brought a bill for fees due to him from the defendant, a solicitor. The defendant demurred; the demurrer was allowed, and the bill dismissed. Sir John Davies thus expresses himself upon this subject, in his preface to his Reports, pag. 22, 23. "The fees to counsellors are not in nature of wages, or pay, or that which we call salary, or hire, which are duties certain, and grow due by contract, for labour or service, but what is given him is honorarium, not merces; being a gift which gives honour as well to the taker as the giver: nor is it certain or contracted; for no price, or rate, can be set upon counsel, which is invaluable and inestimable, so as it is more or less, according to the circumstances, namely, the ability of the client, the worthiness of the counsellor, the weight-of the judges to instruct the grand assise or jury in points of law; for as the grand assise or other jurors are triers of the matters of fact, ad questionem facti non respondent iudices, so ad questionem juris non respondent juratores. And accordingly the judge in this case directed the grand assise, viz. if they found that, &c.

Glanc. li. 12. cap. 1. &c.
Bracton li. 5. fo. 328.

Lib. 5. fol. 85. Penrin's case.

34 E. 3. Judgm. 256. adjudge accord. 13. H. 4. Judgm. 245.
10. H. 6. 8. 20. H. 6. 38. b.
11. H. 6. 34. b. 26. H. 8. 8. b.
1. Mar. Dy. 98. li. 5. fo. 85.
Penrin's case. F. N. B. 5. 11. 31.

Per que fuit agard. Here are two things to be observed. First, the form of a judgement finall. Secondly, that a judgement finall is to bee given in this particular case. For the forme of the finall judgement for the tenant is here expressed, that the tenant shall hold the tenements demanded against him, to him and his heirs quite of the demandant and his heirs for ever, and the demandant in the mercy. Quod tenens teneat terram illam sibi et hæredibus suis in pace versus petentem, et hæredes suos in perpetuum.

For the second point, seeing the mise is joyned upon the meer right, albeit the verdict of the grand assise be given upon another point, yet judgement finall shall be given. And so it is if the tenant after the mise joyned make default, or confesse the action, or if the demandant be non-suite; and yet in none of these cases they of the grand assise gave their verdict upon the meer right.

Come est avantdit. Vid. Sect. 478.

CHAP. 9. Of Confirmation. Sect. 515.

Bract. li. 2. fol. 32. b. & 58. 59.
Brit. 235.

* Lit. pag. sequen.

Bract. li. 2. 58.

Bract. li. 2. fol. 27. 58.
58. H. 6. 34. 37. Pl. Com.
Count de Leicester's case.
(3. Rep. 64. b.)
10. E. 2. Confirm. 24. 32. E. 3. 9.

[c] Fleta lib. 3. cap. 14. & lib. 3.
cap. 3.

44. Aff. 3.

Li. 9. fo. 142. Beaumont's case.
Flet. li. 3. cap. 14.

HERE first our author shewes what a confirmation is:

Confirmation. Confirmatio commeth of the verbe  confirmare*, quod est firmum facere; and therefore it is said, that confirmatio omnes supplet defectus. licet id quod actum est ab initio, non valuit. A confirmation is a conveyance of an estate or right in esse, whereby a voidable estate is made sure and unavoidable, or whereby a particular estate is encreased.

A confirmation doth not strengthen a voide estate.

Confirmatio est nulla ubi donum præcedens est invalidum, & ubi donatio nulla omnino nec valebit confirmatio: for a confirmation may make a voidable or defeasible estate good, but it cannot worke upon an estate that is voide in law. Non valet confirmatio nisi ille qui confirmat sit in possessione rei, vel juris unde fieri debet confirmatio, & eodem modo nisi ille cui confirmatio fit, sit in possessione. And another saith, [c] Confirmare est id quod prius infirmum fuit firmare. Et donationum alia incepta, & defectiva, & post tempus confirmata, confirmatio enim omnem supplet defectum, poterit enim esse in pudenti donec per ratificationem hæredis cum ad ætatem pervenerit roboretur. (1)

Ratificasse. Ratificare est ratum facere, and is æquipollent to confirmare, which, as hath been said, is firmum facere.

Approbasse cometh of ad and probo, which is to make perfect and good.

Confirmasse. Here it is to be observed, that there bee two kindes of confirmations, viz. confirmations expresse or in deed, whereof Littleton hath here put these three examples, and confirmations implied, or in law, whereof Littleton hereafter speaketh in this chapter. Qualibet confirmatio, aut est perficiens, crescens, aut diminuens; and of all these Littleton putteth examples in this chapter. And hereof Fleta saith, carta autem de confirmatione est illa que alterius factum consolidat & confirmat, & nihil novi attribuit, quandoque tamen confirmat & addit. (2)

A DEEDE of confirmation is commonly in this forme, or to this effect: Know all men, &c. that I A. of B. have ratified, approved, and confirmed to C. of D. the estate and possession which I have, of, and in one messuage, &c. with the appurtenances in F. &c.

Sect.

(1) A confirmation is an approbation of, or assent to, an estate already created; by which the confirmor strengthens and gives validity to it, as far as it is in his power. It has this operation only, with respect to estates voidable or defeasible; but it has no operation upon estates which are absolutely void. Such words may be used in a confirmation as may encrease or enlarge the estate; but that, as lord chief baron Gilbert observes, is by the force of those words, and, strictly speaking, is foreign to the confirmation. Gilb. Ten. 75.

(2) See 9. Rep. 142. where sir Edward Coke brings examples of these different operations of a confirmation.

"weightiness of the cause, and the custom of the country. It is a gift of such a nature, that the able client may not neglect to give it without ingratitude, for it is but a gratuity, or taking of thankfulness; yet the worthy counsellor may not demand it without doing wrong to his reputation, according to that moral rule, multa honesta accipi possunt que tamen peti non possunt." In France the Roman law respecting the fees of advocates formerly prevailed. Many instances are found in their law books, of advocates bringing actions for their fees, and recovering upon them: but this has long fallen into disuse. In the contest, in 1775, between Mr. Linguet and the Order of Advocates, one of the charges against him was, that he had written to the duke d'Aiguillon, to demand his fees; and threatened him with an action for them; and that his demands upon the duke had been referred to arbitration. See Journal Historique du Retablissement de la Magistrature, tom 7. p. 190. Ordonnances have been made at different times enjoining the advocates to subscribe, at the foot of their pleadings, a receipt for their fees; but the advocates never would obey them. The leading ordonnance upon this head is that of Blois. In 1602, the parliament of Paris gave an arret, enforcing the observance of that ordonnance. This gave the advocates too much offence, that three hundred of them renounced their profession upon it, with the usual formalities. This put an entire stop to the proceedings of the courts of justice. The matter was afterwards settled; and the ordonnance of Blois, in this respect, and the subsequent ordonnances enforcing it, are now considered as virtually repealed. See Loyfel, Dialogue des Avocats; and Menagii Juris Civilis Amentitates, cap. 18.

Sect. 516.

*ET en ascun case un fait de confirmation est bone et available, lou en tiel case un fait de release n'est passe bone ne available. Sicome jeo lessa terre a un home pur terme de sa vie, lequel lessa mesme la terre a un autre pur terme de xl. ans, per force de quel il est en possession; si jeo per mon fait confirme l'estate del tenant a terme d'ans, et puis le tenant a terme de vie mourust durant le terme des * ans, jeo ne puis enter en la terre durant le dit terme.*

adjudged [d], that the lease for thirty yeares was determined by the death of lessee for life, and that the lessee for sixty yeares might enter; for that albeit the lease for sixty yeares was the latter in time, yet was it of greater force in law, for that the lessor who had power to confirme which of them he would, did first confirme the second lease.

In this chapter is also to be observed eight cases, wherein a release and a confirmation have the like operation in law.

AND in some case a deede of confirmation is good and available, where in the same case a deede of release is not good nor available. As if I let land to a man for terme of his life, who letteth the same to another for terme of forty yeares, by force of which he is in possession; if I by my deed confirme the estate of the tenant for yeares, and after the tenant for life dieth during the terme of yeares, I cannot enter into the land during the said terme.

LITTLETON in this chapter putteth eight diversities between a confirmation and a release; (1) and thereof for illustration here he putteth two cases in this and the next Section, which upon that which hath beene said in the precedent chapters, is sufficiently explained. Onely in both these cases this is to be observed, that where a confirmation shall enlarge an estate, there privity is required, as well as in the case of the release, as by many examples which Littleton puts in this chapter appeareth. And note, here is the first case wherein a release and a confirmation doe differ:

Lessee for life made a lease for thirty yeares, and after the lessor and lessee for life made a lease for sixty yeares to another, which lease for sixty yeares the lessor did first confirme, and after the lessor confirmed the lease for thirty yeares, and after tenant for life dyed within the thirty yeares; and it was

(Cro. Car. 284.

1. Roll. Abr. 483. 500. Mo. 67.

Dyer 218. b. Hob. 165.

Post. 310. 2.)

[d] Inter Unwel & Lodge, temp.

Reg. Eliz.

(Hob. 7.)

Sect. 517.

UNCORE si jeo per mon fait de release avoy releas al tenant a terme d'ans en la vie le tenant a terme de vie, cel release serra voyd, pur ceo que adonques ne fuit ascun privity perenter † moy et le tenant a terme d'ans: car release n'est available al tenant a terme d'ans, mes lou est un privity perenter luy et celui que releasast.

YET if I by my deed of release had released to the tenant for years in the lifetime of the tenant for life, this release shall be void, for that then there was not any privity between me and the tenant for years: for a release is not available to the tenant for yeares, but where there is a privity between him and him that releaseth. (2)

This belongeth to the first diversity between a release and a confirmation.

* xl. added L. M. and Roh.

† moy et le tenant a terme d'ans,—luy et moy, L. M. and Roh.

(1) He also mentions eight instances in which they agree.

(2) For in this case, if the lessor released to the lessee for years, without using any further words, the operation of the release would be to enlarge the estate of the lessee by giving him an estate of freehold for his life. Now to make releases operate in this manner, it is necessary, not only that the releasee, at the time the release is made, should be in the actual possession of, or have a vested interest in, the lands intended to be released, but that there should be a privity between him and the releasor. In the case mentioned by Littleton, there is no privity between the donor and the lessee of the donee for life. A release therefore from the donor to the lessee would be void. But a confirmation by the donor is good, and gives a stability and permanency to the estate of the lessee during the whole term, which would otherwise determine by the decease of the donee. Antc 272. a. 273. b.

Sect. 518.

HERE is the second diversitie betweene a release and a confirmation. But if the disseisor make a lease for yeares to begin at Michaelmasse, and the disseisee confirme his estate, this is voide, because he hath but interesse termini, and no estate in him, whereupon a confirmation may enure.

4. H. 7. 16. by Read.
22. E. 4. 36.

*EN mesme le manner est, si jeo soy disseise, et le disseisor
fait un lease a un autre pur terme d'ans, si jeo relessa al termor, ceo est voyde: mes si jeo confir-ma * l'estate le termor, ceo est bone et effectual.*

IN the same manner it is, if I be disseised, and the disseisor make a lease to another for term of yeares, if I release to the termor, this is void: but if I confirme the estate of the termor, this is good and effectually.

Sect. 519.

(5. Rep. 81.)

ITEM, si jeo soy disseise, et jeo confirma l'estate le disseisor, il ad bone et droiturel estate en fee simple, coment que en le fait de confirmation nul mention est fait de ses heires, pur ceo que il avoit fee simple al temps de confirmation. Car en tiel case si le disseisee confirma l'estate le disseisor, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires de son corps engendres, ou a aver et tener a luy pur le terme de sa vie, uncore le disseisor ad fee simple, et est seisee en son demesne come de fee, pur ceo que quant son estate fuit confirme, donque il avoit fee simple, et tiel fait ne poit changer son estate, sans entry † fait sur luy, &c.

ALSO, if I be disseised, and I confirme the estate of the disseisor, hee hath a good and rightfull estate in fee simple, albeit in the deede of confirmation no mention be made of his heires, because hee had fee simple at the time of the confirmation. For in such case if the disseisee confirme the state of the disseisor, to have and to hold to him and his heires of his body engendred, or to have and to hold to him for term of his life, yet the disseisor hath a fee simple, and is seised in his demesne as of fee, because when his estate was confirmed, hee had then a fee simple, and such deed cannot change his estate, without entry made upon him, &c.

19. H. 6. 22. 6. E. 3.
Confirm. 4.

HERE is the first case wherein the release and confirmation doth agree, viz. a confirmation to a disseisor in taile, or for any particular estate, is of the like force as a release to a disseisor, during such estate, which in both cases is good for ever. In the same manner it is, if the disseisor make a gift in taile, and the disseisee confirme the estate of the donee for the life of the donee, this confirmation enures to the whole estate taile; for a confirmation can make no fraction of any estate, to extend but to part of the estate onely. Et sic de cæteris. (1)

Sect.

* l'estate de termor, — son estate, L. and M. and Roh.

† fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) It is to be observed, that a disseisor acquires by the disseisin a tortious fee simple, notwithstanding at the time he makes the disseisin he claims a less estate; it being a rule, that a disseisor cannot qualify his own wrong.

Sect. 520.

*EN mesme le manner est, si son estate soit confirme pur terme de un jour, ou pur terme d'un heure, il ad bon estate en
fee simple, pur ceo que
* son estate en fee simple fuits un foits confirme. Quia confir-mare idem est, quodd firmum facere, &c.*

IN the same manner
it is, if his estate bee confirmed for terme of a day, or for terme of an houre, hee hath a good estate in fee simple, for this, that his estate in fee simple was once confirmed.
*Quia confirmare idem
est, quodd firmum facere,
&c.*

HERE is the second case wherein the release and confirmation doe agree. The reason of this is, for that the disseisor hath a fee simple; and therefore if his estate be confirmed but for an houre, it is good for ever, because (saith Littleton) confirmare idem est, quodd firmum facere.

Nota, a diversity betweene a bare assent without any right or interest, and an assent coupled with a right or interest; and therefore an attorne-ment cannot be made for a time nor upon condition;

Lib. 5. fol. 81. Forde's case.
(Ant. 274. a.)
(Post. 300. b.)

but if the person make a lease for a hundred yeares, the patron and the ordinary may con-firme fifty of the yeares, for they have an interest, and may charge in time of vacation.
And so if a disseisor make a lease for an hundred yeares, the disseisee may confirme parcel of those yeares; but then it must be by apt words, for he must not confirme the lease, or demise, or the estate of the lessee, for then the addition for parcell of the terme should be repugnant when the whole was confirmed before, but the confirmation must be of the land for part of the terme. So may the confirmation be of part of the land; as if it be of forty acres, he may confirme twenty, &c. So if tenant for life make a lease for an hundred yeares, the lessor may confirme eyther for part of the terme, or for part of the land. But an estate of free-hold cannot bee confirmed for part of the estate, for that the estate is intire, and not severall, as yeares be (1).

(1. Roll. Abr. 412)

Sect. 521.

*ITEM, si mon disseisor fait un leas a terme de vie, le remainder ouster en fee, sijeo releas al tenant a terme de vie, ceo urera
a celuy en le remainder.
Mes sijeo confirme l'es-tate de le tenant a terme de vie, uncore apres son decease jeo puis bien enter, pur ceo que + riens est confirme forsque l'estate le tenant a terme de vie, issint que apres son decease, jeo puis enter.
Mes quant jeo releffa*

ALSO, if my dis-seisor maketh a lease for life, the remainder over in fee, if I release to the tenant for life, this shall enure to him
in the remainder.
But if I confirme
the estate of the tenant for tearme of life, yet after his decease I may well enter, because nothing is confirmed
but the estate of the tenant for life, so that after his de-

HERE is the third case wherein the release and confirmation differ, for the confirmation to the tenant for life doth not enure to him in the remainder.

And so it is when the severall estates be in one person; as if the disseisor make a gift in taile, the remaynder to the right heires of tenant in taile, if the disseisee confirms the estate in taile, it shall not extend to the fee simple. no more than if the disseisor had made a gift in taile, the remainder for life, the remainder to the right heires of tenant in taile;
this extendeth onely to the estate taile, and not to

* son not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ nul added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The distinctions taken here by sir Edw. Coke are, that a confirmation to a tenant of freehold or inheritance, cannot be so worded as to have a less operation than that of confirming his whole estate; consequently, a confirmation to such a tenant, either of the lands, or of his estate in them, for any term or period, is a confirmation of his whole fee. A disseisor always acquires by the disseisin a tortious fee simple; a confirmation therefore to him, however qualified, is a confirmation of his whole fee. It is otherwise in the case of a term of years. A confirmation may be made of part of the term only. The reason of this difference is, that an estate of freehold or of inheritance is considered as integral and indivisible. But years are several, the term which is composed of them is necessarily fractional and divisible, and may consequently be confirmed in part only, by using proper expressions for this purpose. If a person confirms the estate of the tenant for years for part of the term, as the word estate signifies all the interest or term of years which the tenant has, the subsequent words are not considered as qualifications of the former words, but as absolutely repugnant to them; and as both cannot stand together, the law prefers the first, which are the principal, to the other, which are only secondary.

(Ant. 52. a.) (Post. 310. a. 315. a. 319. a.)
(1 Roll. Abr. 302.)

to the remainder for life, nor to the remainder in fee. But if the disseisor make a lease for life to A. and B. and the disseisee confirm the estate of A. B. shall take advantage thereof; for the estate of A. which was confirmed was joynt with B. and in that case the disseisee shall not enter into the land, and devest the moiety of B.

(Sid. 83.)

If the disseisor infeoffs A. and B. and the heirs of B. if the disseisee confirm the estate of B. for his life, this shall not only extend to his companion, as hath been said, but to his whole fee simple, because to many purposes hee had the whole fee simple in him, and the confirmation shall be taken most strong against him that made it.

(1 Cro. 321.)
(Ant. 181.)

Tenant in taile discontinueth in fee and dyeth, the discontinuuee make a lease for life, and granteth the reversion to the issue, he shall not have a formedon against tenant for life; for by his formedon he must recover estate of inheritance, and the lessee for life hath not the inheritance, but the issue in taile himselfe hath it.

(Ant. 202. a.)

If feoffee upon condition make a lease for life, or a gift in taile, and the feoffor release the condition to the feoffee, he shall not enter upon the lessee or donee, because he cannot regain his ancient estate.

If the feoffee upon condition make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, if the feoffor release the condition to the lessee for life, it shall enure to him in the remainder, as well as in the case of the right, or of a rent, &c.

If a feme disseisoreffe make a feoffment in fee to the use of A. for life, and after to the use of herselfe in taile, and the remainder to the use of B. in fee, and then taketh husband the disseisee, and he releaseth to A. all his right, this shall enure to B. and to his own wife also; for by the rule of Littleton it must enure to all in the remainder (1).

But if A. letteth to B. for life, and B. maketh a lease to C. for his life, the remainder to A. in fee, A. releaseth to C. all his right, this is good to perfect the estate of C. for his life. But when C. dyeth, A. shall be in of his old estate, for his release could not enure to himselfe to perfect his defeasible remainder, but his ancient right remaineth. And note, that in these two cases the fee is devested and vested all at one instant; in the same manner as if tenant in taile make a lease for life, at the same instant the estate taile is devested out of the donee, and the reversion in fee out of the donor, and a new fee vested in tenant in taile. And so if the husband make a lease for life of his wife's land, he devesteth his owne estate, that he hath in her right, and the inheritance of his wife, and at the same instant vested a new reversion in fee in himselfe.

Vid. 29. Aff. 17. 30. H. 8.
Recov. en value. Br. 30.
13. E. 3. entr. cong. Br. 127.

Mes en cest case si le disseisee confirme l'estate et tittle celuy en le remaynder. Here is the third case wherein the release and confirmation doe agree, for * et not in L. and M. nor Roll.

(1) For though a man cannot contract with his wife, or transfer any interest to her, yet she may, by construction of law, take benefit of a release made by him to a third person, and enuring by way of extinguishment. Hawk. Abr.

tout mon droit al tenant a terme de vie, ceo urera a celuy en le remainder ou en le reversion, pur ceo que tout mon droit est ale per tiel releas. Mes en cest cas, si le disseisee confirme l'estate et le tittle celuy en le remainder sans aucun confirmation fait a tenant a terme de vie, le disseisee ne poit enter sur le tenant a terme de vie, pur ceo que le remainder est dependant sur l'estate le tenant a terme de vie; et si son estate serroit defeate, le remainder serroit defeate per l'entree le disseisee, et ceo ne serra reason que il per son entre defeateroit le remainder encounter son confirmation, &c.

cease I may enter. But when I release all my right to the tenant for life, this shall enure to him in the remainder or in the reversion, because all my right is gone by such release. But in this case, if the disseisee confirms the estate and title of him in the remainder without any confirmation made to tenant for life, the disseisee cannot enter upon the tenant for terme of life, for that the remainder is depending upon the state for life; and if his estate should be defeated, the remainder should be defeated by the entry of the disseisee, and it is no reason that he by his entry should defeat the remainder against his confirmation, &c.

for the confirmation made to him in the remainder shall avail the tenant for life, as much as the release shall.

Pl. Com. Delamere's case.
Vid. Sect. 374.

Pur ceo que le remainder est dependant, &c. By this some have gathered, that if a disseisor make a lease for life, reserving the reversion to himself, and the disseisee confirmeth the state of the disseisor, that he may enter upon the lessee, because the estate of him in the reversion dependeth not upon the state for life as the remainder: but all is one, for by the confirmation made to him in the reversion, all the right of him that confirmeth is gone, as well as when he maketh it to him in remainder; and he cannot by his entry avoid the estate of the lessee for life, but hee must avoid the state of the lessor, which against his owne confirmation he cannot doe; and it hath been adjudged, that if a disseisor make a lease for life, and after levie a fine of the reversion with proclamations, and the five years passe, so as the disseisee is for the reversion barred, he shall not enter upon the lessee for life.

(Mo. 91.)

Reported by sir John Popham, chiefe justice.
(Post. 302. a.)
(6. Rep. 40.)
(Sid. 360.)
(1. Saun. 149, 150. Ant. 224. a.)

Le remainder serra defeat. It is regularly true, that when the particular estate is defeated, that the remainder thereby shall be also defeated, but it faileth in divers cases.

For where the particular estate and the remainder depend upon one title, there the defeating of the particular estate is a defeating of the remainder. But where the particular estate is defeasible, and the remainder by good title, there though the particular estate be defeated, the remainder is good. As if the lessor disseise A. lessee for life, and make a lease to B. for the life of A. the remainder to C. in fee, albeit A. re-enter, and defeat the estate for life, yet the remainder to C. being once vested by good title shall not be avoided; for it were against reason, that the lessor should have the remainder againe against his owne livery; and this is well warranted by the reason of Littleton in this case. So it is if a lease be made to an infant for life, the remainder in fee, the infant at his full age disagree to the estate for life, yet the remainder is good, for that it was once vested by good title; for in both these cases there was a particular estate at the time of the remainder created.

Vid. Pl. Com. Colthirst's case.
(Post. 333. a. b.)

If a lease be made to A. for the life of B. the remainder to C. in fee, A. dyeth before an occupant entreteth, here is a remainder without a particular estate, and yet the remainder continueth good. (1)

17. E. 3. 48.

A rent is granted to the tenant of the land for life, the remainder in fee, this is a good remainder, albeit the particular estate continued not; for eo instante that he took the particular estate, eo instante the remainder vested, and the suspension in judgement of law grew after the taking of the particular estate. (2)

3. E. 3. Abb. Aff.
(Pl. 35. a. Vaugh. 200.
Moor 664. Yelv. 9.
2. Roll. Ab. 415. 7. H. 4. 6.
1. Rep. 66. Noy 47.)
7. H. 4. 6.

If a man grant a rent to B. for the life of Alice, the remainder to the heires of the body of Alice, this is a good remainder, and yet it must vest upon an instant. (3)

Sect. 522.

*ITEM, si sont deux disseisors, et le disseisee releffa a un de eux, il tiendra son compaignon hors de la terre. Mes si le disseisee confirma l'estate de l'un, sans plus * dire en le fait, ascuns dient que il ne tiendra son compaignon debors, mes tiendra joyntment oveluy, pur ceo que † riens fuit confirme forsque*

ALSO, if there bee two disseisors, and the disseisee releaseth to one of them; hee shall hold his compaignon out of the land. But if the disseisee confirme the estate of the one, without more saying in the deede, some say that hee shall not hold his compaignon out, but shall hold joyntly with him, for that nothing was con-

THIS is the fourth case wherein the release and the confirmation seeme to differ, being made unto one of the disseisors.

Confirme forsque son estate, &c. Hereby it appeareth, that if the disseisee confirme the estate of the one disseisor in the lands, to have and to hold the lands or tenements, or the right of the disseisee, to him and his heires, hee shall hold out the other disseisor; and that appeareth by Littleton, first, upon these words (confirme the state of one) without more saying in the deed, * dire—parlance, L. and M. and Roh.

† nul added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) But since the stat. 29. Car. 2. c. 3. 14. Geo. 2. c. 20. no such vacancy can happen.

(2) A rent is an incorporeal hereditament, and susceptible of the same limitations as other hereditaments. Hence it may be granted, or devised, for life, or in tail, with remainders or limitations over. But there is this difference between an entail of lands and an entail of rent; that the tenant in tail of lands, with the immediate reversion in fee in the donor, may, by a common recovery, bar the entail and the reversion; whereas the grantee in tail of a rent de novo, without a subsequent limitation of it in fee, acquires, by a common recovery, only a base fee, determinable upon his decease, and failure of the issues in tail; but if there is a limitation of it in fee, after the limitation in tail, the recovery of the tenant in tail gives him the fee simple. This was resolved in the cases of Smyth v. Farnaby, Carter 52. Sid. 285. and 2. Keb. 29. 55. 84. Weeks v. Peach, Lutw. 1224. and Chaplin v. Chaplin, 3 P. Wms 229. The reason of this difference is, that it would be unjust that the conveyance of a grantee of a rent, should give a longer duration or existence to the rent, than it had in its original creation. It is true, that the barring of an estate tail in land is equally contrary to the intention of the grantor. But a rent differs materially from land. The old principles of the feudal law looked upon every modification of landed property which was considered to be against common right, with a very jealous eye. Now, a rent-charge was supposed to be against common right, the grantee of the rent-charge being subject to no feudal services, and being a burthen upon the tenant who was to perform them. Upon this principle the law, in every instance, avoided giving by implication a continuation to the rent, beyond the period expressly fixed for its continuance. Thus if a tenant in tail of land die without issue, his wife is entitled to dower for her life out of the land, notwithstanding the failure of the issue; but the widow of a tenant in tail of rent is not entitled to her dower against the donor. So if a rent is granted to a man and his heirs generally, and he dies without an heir, the rent does not escheat, but sinks into the land. It is upon this principle, that when there is not a limitation over in fee, a tenant in tail of rent acquires, by his recovery, no more than a base fee. But if there is a limitation in fee, after the particular limitation in tail, the grantor has substantially limited the rent in fee; and therefore, it is doing him no injustice that the recovery should give the donee, who suffers it, an estate in fee simple. The case of Chaplin v. Chaplin was, that lady Hanby, the grandmother of Porter Chaplin, being seised in fee, conveyed diverse lands, to the use and intent that the trustees named in the deed, should receive and enjoy a rent-charge of 30l. per ann. to them and their heirs, with power to distrain for it, and to enter and hold the land on non-payment for forty days; and then the rent was declared to be to the use of Porter Chaplin in tail; remainder to the use of the same person who had the land in fee. It is stated to have been afterwards disclosed to the court, that the legal estate of the rent in fee was in the trustees. But it is worthy of the attention of the reader, that it was not necessary that any new matter should be adduced to disclose this to the court, as it appears on the face of the deed: for a conveyance to A. and his heirs, to the use and intent that B. and his heirs may receive a rent out of the estate, gives B. the legal fee of the rent; so that if it is afterwards declared, that B. and his heirs are to stand seised of the rent to uses, the intended cestuis que use take only trust or equitable estates. If, therefore, it is intended to limit a rent in strict settlement, it is necessary to do it by way of grant at common law, to some person and his heirs, to the uses intended to be limited. This gives the grantee the mere seisin to the uses, and the uses declared upon it will be executed by the statute.

(3) Formerly the doctrine of the necessity that the remainder should rest at the very instant of the determination of the particular estate

deede, viz. to have and to hold the lands, &c. Secondly, the reason of Littleton in expresse words is, for that nothing was confirmed but his estate which was joynt. Thirdly, the next two Sections make it plaine where the habendum is added.

Hereby also it appeareth, that a release is more forcible in law than a confirmation. If the disseisee and a stranger disseise the heire of the disseisor, and the disseisee confirme the estate of his companion, this shall not extinguish his right that was suspended: so as if the heire or the disseisor re-enter, the right of the disseisee is revived. And so it is if the grantee of a rent-charge and an estranger disseise the tenant of the land, and the grantee confirme the estate of his companion, the tenant of the land re-enter, the rent is revived; for the confirmation extended not to the rent suspended, otherwise it is of a release in both cases.

Sect. 523.

*ET pur ceo ascuns ont dit, que si deux joyntenants sont, et l'un confirme l'estate l'auter, que il n'ad forsque joint estate, si come il avoit adevant. Mes s'il ad tiels parols en le fait de confirmation, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires tous les tenements dont mention est fait en le confirmation, donques il ad estate sole en les tenements, * &c. Et pur ceo il est bone et sure chose en chescun confirmation d'aver ceux parols; a aver et tener les tenements, &c. en fee, ou en fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, ou pur terme d'ans, solonque ceo que le cas + est, ou le matter gift.*

AND for this some have said, that if two joyntenants bee, and the one confirme the estate of the other, that he hath but a joynt estate, as he had before. But if hee hath such words in the deede of confirmation, to have and to hold to him and to his heires all the tenements whereof mention is made in the confirmation, then he hath a sole estate in the tenements, &c. And therefore it is a good and sure thing in every confirmation to have these words; to have and to hold the tenements, &c. in fee, or in fee taile, or for terme of life, or for terme of yeares, according as the case is or the matter lyeth.

AND this confirmation leaveth the state as it was, and doth not amount to any severance of the joynture, as some have said.

34. E. 3. tit. Confirm. pl. 15.

Mes s'il ad tiels parols en le fait, &c.

This is plaine and evident enough.

Et pur ceo il est bone et sure chose, &c.

This is good counsell, and worthy to be observed.

Sect. 524.

HERE the diversity is apparent betweene a confirmation of the estate for life in the land to have and to hold the said state in the land to him and his heire; this cannot en-

CAR al entent d'ascuns, si home lessa terre a un auter pur terme de vie, et puis confirma son

FOR to the intent of some, if a man letteth land to another for life, and after confirme his estate which estate

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ est not in L. and M. nor Roh.

estate at farthest, was extended to the case of a posthumous son. In the case of Reeve v. Long, 1. Salk. 227. an estate was limited to A. for life, remainder to his eldest son in tail; A. died leaving his wife enfeint. She afterwards had a son. It was adjudged that the son, not being in esse at the time of the determination of the particular estate, could not take under the limitation. This judgment was afterwards affirmed in the court of king's bench; but it was reversed in the house of lords, against the opinion of all the judges. To obviate all doubts respecting the law in this case, the statute of 10. Wil. III. c. 16. was passed, by which it was enacted, that where any estate is, by marriage, or any other settlement, settled in remainder to children, with remainders over, any posthumous child may take in the same manner as if born in the father's life-time. It is singular that this statute does not expressly mention limitations or devises made by wills. There is a tradition, that, as the case of Reeve v. Long arose upon a will, the lords considered the law to be settled by their determination in that case; and were unwilling to make any express mention of limitations or devises made in wills, lest it should appear to call in question the authority or propriety of their determination. Besides, in the above case of Reeve v. Long, the words of the act may be construed, without much violence, to comprize settlements of estates made by will, as well as settlements of estates made by deed.

*estate que il aden mesme la terre, a aver et tener son estate a luy et a ses heires, cest confirmation quant a ses heires est void, car ses heires ne poient aver son estate, que * ne fuit forsque pur terme de son vie. Mes s'il confirma son estate per ceux parolx, a aver mesme le terre a luy et a ses heires, cest confirmation fait fee simple en cest case a luy en la terre, pur ceo que † les parolx a aver et tener, &c. va a le terre, et nemy al estate que il ad, &c.*

hee hath in the same land, to have and to hold his estate to him and to his heires, this confirmation as to his heires is voide, for his heires cannot have his estate, which was not but for terme of his life. But if he confirme his estate by these words, to have the same land to him and to his heires, this confirmation maketh a fee simple in this case to him in the land, for that the words to have and to hold, &c. goeth to the land, and not to the estate which hee hath, &c.

large his estate, for his estate being but for life, that estate cannot bee extended to his heires. But in that case if he confirme the estate for life in the land in the premises of the deed, and the habendum is in this sort, to have and to hold the land to him and his heires, this shall enlarge his estate, and create in him a fee simple.

(1. Roll. Abr. 482.)

18. E. 3. 40.
(Pio. 158. a.)

Wherein is to bee noted, [c] that the habendum and the premises doe in substance well agree together, and that the habendum may enlarge the premises, but not abridge the same. (1)

[c] Vid. Pl. Com. in Throgmorton's case, fol. 147. a.
Wrottesley's case, 197.

(2. Rep. 23.)

And seeing that in conveyances, limitations of remainders are usuall and common assurances, it is dangerous by conceits or nice distinctions to bring them in question, as have in latter time bene attempted.

Son estate. Vid. Sect. 650.

Sect 525.

ITEM, si jeo lessa certaine terre a un feme sole pur terme de sa vie, laquel prent baron, et puis jeo confirma l'estate le baron et sa feme, a aver et tener † pur terme de leur deux vies; en cest case le baron ne tient jointment ove sa feme, mes tient en droit de sa feme pur terme de sa vie. Mes cest confirmation ure-ra a le baron per voy de remainder pur terme de sa vie, s'il survequist sa feme.

ALSO, if I let certain land to a feme sole for terme of her life, who taketh husband, and after I confirme the estate of the husband and wife, to have and to hold for terme of their two lives; in this case the husband doth not hold joyntly with his wife, but holdeth in right of his wife for term of her life. But this confirmation shall enure to the husband by way of remainder for terme of his life, if hee surviveth his wife.

HERE is the fourth case wherein the release and confirmation doe agree; and in this case it is to be observed, that the baron hath such an estate in the land in the right of his wife as hee is capable of a confirmation to enlarge his estate; and therefore if the confirmation had been made of his estate to him alone, to have and to hold the land to him and to his heires, this had been good to have conveyed the fee simple to him after the decease of his wife: for if in this case a release be made to the husband and his heires, this is sufficient to convey the inheritance of the land to the husband. (2)

Vid. Sect. 573.
(Sid. 83. 361.)
(2. Roll. Abr. 829.)

(Ant. 273. b.)

16. H. 6. tit. Release 45.
22. E. 3. tit. Release. Statham.

Ne tient jointment ove sa feme. For two causes. First, because the

* ne not in L. and M. nor Roh. † les parolx—le, L. and M. and Roh. ‡ la terre added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) On the operation of an habendum in a deed, see ant. 21. a. Vin. Abr. Grant. J. K. L. and M.

(2) The nature of the estate which the husband acquires by marriage in his wife's real property, will be explained in a note to fol. 325. b. With respect to his interest in her chattels real and choses in action, an accurate, and, so far as it goes, a masterly explanation of it is given in Bacon's Abridgement, vol. 1. fol. 268. It is much to be lamented, that the author did not go more fully into the subject. Mr. Viner has collected most of the cases respecting it with his usual industry. — But since the publication of that useful compilation, several cases have been determined, by which the law upon it has been greatly illustrated and explained, and, in some instances, altered. An attempt will be made to give a succinct view of it, in a note to fol. 351.

(4. Rep. 29.)

18. E. 3. 20.
 (1. Roll. Rep. 230. 317. 438.
 3. Leo. 4. a.
 Ant. 184. a. 187. a.
 Post. 351. a.)

18. Aff. p. 3. 18. E. 3.
 Confr. 17. 17. E. 3. 68.
 28. E. 3. 94. 40. E. 3.
 8. Aff. 20.

39. H. 6. 9.
 (Ant. 182. b.)

Vid. Sect. 573.

Pl. Com. Colthirll's case.
 Doct. & Stud. ca. 21.

* 16. H. 6. tit. Release 45.
 [e] 9. E. 4. 18.
 [p] 6. E. 3. 9.
 [q] 17. E. 3. 68. b.

17. E. 3. 68. b.
 Vi. Paget's Case, lib. 5. fo. 76. b.
 (Ant. 54. a.)

the wife hath the whole for her life. Secondly, joyntenants must (as hath been before said in the chapter of Joyntenants) come in by one title. But in this case if the confirmat on had been made to the husband and wife, to have and to hold the land to them two and to their heires, they had been joyntenants of the fee simple, and the husband seised in the right of his wife for her life; for the husband and the wife cannot take by moities during the coverture.

If a man letteth land to the husband and wife, to have and to hold the one moiety to the husband for terme of his life, and the other moiety to the wife for her life, and the lessor confirme the estate of them both in the land, to have and to hold to them and to their heires; by this confirmation as to the moiety of the husband, it enureth only to the husband and his heires, for the wife had nothing in that moiety; but as to the moiety of the wife, they are joyntenants, as hath bin said; for the husband hath such an estate in his wife's moiety, in her right, as is capable of a confirmation. But if such a lease for life be made to two men by severall moities, and the lessor confirme their estates in the land, to have and to hold to them and to their heires, they are tenants in common of the inheritance; for regularly the confirmation shall enure according to the quality and nature of the estate which it doth enlarge and increase.

If a lease for life be made to A. the remainder to B. for life, and the lessor confirme their estates in the land, to have and to hold to them and their heires, A. taketh one moiety to him and his heires, and therefore of the one moiety he is seised for life, the remainder to B. for life, and then to him and his heires: of the other moiety A. is seised for life, the immediate inheritance to B. and his heires; because as to the moiety which B. takes, the same is executed: as if the reversion be granted to tenant for life, and to a stranger, it is executed for one moiety, (as hath been said before) and therefore in this case they are tenants in common.

If lands be given to two men, and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, and the donor confirmeth their two estates in the land, to have and to hold the land to them two and to their heires: in this case some are of opinion, that they shall be joyntenants of the fee simple, because the donees were joyntenants for life, and (say they) the confirmation must enure according to the estate which they have in possession, and that was joynt. But others hold the contrary. For, first, they say, that the donees have to some purposes severall inheritances executed, though between the donees survivor shall hold for their lives. Secondly, they say, that when the whole estate, which comprehendeth severall inheritances, is confirmed, the confirmation must enure according to the severall inheritances, which is the greater and most perdurable estate, and therefore that the donees shall be tenants in common of the inheritance in this case.

Per voy de remainder, &c. Here some question hath been made of this terme remainder, without any cause at all, because in law it is in nature of a remainder. For in case of a fine, when a reversion expectant upon an estate for life in A. is granted to B. et quæ ad ipsum reverti debet post mortem A. præfata B. & hæredibus suis remaneant, &c. and a more colourable exception might be taken against this word remaneant there, than in the case of Littleton.

It is true, that in * 16. H. 6. it is called a reversion: in [o] 9. E. 4. it is called a remainder: in [p] 6. E. 3. it is said, that by the confirmation an estate accrued to the husband for terme of his life. In [q] 17. E. 3. the husband, living the wife, shall have nothing but in abeyance after the death of his wife. But lest there should bee pugna verborum, which learned and wife men ever avoide, all do resolve, that the estate of the husband is good, and that it doth enure by way of increase and enlargement of his estate. And albeit in this case of Littleton, the husband by the confirmation gaineth an estate for life in remainder, (as Littleton termeth it) yet if the husband doth waste, an action of waste shall lie against him and his wife, notwithstanding the meane remainder, because the husband himselfe committeth the waste, and doth the wrong; and therefore shall not excuse himselfe for his committing of waste, in respect he himselfe hath the remainder; no more than if a man letteth to A. during the life of B. the remainder to him during the life of C. if he commit waste, an action of waste shall lie against him. (1)

Sect. 526.

5. E. 3. 17. b. Pl. Com. 418. b.
 38. H. 6. 23. 14. H. 4. 12.
 38. E. 3. 35. Pl. Com. Dame
 Hale's case. 50. Aff. p. 15.
 4. H. 6. 5. 7. H. 6. 1. 9. H. 6.
 52. 37. Li. Aff. 21. H. 7. 29.
 21. E. 4. 40. 26. H. 8. 7.

THIS is the fifth case wherein the release and confirmation doe agree: and it is to be observed, that chattels reals, as leases for yeares, ward-

*MES si jeo les-sa al feme sole terre pur terme
 d'ans, le quel prent*

BUT if I let land to a feme sole for terme of yeares, who taketh husband, and a baron

(1) It is necessary to distinguish between the cases mentioned by Littleton and Sir Edward Coke, in this and the preceding chapter, where an estate for life is enlarged to an estate in fee, by the release, or confirmation of the reversioner, or remainder-man, and those cases where a person, being seised of an estate for life, the inheritance is afterwards conveyed or devised to his right heirs, by a subsequent deed, or will. It appears by the case of Moore v. Parker, 1. Lord Raym. 37. 4. Mod. 316. Skin. 558. and Fonnercau v. Fonnercau, Doug. Rep. 1. vol. 470. that the estate of the ancestor is not affected by the subsequent conveyance or devise to his right heirs. For though it is a rule that, where the ancestor by any gift or conveyance takes an estate of freehold, and in the same gift, or conveyance, an estate is limited, either mediately or immediately, to his heirs in fee, or in tail, the heirs, in such cases, are words of limitation of the estate, and not words of purchase; yet this applies only to those cases where both the limitations are by the same instrument. In some cases, the freehold of the ancestor has resulted to him by implication; but still the deed from which that implication resulted, was the deed in which the limitation to his heirs was expressed; so that the implied estate of freehold, and the expressed estate of inheritance, arose at the same time, and under the same deed, which brings it within the general rule. But suppose an estate is limited to A. for life; remainder to such uses as B. shall appoint, and afterwards B. in the life-time of A. appoints the estate to A.'s right heirs; it is difficult to say whether, in that case, the estates will unite or not. This case has sometimes occurred in practice, but has not yet been the subject of any judicial determination. To prove the union of the two estates, it may be contended, that the deed by which the power is executed, must be considered as a part of the deed by which the power is given; that the use limited by the execution of the power derives its effect, and is fed, by the seisin of the releasees or feoffees of the deed containing the power; that the uses limited in the original deed, to take effect in default of an execution of the power, are subject to that power; that the uses limited under, or by virtue of the power, precede and take place of them, in the same manner as if in the original deed, not the power, but the use executed by virtue of the power, had been inserted; and that though the uses vest at different times, yet they may be considered as virtually created at the same time. So that, in fact, it exactly resembles the case put, post. 378. b. that if lands be given to two, during their joint lives, with the immediate remainder to the right heirs of him who shall die first, there both the estates are created at the same time, but the inheritance does not vest till a subsequent period; yet Sir Edward Coke expressly says, that the heir, in that case, takes by descent. So that the case before us seems to unite all the qualities requisite for the union of these estates; as both the limitations are made by the same grantor, are created at the same time, and are contained in the same deed. But these arguments are open to some objections, particularly with respect to the position, that both the limitations are made at the same time. See ant. 276. contin. note 1. p. 271. b.

baron, et puis jeo confirma l'estate le baron et sa feme, a aver et tener la terre pur terme de lour deux vies: en cest case ils ont joynt estate en le franktenement de la terre, pur ceo que la feme n'avoit franktenement adevant, &c.

ter I confirm the estate of the husband and his wife, to have and to hold the land for term of their two lives: in this case they have a joynt estate in the freehold of the land, for that the wife had no freehold before, &c.

confirmation in this case to the husband and wife for their lives, maketh them joyntenants for life, because a chattell of a feme covert may be drowned: and so note a diversity betwene a lease for life and a lease for yeares made to a feme covert; for her estate of freehold cannot be altered by the confirmation made to her husband and her, as the terme for yeares may, whereof her husband may make disposition at his pleasure. (1)

ships, and the like, are not given to the husband absolutely (as all chattels personals are), by the intermarriage, but conditionally if the husband happen to survive her, and he hath power to alien them, at his pleasure: but in the mean time the husband is possessed of the chattels reall in her right

(Ant. 46. b. Post. 351. a.)

Secondly, that the husband hath such a possession in her right of the chattell, as is capable of a confirmation, or of a release.

(Ant. 273. b. Ant. 276. a. Ant. 299. a.)

Thirdly, that the confir-

Sect. 527.

ITEM, si mon disseisor granta a un rent charge hors de la terre dont il moy disseisist, et jeo reberisant le dit grant confirma mesme le grant, et tout ceo que est comprise deins mesme le graunt, et puis jeo enter sur le disseisor; quære, en cest case, si le terre soit discharge de le rent ou nemy.

ALSO, if my disseisor granteth to one a rent charge out of the land whereof he disseised mee, and I rehearsing the sayde grant confirme the same grant, and all that which is comprised within the same grant, and after I enter upon the disseisor; quære, in this case, if the land be discharged of the rent or no.

THIS is the fifth case wherein the release and confirmation doe differ; for a release to the grantee in this case [a] were void. It is holden by some authority since Littleton wrote, that the disseisee after his re-entry shall not avoide the rent charge against his own confirmation: and there a generall rule is taken, that such a thing as I may defeat by my entry, I may make good by my confirmation.

[a] 11. H. 7. 28. Lib. 1. fol. 147. Anne Mayow's case. 2. H. 4. 10.

If the feoffee upon condition grant a rent charge in fee, and the feoffor confirmeth it, and after the condition is broken, and the feoffor enter, he shall not avoide the rent charge. And so it is

Li. 1. fo. 147, 148. Anne Mayow's case. (Post. Sect. 529.)

if the heire of the disseisor grant a rent charge, and the disseisee confirmeth it, and after recover the land, he shall not avoide the rent: and yet in neither of these cases his entry was congeable at the time of the confirmation. (2)

Sect. 528.

ITEM, si un parson d'un esglise charge + le glebe de son esglise per son fait, et puis le patron et l'ordinarie

ALSO, if a parson of a church charge the glebe land of his church by his deed, and after the patron and ordinary con-

PARSON, Persona. In the legall signification it is taken for the rector of a church parochiall, and is called persona ecclesiæ, because he assumeth and taketh upon him the parson of the church, and is said

Glauv. li. 13. ca. 23, 24, 25. Bract. li. 4. ca. 285, &c. Brit. fo. 234. b. &c. Fleta li. 5. ca. 19. 20. & lib. 6. ca. 18. Reg. F. N. B. 48, 49.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

+ le—un, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) If a man seised of a rent-charge in fee grants it over to a feme sole for a term of years, and the tenant attorns, and she marries during the term, and the grantor confirms the rent to the husband and wife for their lives, or in fee, they become joint tenants for life or in fee of the rent, and need no new attornment. Vaugh. 46.

(2) Tenant in tail makes a lease for life, now he hath gained a new fee by wrong, and afterwards he grants a rent-charge, or makes a lease for years, and afterwards tenant for life dies, he shall not avoid his charge or lease, altho' he be in of another estate, because he had a defeasible possession and ancient right, the which, if they be in several hands, should be good; as the lease of one, and the confirmation of the other, and being in one hand, shall be as much in judgment of law. 7-Rep. 14. a.

Brit. ubi supra.

8. E. 3. 26. 43. 38. E. 3. 4.
3. Mar. Dyer. 123.7. H. 4. 15.
(Mo. 67.)(1. Roll. Abr. 479. 481.)
[6] 19. El. Dy. 356. 357.
11. H. 6. 9. 33. H. 8. tit.
Charge. Br. 58.
(Post. 329. a.)See more of these kinds of confirmations in my Reports.
Li. 2. 39. & 24. Li. 1. 153.
lib. 4. 23. 24. lib. 5. fol. 31. 81.
Lib. 10. 6. Lib. 11. 19. Lib. 6. 34.
(Ant. 274. b. 297. a. Sid. 75.)31. E. 3. Grant. 61. 26. Aff. 38.
8. Eliz. Dy. 252. Vid. lib. 3.
fol. 73. Le case de deane & chapter de Norwich.
(1. Lev. 112. 1. Roll. Abr. 482.
2. Roll. Abr. 339.)12. H. 4. 11. 19. E. 3. 7.
7. Eliz. Dyer. 238. 11. H. 6. 9.
10. Eliz. Dy. 6. E. 3. 10.
2. E. 3. 29. 9. E. 4. 6. 2. H. 4. 11.
68. E. 3. 19. 25. E. 3. 54.

said to be seized in jure eccle-sie, and the law had an excellent end therein, viz. that in his person the church might sue for and defend her right; and also be sued by any that had an elder and better right; and when the church is full, it is said to be plena & consulta of such a one parson thereof, that is, full and provided of a parson, that may vicem seu personam ejus gerere.

Persona impersonata, parson, impersonce is the rector, that is in possession of the church parochiall, be it presentative, or impropriate, and of whom the church is full.

Here are divers things to bee noted. First, that the confirmation is of the grant, which in deed is but a meere assent by deed to the grant;
and therefore it is holden,
that if there be a parson, patron, and ordinary, and the patron and ordinary give licence by deede to the parson to grant a rent charge out of the glebe, and the parson granteth the rent charge accordingly, this is good, and shall binde the successor; and yet here is no confirmation subsequent, but a licence precedent.

Secondly, The ordinary alone, without the deane and chapter, may agree thereunto, either by licence precedent, or confirmation subsequent; for that the deane and chapter hath nothing to doe with that which the bishop doth as ordinary, in the life-time of the bishop.

Thirdly, [b] but if the bishop be patron, there the bishop cannot confirme alone, but the deane and chapter must confirme also; for the advowson or patronage is parcell of the possession of the bishopricke; and therefore the bishop, without the deane and chapter, cannot make the grant good, but only during his owne life, after the decease of the incumbent, either by licence precedent, or confirmation subsequent.

A. parson of D. is patron of the church of S. as belonging to his church, and presents
B. who by consent of A. and of the ordinary, grants a rent charge out of the glebe; this is not good to make the rent charge perpetuall, without the assent of the patron of A. no more than the assent of the bishop who is patron, without the deane and chapter, or no more than the assent of the patron, being tenant in taile or for life, as Littleton saith.
And Littleton here saith,, that the patron that confirmes must have a fee simple, meaning to make the charge perpetuall. (1) And Littleton after saith, that in the case of the parson the fee is in abeyance, and seeing the consent of the patron is in respect of his interest as heire, it appeareth by Littleton, he may consent upon condition; otherwise it is of an attornment, because that is a bare assent. Also if the estate of the patron be conditionall, and he confirmeth, and after the condition is broken, his confirmation is void.

Fourthly, he that is patron must be patron in fee simple; for if hee be tenant in taile, or tenant for life, his confirmation or agreement is not good to bind any successor, but such as come into the church during his life. But if the patron be tenant in taile, and discontinue the estate in taile, the lease shall stand good during the discontinuance; or if the estate taile be barred, it shall stand good for ever.

But here is to be observed a diversity betweene a sole corporation, as parson, prebend, vicar, and the like, that have not the absolute fee in them, for to their grants the patron must give his consent. But if there be a corporation aggregate of many, as dean and chapter, master, fellowes, and schollars of a colledge, abbot or prior, and covent, and the like, or any sole corporation that hath the absolute fee, as a bishop with consent of the dean and chapter, they may by the common law make any grant of or out of their possessions, without their founder or patron, albeit the abbot or prior, &c. were presentable: and so it is of a bishop, because the whole estate and right of the land was in them, and they may respectively maintaine a writ of right.

* et tous ce que est comprise deins mesme le grant, not in L. and M. nor Roh.
† ne not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† n'ad—ads, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) A prebendary after admission and institution, and before induction, or instalment, granted an annuity for him and his successors, and the bishop confirmed it; it was resolved, that a writ of annuity lay not in that case, because the confirmation being made before the induction, was void. Plow. 518. a.

*confirment mesme le grant, * et tout ceo que est comprise deins mesme le grant, donques le grant esloyera en sa force, selonque le purport de mesme le graunt. Mes en tiel case covient que le patron eit fee simple en le vowson; car s'il † n'ad estate en la-vowson forsque pur terme de vie, ou en le taile, donque le grant † ne esloyera forsque durant sa vie, et la vie le parson que gran-tast, &c.*

firmes the same grant,
and all that is comprised in the same grant, then the grant shall stand in his force, according to the purport of the same graunt.
But in this case it behoveth that the patron hath a fee simple in the advowson; for if he hath but an estate for life, or in taile, in the advowson, then the graunt shall not stand, but during his life, and the life of the parson which granted,
&c.

If a bishop hath two chapters, and he maketh a grant, both chapters must confirme it, or else the successor shall avoide it. But if one of the chapters be dissolved, then the confirmation of the other sufficeth; but it needeth not the confirmation of the king, who is founder and patron of all bishopricks.

Temps R. 2. tit. grant. 104.
50. E. 3. tit. Affise Statham.
11. Eliz. Dyer 282.

And note a diversity between a confirmation of an estate, and a confirmation of a deed; for if the disseisor make a charter of feoffment to A. with a letter of attorney, and before livery the disseisor confirme the estate of A. or the deed made to A. this is cleerely voide, though livery be made after. But if a bishop had made a charter of feoffment with a letter of attorney, and the deane and chapter before livery confirme the deed, this is a good confirmation, and livery made afterwards is good. And so it hath been adjudged.

The like law is of a confirmation of a deed of grant of a reversion before attornment.

In the same manner it is if a bishop at the common law had granted lands to the king in fee by deed, and the deane and chapter by their deed confirme the deed of the bishop, and after the deed of the bishop is inrolled, this is good, albeit the confirmation of the deane and chapter be not inrolled; for the assent upon the matter is made to the bishop.

But this confirmation that Littleton here speaketh of must be made in the life, and during the incumbency of the person; and so in the life of the bishop, or of any other sole corporation. But it is to be knowne that grants made by parsons, prebends, vicars, bishops, master and fellows of any colledge, deane and chapter, master or gardeine of any hospitall, or any having any spirituall or ecclesiasticall living are restrained by [c] divers acts of parliament, so as they cannot grant any rent charge, or to make any alienation, or to make any leases other than such as are mentioned in those acts, which you may reade at large, and the expositions upon the same, in my [*] Commentaries.

33. E. 3. Confirm. 22. 31. E. 3.
Abb. 10. 21. H. 7. 1. Vid. Sect.
393. & 643.
[c] 13. Eliz. cap. 10. 1. Eliz.
cap. 19. 18. Eli. ca. 11. 1. Jac.
cap. 3.
Vid. Sect. 593. & 648.
[*] Li. 2. fo. 46. lib. 4. 76. &
120. li. 5. 9. 6. 14. li. 6. 37.
lib. 7. 8. lib. 11. 67.

Sect. 529.

ITEM, si home lessa terre pur terme de vie, le quel tenant a terme de vie charge la terre ove un rent en fee, et celuy en le reversion confirma mesme le grant, le charge est assés bone et effectuell.

ALSO, if a man letteth land for term of life, the which tenant for life charge the land with a rent in fee, and hee in the reversion confirme the same grant, the charge is good enough and effectuell.

HERE is a diversity to be observed, where the determination of the rent is expressed in the deed, and when it is implied in law. For when tenant for life granteth a rent in fee, this by law is determined by his death; and yet a confirmation of the grant by him in the reversion makes that grant good forever, without words of inlargement, or clause of distresse, which would amount to a new grant. And yet if the 26. Aff. pl. 38. 45. Aff. pl. 13.

Lib. 1. fol. 147. Anne Mayowe's case.

(1. Roll. Abr. 483.)

14. Aff. pl. 14.

tenant for life had granted a rent to another and his heires by expresse words, during the life of the grantor, and the lessor had confirmed that grant, that grant should determine by the death of tenant for life.

Tenant for life upon a condition grant a rent in fee, the lessor confirme the grant, and after the condition is broken, the lessor re-enter, he shall not avoide the grant.

Sect. 530.

ITEM, si soit un perpetual chantarie, dont l'ordinarie n'ad rien a medler ne a faire; quære, si le patron del chaunte-

ALSO, if there bee a perpetuall chanterie, wherewith the ordinary hath nothing to doe or meddle; quære, if the patron of

THIS is meant of a chauntry donative wherewith the ordinary hath not to deale, and by this grant, when Littleton wrote, the chauntry should have been charged for ever, because no other had any interest in this chantery save

Vid. Sect. 648.
(Cro. Jac. 63.)
(10. Rep. Lampet's case.)

(1) For the confirmation of leases made by ecclesiastical persons, see Bacon's Abr. tit. Leases.

(Post. 344.)

save only the patron and chauntry priest, and the grant is made concurrentibus hiis quæ in jure requiruntur. But since Littleton wrote, all, and all manner of free chapels and chauntries perpetual, whereof Littleton here

[a] 37. H. 8. ca. 4. 1. E. 6. c. 14.

speakes, are by [a] acts of parliament given to the crowne, and the bodies politike thereof dissolved. See hereafter, Section 648. more at large of all this present Section.

Sect. 531.

HERE Littleton proceedeth, according to the former division, to shew words that in law do amount to a confirmation. And here is to bee observed, that some words are large, and have a generall extent, and some have a proper and particular application. The former sort may contain the latter; as dedi, or concessi, may amount to a grant, a feoffment, a gift, a lease, a release, a confirmation, a surrender, &c. and it is in the election of the party to use to which of these purposes he will.

Bra. li. 2. fo. 59. b. 1. H. 6. feoffments & lants 103.
22. H. 6. 42. 14. H. 4. 36.
19. H. 6. 44. 7. H. 7. 16.
32. E. 3. briefe 291. Brooke tit. Confirm. 20. 14. H. 7. 2.
37. H. 6. 17. Dyer 8. Eliz.
4. H. 7. 10. 22. E. 4. 36.
40. E. 3. 41.
(Sid. 452. Plo. 106. 5. Rep. 17. a.
1. Roll. Abr. 482. Noy 66.)

Brafton lib. 2. fol. 59. b.

Est autem confirmatio quasi quedam ratihabitio, sufficit tamen quandoque per se, si etiam in se contineat donationem, ut si dicat quis, dedi et confirmavi, licet jurari possit ex aliqua donatione precedente.

(4. Rep. 80. b. 2. Cro. 169.
Mo. 34. Plo. 397, 398.)

But a release, confirmation, or surrender, &c. cannot amount to a grant, &c. nor a surrender to a confirmation, or to a release, &c. because these bee proper and peculiar manner of conveyances, and are destined to a speciall end. (1)

[e] 32. E. 3. briefe 291.
Brooke tit. Confirm. 20.
Vid. le stat. de Gloc. ca. 4.

[f] 7. E. 3. 9.

Brafton.
(Plo. 159.)

14. H. 4. 36. Lib. 5. fol. 15. in Newcomen's case.

Dedi et concessi, &c. Here is implied that there be more words than dedi and concessi, that will amount to a confirmation, as dimisi. [e] In ancient statutes and in originall writs, as in the writ of entry in casu proviso, in consimili casu ad communem legem, and many others, this word dimisi is not applyed only to a lease for life, but to a gift in taile, and to a state in fee. [f] Also, if a man make a lease to A. for yeares, and after by his deed the lessor voluit quod haberet et teneret terram pro termino vite sue; this is adjudged by this verbe (volo) to bee a good confirmation for terme of his life. Benigne enim faciendæ sunt interpretationes cartarum propter simplicitatem laicorum ut res magis valeat quam pereat.

And he to whom such a deed comprehending dedi, &c. is made, may plead it as a grant, as a release, or as a confirmation, at his election. (2)

If a parson and ordinary make a lease for yeares of the glebe to the patron, and the pa-

* ou—et, L. and M. and Roh.
not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† puis added L. and M. and Roh.‡ &c. VEL QUOD CONCESSI a le disseisor, &c.

- (1) The effect of the word grant, in implying a warranty, will be considered in a note on the chapter of Warranty.
(2) But a lease and release cannot be pleaded as a grant of the reversion. Noy 66.

ry, et le chapleine de the chantery, and the mesme le chauntey chapleine of the same poient charge le chantery may charge chauntery ove un the chantery with a rent charge en perpe- rent charge in perpetuitie. tuitie.

ITEM, en ascun cas cest verbe
*dedi, * ou cest verbe*
concessi, ad mesme l'effect en substance, et urera a mesme l'entent, come cest verbe confirmavi. Sicome jeo sue disseise d'un carue de terre, et † jeo face tiel fait; Sciant præsentes, &c. quod
dedi a le disseisor, ‡ &c.
vel quod concessi a le dit disseisor, le dit carue, &c. et jeo deliver tantsolement le fait a luy sauns ascun livery de seisin del terre, c'est un bone confirmation, et auxy fort en ley, sicome il avoit en le fait cest verbe confirmavi, &c.

ALSO, in some case
this verbe dedi,
or this verbe con-
cessi, hath the same effect in substance, and shall enure to the same intent, as this verbe confirmavi. As if I bee disseised of a carue of land, and I make such a deed; Sciant præsen- tes, &c. quod dedi to the disseisor, &c. or quod concessi to the said disseisor, the said
carue, &c. and I deliver onely the deed to him without any liverie of seisin of the land, this is a good confirmation, and as strong in law, as if there had beene in the deed this verbe confirmavi, &c.

patron by his deede granteth it over, or if the disseisor granteth a rent to the disseisee, and he by his deed granteth it over, and after re-enter; in both these cases one and the same words doe amount both to a grant, and to a confirmation in judgement of law of one and the same thing, ne res percat. And so it is if a disseisor make a lease for life, or a gift in taile, the remainder to the disseisee in fee, the disseisee by his deed granteth over the remainder, the particular tenant attorneth, the disseisee shall not enter upon the tenant for life, or in taile, for then he should avoide his owne grant, which amounted to a grant of the estate, and a confirmation also. (Ant. 280. 293. 5. Rep 15, 16.)

Sect. 532.

*ITEM, si jeo lessa terre a un home pur terme d'ans, per force de quel il est * en possession, &c. et puis jeo face un fait a luy, &c. quod dedi & concessi, &c. le dit terre, a aver pur terme de sa vie, et delivra a luy le fait, &c. donques maintenant il ad estate en le terre pur terme de † sa vie.* ALSO, if I let land to a man for terme of yeares, by force (Sid. 453.) whereof he is in possession, &c. and after I make a deede to him, &c. quod dedi & concessi, &c. the said land, to have for terme of his life, and I deliver to him the deed, &c. then presently hee hath an estate in the land for terme of his life.

HERE is the sixth case wherein the confirmation and the release doe agree, and is evident, and needeth no explication.

Sect. 533.

ET si jeo die en le fait, a aver et tener a luy et a ses beires de son corps engendres, il ad estate en fee taile. Et si jeo die en le fait, a aver et tener a luy et a ses beires, il ad estate en fee simple. Car ceo urera a luy per force de ‡ confirmation d'enlarger son estate. AND if I say in the deede, to have and to hold to him and to his heires of his body engendred, hee hath an estate in fee taile. And if I say in the deed, to have and to hold to him and to his heires, he hath an estate in fee simple. For this shall enure to him by force of the confirmation to inlarge his estate.

THIS also is evident, and needeth no explication, saving that whensoever a confirmation doth inlarge and give an estate of inheritance, there ought to be apt words (as Littleton here exprelieth them) used for the same.

Sect. 534.

ITEM, si home soit disseise, et le disseisor devie seise, et son beire est eins per ALSO, if a man be disseised, and the disseisor die seised, and his heire is in by discent, QUANT al beire del disseisor, &c. les tenements passent per voy de feoffment. For the * en possession, &c.—possessione, L. and M. and Roh. L. and M. and Roh.

† sa not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ confirmation—confirmament.

21. H. 7. 34. b. Pl. Com. 59. a.
in Wimbiſhe's caſe.
(6. Rep. 15. a.)

Pl. Com. 59. a.
Pl. Com. 140. in Browning's caſe. 2. H. 5. 7. 13 H. 7. 14.
13. E. 4. 4. a. 27. H. 8. 13.
M. 16. & 17. Eliz. 339.
(Sid. 81.)
(1. Roll. Abr. 633.)
(Ant. 45. a.)
(1. Rep. 76. 77.)

Lib. 1. fo. 76. Bredon's caſe.
(Ant. 251. b.)

17. Eliz. Dyer 339.
(1. Leo. 31.)

(1. Leo. 37. 262.)

the land ſhall ever paſſe from him that hath the ſtate of the land in him. As if ceſty que uſe and his feoffees after the ſtatute of 1. R. 3. and before the ſtatute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. had joyned in a feoffment, it ſhall be the feoffment of the feoffees, becauſe the ſtate of the land was in him.

So it is if the tenant for life, and hee in the remainder or reversion in fee, joyne in a feoffment by deede. The livery of the freehold ſhall move from the leſſee, and the inheritance from him in the reversion or remainder, from each of them according to his eſtate. For it cannot bee adjudged by law, that the feoffment of tenant for life doth draw the reversion or remainder out of the leſſor or him in remainder, or doth worke a wrong becauſe they joyned together.

If there bee tenant for life, the remainder in tayle, &c. and tenant for life and he in the remainder in tayle levie a fine, this is no diſcontinuance or deſtroying of any eſtate in remainder, but each of them paſſe that which they have power and authority to paſſe.

A. tenant for life, the remainder to B. for life, the remainder in tayle, the remainder to the right heires of B. A. and B. joyne in a feoffment by deede, albeit it may be ſaid that this is the feoffment of A. and the confirmation of B. and conſequently hee in the remainder in tayle cannot enter for the forfeiture during the life of B. but becauſe B. joyned in the feoffment, which was torcious to him in the remainder in tayle, and is particeps criminis, therefore they forfeited both their eſtates, and he in the remainder in tayle might enter for the forfeiture. But if he in the reversion in fee and tenant for life joyne in a feoffment by paroll, this ſhall be (as ſome hold) firſt, a ſurrender of the eſtate of tenant for life, and then the feoffment of him in the reversion; for, otherwiſe, if the whole ſhould paſſe from the leſſee, then he in the reversion might enter for the forfeiture, and every man's act (ut res magis valeat) ſhall be conſtrued moſt ſtrongly againſt himſelfe.

And it is to be obſerved that Littleton here putteth a diſcent, ſo as the entry of the diſſeiſee is not lawfull; for if the diſſeiſor and diſſeiſee joyne in a charter of feoffment, and enter into the land, and make livery, it ſhall be accounted the feoffment of the diſſeiſee, and the confirmation of the diſſeiſor.

*diſcent, et puis le diſſeiſee et l'heire * le diſſeiſor ſont jointment un fait a un auter en fee, et livery de ſeiſin ſur ceo eſt fait (quant al heire le diſſeiſor que enſealaſt le fait) les tenements paſſont † et uront per meſme le fait per voy de feoffment; et quant al diſſeiſee que enſealaſt meſme le fait, ceo ne urera ‡ ſinon per voy de confirmation. Mes ſi le diſſeiſee en ceſt cas port brieſe d'entre en le per et cui envers l'alienee || del heire le diſſeiſor; quære, comment il pledra cel fait envers le demandant per voy de confirmation, § &c. Et ſaches, mon ſits, que eſt un des plus honorables, laudables, et profitables choſes en noſtre ley, de aver le ſcience de bien pleder en actions reals et perſonals; et pur ceo jeo toy counſaile eſpecialment de mitter † ton courage et cure de ceo apprehender. ***

and after the diſſeiſee and the heire of the diſſeiſor make joyntly a deede to another in fee, and livery of ſeiſin is made upon this, (as to the heire of the diſſeiſor that ſealed the deed) the tenements doe paſſe and enure by the ſame deed by way of feoffment; and as to the diſſeiſee who ſealed the ſame deed, this ſhall enure but by way of confirmation. But if the diſſeiſee in this caſe brings a writ of entrie in the per and cui againſt the alienee of the heire of the diſſeiſor; quære, how he ſhall plead this deede againſt the demandant by way of confirmation, &c. And know, my ſon, that it is one of the moſt honorable, laudable, and profitable things in our law, to have the ſcience of well pleading in actions reals and perſonals; and therefore I counſaile thee eſpecially to imploy thy courage and care to learne this.

Quære

* le diſſeiſor not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| del—he, L. and M. and Roh.

 &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† et uront not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ ſinon—mes, L. and M. and Roh.

† tout added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Tenant for life, and he in the remainder in fee, make a leaſe for years by deed indented; the leſſee, being ejected, declared upon the demife made by the tenant for life, and the remainder-man; and adjudged againſt the plaintiff; for, living the tenant for life, it is only the leaſe of the tenant for life, and the confirmation of the remainder-man; and he ought to have ſo declared, 1. Inf. 45. b. So if two joint-tenants, two tenants in common, or tenant for life, and he in the remainder, join in the grant of a copyhold, one fine only is due, and it ſhall enure as one grant only; ſo if a ſurrender be made, and after a common recovery is had by plaint, on the nature of a writ of entrie, for better aſſurance — one fine only ſhall be paid. Co. Copyholder, 162, 163.

Quære coment il pledera cest fait, &c. Hee may pleade the feoffment of the heire of the disseisor, and the confirmation of the disseisee as it hath been pleaded and allowed. Lib. 1. fo. 146, 147. Mayowe's case.

Et saches, mon firs, que est un de pluis honorable, &c. Here is to bee observed the excellency of good pleading, and Littleton's grave advice, that the student should imploy his courage and care for the attaining thereof; which hee shall attaine unto by three meanes: first, by reading; secondly, by observation; and thirdly, by use and exercise. For in ancient time the serjeants and apprentices of law did draw their owne pleadings, which made them good pleaders. And in this sense placitum may be derived à placendo, quia omnibus placet.

See my Preface to the 9. Booke of my Reports.
(Ante 17. a. 126. b. 181. a. 283. a. Sid. 339.)

Now seeing good pleading is so honourable and excellent, and that many a good cause is daily lost for want of good and orderly pleading, it is necessary to set downe some few rules (amongst many) of the same, to facilitate this learning, that is so highly commended to the studious reader. For when I diligently consider the course of our bookes of years and termes from the beginning of the raigne of Edw. 3. I observe, that more jangling and questions grow upon the manner of pleading, and exceptions to forme, than upon the matter it selfe, and infinite causes lost or delayed for want of good pleading. Therefore it is a necessary part of a good common lawyer to be a good prothonotary. And now wee will performe our promise.

The order of good pleading is to be observed, which being inverted great prejudice may grow to the party, tending to the subversion of law. Ordine placitandi servato, servatur & jus, &c.

First, in good order of pleading a man must pleade to the jurisdiction of the court. Secondly, to the person; and therein first to the person of the plaintife, and then to the person of the defendant. Thirdly, to the count. Fourthly, to the writ. Fifthly, to the action, &c. [a] which order and forme of pleading you shall reade in the ancient authors agreeable to the law at this day; and if the defendant misorder any of these, he loseth the benefit of the former.

The count must be agreeable and conforme to the writ, the barre to the count, &c. and the judgement to the count; for none of them must be narrower or broader than the other.

A count or declaration, which anciently and yet is called narratio, ought to containe two things [b], viz. certainty and verity, for that it is the foundation of the suite, whereunto the adverse party must answer, and whereupon the court is to give his judgement: [c] Certa debet esse intentio et narratio, et certum fundamentum, et certa res quæ deducitur in judicium. But it must be understood that there be three kinde of certainties: first, to a common intent, and that is sufficient in a barre which is to defend the party and to excuse him. [d] Secondly, a certaine intent in generall, as in counts, replications, and other pleadings of the plaintife, that is to convince the defendant, and so in inditements, &c. Thirdly, a certaine intent in every particular, as in estoppels.

[e] He pleadeth a plea in abatement of the writ (which of ancient times was, and yet is called breve) or a plea after the latter continuance, ought to plead it certainly.

[f] The ancient formes of courts are to be duly observed, as cum dimisit, or cum dedit, and not to say, that he was seised and demised, &c. (And yet if he say so, it maketh not the count vicious) [g] but in a barre replication or other kinde of pleading, the party must alledge a feisin in the lessor or donor, and ancient formes of pleading are also to be observed.

[h] Counts, or such as be in nature of counts, (as an avowry, wherein the defendant is an actor) need not to be averred, but all other pleas in the affirmative ought to be averred, et hoc paratum est verificare, &c. but pleas meerly in the negative ought not to be averred, because a negative cannot be proved.

[i] Where there is but one tenant or one defendant, he cannot have two such pleas, as each of them doe goe to the whole; but where there are divers, each of them may pleade severall pleas which extend to the whole (1).

[k] That which is alledged by way of conveyance or inducement to the substance of the matter need not to be so certainly alledged, as that which is the substance it selfe.

[l] Every plea must be direct, and not by way of argument, or rehearfall.

[m] Where a matter of record is the foundation or ground of the suite of the plaintife, or of the substance of the plea, there it ought to be certainly and truly alledged; otherwise it is, where it is but conveyance. But the proceedings and sentences in the ecclesiasticall courts may be alledged summarily; as that a divorce was had between such parties, for such a cause, and before such a judge, and concurrentibus hiis quæ in jure requiruntur; for the judge must be alledged, to the intent the court may write to him if it be denied.

Good matter must be pleaded in good forme, in apt time, and in due order, or otherwise great advantages may be lost.

[n] Generall

(1) This is altered by 4. Ann. cap. 16. sect. 4. & 5. by which it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for any defendant or tenant, in any action or suit, or for any plaintiff in replevin, in any court of record, with the leave of the same court, to plead as many severall matters thereto as he shall think necessary for his defence; but it is thereby also provided, that if any such matter, upon a demurrer joined, be judged insufficient, costs shall be given at the discretion of the court; or if a verdict shall be found upon any issue in the said cause for plaintiff, or the defendant, costs shall be also given in like manner, unless the judge, who tried the said issue, shall certify that the defendant, tenant, or plaintiff in replevin, had a probable cause to plead such matter, which upon the said issue shall be found against him. Note to the 11th edition.

[n] 35. H. 6. 35. 21. E. 4. 51.
 9. H. 4. 5. 19. H. 6. 73.
 5. E. 4. 12. 10. E. 4. 18.
 13. H. 7. 18. 36. H. 8. Pleading Br. 160.
 [o] V. Sect. 193. 3. H. 6. 47.
 41. E. 3. 22. 9. Aff. 9. 22. Aff. 45.
 2. E. 3. 42. 13. E. 3. Anc. De-mefine 15. 20. E. 3. ib. 45.
 7. H. 7. 8. Lib. 10. fo. 91. Li. 11.
 fo. 10.
 [p] 3. H. 7. 3. 26. Aff. 10.
 14. H. 4. 4. b. 27. H. 6. 8. b.
 21. H. 6. Debt. 43. 7. H. 6. 24. 31.
 35. H. 6. 48. 47. E. 3. 14. Pl.
 Com. 46. a. Li. 3. fo. 59. Linc.
 Col. case.
 [q] 22. E. 4. 40. 2. 3.
 20. E. 4. 10. 21. E. 4. 36.
 22. H. 6. 50.
 [r] 40. E. 3. 40. 43. 46.
 41. E. 3. 2. 18. E. 3. 16.
 26. E. 3. 68. 42. E. 3. 3. 10. 46.
 6. E. 3. 37. 8. E. 3. 20.
 10. E. 3. 60. 14. H. 4. 15.
 12. E. 4. 1. 38. E. 3. 28.
 7. H. 7. 3.
 [s] 10. E. 4. 3. 27. H. 6. 8.
 8. H. 7. 13. 9. H. 7. 26.
 37. H. 6. 1. 27. H. 8. 13.
 21. H. 7. 25. 11. H. 4. 33.
 Pl. Com. 79. 16. E. 4. 10.
 1. H. 7. 33. 20. H. 7. 1.
 6. E. 4. 4. 5. 21. E. 4. 54.
 22. H. 6. 47. 11. H. 6. 8.
 25. E. 3. 50. b. 23. Aff. 7.
 2. Eliz. Dyer 184.
 [t] Pl. Com. 149. b. & 105. a.
 37. H. 6. 38.
 [u] 18. E. 4. 16. b. 22. E. 4. 2. 76.
 5. H. 7. 13. 38. H. 6. 17. 18. 19.
 18. E. 3. 34. Pl. Com. 229. b.
 Lib. 8. 133. Turner's case.
 [w] 5. H. 7. 34. 5. E. 3. 26.
 22. H. 6. 28.
 [x] 19. H. 6. 30. 32.
 Pl. Com. 232. b. & fo. 502. per
 Dyer & 503.
 [y] 13. H. 4. 17. 10. E. 4. 18.
 33. H. 6. 54. 35. H. 6. 30.
 21. H. 7. 32. Bract. li. 3. fo. 154.
 Pl. Com. 87. b. 26. H. 6. Gard. 58.
 [a] 2. H. 7. 15. 4. H. 7. 12.
 10. H. 7. 12. 13. H. 7. 19.
 26. H. 8. 5. b.
 [b] Li. 8. fo. 133. Turner's case, & fo. 120. Bonham's case
 Li. 9. 25. 61. Li. 10. 100.
 [c] 12. H. 8. 6. 7. 2. R. 3. 17.
 14. E. 4. 7. 9. E. 4. 19.
 [d] 44. E. 3. 2. 34. H. 6. 5.
 10. H. 6. 6. & 17. 12. E. 4. 11. 14.
 14. H. 8. 24. 7. E. 3. 12.
 17. E. 3. 44.
 [e] 18. H. 6. 33. 22. H. 6. 53.
 36. H. 6. 17. 38. H. 6. 18. 25.
 5. E. 3. 15. 16. 22. Aff. 33.
 2. Eliz. Dyer 184.
 [f] Pl. Com. 14. 15. 2. E. 4. 18.
 39. E. 3. 14. 32. 33. 8. E. 3. 57.
 Qu. Imp. 25. 18. H. 6. 30.
 7. 4. 18. 38. Aff. 14. 24. E. 3. 48.
 22. E. 3. 13. 38. H. 6. 25.
 32. H. 6. 14. 19. H. 8. 7.
 27. H. 8. 12. b.
 [g] 7. E. 4. 26. 11. H. 7. 4.
 12. H. 7. 6. 33. H. 6. 9. 37. 43.
 [h] V. Sect. 485.
 [i] Bract. li. 5. fo. 400.
 Flet. li. 6. ca. 37.

[n] General estates in fee simple may be generally alledged, but the commencement of estates taylor, and other particular estates regularly must be shewed, unless in some cases where they are alledged by way of inducement, and the life of tenant in taile, or for life, ought to be averred.

[o] When any speciall and substantiall matter is alledged by either party, that ought to be especially answered, and not to be passed over by a generall pleading.

[p] The plea of every man shall be construed strongly against him that pleadeth it, for everie man is presumed to make the best of his owne case: ambiguum placitum interpretari debet contra proferentem.

[q] Every plea that a man pleadeth ought to be triable, for without triall the cause can receive no end: et expedit reipublicæ ut sit finis litium.

[r] The tenant before his default saved, may plead all pleas which prove the writ abated, as death, &c. or matters apparent in the writ; but no plea, which prove it abateable, as taking of husband, &c.

[s] When a man is authorised to doe any thing by the common law, by grant, commission, act of parliament, or by custome, he ought to pursue the substance and effect of the same accordingly.

[t] All necessary circumstances implied by law in the plea need not to be expressed, as in the plea of a feoffment of a mannor, livery and attornment are implied.

[u] When a count, barre, replication, &c. is defective in respect of omission of some circumstance, as time, place, &c. there it may be made good by the plea of the adverse party; but if it be insufficient in matter, it cannot be saved.

[w] Every man shall plead such pleas as are pertinent for him, according to the quality of his case, estate, or interest, as disseisors, tenants, incumbents, ordinaries, and the like.

[x] Surplusage shall never make the plea vicious, but where it is contrariant to the matter before. (1)

[y] That which is apparent to the court by necessary collection out of the record need not to be averred.

[a] A man is bound to performe all the covenants in an indenture: if all the covenants be in the affirmative, he may generally plead performance of all; but if any be in the negative, to so many he must plead specially (for a negative cannot be performed), and to the rest generally. [b] So if any be in the disjunctive, he must shew which of them he hath performed. So if any are to be done of record, he must shew that specially, and cannot involve that in generall pleading.

[c] In many cases the law doth allow generall pleading, for avoyding of prolixity and tediousnesse, and that the particular shall come on the other side.

[d] Pleadings which amount to the generall issue are not to be allowed; but the generall issue is to be entred. Vi. Sect. 10. 485. 499.

[e] Every plea ought to have his proper conclusion, as a plea to the writ to conclude to the writ, a plea in barre to conclude to the action, an estoppel to relie upon the estoppels; et sic de similibus.

[f] When the conclusion of a plea, et issint, et sic, is in the affirmative, it shall not wave the speciall matter, for there the speciall matter is the substance and foundation of the conclusion, and affirmed by the same. But where the conclusion is in the negative, there the speciall matter regularly is waved.

[g] Whensoever speciall matter is pleaded, and the conclusion (et sic) is to the point of the writ or action, the speciall matter is waved.

The names of legall records are, a writ, a count, a barre, a replication, a rejoinder, a rebutter, a surrebutter, &c.

[h] New and subtill devices and inventions of pleading ought not to alter any principle of law, whereof you have heard plentifully before.

The count or declaration is an exposition of the writ, and addeth time, place, and other necessary circumstances, that the same may be triable; and any imperfection in the count doth abate the writ.

Pleadings are divided into barres, replications, rejoinders, surrejoinders, rebutters, and surrebutters, &c. They are words of art, and are called barres, barreæ, so called, because it barreth the plaintife of this action. Replicationes, à replicando; reuniones, à rejunendo; rebutter, of the French word rebuter, i. e. à repellendo, to put backe or avoide, and so of surrebutter.

But each party must take heed of the ordering of the matter of his pleading, lest his replication depart from his count, or his rejoinder from his barre; et sic de cæteris.

[i] In ancient writers a barre is called exceptio peremptoria: a replication was then called replicatio, as now it is; a rejoinder, triplicatio; a surrejoinder, quadruplicatio; et sic ulterius in infinitum.

A de-

(1) And then it does, because the plaintiff cannot discern what to answer to in his replication. Note to the 11th edition.

A departure in pleading is said to be when the second plea containeth matter not pursuant to his former, and which fortifieth not the same, and thereupon it is called decessus, because he departeth from his former plea; and therefore whensoever the rejoinder (taking one example for all) containeth matter subsequent to the matter of the barre, and not fortifying the same, this is regularly a departure, because it leaveth the former, and goeth to another matter. As if in an assise the tenant plead a discent from his father, and giveth a colour, the demandant intituleth himselfe by a feoffment from the tenant himselfe, the plaintife cannot say, that that feoffment was upon condition, and to shew the condition broken; for that should be a cleere departure from his barre, because it containeth matter subsequent. But in an assise, if the tenant pleadeth in barre, that I. S. was seised and infeoffed him, &c. and the plaintife sheweth, that he himselfe was seised in fee, untill by I. S. disseised, who infeoffed the tenant, and he re-entred, the defendant may plead a release of the plaintife to I. S. for this doth fortifie the barre.

If a man plead performance of covenants, and the plaintife reply, that he did not such an act according to his covenant, the defendant saith, that he offered to do it, and the plaintife refused it; this is a departure, because the matter is not pursuant; for it is one thing to doe a thing, and another to offer to doe it, and the other refused to doe it: therefore that should have been pleaded in the former plea. Vide & cave in a quare impedit, what plea shall be safely pleaded in primo placito.

When a man in his former plea pleadeth an estate made by the common law, in the second plea regularly he shall not make it good by an act of parliament. So when in his former plea he intituleth himselfe generally by the common law, in his second plea he shall not enable himselfe by a custome, but should have pleaded it first.

If a man plead an estate generally, (as for example a feoffment in fee) he in his second plea shall not maintain it by other matter tantamount in law, as by a disseisin and release, or by a lease and release, or a gift in tayle in barre, and in the second plea a recovery in value; for this is a departure: but he in that case shall count of a gift, and maintaine it in his replication by a recovery in value, because he could have no other count.

See more of this matter, where the plaintife varying from time or place alledged in the count of actions transitory, shall commit no departure.

The plea that containes duplicity or multiplicity of distinct matter to one and the same thing, whereunto severall answers (admitting each of them to be good) are required, is not allowable in law. And this rule you see extendeth to pleas perpetuall or peremptory, and not to pleas dilatory; for in their time and place a man may use divers of them; and hereof ancient writers * speake notably: Sicut actor una actione debet experiri saltem illam durante, sic oportet tenentem una exceptione, dum tamen peremptoria (quod de dilatoriis non est tenendum); quia si liceret pluribus uti exceptionibus peremptoriis simul & semel, sicut fieri poterit in dilatoriis, sic sequeretur, quod si in probatione unius defecerit, ad aliam probandam possit habere recursum, quod non est permixibile, non magis quam aliquem se defendere duobus baculis in duello, cum unus tantum sufficiat.

But where the tenant or defendant may pleade a generall issue, thereupon the generall issue pleaded, he may give in evidence as many distinct matters to barre the action or right of the demandant or plaintife, as he can. (1)

A speciall verdict may containe double or treble matter; and therefore in those cases the tenant or defendant may eyther make choice of one matter, and to plead it to barre the demandant or plaintife, or to plead the generall issue, and to take advantage of all; or he may plead to part one of the pleas in barre, and to another part another plea; and his conclusion of his plea shall avoide doubleness, and hereby neither the court nor the jury is so much inveigled, as if one plea should containe divers distinct matters. And if the tenant make choice of one plea in barre, and that be found against him, yet he may resort to an action of an higher nature, and take advantage of any other matter. And the law in this point is by them that understand not the reason thereof misliked, saying, Nemo prohibetur pluribus defensionibus uti.

And it is worthy of observation, that in the reignes of Edward the second, Edward the first, and upwards, the pleadings were plain and sensible, but nothing curious, evermore having chiefe respect to matter, and not to formes of words, and were often holpen with a questum esse, and then the questions moved by the court, and the answers by the parties were also entered into the rolle. But even in those dayes the formes of the register of originall writs were then punctually observed, and matters in law excellently debated and resolved; and where any great difficulty was, then it was resolved by all the judges and fages of the law (who were for matters in law called concilium regis) and their assembly and resolution was entered into the rolle. As for example, in the great case in a quare impedit, between the king and the prior of Worcester, concerning an appropriation, whether it were a mortmaine, the record saith, ad quem diem venit predictus prior per attornatum suum, &c. Et examina-

(Sid. 10. 77. 176. 277. Finch 391. 2. Cro. 264.)
39. E. 3. 13. b. 39. H. 6. 15.
6. H. 7. 8. 21. H. 6. 32. Pl.
Com. 105. 1. Mar. Dyer. 95.
28. H. 8. ib. 31.
(Doc. Pla. 119. 1. Cro. 228, 229. 257.)
6. H. 7. 8. 3. H. 6. Departure 2.

(Sid. 10. 77. 180. 404.)
8. El. Dy. 253. 23. El. Dy. 271.
6. E. 3. 3. 40. E. 3. 32. 43. E. 3.
32. 43. E. 3. 11. 1. E. 4. 4.
18. E. 4. 24. 5. H. 7. 27.
8. H. 6. 11. 33. H. 6. 14.
(Cro. Car. 257. 1. Saund. 83.
189.)
Pl. Com. 105. b. Fulmerston's case. 21. H. 7. 25. 27. H. 8. 3.
21. H. 7. 17. 37. H. 6. 5.
38. H. 6. 25.
(Saund. 142. S. C. 1. Leo. 81. S. C.
Raym. 60. Sid. 142.)
21. H. 7. 25. 1. E. 4. 4.
3. H. 7. 5. 7. H. 7. 2.

Vid. Sect. 485.

Pl. Com. 139. 142.

* Fleta li. 6. ca. 35. Bracton
li. 5. fol. 400.

17. E. 3. 73.
(Doc. Plac. 135.)

39. H. 6. 27.

(Ante 139. 2.)

Hil. 32. E. 1. cor. Reg. in fine rotul.

(1) It is natural to plead first to the jurisdiction, and afterwards to the writ of the count. Nota, The briefe ranked before the count, 17. Edw. 3. 74. Nota, Upon default in the count, the judgment shall be that the brief shall abate. 3. Hen. 6. 41. 9. Hen. 6. 10. Brooke Count 78. Vide 303. b. Therefore, as it seems, it is more proper to reserve the exception to the writ for the last place, if the first fails. In special cases the order of pleading is not observed; as for example, a defendant in debt, in the custody of the sheriff, was permitted to plead a plea in abatement of the writ before any count was made, and before any of the other defendants came in. 3. Hen. 6. Fitz. Debt. 20. Lord Willoughby and other defendants in assise against Wimbiſh, pleaded in abatement of the writ before any count was made. Plowd. Com. 73.—Lord Nott. MSS.

examinatis et intellectis recorde et processu coram toto concilio tam thesaurario et baronibus de scaccario, quam cancellario, ac etiam justiciariis de utroque banco inspecta causa, pro qua, pro domino rege dicunt, quod ad ipsum regem pertinet presentare, &c. consideratum est, &c. For in those dayes though the chancellor and treasurer were for the most part men of the church, yet were they expert and learned in the lawes of the realme.

As for example, in the time of the Conqueror, Egelricus episcopus Cicestrensis vir antiquissimus, et in legibus sapientissimus, as elsewhere I have said.

[a] Ockam, fo. 17.

[a] Nigellus episcopus Eliensis Hen. 1. thesaurarius in temporibus suis incomparabilem habuit scaccarii scientiam, et de eadem scripsit optime.

[b] Pasch. 5. R. 1. cor. Rege.

[b] Henricus Cant. episcopus, H. Dunelm' episcopus, Willielmus Eliensis episcopus, G. Roffens. episcopus.

[c] 1. H. 3. Rot. pat. Bracl. sæpe.

[c] Martinus de Patshul clericus decanus Divi Pauli London' constitutus fuit capitalis justic' de banco, quia in legibus hujus regni peritissimus.

[d] Bracl. sæpe.

[d] Will'us de Raleigh clericus justiciarius domini regis.

[e] 8. E. 3. 31.

[e] Johannes episcopus Carliensis tempore H. 3.

[f] Rot. pat. 24. H. 3.

[f] Robertus Passelawe episcopus Cicestrensis tempore H. 3.

[g] Liber ejus de legibus extat script. temp. E. 1.

[f] Robertus de Lexintonio clericus constitutus capitalis justic' de banco.

[h] Rot. pat. 17. E. 2.

[g] Johannes Britton episcopus Hereford.

[h] Henricus de Stanton clericus constitutus fuit capitalis justiciarius ad placita; with many others. And so were divers and many of the nobility, who when matters of great difficulty were brought into the upper house of parliament by writ of error, adjournement, or other parliamentary course, did by the assistance of the reverend judges, who ever attended in that court, judge and determine the same as by former and ancient records, and specially by the said record of 5. R. 1. doe manifestly appeare; and therefore the lords of parliament were called for those purposes, concilium regis; and like to the aforementioned record there be very many.

12. H. 4. 3.

In the raigne of Edward the third, pleadings grew to perfection both without lameness and curiosity; for then the judges and professors of the law were excellently learned, and then knowledge of the law flourished, the serjeants of the law, &c. drew their owne pleadings; and therefore truly said that reverend justice Thirning, in the raigne of H. 4. that in the time of Edw. 3. the law was in a higher degree than it had been any time before; for (saith he) before that time the manner of pleading was but feeble in comparison of that it was afterward in the raigne of the same king.

(Hob. 332. Ante 72. a.)

* 36. E. 3. ca. 15. 46. E. 3. 21.

Dy. 299. Li. 8. fo. 161.

Lib. 10. fo. 131.

(Doc. Pla. 116.)

Li. 10. fo. 88. Pl. Com. 421.

In the time of Henric the Sixth the judges gave a quicker eare to exceptions to pleadings, than either their predecessors did, or the judges in the raigne of Edw. the fourth, when our author flourished, or since that time have done, giving no way to nice exceptions, so long as the substance of the matter were sufficiently shewed. And as in the raigne of king Edward the third, by an act of parliament * it is provided, that counts or declarations should not abate so long as the matter of the action be fully shewed in the declaration and writ; so since our author wrote, in the raigne of queene Elizabeth, provision is made, that after demurrer the judges shall give judgement according to the right of the cause and matter in law, without regarding any imperfection, defect, or want of forme in any writ, retorne, plaint, declaration, or other pleading or course of proceeding whatsoever, except such as the party demurring shall specially shew. In which acts appeales and indictments of felony, murder, or treason concerning man's life, and the forfeiture of his lands and goods, are excepted. An excellent and a profitable law, concurring with the wisdom and judgement of ancient and latter times, that have disallowed curious and nice exceptions tending to the overthrow or delay of justice; apices juris non sunt jura: yet it is good for a learned professor to make all things plain and perfect, and not to trust to the after aide or amendment by force of any statute, lest his client's cause matcheth not therewith; and as it is in physicke for the health of a man's body, so it is in remedies for the safety of a man's cause. In law, præstat cautela quam medela.

But now let us returne to our author.

Sect. 535, 536, 537.

(Sid. 175. 176.)

(Doc. Pla. 70. 118. 136. 138. 254.)

(11. Rep. 52. a.)

*ITEM, si soyent seignior et tenant, * mesque le seignior confirma l'estate que le tenant ad en les tenements, uncore le seigniorie entierment demurt a le*

ALSO, if there be lord and tenant, albeit the lord confirme the estate which the tenaunt hath in the tenements, yet the seigniorie remaineth entire to the

* mesme—et, L. and M. and Roh.

a le seignior come il fuit adevant. lord as it was before.

Sect. 536.

EN mesme le manner est, si home ad un rent charge hors de certeine terre, et il confirma l'estate que le tenant ad en la terre, uncore demurt a le confirmor le rent charge. IN the same manner is it, if a man hath a rent charge out of certaine land, and hee confirme the estate which the tenant hath in the land, yet the rent charge remayneth to the confirmor.

Sect. 537.

*EN mesme le manner est, si un home ad common de pasture * en auter terre, s'il confirma l'estate de le tenant de la terre, rien departera de luy de son common; mes ceo nient obstant le common demurt a luy come fuit adevant.* IN the same manner it is, if a man hath common of pasture in other land, if he confirme the estate of the tenant of the land, nothing shall passe from him of his common; but notwithstanding this, the common shall remayne to him as it was before.

HERE is the sixth case wherein the release and confirmation doe differ; for by the release of the seigniory, rent charge or common are extinct. And so these three Sections be evident, and need no explication, saving that some doe gather upon these two last Sections and the next ensuing, that a man cannot abridge a rent charge or common pasture by a confirmation, as he may doe a rent service in respect of the privitie betweene the lord and tenant, so as (say they) a tenure may be abridged by a confirmation, but not a rent charge or common: and therefore Littleton beginneth the next Section with an adverb adverbative, viz. (mes but) &c. But a man may release part of his rent charge. or common, &c.

Sect. 538.

MES si soient seignior et tenant, lequel tenant tient de son seignior per le service de fealtie et 20 s. de rent, si le seignior per son fait confirma l'estate le tenant, a tener per 12 d. ou per un denier, ou per un maile: en cest case le tenant est discharge BUT if there be lord and tenant, which tenant holdeth of his lord by the service of fealtie and 20 shillings rent, if the lord by his deed confirme the estate of the tenant, to hold by 12 pence or by a penny, or by a halfe peny: in this case the tenant is discharged of all the

AND the reason wherefore no service of another cannot be reserved upon the confirmation is, because as long as the state of the land continueth, it cannot by the confirmation of the lord be charged with any new service. So as it is evident that the lord by his confirmation may diminish and abridge the services, but to reserve upon the confirmation new services he cannot, so long as the former estate in the tenancie continueth. And as where a confirmation doth inlarge

* en-on, I. and M. and Rob.

Lib. 3. Cap. 9. Of Confirmation. Sect. 539.

inlarge an estate in land, there ought to be privitie, as hath beene said; so regularly where a confirmation doth abridge services, there ought to be privitie also.

And therefore here Littleton putteth his case of lord and tenant betweene whom there is privitie. And therefore if there be lord, mesne and tenant, the lord cannot confirme the estate of the tenant to hold of him by lesser services, but this is void, for that there is no privitie betweene them, and a confirmation cannot make such an alteration of tenures.

And the case in 4. E. 3. maketh nothing against this opinion; for there the case in substance is this: John de Bonville held certaine lands of Ralfe Vernon, and before the statute of quia emptores terrarum, levied a fine of the same lands to the abbot of Cogshall and his successors to hold of the chiefe lord (which was Ralfe Vernon) by the services due and accustomed. Ralfe Vernon made a charter to the said abbot in these words: Concessi etiam eidem abbati et successoribus suis relaxavi et quietum clamavi totum jus, &c. quod habeo, vel potero habere in omnibus tenementis que idem abbas habet de dono Johannis de Bonville, tenendum de me et heredibus meis in puram et perpetuam elemosinam; and adjudged, that it was a good tenure in frankalmoigne: which case proveth nothing that the lord paramount may by his confirmation to the tenant peravaille extinct the mesnaltie (as it is abridged by master Fitzherbert in the title of Confirmation, pl. 21.) for the immediate lord did there make the said charter, and not any lord paramount. (And therefore it is ever good to relie upon the booke at large, for many times compendia sunt dispendia, and melius est petere fontes, quam sectari rivulos). And of this opinion was master Plowden upon good advisement and consideration.

And here is the seventh case wherein the release and confirmation doth agree; for if there be lord and tenant by fealty and twenty shillings rent, the lord may release all his right in the seigniorie or in the tenancie, saving fealtie and ten shillings rent; but he cannot save a new kinde of service, for he may aswell abridge his services upon a release as upon a confirmation. And as there is required privitie when the lord abridgeth the services of his tenant by his confirmation; so must there be also, when the lord by his release abridgeth the services of his tenant. And therefore the lord paramount cannot release to the tenant peravaille saving to him part of his services, but the saving in that case is void (1).

Et rendra rien a son seignior forsque ceo que est comprise, &c. Which words are thus to be understood; that the tenant shall not render any more rent or annuall service to the lord than is contained in the deed; but other things notwithstanding the said confirmation the tenant shall yeeld to the lord, as releefe, ayde pur file marier, and ayde pur faire fitz chivaler, because these are incidents to the tenure that remaine, and shall not be discharged without speciall words, by the generall words of all other actions, services and demands. And so if a man hold of me by knight's service, rent, suit, &c. and I release to him all my right in the seigniorie, excepting the tenure by knight's service, or confirme his estate to hold of me by knight's service only for all manner of services, exactions, and demands; yet shall the lord have ward, marriage, releefe, ayde pur file marier, et pur faire fitz chivaler, for these be incidents to the tenure that remaine. But it is holden, that if a man make a gift in taile by deed reserving two shillings rent a luy et ses heires pro omnibus et omnimodis servitiis, exactionibus secularibus et cunctis demandis, if the donee die his heire of full age, the donor shall have no releefe, because in the originall deed of the gift in taile it is expressly limited, that by the service of two shillings rent he shall be quite of all demands (and releefe lieth in demand); and by reason of those words, say they, there cannot any releefe become due; but some doe hold the contrary in that case.

Sect. 539.

MES si le seignior voile per fait de confirmation, que le tenant en cest cas doit BUT if the lord will by his deed of confirmation, that the tenant in this case shall yeeld render

7. E. 3. 19. 22. E. 3. 18. b.

4. E. 3. 19.

4. E. 3. 19. 9. E. 3. 1. 12. E. 4. 11. 16. E. 3. fines 4. 6. Eliz. Dier 230.

(Ant. 47. a.)
(Plow. 563. b.)
Britton f. 57. 177. 40. E. 3. 21.
47. 48. 18. E. 3. 26. 50. Aff.
6. 14. H. 4. 8.

(Ant. 76. a.)

13. R. 2. tit. avowrie 89.
Nota dictum. Fitzh.

(Ant. 23. a.)

(1) 3. Inst. 47. A saving will serve for any thing that is implied in the judgment, as in case of felony to save the wife's dower; but a saving will not serve against the expresse judgment, for that should be repugnant, as saving the life of the offender should be void.

*render a luy un espervier ou un rose annualment a tiel feast, &c. cest * confirmation est voide, pur ceo que il reserva a luy un novel chose que ne fuit parcel de ses services devant la confirmation: et issint le seignior poit bien per tiel confirmation abridger les services † per queux le tenant tient de luy, mes il ne poit réserver a luy novel services.*

to him a hawke or a rose yearly at such a feast, &c. this confirmation is void, because hee reserveth to him a new thing which was not parcell of his services before the confirmation: and so the lord may well by such confirmation abridge the services by which the tenant holdeth of him, but hee cannot reserve to him new services.

THIS upon that which hath beene said before in the next preceding Section is evident, and needeth no further explication.

Sect. 540.

ITEM, si soit seignior ‡, mesne, et tenant, et le tenant est un abbe, que tient de mesne per certaine service annualment, le quel n'ad ascun cause § d'aver acquittance envers son mesne, pur porter briefe de mesne, || &c. en cest cas, si le mesne confirma l'estate que l'abbe ad en la terre, a aver et tener la terre a luy et a ses successeurs en frankalmoigne, &c. en cest cas le confirmation est bone, et adonques l'abbe tiendra de le mesne en frankalmoigne. Et la cause est, pur ceo que, nul novel service est reserve, car tous les services especialment specifies sont extincts, et nul rent est reserve ¶ al mesne, forsque que l'abbe tient de luy la terre, et ceo fist †† il devant la confirmation; car celui que tient en frankalmoigne ne doit faire ascun corporall service; issint ‡‡ que per tiel confirmation il appiert, que le mesne ne reserva a luy ascun novel service, mes que les tenements seront tenus de luy come ceo fuit devant. Et en cest

ALSO, if there be lord, mesne, and tenant, and the tenant is an abbot, that holdeth of the mesne by certaine services yearly, the which hath no cause to have acquittance against his mesne, for to bring a writ of mesne, &c. in this case, if the mesne confirme the estate that the abbot hath in the land, to have and to hold the land unto him & his successors in frankalmoigne, or free almes, &c. in this case this confirmation is good, and then the abbot holdeth of the mesne in frankalmoigne. And the cause is, for that no new service is reserved, for all the services specially specified bee extinct, and no rent is reserved to the mesne, but the abbot shall hold the land of him as it was before the confirmation; for he that holdeth in frankalmoigne ought to doe no bodily service; so that by such confirmation it appeareth, the mesne shall not reserve unto him no new service, but that the lands shall bee holden of him as it was before. And in this case

* confirmation—reservacion, L. and M. and Roh.

† mesne—mesme, L. and M. but not in Roh.

¶ al mesne not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡‡ que not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† per queux le tenant tient de luy, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ per cas added L. and M. and Roh.

 que not in L. and M.

|| &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

†† il—a lui, L. and M. and Roh.

*case l'abbe a vera un brieve de mesne, s'il soit distreine en son default, per force de le dit confirmation, lou per case il ne puisse aver * un brieve adevant, &c.*

case the abbot shall have a writ of mesne, if hee bee distrained in his default, by force of the said confirmation, where per case hee might not have such a writ before.

4. E. 3. 19. 22. E. 3. 15. b. the lord Wake's case. 10. E. 3. 5. 15. E. 3. confirmat. 8. 4. E. 3. 19. 20. F. N. B. 136. h. & q. 4. E. 4. 35. 31. E. 1. Mesne 55. 11. E. 3. Avowrie 100. 22. E. 3. 18. b. 30. E. 3. 13. 16. H. 3. Avowrie 243. (9. Rep. 130.)

HERE our author having seene the former bookes putteth his case, that the mesne maketh the confirmation to hold in frankalmoigne, and not the lord paramount.

Et en cest case l'abbe a vera brieve de mesne. Here is to bee noted, that upon a confirmation to hold in freealmoigne there lyeth a writ of mesne, albeit the cause of acquittal beginne after the seignior. And so upon such a confirmation the tenant shall have, contra formam feoffamenti.

Sect. 541.

HERE is to be observed a diversity betweene the custodie of the body of a ward within age, and a right of inheritance in the body of a villeine in grosse; for a man may bee put out of possession of the custodie of his ward, but not of his villeine in grosse, no more than a man can bee of his prisoner which he hath taken in warre.

Also of things that are in grant, as rents, commons, and the like, it is at the election of the party whether hee will be disseised of them or no, as shall bee said after in his proper place. (1) But of a villeine in grosse he cannot at all be disseised. [a] Non valet confirmatio nisi ille qui confirmat sit in possessione rei vel juris unde fieri debet confirmatio, & e. d. m. modo nisi ille cui confirmatio fit, sit in possessione.

And materially doth Littleton put his case of a villeine in grosse; for of a villeine regardant to a mannor, the lord may be put out of possession; for by putting him out of possession of the mannor, which is the principall, hee may likewise bee put out of possession of the villeine regardant, which is but accessory. And by the recovery of the mannor the villeine is recovered. But if another doth take away my villeine in grosse or regardant, he gaineth no possession of him. And this doth well appeare by the writ of nativo habendo, for that writ is not brought against any person in certaine (because no man

ITEM, si jeo sue seisie d'un villein come de villein en gros, et un auter luy prent hors de ma possession, enclaimant luy d'estre son villeine † la ou il n'avoit aucun droit d'aver luy come son villeine, et puis jeo confirma a luy l'estate que il ad en mon villeine, cest confirmation semble void, pur ceo que nul poit aver possession de un home come de villeine en grosse, si non celuy que ad droit de luy aver come son villein en grosse. Et issint tant que celuy a que le confirmation fuit fait, ne fuit seisie de luy come de son villeine a le temps de confirmation fait, tiel confirmation est void.

ALSO, if I be seised of a villeine as of a villeine in grosse, and another taketh him out of my possession, clayming him to bee his villein there where hee hath no right to have him as his villeine, and after I confirme to him the estate which hee hath in my villeine, this confirmation seemeth to be void, for that none may have possession of a man as of a villeine in grosse, but he which hath right to have him as his villeine in grosse. And so inas much as hee to whom the confirmation was made, was not seised of him as of his villeine at the time of the confirmation made, such confirmation is void.

45. E. 3. 10. 30. H. 6. tit. barre 59. Regilstrum 102. 1. H. 6. cap. 5.

(Post. 323. a.) Brooke tit. propertie 28.

(Sect. 589, 590, 591.)

[a] Bracton lib. 2. 59. b. 24. E. 3. tit. discont. 16. 42. E. 3. 18. 40. E. 3. 17. 43. E. 3. 4. 9. E. 4. 38. Dier. 10. Eliz. Growche's case.

* un—tiel, L. and M. and Roh.

† la ou il n'avoit aucun droit d'aver luy come son villeine, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) See ant. 239. note 1.

can gaine the possession of him. But the writ is to this effect: Rex vic' salutem. Præcipimus (Ant. 303. a.) tibi, quod justè et sine dilatione habere facias A. B. nativum et fugitivum suum, &c. ubicunque inventus fuerit, &c. et prohibemus super foris acturam nostram ne quis eum injustè detineat; so as detain him one may, but to possess himselfe of him, and to dispossesse the lord, he cannot.

And if a man might have beene dispossessed of a villeine in grosse, or of a villeine regardant (unlesse he be dispossessed of the mannor also, as hath beene said), the law would have given a remedie against the wrong doer, as the law doth in the case of a ward.

Now, seeing it doth appeare by our bookes [a] (and by Littleton himselfe by implication speaking only of a villeine in grosse) that if a man be disseised of the mannor whereunto the villeine is regardant, he is out of possession of his villeine, and so an advowson appendant, and the like. Hereby (Littleton putting his case of a villeine in grosse) and by divers authorities a point controverted in our bookes [*] is resolved, viz. that by the grant of the mannor without saying cum pertinentiis, the villeine regardant, advowson appendant, and the like, doe passe; for if the disseisor shall gaine them as incidents to the mannor, whose estate is wrongfull, à multò fortiori the feoffee, who commeth to his estate by lawfull conveyance, shall have them as incidents. But where the entrie of the disseisee is lawfull, he may seise the villeine regardant, or present to the advowson, &c. before he enter into the mannor: otherwise it is where his entrie is not lawfull; and so are the ancient authors [b] to be intended (1).

[a] Bracton, fol. 243.
Britton, fol. 126.
(5. Rep. 11. b.)
Ant. 77. a. 121. b.)

[*] 9. E. 4. 38. 3. H. 4. 15.
18. E. 3. 44. 16. E. 3.
Quar. Imp. 146.
19. R. 2. Treps. 255.
19. H. 6. 31. 21. H. 6. 9.
33. H. 6. 33. 5. H. 7. 36. 38.
10. H. 7. 9. F. N. B. 33. 9.
22. H. 6. 33. per Moyle.
30. E. 3. 31. 39. E. 3. 21.
43. E. 3. 12.
(Plowd. 258. a. Ant. 122. b.)
Post. 349. b. 363. b.)
[b] Bracton, fol. 242, 243.
Britton, fol. 126. Fleta, acc.

Sect. 542.

*MES en cest cas, si tiels parols fueront en le fait, * &c. Sciatis me dedisse et concessisse + tali, &c. talem villanum meum, c'est bone; mes ceo urera per force et voy de grant, et nemy per voy de confirmation, &c.*

BUT in this case, if these words were in the deed, &c. Sciatis me dedisse et concessisse tali, &c. talem villanum meum, this is good; but this shall enure by force and way of grant, and not by way of confirmation, &c.

HERE it is to be observed, that a man hath an inheritance in a villeine, whereof the wife of the lord shall be endowed, as hath beene said; for in him a man may have an estate in fee or fee taile for life or yeeres. And therefore Littleton is here to be understood, that in the grant there were these words (his heires) or else nothing passed but for life, as of other things that lie in grant.

2. H. 6. F. N. B. 77. a. b.

24. E. 3. Discont. 16.

Sect. 543.

ET † ascun foits ceux verbs dedi et concessi ureront per voy d'extinguishment del chose done ou grant; sicome un tenant tient de son seignior per certeine rent, et le seignior granta per son fait a le tenant et a ses heires le rent, &c. ceo urera a le tenant per voy d'extinguishment, car per cel grant le rent est extinct, &c.

AND sometimes these verbs dedi et concessi shall enure by way of extinguishment of the thing given or granted; as if a tenant hold of his lord by certaine rent, and the lord grant by his deed to the tenant and his heires the rent, &c. this shall enure to the tenant by way of extinguishment, for by this grant the rent is extinct, &c.

And this grant of the rent shall enure by way of release.

3. E. 3. 12. & 3. Aff. 7.

Sect.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† tali not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ et—item, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) See the Chapter on Villenage.

Lib. 3. Cap. 9. Of Confirmation. Sect. 544, 545, 546.

Sect. 544.

(s. Roll. 405.)

*EN mesme le manner est lou
* un ad un rent charge hors de certaine terre, et il graunta al tenant de la terre le rent charge, Esc. Et la cause est, pur ceo que appiert, per les parols del grant, que le volunt le doner est, que le tenant avera le rent, Esc. Et entant que il ne puit aver ne perceiver ascun rent hors de son terre de-mesme, pur ceo le fait serra intendue et pris pur le plus advantage et availe pur le tenaunt que puit este pris, et ceo est per voy d'extinguishment.*

IN the same manner it is where one hath a rent charge out of certaine land, and hee grant to the tenant of the land the rent charge, &c. And the reason is, for that it appeareth, by the words of the grant, that the will of the donor is, that the tenant shall have the rent, &c. And inasmuch as hee cannot have or perceive any rent out of his owne land, therefore the deed shall be intended and taken for the most advantage and availe for the tenant that it may be taken, and this is by way of extinguishment.

34. H. 6. fol. 41.
(Ante 280. a.)

BUT if the grantee of the rent-charge granteth it to the tenant of the land and a stranger, it shall be extinguished but for the moitie : and so it is of a feignorie.

Sect. 545.

ITEM, si jeo lessa terre a un home pur terme d'ans, et puis jeo confirma son estate sans plus parolx mitter en le fait, per cel il n'ad plus greinder estate que pur terme d'ans, sicome il avoit adevant.

ALSO, if I let land to a man for terme of yeares, and after I confirme his estate without putting more words in the deed, by this he hath no greater estate than for terme of yeares, as hee had before.

Sect. 546.

*MES si jeo releffa a luy
mon droit que jeo aye en le terre sans plus † parols mitter en le fait, il ad estate de franktenement. ‡ Issint poyes entend, mon fits, divers grands diversities perenter releases et confirmations.*

BUT if I release to him all my right which I have in the land without putting more words in the deed, hee hath an estate of freehold (1). So thou maist understand (my sonne) divers great diversities betweene releases and confirmations.

IN these two Sections is the seventh case wherein a release and confirmation doe differ.

Sect.

* un—home, L. and M. and Roh.

† parols not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ et added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) To give a confirmation this effect, in the case of a lease at common law, the lessee must have previously made an actual entry. But no entry is necessary for the purpose, if the lease is a bargain and sale, under the statute.

Sect. 547.

ITEM, si jeo esteant deins age lessa terre a un auter pur terme de xx. ans, et puis il graunte le terre a un auter pur terme de x. ans, issint il granta forsque parcel de son terme: en cest case quant jeo fue de pleine age, si jeo releffa al grauntée de mon lessee, &c. cest release est voyd, pur ceo que il n'y ad aucun privity perenter luy et moy, &c. Mes si jeo confirme son estate, donque cest confirmation est bone. Mes si mon lessee graunta tout son estate a un auter, donques mon release fait a le grantee est bone et effectual.

ALSO, if I being within age let land to another for terme of xx. yeares, and after he granteth the land to another for term of x. years, so hee granteth but parcell of his terme: in this case when I am of full age, if I release to the grantee of my lessee, &c. this release is void, because there is no privity betweene him and me, &c. But if I confirme his estate, then this confirmation is good. But if my lessee grant all his estate to another, then my release made to the grantee is good and effectual. (1)

HERE are two things to be observed: First, that the lease of an enfant in this case is not void but voidable. Secondly, this is the eighth case put by Littleton, where in the release and confirmation doe differ.

7. E. 4. 6. b. 18. E. 4. 2.
9. H. 7. 24.
(Cro. Jac. 320.
Sid. 42.
1. Roll. 729, 730.)

Sect. 548.

ITEM, si home granta un rent charge issuant hors de son terre a un auter pur terme de son vie, et puis il confirma son estate en le dit rent, a aver et tener a luy en fee taile ou en fee simple; cest confirmation est void quant a enlarger son estate, pur ceo que celui que confirme n'avoit aucun reversion en le rent.

ALSO, if a man grant a rent-charge issuing out of his land to another for terme of his life, and after hee confirmeth his estate in the said rent, to have and to hold to him in fee taile or in fee simple; this confirmation is void as to enlarge his estate, because hee that confirmeth hath not any reversion in the rent.

(Sid. 285.)
(Mo. 30.)

HERE the diversitie is apparant, betweene a rent newly created and a rent in esse: which needeth no explication. Only this is to be observed, that Littleton intendeth his deed of confirmation not to containe any clause of distress; for otherwise, as to the confirmation the deed is void, but the clause of distress doth amount to a new grant, as in the Chapter of Rents hath bene said.

(2. Roll. 415.)
21. E. 3. 47. 15. E. 4. 8. b.
Pl. Com. 35. 8. H. 4. 19.
(Ant. 148. 2. Post. 317. 2.)

Sect. 549.

MES si home soit seise en fee de rent service ou de

BUT if a man be seised in fee of rent service or rent charge, rent

(1) So 3d Wilson 234. Henry Blencowe and Mary his wife, seised in fee, demised to William Alder for 21 years, with a proviso for re-entry on default of payment of the rent, or breach of any of the covenants. Among other covenants, there was one from William Alder, — "that he should not assign, transfer, or set over, or otherwise do or put away the indenture of demise, or the premises thereby demised, or any part thereof, to any person or persons whomsoever, without the consent of the said Henry Blencowe and Mary his wife, their heirs and assigns, in writing, under his, her, or their hands and seals, first had and obtained for doing thereof." — William Alder, without any licence, demised to John Busby for 14 years. — It was held, that there was no privity of contract between the original lessor and Busby, the under-lessee. So that it was an under lease, and not an assignment; and therefore no breach of the covenant. And see Strange, 405.

*rent charge, et il grant le rent a un autre pur terme de vie, et le tenant attorna, et puis il confirma l'estate de le grantee en fee taile, ou en fee simple, cest confirmation est bone, quant a enlanger son estate selonques les parols le confirmation, pur ceo que celui que confirma * al temps de confirmation avoit un reversion del rent.*

and he grant the rent to another for life, and the tenant attorneth, and after hee confirmeth the estate of the grantee in fee taile, or in fee simple, this confirmation is good, as to enlarge his estate according to the words of the confirmation, for that he which confirmed at the time of confirmation had a reversion of the rent.

HERE is the eighth case wherein the release and confirmation doth agree: and it is here to be observed, that to the grant of the estate for life, Littleton doth put an attornment, because it is requisite; but to the confirmation to the grantee of the rent to enlarge his estate, there is none necessary, and therefore he putteth none: but of this more shall be said in the Chapter of Attornment, Sect. 556, 557.

Sect. 550.

MES en cas avantdit lou home graunt un rent charge a un autre pur terme de vie, s'il voile que le grantee averoie estate en le taile, ou en fee, il convient que le fait de grant del rent charge pur terme de vie, soit surrender ou cancell, et donques de faire un novel fait d'autiel rent charge, a aver et perceiver a le grantee en le taile ou en fee, &c. Ex paucis † plurima concipit ingenium.

BUT in the case aforesaid where a man grants a rent charge to another for terme of life, if he will that the grantee should have an estate in taile, or in fee, it behoveth that the deed of grant of the rent charge for terme of life be surrendered or cancelled, and then to make a new deed of the like rent charge, to have and perceive to the grantee in taile or in fee, &c. Ex paucis plurima concipit ingenium.

Vid. Sect. 636.
(Cro. Car. 399. Ant. 148. a.
225. b. 10. Rep. 66.
Plowd. 237. a. Post. 338.
1. Ven. 297.)

SURRENDER ou cancel. (1) Note by cancellation of the deed the rent which lieth only in grant ceaseth (as here it appeareth) as well as by the surrender. And the reason wherefore (if the grantor make a new grant of the rent, and not enlarge it by way of confirmation, as Littleton must be intended) the deed should be surrendered or cancelled, is lest the grantor should be doubly charged, viz. with the old grant for life, and with the new grant in fee; or, as hath beene said, the grantor may grant to the grantee for life and his heires, that he and his heires shall distreine for the rent, &c. and this shall amount to a new grant, and yet amount to no double charge, whereof you may see before in the Chapter of Rents.

Chap.

* l'estate added L. and M.† plurima concipit ingenium — disis, &c. L. and M.

(1) See ant. 226. note 2.

CHAP. 10.

Of Attornment.

Sect. 551.

ATTORNE-
MENT est,

*come si soit seignior et tenant, et le seignior voile granter per son fait les services de son tenant a un auter pur terme d'ans, ou pur terme de vie, ou en taile, ou en fee, il covient que le tenant atturna al grauntee en le vie le grantor, per force et vertue del grant, ou auterment le grant est void. Et attournement est nul auter en effect, forsque quant le tenant ad oye del grant fait per son seignior, que mesme le tenant agreea per parol a le dit grant, sicome adire a le grauntee, Jeo moy agree a le grant fait a vous, * &c. ou, Jeo sue † bien content de le graunt fait a vous; mais le plus common attournement est, adire, ‡ Sir, jeo atturna a vous per force del dit graunt, ou jeo deveigne vostre tenant, &c. ou || liverer al grauntee un denier, ou un maile, ou un farthing, per voy d'attournement §.*

ATTORNE-
MENT is, as if there bee lord and tenant, and the lord will grant by his deed the services of his tenant to another for terme of yeares, or for terme of life, or in taile, or in fee, the tenant must attorne to the grantee in the life of the grantor, by force and vertue of the grant, or otherwise the grant is void. And attournement is no other in effect, but when the tenant hath heard of the grant made by his lord, that the same tenant do agree by word to the said grant, as to say to the grantee, I agree to the grant made to you, &c. or I am well content with the grant made to you; but the most common attornment is, to say, Sir, I attorne to you by force of the said grant, or I become your tenant, &c. or to deliver to the grantee a penny, or a halfpenny, or a farthing, by way of attornment.

ATTORNMENT is an agreement of the tenant to the grant of the feignorie, or of a rent, or of the donee in taile, or tenant for life or yeeres, to a grant of a reversion or remainder made to another. It is an ancient word of art, and in the common law signifieth a turning or attorning from one to another. Wee use also attornamentum as a Latine word, and attornare to attorne. And so Bracton [a] useth it: Item videndum, est si dominus attornare possit alicui hominagium et servitium tenentis sui contra voluntatem ipsius tenentis, et videtur quod non.

*Bracton, lib. 2. fol. 81.
Britton, f. 105. b. 176, et 177.
Fleta, lib. 3. cap. 6.*

(1. Roll. Abr. 293.)

(1. Rep. 68.)

[a] *Bracton, lib. 2. fo. 81. b.
Fleta. Britton, ubi supra.*

And the reason why an attornment is requisite, is yeelded in old bookes to be, Si dominus attornare possit servitium tenentis contra voluntatem tenentis, tale siqueretur inconveniens, quod possit eum subjugare capitali inimico suo, et per quod teneretur sacramentum fidelitatis facere ei qui eum damnificare intenderet. (1)

*Bracton, lib. 2. fol. 81. b.
Britton, ubi supra.*

Il covient que le tenant attorna al grauntee en la vie del grantor, &c.

And so must he also in the life of the grantee; and this is understood of a grant by deed. And the reason hereof is, for that every grant must take effect as to the substance thereof in the life both of the grantor and the grantee. And in this case if the grantor dieth before attornment, the feignorie, rent, reversion, or remainder descend to his heire; and therefore after his decease the attornment commeth too late: so likewise if the grantee dieth before attornment, an attornment to the heire is

*Vide Litt. fol. 128.
11. H. 7. 19.*

*Lib. 1. fol. 104, 105.
Shelley's case.*

*40. Ass. 19. 34. H. 6. 7.
20. H. 6. 7.
(Doct. and Stud. 86. a.)*

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.
liverer—deliverer, L. and M. and Roh.

† bien not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Sir Martin Wright and many other writers have laid it down as a general rule, that by the old feudal law the feudatory could not alien the feud without the consent of the lord; nor the lord alien or transfer his feignory without the consent of his feudatory: for the obligations of the lord and his feudatory being reciprocal, the feudatory was as much interested in the conduct and ability of the lord, as the lord in the conduct and ability of his feudatory; and that as the lord could not alien, so neither could he exchange, mortgage, or otherwise dispose of his feignory, without the consent of his vassal. See Sir Martin Wright's Introduction to the Law of Tenures, 30, 31. — It is certain that this doctrine formerly prevailed in England. But, in general, it does not appear to have prevailed (at least in an equal extent) in other countries. It seems there to have been admitted, that the lord might transfer the whole fee, without the consent of the vassal, and that the vassal immediately, by such a transfer, became the tenant of the new lord. — It seems also to have been admitted, that the lord might transfer to another the beneficial fruits of the tenure, without the consent of the vassal. But it was a great question whether the lord could transfer his vassal to another, without the vassal's consent, unless by transferring the whole fee. — See Basnage Commentaire de la Coutume de Normandie, des Fiefs et Droits seodaux, art. 204. — This necessity, which subsisted in our old law, that the tenant should consent to the alienation of the lord, gave rise to the doctrine of attornment. — At the common law, attornment signified only the consent of the tenant to the grant of the feignory; or, in other words, his consent to become the tenant of the new lord. But after the statute quia emptores terrarum was passed, by which subinfeudation was prohibited, it became necessary that when the reversion or remainder-man after an estate for years, for life, or in tail, granted his reversion or remainder, the particular tenant should attorn to the grantee; as the particular tenant must, otherwise, have held of the remainder-man, and he of the chief lord; by which a new tenure would be created. — The necessity of attornment was, in some measure, avoided by the statute of uses; as by that statute, the possession was immediately executed to the use; — and by the statute of wills, by which the legal estate is immediately vested in the devisee. — Yet attornment continued after this to be necessary, in many cases. But both the necessity and efficacy of attornments have been almost totally taken away by the statutes of 4. and 5. Ann. c. 16. and 11. Geo. 2. c. 19. By the former of those statutes it was enacted, "That all grants and conveyances of any manors or rents, or of the reversion or remainder of any messuages or lands, should be good without attornment of the tenants;

(9 Rep. 84. Sect. 564.)

34. H. 6. 7. 20. H. 6. 7.

Brafton, lib. 2. fol. 81, 82. ecc.

Lib. 6. fol. 68. Sir Moyle Finche's case.(2. Cro. 193. Post. 321. 6 Rep.
68.)27. H. 8. cap. 16.
Vide Sect. 584.(Ant. 104. b.
Post. 11. b.
5. R. 7. 113.)
Lib. 6. ubi supra.
Vide Sect. 149.

49. E. 3. 4. 34. H. 6. 8.

6. E. 4. 13.

(P. 0. 314. b.

1. Roll. Ab. 294.

Sect. 564.

1. Rep. Alton Wood's case.

8. Rep. 89.

1. Roll. R. p. 301.

1. Cro. 441.

Jones 376.)

Lib. 2. fol. 67. b. Tooker's case.

13. Eliz. Dier 302.

Tooker's case ubi supra.

Lib. 2. Tooker's case ubi supra.

is void, for nothing descended to him; and if he should take, he should take it as a purchaser, where the heirs were added but as words of limitation of the estate, and not to take as purchasers.

But if the grant were by fine, then albeit the conusor or conusee dieth, yet the grant is good. For by fine levied the state doth passe to the conusee and his heirs; and the attornment to the conusee or his heirs at any time to make privie to distraine is sufficient. But all this is to be taken as Littleton understood it, viz. of such grants as have their operation by the common law. For since Littleton wrote, if a fine be levied of a feignorie, &c. to another to the use of a third person and his heirs, he and his heirs shall distraine without any attornment, because he is in by the statute of 27. H. 8. cap. 10. by transferring of the state to the use, and so he is in by act in law.

And so it is, and for the same cause, if a man at this day by deed indented and inrolled according to the statute, bargaineth and selleth a feignorie, &c. to another, the feignorie shall passe to him without any attornment; and so it is of a rent, a reversion, and a remainder. So as the law is much changed, and the ancient privilege of tenants, donees, and lessees much altered concerning attornment since Littleton wrote.

But if the conusee of a fine before any attornment by deed indented and inrolled, bargaineth and selleth the feignorie to another, the bargainee shall not distraine, because the bargainor could not distraine. Et sic de similibus; for nemo potest plus juris ad alium transferre quam ipse habet. Vide Sect. 149. where upon a recovery, the recoveror shall distraine and avow without attornment.

A grant to the king, or by the king to another, is good without attornment, by his prerogative.

Attornment est nul auter en effect, &c. It is to be understood that there be two kinde of attornments, viz. an attornment in deed or expresse, and an attornment in law or implicate. Of attornment expresse or in deed Littleton speaketh here, and of attornment in law he speaketh after in this chapter. And to both these kinds of attornments there is an incident inseparable, that is, that the tenant hath notice of the grant; for (an attornment being an agreement or consent to the grant, &c.) he cannot agree or consent to that which he knoweth not. And the usuall pleading is, to which grant the tenant attorned. And therefore if a bayly of a manor who used to receive the rents of the tenants, purchase the manor, and the tenants having no notice of the purchase, continue the payment of the rents to him, this is no attornment. So if the lord levie a fine of the feignorie, and by fine take backe an estate in fee, the tenant continueth the payment of the rent to the first conusor without notice of the fines, this is no attornment. But it is to be knowne, that there be two kinde of notices, viz. a notice in deed or expresse, whereof Littleton here speaketh, when he saith, that the tenant agreeth to the grant, and a notice in law or implied, whereof Littleton hereafter speaketh in this chapter.

Del grant fait per son seignior. Here is to be seene when the thing granted is altered, what becommeth of the attornment.

If there be lord, mesne and tenant, and the mesne grant over his mesnaltie by deed, the lord releaseth to the tenant, whereby the mesnaltie is extinct, and there is a rent by surplussage, an attornment to the grant of this rent secke is good, although the qualitie of that part of the rent is altered, because it is altered by act in law.

If a reversion of two acres be granted by deed, and the lessor before attornment levie a fine of one of them, and the tenant attorne to the grantee by deed, this is good for the other acre.

[a] If the reversion be granted of three acres, and the lessee agree to the said grant for one acre, this is good for all three; and so it is of an attornment in law, if the reversion of three acres be granted, and the lessee surrender one of the acres to the grantee, this attornment shall be good for the whole reversion of the three acres according to the grant.

Et le tenant agreea. Hereafter in this chapter Littleton doth teach what manner of tenant shall attorne.

Agreea per parol, &c. And so hee may, and more safely by his deed in writing.

Sicome adire a le grantee, &c. Here is to be seene to what manner of grantees the attornment is good. Regularly the attornment must be according to the grant, either expressly or impliedly. Of the first Littleton hath here spoken.

Im-

tenants; provided that no such tenant should be damaged by payment of rent to any such grantor or conusor, or by breach of any condition for non-payment of rent before notice given him of such grant by the conusee or grantor. By the latter statute it was enacted, that the attornments of tenants to strangers claiming title to the estate of their landlords, should be absolutely null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and that the possession of their respective landlord or landlords, lessor or lessors, should not be deemed or construed to be any wise changed, altered, or affected, by any such attornment or attornments; provided that nothing therein contained should extend to vacate or affect any attornment made pursuant to, and in consequence of, some judgment at law, or decree, or order of a court of equity, or made with the privy and consent of the landlord or landlords, lessor or lessors, or to any mortgagee, after the mortgage is become forfeited.—Till the passing of these statutes, the doctrine of attornment was one of the most copious and abstruse points of the law. But these statutes having made attornment both unnecessary and inoperative, the learning upon it is so useless, that Mr. Viner has inserted nothing respecting it in his voluminous compilation but an extract from lord chief baron Gilbert.—Mr. Bacon has not the article Attornment in his work; and the learning and industry of lord chief baron Comyn have furnished him with little material upon it, that is not to be found either in Littleton or sir Edward Coke.

[2] 18. E. 3. tit. Variance, 63.
22. E. 3. 18.
Tooker's case ubi supra.
(Folt. 314.)

39. H. 6. 3. Tooker's case ubi
supra.

Impliedly, as if a reversion be granted to two by deed, and the lessee attorne to one of them according to the grant, this attornment is good, but not to vest the reversion only in him to whom attornment is made; but it shall enure to both the grantees, for that is according to the grant, and for that it cannot vest the reversion only in him to whom the attornment is made. And so it is if one grantee dieth, the attornment to the survivor is good.

If the lord grant by deed his feignorie to A. for life, the remainder to B. in fee, A. dieth, and then the tenant attorne to B. this attornment is void, because it is not according to the grant; for then B. should have a remainder without any particular estate.

If a reversion be granted to a man and a woman, they are to have moities in law; but if they entermarrie and then attornment is had, they shall have no moities (and yet by the purport of the grant they are to have moities), because it is by act in law.

If a feme grant a reversion to a man in fee, and marry with the grantee, the lessee attorne to the husband, this is a good attornment in law to the husband.

If a reversion be granted by deed to the use of I. S. and the lessee hearing the deed read, or having notice of the contents thereof attorne to cestuy que use, this is an implied attornment to the grantee.

If a reversion be granted for life, the remainder in taile, the remainder in fee, the attornment to the grantee for life shall enure to them in the remainder, to vest the remainder in them.

And in those cases if the tenant should say, that I doe attorne to the grantee for life, but that it shall not benefit any of them in remainder after his death, yet the attornment is good to them all; for having attorned to the tenant for life, the law (which he cannot controll) doth vest all the remainder. And of this more shall be said hereafter in this chapter.

Littleton here putteth five examples of an expresse attornment, but of them the last is the best, because the ear is not only a witnesse of the words, but the eye of the delivery of the penny, &c. and so there is dictum et factum. And any other words which import an agreement or assent to the grant, doe amount to an attornment. And albeit these five expresse attornements be all set downe by Littleton, to be made to the person of the grantee [b], yet an attornment in the absence of the grantee is sufficient; for if he doth agree to the grant either in his presence or in his absence, it is sufficient.

(Post. 313. a.
Ant. 52. a. 297. b. 296. a.)

Tooker's case ubi supra.
11. H. 7. 12.

20. H. 6. 7.
(Ant. 298. a.)

Tooker's case ubi supra.
Pl. Com. 187. 483.
(Ant. 187. b.)

2. R. 2. tit. Attornment 8.
Lib. 4 f. 61. Hemling's case.
(Mo. 91. con. 1. Lco. 58.)

Temps E. 1. Attorn. 22.
18. E. 4. 7.
(Ant. 212. b. 312. b. 6. Rep. 63.
5. Rep. Ford's case.
1. Roll. Abr. 412. 3. Lco. 17.
4. Lco. 23.)

[b] Lib. 2. fol. 68, 69.
Tooker's case.
28. H. 8. tit. Attornment Br. 40.
(10. Rep. 52. Cro. Car. 440.
1. Roll. Abr. 300. Dyer 298. a.)

Sect. 552.

*ITEM, si le seignior graunt le service de son tenant a un home, et puis per un fait portant un darreme date il granta mesmes les services a un autre, et le tenant attorne a le second grantee, or le dit * grauntee ad les services; et comment que apres le tenant voile attorner a le premier grauntee, c'est clereement void, &c.*

ALSO, if the lord grant the service of his tenant to one man, and after by his deed bearing a later date hee grant the same services to another, and the tenant attorne to the second grantee, now the said grantee hath the services; and albeit afterwards the tenant will attorne to the first grantee, this is clearly void, &c.

HERE it is to be observed, that Littleton expresseth not what estate is granted, and very materially; for if the former grant were in fee, and the latter grant were for life, and the tenant doth first attorne to the second grantee, he cannot after attorne to the first grantee to make the fee simple passe, for that should not be according to the grant; but in that case the attornment to the first is countermanded. And so it is if a reversion expectant upon an estate for life be granted to another in fee, and after the (Cro. Car. 284. 1. Roll. Abr. 500;

Ant. 296. a.)

grantor before attornment confirme the estate of the lessee in taile, the attornment to the grantee for the fee simple is void.

In the same manner, if a reversion upon an estate for yeeres be granted in fee, and the lessee confirme the estate of the lessee for life, he cannot afterwards attorne.

If

* dit-second, L. and M. and Roh,

11. H. 7. 19. 2. R. 2. ubi supra.

P. 3. Eliz. Bendloes. Hemling's
case ubi supra.
(1. Roll. Abr. 299.)

11. H. 7. 12.

(Ant. 190. 2. Mo. 84.)

If a feme sole maketh a lease for life or yeares, reserving a rent, and granteth the reversion in fee, and taketh husband, this is a countermand of the attornment.

Where our author putteth his case of the whole reversion, if two coparceners bee of a reversion, and one of them granteth her moiety by fine, the conusee shall have a quid juris clamat for the moitie.

If in the case that our author here putteth of severall grantees, if the tenant attorne to both of them, the attornment is void, because it is not according to the grant. If a reversion be granted for life, and after it is granted to the same grantee for yeares, and the lessee attorneth to both grants, it is void for the incertaintie: à multo fortiori, if the lord by one deed grant his feignorie to J. bishop of London and to his heires, and by another deed to J. bishop of London and to his successors, and the tenant attorne to both grants, the attornment is void; for albeit the grantee be but one, yet he hath severall capacities, and the grants are severall, and the attornment is not according to either of the grants.

But if A. grant the reversion of Black-Acre or White-Acre, and the lessee attorne to the grant, and after the grantee maketh his election, this attornment is good; for albeit the state was uncertaine, yet he attorned to the grant in such sort as it was made: and so pote a diversity betweene one grant and severall grants, and observe in this case an attornment good in expectation, and yet nothing passed at the time of the attornment, but by the election subsequent.

Sect. 553.

Temps E. 2. Attornment.

48. E. 3. 15.
(Sid. 310. 312. 373. Ant. 263. 2.
Post. 341. a. 3. Rep. 29.
1. Leo. 208.)

HERE it is to bee observed, that when a man maketh a feoffment of a mannor, the services doe not passe, but remaine in the feoffor untill the freeholders doe attorne; and when they doe attorne, the attornment shall have relation to some purpose, and not to other. For albeit the attornment bee made many yeares after the feoffment, yet it shall have relation to make it passe out of the feoffor ab initio even by the liverie upon the feoffment, but not to charge the tenants with any meane arrerages, or for waste in the meane time, or the like.

If a reversion of land bee granted to an alien by deed, and before attornment the alien is made denizen, and then the attornment is made, the king, upon office found, shall have the land: for as to the estate betweene the parties, it passeth by the deed ab initio. (1)

If a man plead a feoffment of a mannor, hee need not plead an attornment of the tenants; but (if it be materiall) it must be denied or pleaded of the other side.

And upon consideration had of all the bookes touching this point, whether the services of the freeholders doe passe, wherein there have beene three severall opinions, viz. some have holden that the services doe passe in the right by the livery as parcell of the mannor, but not to avow without attornment, as in the case of the fine. And others have holden, that they both passe in right and in possession to distreine without attornment. And the third opinion is, that in this case the said services passe neither in possession nor in right, but untill attornment remaine

ITEM, si home soit seigneur de un mannor, quel mannor est parcell en demesne, et parcell en service, s'il voile aliener cel mannor a un autre, il convient que per force del alienation, que tous les tenants que teignent del alienor come de son mannor attornent al alienee, ou autrement les services demurront continualment en l'alienor, forprisi tenants a volunt †; car il ne besoigne que tenants a volunt attornent sur tiel alienation, &c. ‡*

ALSO, if a man bee seised of a mannor, which mannor is parcell in demesne, and parcell in service, if hee will alien this mannor to another, it behooveth that by force of the alienation, all the tenants which hold of the alienor as of his mannor doe attorne to the alienee, or otherwise the services remaine continually in the alienor, saving the tenants at will; for it needeth not that tenants at will doe attorne upon such alienation, &c.

(2. Roll. Abr. 394. 395.
Plo. 482. b. 483. a.
Ant. 270. b. 279. b.)

Pasch. 5. E. 3. coram rege.
Suffex in Tresaur. 21. E. 3. 47.
34. E. 3. Double plea. 24.
42. Ass. p. 6. 43. Ass. p. 20.
30. E. 3. 29. E. 3.
26. E. 3. per quae servicia 21.
8. H. 4. 1. b. 12. H. 4.
20. H. 6. 7. 35. H. 6.
9. E. 4. 33. 13. H. 7. 14. a.
1. H. 7. 31.
4. E. 6. Attornment, Br. 30.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ pur ceo que mesmes les terres et tenements que ils teignent a volonte passent al aliene per force de tiel alienation, added in L. and M. and Roh. and in MSS.

(1) Here the fee is supposed to vest immediately in the grantee: but when an estate is granted upon a condition precedent, the estate does not vest, even by way of relation, till the performance of the condition. Plo. 482. b.

remaine continually in the alienor, as Littleton here holdeth. And so it was resolved Pascb. 15. Eliz. betweene Brasbitch and Barwell, according to the opinion of our author. And I never yet knew any of Littleton's cases (albeit I have knowne many of them) to be brought in question, but in the end the judges concurred with our author.

And where our author speaketh of the attornment of the freeholders, if the lord make a lease for yeares or for life of a mannor, and the freeholders attorne to the lessee, if after the reversion of the mannor be granted, the attornment of the lessee for yeares or life shall binde the freeholders: for by their former attornment, they have put the attornment into the mouth of the lessee.

Forspise tenant a volunt, &c. Here is implied tenant at will or by copie of court roll according to the custome of the mannor, so as the freehold and inheritance both of lands in the hands of tenant at will by the common law or by custome shall passe both in right and in possession without any attornment.

Sect. 554.

ITEM, si soient seignior et tenant, et le tenant lessa la terre a un autre pur terme de vie, ou dona la terre en le taile savant le reversion a luy, &c. si le seignior en tiel cas granta son seigniory a un autre, il covient que celui en le reversion atturna al grauntee, et nemy le tenant a terme de vie, ou le tenant en le taile, pur ceo que en cest cas celui en le reversion est tenant al seignior, et nemy le tenant a terme de vie, ne le tenant en le taile.

ALSO, if there bee lord and tenant, and the tenant letteth the land to another for term of life, or giveth the land in taile saving the reversion to himselfe, &c. if the lord in such case grant his seigniory to another, it behoveth that hee in the reversion attorne to the grantee, and not the tenant for terme of life, or the tenant in taile, because that in this case he in the reversion is tenant to the lord, and not the tenant for terme of life, nor the tenant in taile.

FOR it is a maxime (8. Rep. 42.) in law, that no man shall attorne to any grant of any seignorie, rent service, reversion or remainder, but he that is immediately privie to the grantor; and because in this case there is no privitie betweene the lord and the tenant for life, or donee in taile, but only betweene the lord and him in the reversion; for in this case the attornment of him in the reversion only is good.

Savant le reversion a luy, &c.

That is to say, without limitation of any remainder over; and this is but to make his opinion plaine as to the point that he putteth it.

Sect. 555.

*EN mesme le manner est lou sont seigniour, mesne et tenant, * si le seigniour voile granter les services del mesne, coment que il ne fait ascun mention en son grant del mesne, uncore il covient que le mesne atturna, † &c. et nemy le tenant*

IN the same manner is it where there are lord, mesne and tenant, if the lord will grant the services of the mesne, albeit hee maketh no mention in his grant of the mesne, yet the mesne ought to attorne, &c. and not the tenant peravaille, &c.

* f—et, L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) For the difference between feisin and attornment, see Brediman's case, 6. Rep. 56. b.

peravaile, &c. pur ceo que le mesne is tenant unto him, &c.

This standeth upon the same reason that the next precedent case did.

Seēt. 556.

(6. Rep. 59. a.)

21. H. 6. 9. b.

(2. Rep. 67.)

(6. Rep. 39. a.)

(1. Leon. 265. a.)

46. E. 3. 27. 2. H. 6. 9. Vi. Lit. Seēt. 549. & 553.

HERE is to be observed a diversitie betweene a rent service and a rent charge, or a rent secke; for as to the rent service, no man (as hath beene said) can attorne, but he that is privie; so in case of a rent charge, it behooveth that the tenant of the freehold doth attorne to the grantee, without respect of any privitie. And therefore the disseisor onely, in the case of a grant of a rent charge, shall attorne, because he is (as Littleton saith) tenant of the freehold; but in case of a grant of a rent service, the attornement of a disseisee sufficeth.

If there be lord and tenant by homage, fealtie, and rent, the tenant is disseised, the lord granteth the rent to another, the disseisee attorneth, this is void: but if he had granted over his whole feignorie, the attornement had beene good; and the reason of this diversitie is here given by our author, for that when the rent was granted onely, it passed as a rent secke, and consequently the disseisor being terre-tenant, must attorne. But when the feignorie is granted, then the disseisee in respect of the privitie may Covient que le tenant del franktenement, &c. And therefore if the tenant of the land charged with a rent charge or a rent secke make a lease for life, and he that hath the rent charge or rent secke granteth it over, the tenant for life shall attorne, for he is tenant of the freehold, according to the expresse saying of our author, and (as hath beene said) there needeth no privitie.

And it was holden by Dyer chiefe justice of the court of common pleas, and Mounson justice, in the argument of Bracebridge's case abovesaid, and not denied, that if he that hath a rent charge granteth it over for life, and the tenant of the land attorne thereunto, and after he granteth the reversion of the rent charge, that the grantee for life may attorne alone; and that these words of Littleton are to be understood when a rent charge or rent secke is granted in possession: and therewith agreeth 46. E. 3. where it appeareth, that the quid juris clamat, in that case, did lie against the grantee for life.

A man maketh a lease for life, and after grants to A. a rent charge out of the reversion, A. granteth the rent over, he in the reversion must attorne, and not the tenant of the freehold, for that the freehold is not charged with the rent; for a release made to him by the grantee doth not extinguish the rent. And Littleton is to be understood, that the tenant of the freehold must attorne when the freehold is charged.

MES auterment est lou certaine terre est charge d'un rent charge ou rent seck; car en tiel case si celuy que ad le rent charge ceo grant a un auter, il covient que le tenant del franktenement atturna al grantee, pur ceo que le franktenement est charge ove le rent, &c. Et en rent charge nul avowrie doit estre fait sur ascun person pur le distresse prise, &c. mes il avowera le prise bone et droiturel, come en terres ou tenements issint charges a son distresse, &c.

BUT otherwise it is where certaine land is charged with a rent-charge or rent secke; for in such case if he which hath the rent-charge grant this to another, it behooveth that the tenant of the freehold attorn to the grantee, for that the freehold is charged with the rent, &c. And in a rent-charge no avowrie ought to be made upon any person for the distresse taken, &c. but hee shall avow the prisel to bee good and rightfull, as in lands or tenements so charged with his distresse, &c.

Et en rent charge nul avowrie doit estre fait sur aucun person, &c.

This is the reason that Littleton giveth of the difference betweene the rent service and the rent charge. Now it may bee said, that this reason is taken away by the statute of 21. H. 8. for by that statute the lord needs not avow for any rent or service upon any person in certaine; and then by Littleton's reason there needeth no privitie to the attornment of a feignorie; for (say they) cessante causa vel ratione legis, cessat lex, as at the common law no aid was grantable of a stranger to an avowrie; because the avowrie was made of a certaine person: but now the avowrie being made by the said act of 21. H. 8. upon no person, therefore the reason of the law being changed, the law itselfe is also changed; and consequently in an avowrie according to that act, aid shall be granted of any man, and the like in many other cases; which case is granted to be good law: but albeit the lord (as hath beene said) may take benefit of the statute, yet may he avow still at his election upon the person of his tenant. And albeit the manner of the avowrie be altered, yet the privitie (which is the true cause of the said difference) remaineth still as to an attornment.

21. H. 8. cap. 19.
Vide Sect. 454.

27. H. 8. 4. b.
(Doc. Plac. 25, 26.)

Rent charge, &c. It is to be observed, to what kinde of inheritances being granted, an attornment is requisite. And in this chapter Littleton speaketh of five. First, of a feignorie, rent service, &c. Secondly, of a rent charge. Thirdly, of a rent secke. And hereafter in this chapter of two more, viz. of a reversion and remainder of lands; for the tenant shall never need to attorne but where there is tenure, attendance, remainder, or payment of a rent out of land. And therefore if an annuities, common of pasture, common of estovers, or the like, be granted for life or yeeres, &c. the reversion may be granted without any attornment; and albeit sometimes in some of these cases, or the like, an attornment be pleaded, yet it is surplusage, and more than needeth, because in none of them there is any tenure, attendance, remainder, or payment out of land.

21. H. 7. 1.
(1. Roll. Abr. 292, 293.)

1. H. 5. 1. 37. Aff. 14.
36. Aff. pl. 3. 31. H. 8.
tit. Attornment Br. 59.
(Ant. 303. b.)

Sect. 557.

*I T E M, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant lessa son tenement a un auter pur terme de vie, le remainder a un auter en fee, et puis le seignior granta les services a un auter, &c. et le tenant a terme de vie attorna, ceo est assés bone, pur ceo que le tenant a terme de vie est tenaunt en cest case al seignior, &c. et celui en le remainder ne poit estre dit tenant al seignior, quant a cel entent, forsque apres la mort le tenant a terme de vie: uncore en cest case si celui en le remainder morust sans heire, le seignior avera le remainder per voy d'escheate, pur ceo que coment que le seignior en tiel cas * covient d'avouer sur le tenant a terme de vie, &c. uncore tout l'entier tenement, quant a tous les estates de franktenement ou de fee simple, ou auterment, &c. en tiel cas sont ensemble tenus de le seignior, &c.*

ALSO, if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant letteth his tenement to another for terme of life, the remainder to another in fee, and after the lord grant the services to another, &c. and the tenant for life attorne, this is good enough, for that the tenant for life is tenant in this case to the lord, &c. and he in the remainder cannot be said to be tenant to the lord, as to this intent, untill after the death of the tenant for life: yet in this case if hee in the remainder dieth without heire, the lord shall have the remainder by way of escheat, because that albeit the lord in such case ought to avow upon the tenant for life, &c. yet the whole entiere tenement, as to all the estates of the freehold or of fee simple, or otherwise, &c. in such case are together holden of the lord, &c.

* covient d'avouer—d'avowere, L. and M. and Rob.

* Mes nemy de faire avowrie sur eux tous ensemble. But not to make avowrie upon them all together. M. 3. H. 6.

15. E. 3. Attorn. 10. 12. E. 4. 4.
18. H. 6. 2. 9. E. 2. tit. At-torn. 18. 18. E. 4. 7. Temps
E. 1. Attorn. 22. Vide Sect. 580.

(3. Rep. 66. Ant. 310. a.
Post. 320. b.)

(9. Rep. 134. b. Ant. 280. a.)

3. H. 6. 1. Old Tenures 107.
[a] 15. E. 4. 13. a.
(1. Leon. 225.)

M. 3. H. 6. 1.

ET le tenant a terme de vie attorna, &c. For he that is (as hath beene said) privie and immediately tenant to the lord must attorne; and that is in this case: the tenant for life, and so of the other side if a seigniorie be granted to one for life, the remainder to another in fee, the attornment to the tenant for life is an attornment to the remainder also; unless it be that they in the remainder ought to have acquittal, or other privilege (whereof they should be prejudiced); and then albeit an attornment be had to the tenant for life, and he acknowledge the acquittal, &c. yet after his decease, he in remainder shall not distreyn until he acknowledge the acquittal, notwithstanding the attornment of the tenant for life.

Avera le remainder per voy d'eschear. For the remainder is holden of the lord, but not immediately holden; and in this case, by the escheat of the remainder the seigniorie is extinct; for the fee simple of the seigniorie being extinct, there cannot remaine a particular estate for life thereof, in respect of the tenure and attendance over; and of this opinion is Littleton [a] himselfe in our bookes. But otherwise it is of a rent charge in fee; for if that be granted for life, and after he in the reversion purchase the land, so as the reversion of the rent charge is extinct, yet the grantee for life shall enjoy the rent during his life, for there is no tenure or attendance in this case.

* Mes nemy de faire avowrie, &c. This is added to Littleton, but it is consonant to law, and the authoritie truly cited.

Sect. 558.

ITEM, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant lessa les tenements a un feme pur terme de vie, le remainder ouster en fee, et la feme prent baron, et puis le seignior granta les services, &c. a le baron et ses beires; en cest case le service est mis en suspence durant le coverture. Mes si la feme devie vivant le baron, le baron et ses beires averont le rent de ceux en le remainder, &c. Et en ceo case il ne besoigne aucun attornment per parol, &c. pur ceo que le baron que doit attorne, accepta le fait del graunt de les services, &c. le quel acceptance est un attornment en la ley.

ALSO, if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant letteth the tenements to a woman for life, the remainder over in fee, and the woman taketh husband, and after the lord grant the services, &c. to the husband and his heires; in this case the service is put in suspence during the coverture. But if the wife die living the husband, the husband and his heires shall have the rent of them in the remainder, &c. And in this case there needeth no attornment by parol, &c. for that the husband which ought to attorne, accepted the deed of grant of the services, &c. the which acceptance is an attornment in the law.

3. E. 3. 42. 15. E. 3. Attornement, 11.
(6. Rep. 63. 9. Rep. 85.
2. Roll. Abr. 424.)

LE quel acceptance est un attornment en la ley, &c. Littleton having spoken (as hath beene said) of attornments in deed, or expresse, now commeth to speake of attornments in law, or implied; and having before set downe five expresse attornments in deed, doth in this chapter enumerate seven attornments in law. Here it is to be understood, that the expresse attornment of the husband will binde the wife after the coverture,

* This paragraph not in L. and M. nor Roh.

coverture, and in as much as this acceptance of the grant is an attornement in law, without a word of attornement the seigniorie shall passe. And this is the first example that Littleton putteth of an attornement in law, which amounteth to an expresse attornement, for that it is an agreement to the grant. 44. E. 3. tit. Fines 37.
11. E. 4. 4.
(1. Roll. Abr. 303)
(Ant. 280. a. 301. 310.)

If the lord grant his seigniorie to the tenant of the land, and to a stranger, and the tenant accept the deed, this acceptance is a good attornement to extinguish the one moitie, and to vest the other moitie in the grantee, as hath beene said.

Sect. 559.

EN mesme le manner est, si soient seignior et tenant, et le tenant prent feme, et puis le seignior granta les services a la feme et ses beires, et le baron accepta le fait; en cest cas apres la mort le baron, la feme et ses beires auront les services, &c. car per le acceptance * del fait per le baron, ceo est bone attornement, &c. comment que durant le coverture les services sont mis en suspence, &c.

IN the same manner is it, if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant taketh wife, and after the lord grant his services to the wife and his heires, and the husband accepteth the deed; in this case after the death of the husband the wife and her heires shall have the services, &c. for by the acceptance of the deed by the husband, this is a good attornement, &c. albeit during the coverture the services shall be put in suspence, &c.

HERE is the second example that Littleton putteth of an attornement in law, and standeth upon the former reason. (1. Roll. Abr. 938, 939, 940.)

Sont mise en suspence. Suspence commeth of suspendeo, and in legall understanding is taken when a seigniorie, rent, profit apprender, &c. by reason of unitie of possession of the seigniorie, rent, &c. and of the land out of which they issue, are not in esse for a time, et tunc dormiunt, but may be revived or awaked. And they are said to be extinguished when they are gone for ever, et tunc moriuntur, and can never be revived; that is, when one man hath as high and perdurable an estate in the one as in the other. (Ant. 148. b.)
(4. Rep. 52.)
(Cro. Car. 101.)

Sect. 560.

ITEM, si soient seignior et tenant, et le tenant granta les tenements a un home pur terme de sa vie, le remainder a un autre en fee, si le seignior granta les services a le tenant a terme de vie† en fee, en cest cas le tenant a

ALSO, if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant grant the tenements to a man for terme of his life, the remainder to another in fee, if the lord grant the services to the tenant for life in fee, in this case the tenant for terme of life

HERE is the third case that Littleton putteth of an attornement in law. And it is to be observed; that albeit a grant, as hath beene said, may enure by way of release, and a release to the tenant for life doth worke an absolute extinguishment, whereof he in the remainder shall take benefit; yet the law shall never make any construction against the purport of the grant to the prejudice of any, or against the meaning of the parties as here (Siderf. 25.)

* del fait per not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† en fee not in L. and M. nor Roh.

here it should; for if by construction it should enure to a release, the heirs of the tenant for life should be disheerited of the rent; and therefore Littleton here saith, that the heirs of the grantee shall have the seigniorie after his death. And here is an attournement in law to a grant suspended that cannot take effect in the grantee so long as he liveth, but shall take effect in his heirs by descent; for the inheritance of the seigniorie was in the tenant for life, and the suspension onely during his life.

terme de vie ad fee hath a fee in the services; mes les services sont mis en suspence durant sa vie. Mes les heirs are put in suspence during his life. But the heirs of the tenant for life shall have the services after his decease, &c. And in this case there needeth no attournement; for by the acceptance of the deed by him which ought to attorne, &c. this is an attournement of it selfe.

Sect. 561.

MES lou le tenant ad cy grand et haut estate en les tenements sicome le seignior ad en le seigniorie; en tiel case, si le seignior graunta les services al tenant en fee, ceo urera per voy d'extinguishment. Causa patet.

BUT where the tenant hath as great and as high estate in the tenements as the lord hath in the seigniorie; in such case, if the lord grant the services to the tenant in fee, this shall enure by way of extinguishment. Causa patet.

(Ant. 279.)

HERE Littleton intendeth not onely as great and high an estate, but as perdurable also, as hath beene said; for a disseisor or tenant in fee upon condition hath as high and great an estate, but not so perdurable an estate, as shall make an extinguishment.

Sect. 562.

HERE in this case he in the reversion of the tenancy must attorne, because he is the tenant to the lord; and yet the seigniorie shall be suspended during the life of the grantee, because he hath an estate for life in the tenancie, but his heirs shall enjoy the seigniorie by descent.

Uncore il ne

ITEM, si soyent seignior et tenant, et le tenant fait un leas a un home pur terme de sa vie, s'avant le reversion a luy, si le seignior granta le seigniorie a le tenant a terme de vie en fee; en cest case il covi-

